INTRODUCTORY.

The author, in presenting this volume to the public, begs to state that his intention in compiling it is not to have it recorded as one of the literary marvels of the day, but to give to the "prince of good fellows" a guide of value for his home, club, hotel or cafe.

As previously stated in his first issue, it is only practical experience, through long association with the leading American hotels and clubs, which prompts him to publish this volume (his second attempt), the most complete of its kind ever issued.

In the various recipes, reference is made only to wines and ingredients of the highest character.

In the advertising section contained at the end of this book, the reader will find only such products as have been preferred by the author; and as their use has proven satisfactory and pleased many thousand guests, he would suggest their preference in your mixing.

That the reader may be familiar with the various sizes and the terms used in this publication, the following table will prove of value, but only applies to liquor, i.e., whiskey, gin, etc., other ingredients additional:

1 Jigger	=	$\frac{1}{2}$	whiskey glass.
100%	=	$\frac{1}{2}$	" "
50%	=	$\frac{1}{4}$	" "
25%	=	$\frac{1}{8}$	" "

half whiskey glass being regarded as a full portion for one person.

If you, my friend, at any time wish advice relating to the subject of mixed drinks or beverages, and will correspond with the author, your communication will receive prompt and careful attention.

In closing, one request is made of the reader: If through the pages of this work you find its contents of value, suggest it to your friends, that we all may drink each other's health.

PRODUCTION OF CHAMPAGNE.

Champagne is produced in the Department of Marne, where grapes were cultivated as far back as the sixth century. In the last will and testament of Remy, Archbishop of Reims, dated A. D. 530, he bequeaths to the clergy of his diocese, vineyards situated in the neighborhood of that city. The growth of the Champagne district has continually increased since the tenth century, and viticulture has become a very important industry. The real development of champagne dates from the eighteenth century, when Dom Perignon, a monk of the Abbey of Hautvillers, near Epernay, discovered the method of making sparkling champagne. The Champagne district seems to have a special influence over the fruit grown upon it, which possesses a perfume and other qualities not found in grapes grown anywhere else. The soil is composed of chalk with a light covering of earth, which gives the grapes their distinctive qualities, producing a sparkling wine which cannot be equalled. Many people think that champagne is made from a white grape, but not more than one quarter of the grapes grown in the Champagne vineyards are white, the rest being black. Great precaution is taken not to crush the grapes when gathering, the bunches being detached from the vine one by one, and carefully sorted according to their ripeness, and in some locations every individual grape is examined. The grapes are pressed daily in a large press, worked by hand, and the must (juice) is separated at once from the stalk and skin, which contains the coloring matter. This liquid is almost colorless, and after fermentation becomes still lighter in color. The juice obtained from the press by three consecutive pressings, gives the cuvée, and it is this liquid which has the necessary qualities to make a fine wine. The wines obtained by subsequent pressure are called vins de suite, and are inferior in quality, and cannot be used for choice champagne.

As the must runs out of the press, it is put into vats, where it is left to settle for twelve hours to allow impurities to settle at the bottom. It is then drawn off into casks, the cleanliness of which is scrupulously looked after. A few days later fermentation commences and changes the sweet liquid into an alcoholic one, which is wine. When cold weather sets in, the wine becomes clear and is drawn off, the lees remaining in the cask.

The wine-producing district of Champagne may be divided into three regions. First, the mountain country of Reims, where the grapes possess the distinctive qualities of vinosity and freshness; second, the Avize district, notable for wines made from white grapes, which are of great delicacy; and third, the Valley of the Marne, where the wines are characterized by an excellent bouquet. Wines made solely from grapes of any one district would be found disappointing. One must unite the freshness and strength of Verzenay with the mellowness of Bouzy, the softness of Cramant, and the bouquet of Ay, in order to blend into a champagne all the delightful qualities which a connoisseur expects to find. During January and February the wine-maker mixes in immense casks the wines from different vineyards. Wines want character, bouquet, vinosity and delicacy, and these qualities can only be secured by the mixture of wines possessing these elements individually. To make a fine champagne one must know thoroughly the characteristics of the wine of each vineyard, and this requires a keen sense of smell and taste, and great skill and experience.

The Cuvee.

Mixing the wines, or as it is called, "Making the Cuvée," is done in the early spring by carefully blending wines from the different districts in large vats or casks, and it is then ready to be put into bottle.

Bottling.

By the aid of mechanical apparatus the wine, to which is added a certain quantity of cane sugar, is put into new and carefully rinsed out bottles; these are corked and the cork held in by means of an iron clasp. The bottles are immediately stored on their sides in immense cellars, hewn from solid chalk.

Domestic or American Champagne.

Some good wines are made in the United States from grapes, some of which were originally transplanted from France, and in many instances they have made remarkable progress in their similarity to the imported.

Serving.

The process of uncorking this wine is often grossly mismanaged. The cork should be slowly and noiselessly extracted after, first the wire, and then the string, are entirely removed. The glass must be near at hand so that no wine may be lost. Care should be taken that the wine flows out quietly, and if gently poured on the side of the wine glass the ebullition of the wine will be checked and the goblet filled without spilling. Do not fill the glass of any wine to the brim, but leave a quarter of an inch or more free. Rich champagne only requires to be stood in ice up to the shoulder of the bottle for not longer than twenty minutes, even in the hottest weather. It is important to remember that too much icing destroys body and vinosity. Served with ice puddings a rich champagne is delicious, or even after soup, but it would be considered cruel to provide nothing but champagne during the whole of a dinner. Should champagne be required between luncheon and dinner, it is well to serve a biscuit with it.

SAUTERNES.

Un Rayon de Soleil Concentré Dans un Verre (Biarnez).

The region which produces the celebrated white wines universally known under the name of sauternes is situated on the left bank of the Garonne, about 35 kilometers south of Bordeaux, and includes the communes or parishes of Barsac, Bommes, Fargues, Sauternes and Preignac, and a part of Saint-Pierre de Mons.

The country is hilly, admirably exposed to the rays of the sun, which explains, to a great extent, the degree of maturity the grapes attain.

The soil is more or less sandy, argillo-sillico-calcareous in some parts, argillo calcareous (as at Barsac) or entirely argillaceous in others.

There is no doubt that to this particularly favorable soil is due in a great measure the superiority of the Sauternes wines, which it is impossible to equal anywhere else, however careful the vinification may be. But it is only just to add that the selection of the vine plants, the extraordinary care bestowed on the culture of the vineyards, the special and expensive vinification, contribute to ensure perfection in bouquet, color, and finesse in a wine to which no other can be compared, for the simple reason that, of its kind, there exists nothing like it.

