

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in Hotels, Clubs, Cafes, Buffets, or Bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

Yuletide and New Year greetings having been offered and accepted, the remnants of the feast days having gradually disappeared, it seems quite appropriate for the membership of our International Union to look intently forward and endeavor to observe as best we can, what there is in sight for us as workingmen and working women for the period of time coming under the head of 1915. There is substantially 365 days in front of us, or was on the first of the present month; fifteen of those important units of time will have passed into history by the time this number of the MIXER AND SERVER reaches the hands of our general membership; what has transpired in those 15 days may or may not have a decided bearing on the future development of your local union and consequently on our International Union, and when all is said, our International Union truly cuts some congealed moisture in the catering industry of this great North American continent. A brief glance at passing events may not be inappropriate.

A year ago, on the threshold of 1914, the outlook was exceedingly encouraging and bright; this too in spite of the knowledge that our natural opponents had shown decided inclination to make inroads on our field of endeavor and decrease its size by obliterating as much of it as legal machinery and the gullability of the citizen voter could be induced to acquiesce in; that there were many such, needs little emphasis at our hands; the net results obtained by our opponents can not be calculated, for in analyzing and summarizing such matters it is necessary to have positive knowledge upon which to base one's findings; that the total industrial and monetary loss will run into many millions must be conceded.

What of the future and what must we attempt to accomplish in order to save to us and the catering industry some measure of stability?

Our International Union was formed for a definite purpose, that purpose is set forth in the platform and preamble and in substance seeks to secure the attention and co-operation of every man and woman engaged in preparing and serving food and drink, to the end of bettering their conditions morally, socially and financially.

As an instrument to procure advancement our International Union has from time to time made such changes in its methods and laws as the major portion of its local membership thought would bring the greatest measure of returns. Laws and regulations originated for specific purposes, were part of the general plan of action which when working as a whole were expected to prevent friction and make forward advancement easier. It was early discovered that many of the laws were cumbersome and unsatisfactory, and while that knowledge was quickly made apparent, the membership invariably insisted on a thorough trial before agreeing to amend or eliminate.

While this seeming desire to test out fully before changing or discarding has in the main proven fairly advantageous, it must be conceded that if we continue to give space to laws in our book of laws, we should insist upon their enforcement. And that thought brings us to what is generally agreed to be our very greatest obstacle—deliberate violation of the rules and regulations which we have adopted to guide us in our affairs.

One of the provisions of our book of laws reads in substance that "Every member, not a citizen by birth or naturalization SHALL be held to make his declaration to become a citizen." Hundreds upon hundreds of members in our International Union, in the United States and Canada, who make no pretensions whatsoever to assist the voters of the country in which they are employed, to protect the catering industry from fanatical legislation, is one of the greatest if not the very greatest obstacles which our International Union has to figure with. In all of the recent contests the fact was made evident that notwithstanding the provision relative to citizenship, the percentage of our members who were not entitled to the privilege of aiding in protecting the catering industry, by reason of the fact that they were not voters, was simply astounding.

It is true that apparently there are certain parts of the catering industry which are unaffected directly by adverse legislation, yet the close students of the catering industry discovered many years ago that which directly affects one branch invariably brings hardships to the other and that, despite hastily formed conclusions to the contrary, an injury to the beverage trades is an injury to the culinary trades.

Our aim for this year and for every subsequent year which follows, should be to increase citizenship among our membership, to inculcate in all of them a true desire to assist by showing them the effects of indifference and the burden it is to an industry which must in the very nature of our governments and the privileges of the voters, be at the mercy of organized fanaticism with votes to despoil and confiscate.

We have given expression time and time again to the conviction that no man or woman should be permitted to engage at our allied crafts unless they are not only willing but anxious to co-operate with us by becoming attached to one of our local unions and actively participating in the work of building up and protecting ourselves from the selfishly inclined employer and the equally vicious opponent of progress—the associated and organized sumptuary legislationists. We go still further and assert that no man or woman residing in any political section of America has any legal or moral right to follow the business of a catering industry employer or employe if they are unwilling to procure for themselves, by proper and legal means, the privilege of casting their votes in opposition to inimical candidates or measures.