The appearance of the vineyards in this region differs from that of the Médoc, inasmuch as the vines are high; the surrounding country in which culture is more varied, is hilly and picturesque, the views from some of the heights, that, amongst others, on which Chateau Yquem is situated extending miles over fertile scenery.

It would take too much space to describe minutely the labor involved in cultivating these vineyards; each season, or, more exactly, each day, brings its task, and nothing must be neglected, however futile this may appear to the uninitiated.

As before mentioned, the grapes are gathered and pressed in a manner peculiar to the district.

The gathering takes place later than in the Médoc and lasts much longer, commencing at the end of September, and terminating in the first half of November. The grapes are allowed to attain the extreme degree of ripeness, and, after taking a deep golden color, they finally, under the influence of the mycoderma "Botrytis Cinerea," become over-ripe, a state absolutely necessary to ensure the quality of the future wine. The berry subsequently becomes browned and roasted, the skin gets thin and cracks, and a sugary juice oozes from it. Little by little, each berry advances to this state until the whole bunch forms, so to speak, but one mass of juicy fruit. It may easily be imagined how fragile the grapes are when they get to this degree of maturity, and how, whilst they gain if the weather remains fine, they are likely to suffer if it becomes rainy.

The gathering is effected in small quantities at a time, and only as each bunch of grapes attains the advanced state described above. Sometimes, and especially in the first growths, each berry is gathered separately and more or less quickly, according to the weather. When rainy, the operations are suspended and resumed when it becomes dry again.

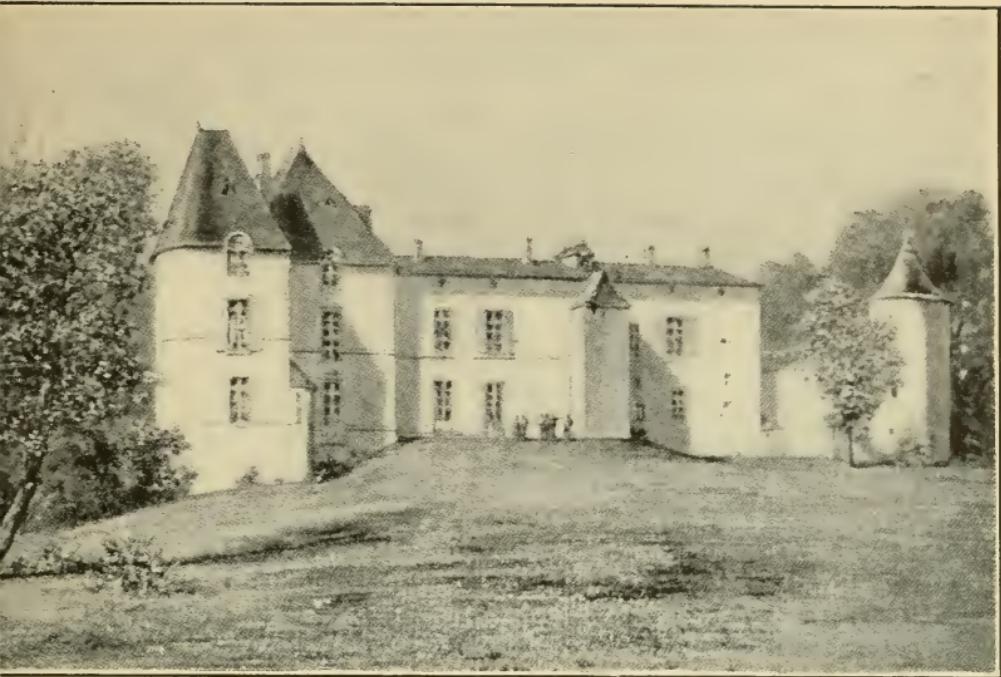

It is easy to see that quantity here is sacrificed to quality, and that the expenses of wine making, under such circumstances, must necessarily be high. It often requires as many as six successive pickings to gather one bunch. The cost of cultivating vineyards in the Sauternes district is estimated to range from 1000 to 1200 francs per hectare, inclusive of grape-picking and purchase of casks; the yield per hectare may be roughly estimated at from 4 to 7 hogsheads, according to the vintage. Vintaged by ordinary methods, the wines would yield at least one-third more.

In the superior growths, there are three selections or "tries," the first, comprising the berries which have dried somewhat after becoming over-ripe, yields what is known as "vin de tête."

The second selection comprises the berries in a somewhat less advanced state and yields a larger quantity; the third includes the remainder of the grapes, which, although ripe, have not attained the same degree of maturity as the others; the wine pressed from it is called "vin de queue" and is relatively unimportant in quantity.

The grapes are pressed rapidly, so as to prevent the wine from taking too deep a color from the skin. The must which flows from the press is at once put into casks, where the fermentation takes place almost immediately and lasts several weeks, the duration depending on the style of the wine and on the temperature.

The quality is approximately judged by the musts, but it is only after the first racking, generally when the winter is over, that a definite opinion can be formed. Four rackings a year are necessary, sometimes five for wines of the first picking; a daily inspection, tasting and filling of the casks, are requisite to ensure proper treatment.

The classed growths are sold under their name, Chateau Yquem being the first and probably the best known. But simply as sauternes, barsac, bommes, preignac, etc., wines of the highest grade are sold and fetch high prices, the greatest care being bestowed on the small vineyards as on the large ones.

Sauternes—of succeeded vintages—are delicate in flavor, of a pale golden color, mellow, rich, bordering on sweetness, and have a fine, agreeable bouquet; they are hygienic, not heady, and merit the description of perfection in white wines.

Dr. Mauriac, of Bordeaux, says in one of his works: "The great Sauternes white wines, which are of a relatively high alcoholic strength, are both tonic and stimulating; consumed moderately, they are invaluable to convalescents after a severe illness or when it is necessary to revive an organism extenuated by high fever, hemorrhage, or long fatigue.

"They are perfect as dessert wines and one or two glasses at the end of a meal facilitate digestion and provoke gaiety."

BURGUNDIES—RED AND WHITE.

The wines produced in the Province of Burgundy, situated in eastern France, viz., in the Côte d'Or, between Macon, Baune and Dijon, rank among the best burgundies. They contain more tartrates and tannin than clarets, and are altogether heavier in body and aroma.

The best known cheaper qualities are Macon, Baune and Beaujolais, and their names indicate generally the district of their growth. The better wines are Romanee, Canti, Pommard, Chambertin, Nuits and Clos De Vougot, and the best known white wines are the Chablis.

The red burgundies are recommended as blood-making wines, especially in cases of general or local anaemia.

How to Serve Burgundy Wines.

Red burgundies should be served just as clarets, at the dining-room temperature, having been brought from the cellar several hours before the meal, after having decanted them off their sediment, or by using special baskets in which the bottles are laid just as they lay in the bin.

Burgundy wines in bottle form a sediment, owing to maturing, which is more or less abundant, according to the growths and ages. This sediment does not impair the quality of the wine, provided the bottle is uncorked carefully and not shaken so as to disturb the sediment. The cork having been drawn, the wine should be carefully decanted while holding the bottle up against the light in the same position as it was when stored in the cellar. As soon as the sediment is nearing the neck of the bottle the decanting must be stopped, for the mixing of the sediment with the wine will deprive the latter of its bouquet and render it bitter. Bottles should never be left uncorked, for the better the quality of the wine the more apt it is to become flat. White wines should be left in the cellar until needed. Sparkling wines should be iced.

Forming the Sparkle.

The ferments which existed at the time of the vintage and had become dormant during the winter, revive with the first warmth of spring, and commence to act afresh. They decompose the natural sugar still remaining from the vintage and transform it, as also the cane sugar added at the time of bottling, into a supplementary amount of alcohol and carbonic acid gas; but this time the gas cannot escape because the bottle is hermetically sealed; instead, it mixes thoroughly with the wine, producing that elegant sparkle so well known. This fermentation in the corked bottles generates a deposit which settles on the lower side of the bottle and must be got rid of. This is effected by two operations. These are the "mise sur pointe" and the "disgorgement."

The Mise Sur Pointe.

The bottles are placed head downward through an inclined plank pierced with holes at an angle of 70 degrees. Every day for at least three months a cellerman, specially trained for this kind of work, shakes the bottles lightly against the plank with a wrist movement quick and sharp. The deposit slowly descends and collects on the cork.

The Disgorgement.

The deposit, having settled on the cork, is now ready to be extracted. To do this the bottle is first placed head downward, to a depth of three inches, in a refrigerating bath. Under the action of the cold, the deposit congeals in the neck of the bottle. The cellerman then takes the bottle out of the bath, holds it upright, undoes the clasp and eases the cork, which the pressure of the carbonic gas inside eventually forces out with a loud report, together with the deposit. The wine is then absolutely clear.

The Liquering.

After disgorging, the wine has not the least taste of sugar, the sugar added at bottling having been completely transformed into alcohol and carbonic acid. Whilst in this state the wine is known as "brut." To regulate it to the client's taste, which varies in different countries, a certain quantity of liqueur, composed of sugar candy and wine from the finest Champagne vineyards, is added immediately after the disgorging.

The Corking.

For corking, the best Spanish corks are used and are held in by either string and wire or wire muzzle, according to the custom of each house. Finally the capsule and label are put on and the bottles are packed in cases or baskets ready for shipment.

The cellars are located at Reims, Epernay, Ay, Avize, etc., and are well worth seeing.

FRENCH WINES.

The word "claret" means a wine of clear, red color. It is the English name given to the red wines of France, and particularly those grown in the Bordeaux district.

Chateau wines are those made from grapes of a selected character and grown on vineyards of wealthy gentlemen, who devote much time and money in their careful cultivation, storing and aging. Chateau bottled wines rank very high in the estimation of the connoisseur.

Wines described as bearing the Cachet du Chateau are simply those which have the crest or coat of arms bearing that name on the label. The caps and corks are likewise branded.

There are hundreds of districts where good wines are grown. To enumerate their varieties would fill volumes, and with a limited space at disposal it is impossible to give more than superficial indication of the best known brands. The wines of France have a recognized classification, according to value.

WINES OF ITALY.

Italy ranks second in the wine production of the world.

Its Brolio is one of the best Italian red wines; it resembles Burgundy, but is somewhat drier on the palate. When old it is a highly tonic wine. Barbera is another good wine; it ranks as good table or dinner wine. Also white Corvo Capri, Lacrymae Christi are strong, sweet wines of southern Italy. There are many others, both still and sparkling, amongst which may be named Moscato Spumante (sparkling Moselle flavor). Nebiolo Spumante Valpolicella (sparkling) red wine. There is also sparkling Lacrymae Christi.

Italian wines are well known and highly appreciated all over the world.

WINES OF GERMANY.

German wines are grown principally on the banks of the Rhine, and are generally known as Hocks. Those grown on the banks of the Moselle are designated as Moselles. There are many varieties of German wines, and their names denote principally the district of their growth.

German wines are of great medical value. They are strengthening to the action of the heart and diffuse cheerfulness, without leaving adverse results, which more alcoholic beverages might produce. Moselle wines especially are prescribed by the medical profession as highly beneficial in all affections of the liver and kidneys. They are considered anti-diabetic in their action and to minimize gouty tendencies.

SWEET BITTER WINES

French wines have been divided into four distinct classes, namely: Red Wines, White Wines, Sparkling Wines and Liqueur Wines. In the latter class are included all the various aperitifs such as Dubonnet, Amer Picon, Byrrh Wine, Absinthe, etc. The red wines of France and those of the Medoc or Bordeaux district especially, are tonics, and generally recuperative in their action. They contain but a moderate amount of tannin, a feeble acidity, and are rich in iron, phosphates and phosphoric acid.

Dubonnet is an appetizer made from a sweet French wine, strongly infused with a solution of Peruvian bark. Its tonic properties are extensively acknowledged.

Amer Picon, a French bitters, or aperitif, made from French sweet wine infused from bitter herbs.

Byrrh wine is a high-class appetizing and tonic wine, and an exceedingly good stimulant. It is made from old wine infused with bitter herbs and quinquinas. With mineral waters it makes a very refreshing drink.

Absinthe is a highly aromatic liqueur of an opaline, greenish color, and slightly bitter taste. It is distilled from bitter herbs, and is considered tonic and stomachic, although its excessive use produces a morbid, stupefying condition differing from ordinary form of alcoholism. The mode of drinking it is by mixing with water, which is poured into it drop by drop.

LIQUEURS

Benedictine is a high-class liqueur, distilled exclusively at Fecamp, Normandy. It was originally made by the Benedictine monks, but since the French revolution it has been manufactured by a secular company, according to the original recipe. Its medicinal properties are of an acknowledged high order.

Maraschino is made from cherries griottes, grown chiefly in the south of France. It has a unique perfume and an agreeable taste.

Anisette. The basis of this cordial is anis seed. Its properties for facilitating digestion and preventing secondary fermentation, which causes dyspepsia, are well known and acknowledged; it is not only an agreeable but also a salutary cordial, known throughout the world.

Chartreuse is a highly esteemed tonic cordial, obtained by the distillation of various aromatic plants and some species of nettles growing on the Alps. There are some other ingredients and herbs used, but these are a secret belonging to the Carthusian monks, from which order the name Chartreuse is derived. It was formerly distilled by the monks at the monastery of the Grande Chartreuse in France, but since their expulsion it has been made at Tarragona, Spain, where the order is now established.