We are not unmindful of the fact that the laws of many municipalities permit the issuance of permits or licenses to engage in the catering industry to persons neither citizens or who have any intentions of becoming such and that numbers of others permit a species of monopoly which tends to create abuses which eventually bring disaster to the industry as a whole.

We should so direct our efforts as to make such practices impossible, to register strenuous objection to the continuation of individuals or combinations in the catering industry who have no other concern than to reap immediate financial benefits, and our objection can best be lodged with the powers that be when each member of our organization has the right to vote for officials who will heed and act as we suggest. We are confronted with a gradual but none the less insistent change in the catering industry, a change that deliberately lessens our chances as skilled workers by imposing on many the task of directing and teaching innumerable recruits while we are presumed to accomplish none but the skilled effort to satisfy those whom we serve. These helpers quickly develop into competitors and even though being unskilled, the fact that they are less likely to seek commensurate compensation makes them welcome additions to the grasping employers. Trade unionism as understood in our ranks will materially aid us in securing better working conditions and compensation, but unless we pay more and more attention to the influx as indicated, as well as persist in carrying our laws into actual effect as regards citizenship, we are going to reap results of a negative value.

While there may be other quite as important matters for special consideration by our membership for the year 1915, in the judgment of the writer none can be found which should enlist your attention quicker, and whatever steps can be taken to overcome them should follow.

A general scrutiny of our position warrants taking prompt action to strengthen our forces and see to it that they are prepared to aid in the continuous battle which is being waged against us. We should regard those who decline to co-operate with us as enemies to our future welfare and we should not hesitate to exert effort to eliminate them from the industry by every legitimate means at our command; they should be made to fish or cut bait. That is our editorial salutation for 1915.

What a pity that the spirit of Yuletide which prompts the avaricious to temporarily refrain from seeking to garner, which softens the hearts of the wickedly inclined, which transforms the irritable into patient, lovable and companionable souls, which reveals the contentious as divested of their cantankerousness and possessed of a pacific inclination, which takes the prejudiced scales from the eyes and endows instead clearness and impartiality. That spirit, in fact, which makes the whole world feel like taking you by the hand and saying "hello" with sincerity and fraternalism which inquires after your well-being and shows a willingness to help you over the bumps if there are any in sight, can not be made to spread itself out over the whole of the year before us and the years which follow. This, indeed, would be a fine old world to live in if that spirit prevailed all of the time; there would be no war extras, no strike specials, no poverty and suffering, the hoarders of wealth would cease the efforts which inflate the prices of commodities and make the present day existence one of perpetual struggle. Real simon pure Christianity would be the rule and not the exception as unfortunately is the case right now; the caricatures who pretend to expound the doctrine of the Nazarene would disappear and Love would be the guiding and governing thought of mankind.

When we absorb the true meaning of that Biblical passage which reads: "Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard," we shall have taken unto ourselves and put in practice 365 days of yuletide spirit and will follow it with other and still other years of sincere brotherhood.

While waiting and praying as well as hoping for the dawn of a better day, there is work at our hands—work which if done with faith and confidence will bring closer and closer the time when all shall know each other and understand that we are "our brother's keeper" and as such shall aid him in carrying his burden until such time as we may be called to that greater circle to receive the reward fairly won. Friendship, Truth and Love are not unattainable, for is it not said, "He that walketh uprightly walketh surely; but he that perverteth his ways shall be known."

Let each of us in his own humble way practice the yuletide spirit for the remainder of the year to the end of bringing to our less favored brothers a little sunshine and to ourselves the splendid feeling of actions productive of pleasure and helpfulness.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Have you ever attended a Grump Soiree? If not, then you have an experience coming to you, that may enlighten you on the whys and wherefores of a number of interesting episodes that occur during the life of a local union. A real-yard-wide-rag-chewing-match-in-the-open, is an innocent little thing in comparison to a Grump Soiree.

You don't know what a Grump Soiree is, and you desire further particulars—all right, I'm willing and will wade in and try and recite how they are formed, and for what purpose they are held.

One of these evenings when you have attended a near meeting of your union, and you have left the hall, reached the sidewalk, you looked around and you find several of your fellow members sort of waiting around; by and by, you will observe from four to seven of your fellow union members making a quiet sneak; they probably don't want you to know where they are going, in fact they are rather secretive to all those whose hammers they do not know the weight of—that is, assuming of course, that you have a nice little tack persuader concealed about your wearing apparel; they, the Grumps, don't know it, and of course they are fighting shy of unknowns; they can't use 'em until they have made a reputation as a hammer wielder, then and only then are they admitted into the more or less charmed circle.

The initial chorus after the Grumpites meet in the back-room of a nearby saloon, generally starts off with: "Ain't the meetings getting to be rotten?"

The chorus while not as vigorous as some that you have heard at the show shops, is none the less harmonious so far as topic is concerned; for it seldom happens, that the Soiree can be opened without mentioning the most popular "psalm" in their repertoire, and they not only mention it, but hamstring it and do other ungracious things to it, much more than space will permit of cataloguing here. Well, they're off; the chief Grump slides over to one side of his chair (did you ever see a sneaking knocker that could sit on a chair the same as good white folks? hardly) and he begins:

"Fellows, I'll tell you what's the matter with our union, we've got the prize pin-head as President; didn't you see him how he tried to put blame on the chairman of the investigation committee for failing to bring in a report on that new guy's application that's working over in Silent Jim's dump. Who appointed the committee? Wasn't it the President, and if he is the one that appoints a committee, then he is the one to hold responsible for the bum work of that committee. What's that, you say he is a stranger to most of the members and probably don't know the men whom he appoints? Yes, he is a stranger, we admit that, but none the less any man with a bean big enough to fill a 6 and $\frac{7}{8}$ bonnet ought to be able to see that Red Nolan and Tommy Paszkert are first-class dubs, and them two were members of that committee."

Another voice emerged from a froth-covered mouth, it said: "I'm with you on that decision, Boe, that president is sure enough 'squirrel food,' why only a few meetings ago didn't I ask him the meaning of Section 9 of our union by-laws, and didn't he say, 'Brother, I have not perused your local union constitution very carefully, but if you will give me a chance I will read Section 9 and advise you what I think it means.' Why I just give him the merry ha, ha, that's what I did; the idea of electing such guys to office; what right has any duck to stand for an office if he don't know what the laws are."

An interruption occurs, another muffled voice says: "Just a moment, pals, listen to me, I've been a member of several unions, and every one of them had this punk local in this burg beat a thousand ways from the Jack. What have you fellows got here, eh? What have you got? Nothing, and you never will have with such officers. In the last local that I came from we had a nice headquarters; they had a wise hustling business agent who got out and grabbed all the work in the town; they had a dandy meeting hall, and I never did attend a meeting where there were less than seventy-five members in the hall, and you can bet all of your small change there was business done from the sound of the gavel until the closing. Of course they were organized long before you fellows made application for a charter, but at that, it don't give them no license to a greater union than this one ought to be; in that union they had some of the hottest elections I've ever saw and you could bet your bottom case note that the members who won out had to be able to fill the office, if they couldn't show that they were there with the goods, zim went the chopper and off went their beans and another member took up the running. You don't see any of the members of this union pining for office or going out of their way to secure votes for any office. Nary a one and what's more it don't look as though you ever will; why the pin-head who is president now is on the job because he came to town new and was not wise to the fact that no one wanted the position; he is holding the job, why? because no one else wants it or will take it." The little short fellow at the seat closest to the door looked about him in a furtive fashion, gulped another mouthful of the amber fluid and got into the race with the following: "That president of ours may be the prize mutt of the union, but if he has anything on the piece of cheese that keeps the minutes of the union some one will have to give him the needle and a card of seconds. He writes about the fiercest fist of any geek in these here diggin's; a couple of months ago he sent me a postal card about attending a meeting, when the amendments to the International constitution were to be voted on. I tried to read his writing, in fact turned it over to my sister who is learning to play the piano and she fell for it; thought it was a new piece of music. Next day doggoned if I didn't have to call him up on the phone and ask him what it was all about."