Sloe Gin is a species of the wild damson. It is a distillation of unsweetened gin, mixed with an infusion of the juice of the sloe berries, and is a delightful cordial. Its medicinal attributes are very special, being slightly laxative and very soothing in cases of griping pain. With hot or cold water it makes a very agreeable drink, and is also used in cocktails, fizzes, rickies, daisies, etc.

Kummel. The foundation of kummel is caraway seed, and its dietetic properties are somewhat similar to anisette. It is invaluable for indigestion or dyspepsia. It is also known in Russia as Alish, and is used there extensively as an after-dinner cordial.

Kirschwasser is a spirituous liqueur obtained by the distillation of Switzerland wild cherries. It is distilled chiefly in Vosges and in the Black Forest. It is free from sweetness, has a delicious flavor of bitter almonds, and is colorless as water.

Creme de Cacao is made from the beans of cacao. The chacao, the finest of which come from Puerto Cabello, is remarkable for its delicacy and perfume, and adds the most delicate effect to the small quantity of alcohol which this cordial contains.

BITTERS.

Specifically, they are liqueurs (mostly spirituous) in which herbs, generally bitter herbs, are steeped or infused.

Bitters are appetizers and beneficial for other medicinal purposes.

Angostura is a bitter tonic much used in the West Indies as a preventive against malarial fever. It is also used as a flavoring substance for all kinds of drinks, cocktails, etc., to which it imparts a unique flavor. It was originally made at Angostura, a city in Venezuela. Now it is made at Trinidad by the successors of Dr. Siegert.

Amer Picon is a French bitters, or an aperitif, made from French sweet wine infused with bitter herbs.

Orange bitters have a bitter-sweet flavor of the juice of the orange, and is much used in the preparation of cocktails.

There are many bitters which take their names from manufacturers, such as Abbotts, Bookers, Boonekamps, Hostetters, Pychaud, Fernetbranca, etc.

Calisaya is a bitter tonic infused with calisaya or Peruvian bark. It is an aromatic aperitif appetizer, much esteemed in all European cities. It is made in France from the finest quality of muscated wine and Peruvian bark.

VERMOUTH.

Italian Vermouth is a bitter-sweet wine. Its component parts are a muscated wine, aromatized with the infusion of herbs and spices and sweetened with pure sugar. It is fortified with brandy to about fourteen to eighteen per cent. Wormwood is one of the chief herbs used in Vermouth, and from it takes its name. It is extensively used in the preparation of cocktails.

French Vermouth is made in and around Cette, France. The French Vermouth differs from the Italian by being less sweet and somewhat lighter in color. In France it is one of the chief aperitifs and makes the finest cocktails and highballs.

BRANDIES OR COGNAC.

Brandy is an abbreviation of Brandy Wine, and is a spirituous liqueur obtained by the distillation of wine. The name brandy is also given to the distillates from peaches, apricots, cider, etc. In England a common kind of brandy is distilled from malt liquors, to which the flavor and color of brandy are added, and this is called British brandy.

Cognac brandy is acknowledged the standard, especially those produced in the department of Charente, south of Cognac, France.

California brandies are also much appreciated and are increasing in the estimation of the consumer.

WHISKEY.

We may take it as an accepted fact that both by custom and research it has been found that alcohol in its various forms has its legitimate place in the dietary of both healthy and diseased organisms. The uncertainty of its effects, however, compels the medical profession to require a reliable spirit, for unless alcohol is completely eliminated from the organism, its effects, being cumulative, are unsatisfactory; their effects increase in geometrical progression with each succeeding dose. Care must be exercised therefore in selecting whiskey or other spirit for general use. Medical opinion seems only to recognize the fact that new whisky contains oils which are assumed to be amylic alcohol or fusel-oil, and which must be got rid of by rectification or age. Little attention is given to the other essential oils, the secondary products of the more correct materials of distillation. These may be either useful or detrimental in that they assist or retard the elimination of the alcohol.

A properly distilled and well matured whisky made from a fully malted barley is the one to be selected. The essential oil of malt being a bland and harmless substance, fulfills a very useful therapeutic office, as by its diaphoretic action upon the skin it promotes and increases excretion, and consequently mitigates the accumulative effects of the alcohol. Both pure malt whiskey as well as genuine cognac brandy possess beneficent qualities in their secondary products, the resulting ethers of which have peculiarly pleasing characteristics.

Amylic alcohol, on the contrary (the essential oil of grain whisky), is poisonous even in minute doses, and is most difficult to eliminate from the whiskey by any process. Its deleterious effect may be recognized by a paralyzing influence upon the skin, which, closing the doors of escape for the alcohol when consumed, produces feverish symptoms, furred tongue, thirst and headache. Whiskey containing it has earned therefore the reputation of being "the Devil in Solution." It is also necessary to avoid spirit of any kind to which saccharine or other softening ingredients have been added. For some reason not apparent in the present state of our knowledge of the chemistry of digestion, the tendency of sugar to turn acid on the stomach is increased when taken in combination with alcohol.

Alcohol plays an important part in the arrest of phthisis—particularly among those who have delicate skins and perspire freely the advantageous effects produced in these cases by the entire abandonment of all medication, and the employment of considerable doses of spirit is well established.

All those cases which are characterized by weakness of the heart, failing circulation, inability to take food, loss of power of sleep, and exhaustion, come under the category of suitable cases in which the best liqueur brandy or fine old malt whiskey is indicated as the most suitable form of alcohol that can be used, no matter how much one has to pay for it.

The physiological action of alcohol of whatever variety is greatly modified by climate, habits of life, and the hourly changes in the atmosphere. A humid climate, whether it be hot or cold, seems not only to tolerate its use, but often to require a stimulant; but in dry and hot countries whisky should be sparingly used.

RUM.

The term rum is an abbreviation of rumbullion. Rum is a spirit, distilled from the juice of sugar cane, and also from molasses, in countries where sugar cane is not cultivated.

The best qualities of rum are made in the West Indies and are named after the place of manufacture, such as Jamaica Rum, Antigua rum, and St. Croix rum.

New England and Medford rum was one of the chief alcoholic drinks of this country, but its consumption has considerably diminished through prohibition laws and the steady advance of the use of whisky. The medicinal properties of rum are unquestioned, and for home remedies it is still in the lead. As a stimulant it is considered most efficacious. The Medford rums are also made in Massachusetts and enjoy great popularity. They are distilled on the same principle as New England rums.

GIN.

Gin is an aromatic spirit prepared from rye and other grain and flavored with the juice of the juniper berry.

Plymouth is a favorite sweet gin and is known in England as Plymouth gin.

Domestic gins are becoming more popular at the present time than ever before. They are gins distilled in the United States and possess all the attributes of the imported, and in consequence of the heavy import duty, the price is much lower.