"Well, I guess that ain't on the level," butted in a voice which up to now had not had a chance to save anything of the wreck, or wreck anything. "A few weeks ago I went to his desk in the hall to pay my dues and rubbered at his day book, and I'll be swamped if every name on the page didn't look alike, fact, from a side view it looked as though Billy Keen, the grainer, had loaned the secretary his steel comb and he had used it to spread ink on the page. Is it any wonder we never get any answers to our letters to other local unions." One after the other the remainder of the aggregation shot holes through the records and reputations of the members who have been unfortunate enough to accept office in the union. If there is anything which has not been "belched up" during such a session it surely must be of very minor importance; in fact what has been left unsaid wouldn't make a shadow under a high power arc lamp.

That briefly is an outline of what the writer calls a Grump Soiree, it would be possible to fill pages of the MIXER AND SERVER further describing these after meeting rousting socials, where a very poor devil who has been elected to local union office is roughly handled, at least to the extent of harsh criticism. Such sessions are mainly responsible for the spread of discontent and for the propagation of disloyalty to the cause of unionism.

A union unfortunate enough to have such aftermaths is handicapped by the most obstinate of obstructions and in spite of efforts made to overcome the impediment to progress, it frequently happens that such a union must cease to exist and be re-organized under a new number before that town is represented by a live organization.

Where the Grumps get a foothold, unjust criticism prevails as a rule and few men with ordinary intelligence care to accept any position in the gift of the local; for few men indeed are so constituted as to possess grit, patience and kindness to work for those who not only decline to aid an officer, but who persistently tear down what officers build up.

Men there are who are natural born Grumps, nothing pleases them, no act no matter what its significance can possibly satisfy them; they are the bad apples in the barrel and unless discovered and thrown into the garbage pile will succeed in destroying the whole works.

* If you are afflicted with fault finding, if you can't possibly see good in the work of others, in the name of all that is good, hike to the timbers, remain there until your liver is in better working order, don't inflict on your fellow workers, don't infect good fellows with your miserable disease.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

TEMPERANCE AND PROHIBITION.

Under the above caption the Times of Chattanooga, Tenn., offered its readers an editorial which we thought was exceedingly good; so good in fact that we saw fit to print one of the paragraphs in a recent number of the MIXER AND SERVER. One of our fellow members asks us to print the editorial entire and we thus comply. It reads as follows:

It is a melancholy arraignment of conditions in Tennessee that one may find in almost every issue of the country press of the State an account of some sort of criminal outbreak—a shooting, a social scandal, theft, burglary, bootlegging or other flagitious violations of the liquor law. The fact connotes a deplorable state of mind, and is a melancholy refutation of the claim that political machinery, built up and organized for personal and partisan promotion, even though operating in the stolen and brazenly flaunted livery of righteousness, can accomplish moral and social reforms:

Col. J. C. Hemphill, the brilliant Southern journalist, for many years editor of the Charleston News and Courier, later a special writer on the New York Times, and now with the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has recently been investigating conditions in Maine, in which State politicians have been trying to legislate the human out of men's natures for some fifty or sixty years. Summing up an impartial story of the good as well as the bad of that State's prohibition system, Colonel Hemphill says:

"It is argued by the proponents of the system that prohibition has greatly improved the moral status of the State and contributed immensely to the domestic happiness of its people; but, in the opinion of a close student of sociological problems, this claim is met by the somewhat staggering statement that there are more divorces in the State of Maine in proportion to marriages than in any other State in the Union. How many less divorces there would be if the men and women drank whisky instead of water there is no means of knowing, except by comparing the divorce record of Maine with the divorce record of drinking States of like population and advantages."

The same condition, possibly worse, developing in Massachusetts, Vermont and other New England States years ago, occasioned their return to local option. A pathological weakness for drink appears to develop other immoral abnormalities when too violently restrained. A knowledge of this fact and the corollary imperfections of the system which create more or less of a contempt for all law, has so impressed itself upon the people of Maine that whereas the prohibition law was adopted by 40,000 majority many years ago, that majority has been dwindling so rapidly that in the last election when the issue was up it carried by a beggarly 758! In other words, Maine is finding that there are more demoralizing evils to be combated than depriving its bibulously inclined citizens, a small percentage of every community, of their favorite beverages.

The question of temperance is therefore one that must still challenge the intelligent thought of the country as against prohibition, which in its final analysis means the shunting of one violent pathological distemper into another with possibly more demoralizing and hurtful results.—Chattanooga Times, Sept. 6, 1914.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

The amount of correspondence coming to the general headquarters has been augmented considerably by officers and members who evidently have the impression that the General Executive Board is constantly in session and that requests submitted by local unions will be acted on immediately.

We have repeatedly advised our members that the General Executive Board transacts pretty much all of its business by correspondence; the only time that immediate attention is possible is when the General Executive Board happens to be in session at the general headquarters or at the general conventions. After the Denver convention in June, 1913, the General Executive Board held a session; it held another at headquarters in Cincinnati during the week of June 15, 1914, and will probably convene again June 11 or 12, 1915, at San Francisco, Cal.

Practically the same procedure has become a custom between conventions, consequently when local unions present for consideration wage schedules, applications for financial assistance or permission to strike, and such requests are received when the General Executive Board members are at their respective homes, it becomes necessary to reproduce the subject matter, mail it to the board members and await their action. It frequently happens that by this method, which is compulsory, proposals require considerable time before it is possible to dispose of them; many such calling for correspondence between the members of the board and headquarters and between headquarters and locals involved before final action is taken. Under these circumstances local unions are simply wasting time and energy by telegraphing headquarters for permission to do things which necessitates action by the General Executive Board. The General Secretary-Treasurer is the only General Executive Board member stationed at the general office; he has neither the power or right to dispose of matters which relate to approving strikes or financing such strikes, yet it appears that our officers and members persist in asking him to "answer by tomorrow," or "at once," as to whether they will secure funds or be supported if they call a strike. A perusal of our book of laws will show that NO officer has any right granted him by law to approve by himself and without sanction of his colleagues on the General Executive Board, any strike, wage schedule, or other proposal entailing outlay of funds. The very fact that any person may send a telegram to our headquarters and make whatever statement or demand they may desire, and subscribe whatever name they chose to such telegrams, makes it imperative on the part of the officer at headquarters to decline to accept telegrams as official business. We insist on having such telegrams verified and under the seal of local unions before we attempt giving them consideration. This fact has been emphasized time and again in these pages, but notwithstanding repeated notices we find innumerable officers of our locals wasting the money of their organizations by the payment of telegraph tolls. Our membership should get this bit of knowledge down right so as to prevent disappointment or chagrin. The General Secretary-Treasurer is the only Executive Board member at the general office, and our laws setting forth his duties and powers as an executive do not contemplate assuming tasks such as many members try to impose.

Matters requiring executive action by the General Executive Board take seldom less than two weeks' time to dispose of, hence asking for "immediate action" in the sense usually used, is filing a request which is impossible under our laws to comply with.

Again cautioning our members to refrain from trying to transact official business by night lettergram, day letter or telegrams, and save the money of your union; write an official communication, properly signed and sealed, and it will be cared for as quickly as conditions permit.

INTERNATIONAL AUDITORS.

In accordance with the provisions of Section 119 of the International Constitution and laws, local unions are hereby requested to present the name of one member for a position as International Auditor. Nominations which may have been offered previous to this notification may be offered again. In fact, no nomination which does not come in response to this notice will be presented to the General Executive Board for consideration. This rule is imperative, for it would be quite possible for a previous nominee to either become suspended or withdrawn from the local union which offered the nomination. Nominations must be in the general office by February 15, 1915. All nominations MUST be attested by the President and Secretary of the local union and the seal of said local attached in order to be entitled to official recognition.