Gordon and High and Dry and Plymouth, are among the leading imported gins sold in the United States.

ALES, BEERS, PORTER, STOUT.

Ale is a light colored beer made from malt which is dried at a low heat. (Pale ale is made from the palest or lightest colored malt.)

Beer is the same as the English word ale, and is the common word for all malt liquors. There is, however, a specific distinction. Ale is lighter colored than beer of a certain strength, made from malt and water. Beer is rather darker in color and is made of malt, hops and water.

Stout means a stouter and heavier quality than porter. It is brewed from the high dried malt and is treated in the same way as porter. London and Dublin stouts are considered the best.

Root beer is a beverage containing the extracts of various roots such as dock, dandelion, sarsaparilla and sassafras.

Ginger ale is an effervescent drink very similar to ginger beer. It ranks, however, as an aerated water beverage.

Malt extracts are concentrated, unfermented infusions of malt. They are considered most efficacious in furthering nutrition.

ALCOHOL.

Alcohol (ethyl) is the distillate, or product, of anything containing starch or sugar. It is highly inflammable, and burns without smoke or residue. Its normal proof is about 192%.

CELLAR MANAGEMENT.

Cellar Temperature.

The most desirable place for the storage of wine is an underground structure. The walls should be thick, with double doors, and the floor dry and concreted. Hot water pipes, skylights or badly fitting doors are most detrimental, as they are destructive to a uniform temperature. There should, however, be an abundance of ventilation, and the thermometer kept at about 56 deg. Fahrenheit, which should not vary more than 2 or 3 degrees upon either the hottest summer or coldest winter day. Excessive heat or cold destroys the life of the wine. A flaming gas jet is not advisable if ventilation is insufficient, because when lighted the temperature rises, creating too much heat near the top of the cellar, and when extinguished it quickly falls.

Binning.

There should be only three tiers or bins in the cellar, and the bottles placed in them with their noses inclined, if anything, a little downward, in order to ensure the corks being always kept wet with the wine. The bottles should look as neat and regular as it is possible to make them. Carelessness in binning will, of course, lead to much breakage. Examine each bottle to see that it is properly corked and that there is no leakage before binning away, although, perhaps, an infinitesimal leakage may not be detrimental, but perhaps the reverse. The bottles should not be laid down in the bin unless in good condition, and if not bright must be stood up for twenty-four hours until the deposit has been precipitated, to prevent it settling in the neck of the bottle and coming into the decanter when decanted. Stout young wines of good quality obtain a maturity and generous flavor by being binned in places of moderate warmth, provided, of course, that they are not kept there too long, but champagnes, Rhine wines and Moselles should be kept in a cool place.

Decanting

Before filling the decanters they should be, of course, thoroughly clean inside and out, and the mouth of the wine bottle very carefully wiped to remove all the exudation which will be found adhering to it; this should ensure the wine being served in perfect condition, for even the slightest cloudiness destroys that delicacy of flavor which is its chief charm. To extract the cork without shaking the wine, the bottle must be taken carefully by the neck with a steady hand and the corkscrew inserted in the exact centre of the cork with the bottle lying in a horizontal position.

Use no strainer, but place a candle in such a position that its light will shine through the wine as it passes between the bottle and the decanter. As soon as any sediment appears, the operation must be stopped at once so that none of it will get into the decanter.

No wine should be served at table that is defective or "corky" (a term to indicate wine that has been tainted by the sap of the cork wood), which is easily detected by the smell.

All wines throw a deposit, rich wines more than others. The crust of Port wine of only one or two years' formation is naturally not so firm as that which has been kept for a longer period. Dry wines take longer to mature than rich.

Port wine should be decanted at the bin in the cellar, from half an hour to two hours before wanted, the decanter being placed in the Dining Room after it is filled, and served at the temperature of the room.

PORt WINE

In the selection of the Port wine, much depends upon the weather, as the physical conditions of those who partake of it must be considered; people accustomed to open air exercise enjoy generous wines, and in warm weather, light tawny wine should be preferred.

In some houses it is customary to drink a vintage Port no younger than twenty years in bottle, but there are many good wines which mature in from four to six years and acquire sufficient perfection to satisfy the connoisseur who is not too fastidious. If more than one quality of Port wine is required, it is better to commence with the richer or younger wine and follow with the drier or older.

CLARETS.

Clarets do not throw a deposit as quickly as Port wine, but the greatest care must be exercised in decanting them in order that they may be served in brilliant condition; the sediment being extremely fine, with a bitter flavor, it is not easily detected and will entirely spoil the delicacy of the wine if mixed with it.

Clarets moved from one cellar to another, are temporarily put out of condition; it is like transplanting a tree without giving it time to recover and develop in its new soil, therefore, wine always requires to settle down before being consumed.

Old wines particularly need a rest after a journey, and they should always be taken from the cellar direct to the Dining Room. This is important, but it is a very general omission in hotels and clubs.

Claret, to acquire the proper temperature, should be stood up in the Dining Room the morning it is to be consumed, and decanted at least half an hour before serving. A full wine may be kept a little longer, as it improves by contact with the air. Young or cheap Clarets should also be carefully decanted because any sediment coming into the glass destroys the character of the wine.

It is most inadvisable to serve Claret in a decanting basket, it should always be decanted, because the last one or two glasses invariably run muddy. Claret should, if possible, be put on the table at about the temperature of the room in which it will be consumed, to preserve the delicate freshness of the wine. The bouquet escapes when the wine is exposed to sudden heat or warmed to excess; this bouquet is mainly due to volatile vinous ethers which it is most desirable to retain. Clarets of medium quality improve with age, whereas the lightest table wines may be drunk fresh bottled, as is the custom in France; a fine, large, thin and white glass being used, and only two-thirds filled.

Sherry and stronger wines are liable to throw a deposit in bottle if kept for any length of time; care should therefore be exercised in decanting them or in fact any wine in which a sediment may be formed.

The sound and natural wines of Bourdeaux are refreshing and appetizing, and are the best type of a universal beverage for every day use; no other wines which the world produces are capable of yielding such lasting pleasures to the palate. They have also the additional advantage that when mixed with water do not spoil.

When taken with food they entice the languid palate and are admirably adapted for persons of all ages and conditions, whose occupations tax the brain more than the muscles, and as they contain only a comparatively small percentage of alcohol have but little tendency to inebriate.

The dietetic value of Claret has not been over-rated. If taken with food it is of service to persons of the gouty temperament, as it stimulates digestion and does not create acidity. The combination of the various saline ingredients with fruit acids, notably the acid tartrate of potash (Cream of Tartar) make for its highest value.

The delicate aroma and delicious flavour of the finer sorts of after-dinner Claret give endless delight and satisfaction; and there are so many varieties (differing according to the vineyards from which they emanate) they afford the connoisseur a wide scope for the exercise of judgment in selection.