The general office has submitted to all affiliated local unions a set of report forms; the purpose of same is fully set forth on the forms. These reports are of great value to the International Union as well as to the general organized labor movement, hence there are good reasons to solicit the genuine co-operation of the proper officers to the end of securing data of unquestioned importance. Take reasonable time in preparation, for accuracy of statement is essential. Special attention is urged in making replies to those questions which deal with the number of non-members working at the trade, amounts expended from local union benefit funds, number of strikes and cost of same and average rate of wages and hours of labor. Officers are cautioned to refrain from "guessing" where actual facts and figures can be obtained.

The reports solicit information for a period of one year—January 1, 1914, to January 1, 1915.

EIGHTEENTH GENERAL CONVENTION LEGISLATION.

The attention of our local union officials and members is directed to the provisions of our International constitution and laws relative to proposed new or amended legislation—that is to say, propositions which are intended to amend present laws, add new sections or eliminate old sections of our laws.

The forms of the Mixer and Server close on the 25th of the month preceding date of publication, hence in order to fully comply with the provisions of our laws and offer such amendments, new laws or proposals to eliminate old laws, proposals must reconcile with the requirements as set forth in Section 120, paragraph A.

The coming convention meets in the city of San Francisco, Cal., Monday morning, June 14, 1915; as the date of the June number, like all of its predecessors will be the 15th, it therefore follows that proposals should be in the general office on or before the closing date of the forms for the March, 1915, number of the Mixer and Server; the date for closing forms for that number will be FEBRUARY 25, 1915.

All proposals should state specifically the number of section or sections which it is proposed to amend. If proposals are intended to eliminate any present section of our laws, that fact should be stated. If the proposal is new legislation, a brief outline of the purpose of such proposal should preface the proposal.

Copy for publication MUST be at the general office not later than FEBRUARY 25, 1915.

CONVENTION CITY NOMINATIONS.

Cities which have in mind acting as host to the nineteenth general convention of our International Union should bear in mind that they must place their city in nomination TWO MONTHS before the convention at San Francisco convenes. Careful perusal of Section 135 is suggested to all unions which desire their city to be considered by the coming convention as the possible seat for the succeeding convention.

Convention city nominations or announcements MUST be at the general office by March 25, 1915, in order that they may be printed in the April and May issues of the Mixer and Server.

AN URGENT APPEAL FOR FINANCIAL AID.

WAS INGTON, D. C., December 3, 1914.
To the Officers and Members of Affiliated Unions:

DEAR SIRS AND BROTHERS—The Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Philadelphia, Pa., November 9-21, 1914, considered appeals for financial assistance from three international unions:

The appeal of the International Glove Workers' Union of America for financial assistance for 1,500 glove cutters in Gloversville and Johnstown, New York, who have been on strike since August 2, 1914;

The appeal of the United Textile Workers of America for assistance for the employes of the Fulton Bag and Cotton Co., of Atlanta, Ga., who have been on strike since May 13, 1914;

The appeal of the Western Federation of Miners for financial assistance to defend 39 members of their organization, now under indictment in Calumet, Michigan, which includes all of its officers and executive board members.

For full and detail information relative to these three appeals for financial assistance read resolutions and actions of Philadelphia convention, quoted.

The Executive Council, at its first meeting after the adjournment of the Philadelphia convention, considered the three appeals for financial assistance which were referred to it by the convention; and in the light of the fact that a number of appeals have been issued during this year, decided that because of the great need of immediate financial assistance of these three organizations, that it would be best to issue one appeal and that one-third of all funds received should be transferred to each organization named above.