MOSELLE.

Moselle as a highly etheral wine is also very useful in cases of cerebral and cardiac exhaustion, it stimulates the action of the liver and kidneys, and is generally credited with being otherwise beneficial. It is said to be anti-diabetic, and does not increase the gouty tendency.

HOCKS.

Hocks have great fragrance and vinosity and are pre-eminently the wines most suitable for intellectual enjoyment, as they are particularly exhilarating and increase the appetite. Being of light alcoholic strength but rich in volatile ethers, they are exceedingly efficacious, and do not (like Claret) so quickly spoil after opening.

The finer qualities widely differ in flavour from each other, and being rich in ethers are much valued as a stimulant in sustaining the nervous force of the heart, while its enfeebled muscular tissue has time in which to recuperate.

For serious nervous prostration their value as a remedy can hardly be over estimated; their beneficial effects being strikingly exhibited in bringing back a stronger and steadier heartbeat, thus calming any attendant irritability which is of the utmost importance to the patient.

SHERRY.

There are no wines which can compare with genuine Sherry, either in generous character, delicacy of flavor or dietetic value. It represents about the highest development of quality in wine, is distinguished by freedom from acidity, sugar extractive matter, and has a high proportion of volatile ethers. These compound vinous ethers (to which Wine of a certain class and age owes the greater part of its flavor and bouquet) have a scarcely less important influence in advancing the quality of wine than in providing a valuable stimulant to the vital functions in cases of cerebral and cardiac exhaustion.

It relieves that condition of sleeplessness consequent upon slow and inefficient digestion, of old age. It is also beneficial in the later stages of severe febrile diseases, with great exhaustion and sleeplessness. A really good and pure Sherry has the same effect in rapidly restoring strength and regularity to the heart's action in certain forms of chronic neuroses—also in those severe neuralgic affections which so seriously affect the system.

The older bottled wines and those having the greatest amount of ethers are most effective. The finest wine that can be procured for money is just that which will give the best effect with the least possible delay. It must not be forgotten that the influence of such wine is entirely distinct from that of mere alcohol.

In Spain, where its qualities are well known, it is regularly used by physicians as a restorative in cases of collapse after surgical operations.

It should also be mentioned that it is invaluable for use as medicine (but not as a beverage) in the wasting diseases of children, particularly when they lose weight rapidly. It is conspicuously useful in such cases when the development of tuberculosis is feared.

In opposition to a very general idea, it is the opinion of Dr. Garrott, confidently confirmed by Dr. Francis E. Anstie, in his interesting book, "Uses of Wines in Health and Disease," that the non-saccharine or dry Sherries are not productive of gout, provided they do not cause any disturbance of the digestive functions. Dr. Anstine claims that it is only the saccharine of alcoholic liquors which develop gouty manifestations or evoke the tendency of latent gout.

Port is a valuable medicine, and old crusted Wine a rare luxury.

It represents nearly all the elements of a fine wine, besides being most agreeable to a refined palate. An old bottled wine when judiciously used, with its fine volatile ethers, is singularly useful in restoring strength and regularity to the heart's action, and for certain forms of anemia it is nearly always beneficial. A full flavored potent wine of moderate age retaining much of the richness of its original flavor is for such purposes the best agent, the object being to employ only such wine as will exert the maximum of good influence upon both appetite and digestion.

In case of acute hemorrhage even an excessive quantity of Port Wine administered at the right moment has been found to have the result of resurrection from almost certain death.

WHEN AND HOW TO SERVE BEVERAGES.

Appetizer.—Dry Pale Sherry, plain or with a dash of bitters. Vermouth plain or Cocktails.

With Oysters.—Rhine Wine, Moselle, Dry Sauternes, Chablis or Capri. Cool.

With Soup.—Sherry, Madeira or Marsala. Cool.

With Fish.—Sauternes, Chablis, Rhine Wine, Moselle or Capri, Brolio White. Corvo.

With Entrees.—Claret or Chianti. Temperature of room.

With Roast.—Claret, Burgundy or Chianti. Temperature of room.

With Game.—Champagne (Cold); Old Vintage Champagne. Cool.

With Game.—Red Burgundy. Temperature of room.

With Pastry.—Madeira. Cool.

With Cheese.—Port. Temperature of room.

With Fruit.—Tokay, Malaga or Muscat. Temperature of room.

With Coffee.—Brandy or Cordials. Temperature of room.

If you do not wish to serve such a variety, use the following, viz.:

Either Sherry or Sherry and Bitters, Vermouth or Cocktails as an appetizer.

Either Rhine Wine, Moselle, Sauternes, Chablis or Capri with oysters and fish.

Either Sherry, Madeira or Marsala with Soup.

Either Champagne Claret, Burgundy, Chianti or Whiskey High Ball throughout the meals.

Either Brandy or Cordials after dinner.

Either Ale or stout with oysters, fish, cold meats, steaks, chops or bread and cheese.

APPENDIX.

There is nothing like good advice if only people will take it. An intelligent comprehension of the action of the various alcoholic liquors will do more to advance the cause of temperance than a vigorous adhesion to a dogma. Both Wines and Spirits have undoubtedly their legitimate place in the sustentation of healthy and diseased organisms and forms the commonest of all household remedies for a large number of ailments, therefore the few words upon their dietetic utility will not have been out of place.

As a rule the vigorous frame and perfect digestion of a healthy young or middle-aged person requires only a very moderate allowance, but in failing health and disease the uses of Wines and Spirits are invaluable and numerous. Possibly, however, the differences in their effects are not yet understood, either by the public or even by the majority of medical men, as their action is greatly controlled by their different combinations.

If taken with suitable food and in proper quantities absorption is more gradual, and being diluted, unquestionably aid the digestion and assimilation of food. Recognizing that these are beverages of ordinary life, their selection must be carefully made, with a due regard to purity as well as to the idiosyncrasies of the consumer.

A CLOVER LEAF.

In genuine old fashioned American hot weather nothing seems to tickle the palate like a good American drink, and the kind selected generally indicates the characteristics of the person drinking. In winter a man will take almost anything that happens to be the fad for the moment, whether highly flavored or not, but in summer the demand is for something that will quench the thirst, whether beer, lemonade or gin rickey or some other beverage. The Clover Leaf is said to be popular in the city of brotherly love. Certainly it is decorative, for it has a soft orchid color, with a rim of white.

Drink is made of:

½ teaspoonful of sugar
100% dry gin
10% raspberry syrup
White of an egg
1 sprig of mint.

Fill glass with cracked ice, shake well, strain in champagne glass and serve.

A SOUL KISS.

½ spoonful sugar
50% Byrrh wine
25% rye whiskey
25% French Vermouth
Juice ½ orange
Fill glass with ice.

Shake with shaker and strain top off with fizz water.

AN ALE CUP.

Ingredients.—One bottle of Bass Ale, 1 gill of water, 1 glass of Sherry, the juice of two lemons and the fine rind of one, 1 tablespoonful of Castor sugar, a few leaves of fresh mint, a pinch of grated nutmeg, crushed ice.

Method.—Remove the lemon rind well in their fine strips, put them into a jug, add the sherry, water, lemon juice, sugar, mint and nutmeg, cover and let the liquid stand for 20 minutes, strain into a glass jug, add a few pieces of ice and the ale, then serve.

AN OXFORD UNIVERSITY "NIGHTCAP"

Beat up the yolks of eight eggs with refined sugar pulverized and a nutmeg grated; then extract the juice from the rind of a lemon by rubbing loaf sugar upon it, and put the sugar with a piece of cinnamon and a quart of Bass & Co.'s Barley Wine, or Strong Ale, into a saucepan, place it on the fire, and when it boils take it off, then add a single glass of gin, or this may be left out, put the liquor into a spouted jug, and pour it gradually among the yolks of eggs, etc. All must be kept well stirred with a spoon while the liquor is being poured in. If it is not sweet enough add loaf sugar.

ABSINTHE.
(American style.)

¾ glass of fine ice

1 pony of absinthe

Wine glass of water.

Shake the ingredients until the outside of shaker is covered with ice.

Strain in glass and serve.

ABSINTHE COCKTAIL.

One dash bitters

10% Anisette

90% Absinthe

Fill glass with fine ice.

Shake well, until frapped. Strain in cocktail glass.

ABSINTHE DRIPPED.

1 pony of Absinthe.

Fill the bowl of your absinthe glass (which has a hole in the center) with fine ice and the balance with water. Then elevate the bowl and let contents drip into the glass containing the absinthe until the color shows a sufficiency. Pour into a thin bar glass and serve.

ABSINTHE FRAPPE.

75% Absinthe

25% Anisette

Fill glass with shaved ice.

Shake well with shaker, strain, fill glass with fizz water.

ALE BEANIE COCKTAIL.

50% Irish whiskey

50% Italian Vermouth

Fill glass with broken ice.

Stir, strain and serve.

ALEXANDER COCKTAIL.

(Use bar glass.)

75% rye whiskey

25% Benedictine

1 piece of ice

Twist of orange peel.

Stir and serve.

ALE SANGAREE.

Fill up ale glass with ale.

1 teaspoonful powdered sugar.

Stir gently, grate a little nutmeg on top and serve.

AMER PICON HIGH-BALL

(Use large glass.)

One piece of ice in glass

75% Amer. Picon

25% grenadine.

Fill glass with fizz water, stir with spoon and serve.

ANDERSON COCKTAIL

(Use mixing glass.)

75% dry gin

25% Italian Vermouth.

Fill glass with cracked ice, twist piece of orange peel, frappe, strain and serve.

ANGOSTURA FIZZ.

(Bar glass.)

Tablespoon powdered sugar

Juice half a lemon

Broken ice

$\frac{1}{2}$  Pony bitters

White of an egg

Tablespoon of cream.

Shake well in shaker and serve.

ANGOSTURA GINGER ALE.

1 glass ginger ale.

3 dashes bitters.

ANGOSTURA GRAPE-FRUIT

Cut the fruit in half, extract the core or pithy substance in the center with a sharp knife, insert the knife around the inner edge of the peel and disengage the fruit from the peel without removing the fruit or breaking the peel, sprinkle plentifully with powdered sugar and dash the opening caused by the removal of the core with Angostura bitters. Ice well before serving.

APPLEJACK COCKTAIL.

One dash orange bitters

100% cider brandy

$\frac{1}{2}$  glass cracked ice, squeeze a piece of lemon peel.

Stir up with spoon and strain in cocktail glass.

Drop medium-sized olive in glass and serve.

APOLLINARIS LEMONADE.

(Use large glass.)

One tablespoonful of powdered sugar

Three lumps of cracked ice

Juice of one lemon

One pint Apollinaris water.

Serve with straws.

APPLEJACK SOUR.

One teaspoonful of sugar

Juice of one lemon

$\frac{3}{4}$  glass cracked ice

100% cider brandy.

Stir with spoon, strain in glass, ornament with fruit in season.

APPLE TODDY.

1 teaspoonful of sugar dissolved in a little hot water
100% Applejack

$\frac{1}{4}$  of a baked apple

Fill glass 2-3 full of boiling water, stir, grate nutmeg or top, serve.

ARDSLEY COOLER.

(Use large thin glass.)

Large piece of ice

Large spray of mint

100% dry gin

1 bottle imported ginger ale.

Drink with nose to mint.

ARF AND ARF.

$\frac{1}{2}$  glass porter

$\frac{1}{2}$  glass ale.

ASTRINGENT.

75% wine glass Port wine

25% glass brandy

3 dashes Angostura bitters

4 or 5 dashes strong Jamaica ginger.

Stir gently with spoon and serve with a little nutmeg on top.

AUDITORIUM COOLER.

Juice of 1 lemon

10 dashes raspberry syrup

1 dash Angostura bitters

1 bottle ginger ale.

Stir well, ornament with fruit, berries and serve.

BAGARDIE COCKTAIL

50% Bagardie rum

25% Italian Vermouth

25% French Vermouth

Fill glass with broken ice.

Stir, strain and serve.

BACHELOR'S ROSE

Juice of a half a lemon

Juice of half lime

Juice of half orange

White of an egg

25% raspberry syrup

75% Sloe gin

Fill glass with cracked ice.

Shake well, strain and serve.

APPETIZERS

There have been many ways of beginning a meal, those which obtain in our day, outside of oysters and clams when in season, are as a rule made up, in Winter, of caviar, anchovies, tuny, salmon or herring, seasoned highly, served on toast, artichoke bottom, stuffed into small scooped-out tomatoes or apples, or on leaves of lettuce and romain. Fruits such as oranges, grape-fruit or pineapple nicely cooled are also frequently used.

In Summer the fruits above in combination with strawberries, raspberries, cantaloups, and fruit juices are preferred, with reason, for they cool instead of heating the system.

A very good and novel way of starting a lunch, dinner or supper in the hot days for those who cannot use fruit or are tired of canned, smoked or salted fish, is a spoonful of fresh crab meat, nicely seasoned, served in a small glass with two or three small leaves of lettuce, the small glass placed in a large decorated glass filled with ice, thereby keeping the crab meat nice and cold till used.

CANAPE, WHIMSY

Make a paste composed half of anchovies and half of tuny fish, season to taste, spread upon a thin square piece of fresh toast, glaze thinly with tartar sauce, decorate the sides with hashed parsley, green pepper, white and yolk of eggs.

SALAD, DON QUIXOTE

Hashed smoked salmon, anchovies, white and yolk of eggs, shallots, chives and beets; seasoned pepper, paprika, oil and vinegar—place a spoonful on a nice leaf of lettuce, add a little fresh caviar on top, serve with a quarter of lemon.

SALMON ON TOAST

Take a nice fresh piece of toast of the desired size, spread over it a slice of canned smoked salmon, trim nicely, sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated Parmesan cheese, add a small piece of fresh butter and brown in a gas salamander.

A tuny fish salad is another which, when made daintily, is both appetizing and satisfying; as also a salad made of cold boiled salmon or sardines wherein radishes onions, chives, shallots, etc., may be used at discretion. But enough; use your inventive sense and the number becomes unlimited.

Yours,

NESTOR LATTARD.

APPETIZING SANDWICHES

CLUB SANDWICH

Thinly sliced Chicken, broiled ham or bacon, with lettuce leaves, on thin slices of buttered toast, seasoned to taste.

EGG SANDWICH

Take yolk of hard boiled eggs, adding salt, pepper, mustard and olive oil, making paste, and spread on thin slices of bread.

LETTUCE MAYONNAISE SANDWICH

Spread Mayonnaise on thin slices of bread, with leaves of lettuce.

NUT SANDWICH

English walnuts chopped up fine, with Mayonnaise dressing, on thin slices of bread.

ROQUEFORT CHEESE SANDWICH

Fresh Roquefort cheese, with thick cream, mixed into a paste and spread on thin slices of buttered bread.

ANCHOVY SANDWICH

Pour off wine and wash thoroughly in vinegar; then allow them to stand a while in olive oil, after which drain and open lengthwise, removing bones, and place on unbuttered slices of bread.

CAVIAR SANDWICH

Put caviar on plate, squeezing juice of a fresh lemon on it, with olive oil alternately; beat thoroughly together until paste is formed, and spread on thin toast.

CHEESE STRAWS

One-half pound flour, one-quarter pound butter, one-half pound grated Parmesan cheese, whites of two eggs, little salt and pepper and mustard mixed together; roll very thin and cut in strips one-half inch wide, four inches long; bake light brown.

FREUND, BALLOR & COMPANY VERMOUTH

TURIN, ITALY

BALLOR VERMOUTH, which is so rapidly coming into favor in the United States, is manufactured by the house of Freund, Ballor & Company of Turin, one of the leading and oldest firms in the Vermouth industry of Italy. Ballor Vermouth has for a basis a very choice wine and derives its flavor and tonic properties from the infusion of various herbs growing on the Alps. This Vermouth is unexcelled for all mixed drinks in which Vermouth is used, retaining its natural brilliancy when mixed with Gin, Whisky, Brandy, etc. Ballor Vermouth is supplied to the Royal House of Italy, its manufacturers having been appointed purveyors to the King many years ago, and has been awarded the highest distinctions at all great International Expositions, beginning with that of London in 1862, to the latest Paris Exposition, at which it obtained a gold medal—the highest prize accorded to Vermouth. Twelve Diplomas of honor and fourteen gold medals are included in its list of exhibition awards.

The establishment of Freund, Ballor & Co. covers an area of about eight acres, and is one of the largest in Italy. The cellars contain a stock of about 800,000 gallons, and the Vermouth is never put on the market before it is at least two or three years old.

This Vermouth is shipped in cases of one dozen bottles each, and in casks of various sizes, from twenty to one hundred and sixty gallons each.

AMER PICON

is a pleasant and perfect invigorator extracted from plants grown in Algeria, where it is extensively used by the colonists to counteract the debilitating influences of the climate.

It has since acquired an immense popularity in France and throughout the world.

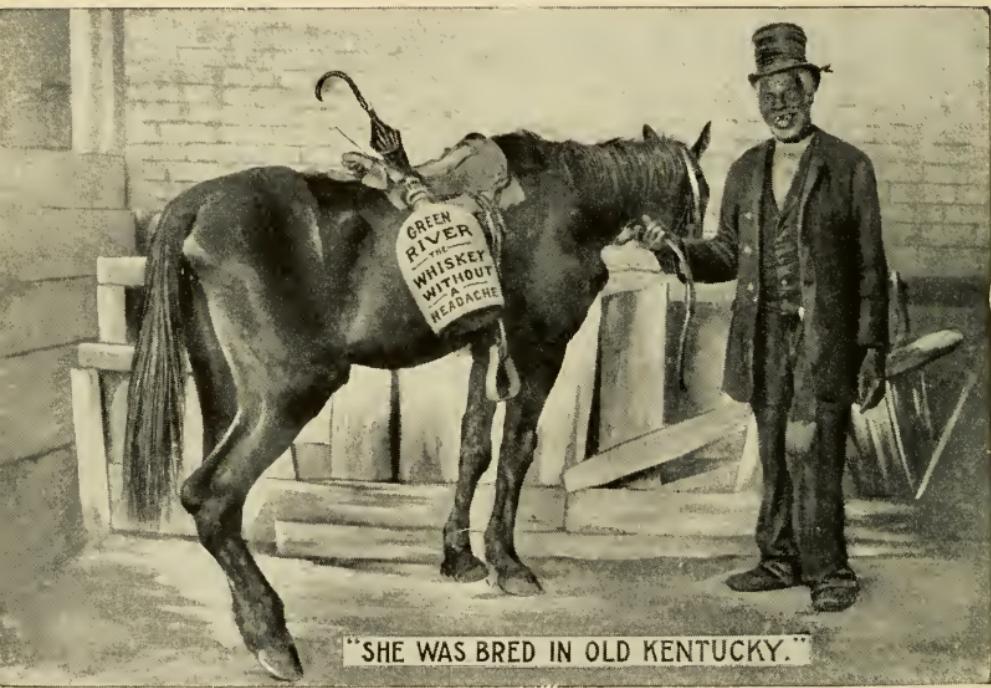

In Paris alone, where the public is offered so many appetizers and tonics and where the competition is so keen, Amer Picon has superseded all its competitors and its consumption has attained 1,500,000 bottles annually. The total annual consumption of Amer Picon is 12,000,000 bottles.

PICON HIGHBALL (Use a large size fizz glass.) Mix as follows: 2 or 3 lumps of clear crystal ice, 1 wine-glass Amer Picon, 1 tablespoonful of Curaçao or Grenadine. Fill glass with ice-cold siphon or plain water.

PICON COCKTAIL Lump ice, 1-3 wine-glass Italian Vermouth, 2-3 wine-glass Amer Picon. Stir well with a spoon, strain into a cocktail glass, and serve.