In issuing this appeal we are cognizant of the fact that organized labor has in the past contributed generously for the aid of members of affiliated organizations on strike and in distress, and our affiliated unions are to be commended for the prompt financial contributions which they have cheerfully given to the requests made by affiliated organizations for financial assistance. Notwithstanding that fact, you can readily realize that a considerable sum is, and will be, necessary to give to the Textile Workers on strike in Atlanta, Georgia, and the Glove Workers on strike in Gloversville, New York, the barest necessities of life, even in the line of food. We are, therefore, appealing to our affiliated organizations and members to render every financial aid possible to these men and women to help them stave off hunger so that they may maintain this unequal struggle to a victorious termination. This appeal for financial contributions is to organized labor generally—to central bodies and local unions as well as to individual members. Unions that may be in a position to make large contributions should make them, but it should be no barrier to any union making a small contribution, even if it be but a dollar. If unions have no funds or can not make appropriations from their funds for this appeal, they should appoint committees to secure individual contributions, and through their secretaries forward same to American Federation of Labor headquarters.

Send all contributions to Frank Morrison, Secretary American Federation of Labor, Ouray Building, Washington, D. C., who will receipt for same and promptly forward one-third to each of the three organizations.

Fraternally yours,

Attest:

SAM'L. GOMPERS, President,
FRANK MORRISON, Secretary,
JAMES DUNCAN, First Vice-President,
JAMES O'CONNELL, Second Vice-President,
D. A. HAYES, Third Vice-President,
Jos. F. VALENTINE, Fourth Vice-President,
JOHN R. ALPINE, Fifth Vice-President,
H. B. PERHAM, Sixth Vice-President,

JOHN B. LENNON, Treasurer,
Executive Council American Federation of Labor.

Appeal of International Glove Workers' Union of America.

Resolution No. 153, by Delegate Elizabeth Christman, of the International Glove Workers' Union of America:

WHEREAS, Fifteen hundred glove cutters have been on strike since August 21 in Gloversville and Johnstown, N. Y., the great fine glove center of this country, to secure an increase in wages, as no increase in wages has been received for the past seventeen years, and the New York State Mediation Board reported after their recent investigation into the causes of the strike that the average wage of the cutters for fifty-two weeks was $13.30; and

WHEREAS, The employers have rejected the recommendation of the above-named board for an increase of 15 cents per dozen, while the strikers voted to accept it. This refusal means a determination on the part of the employers to continue the fight, and our strikers are equally determined to hold out, as they must have an increase in wages to meet in some measure the increased cost of living of today; and

WHEREAS, The glove trade being the only industry in that locality, nearly all the workers are engaged in some branch of the trade, so that in all about 8,000 are involved in the strike, making the need for relief especially great; therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, vote to assist the glovemakers in this strike by directing the officers to issue an appeal to all affiliated organizations for funds, and that the delegates, upon their return home, urge upon their members the need of their generous assistance in this strike.

Your committee recommends concurrence in the resolution and that the appeal for assistance be sent forward through the proper channels at the earliest possible moment to the end that these unorganized workers, who are making a desperate struggle to better their conditions and are standing firmly against the rapacity and greed of unscrupulous and dictatorial employers, be given the material assistance they are so urgently in need of, together with the assurance that the moral support of the American Federation of Labor is always behind any body of workers, organized or unorganized, who are seeking to improve their conditions and better their surroundings in life.

The recommendation of the committee was adopted.

Appeal of the United Textile Workers of America.

The committee read the following portion of the proceedings of the eighth day when the appeal of the Western Federation of Miners, the glove workers and textile workers were discussed:

"Secretary Morrison spoke at some length of the assistance that had been given the textile workers, the glove workers and other organizations that have been on strike, and moved: 'That the appeal be referred to the Committee on Report of the Executive Council, to be considered with the appeal of the glove workers and the appeal of the Western Federation of Miners, to allow the committee to bring in a report of such character as would meet with the approval of the delegates, and in that way be able to give the assistance that is required to the Atlanta, Gloversville, and Calumet people who are in distress.' (Seconded.)"

Your committee recommends that the entire subject-matter contained in this motion be referred to the Executive Council with instructions that it take whatever action it may looking to the relief of the textile workers.

The recommendation of the committee was adopted.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

Appeal of the Western Federation of Miners.

Resolution No. 140, by Delegates J. C. Williams, Jos. D. Cannon, and Jas. Shea, of the Western Federation of Miners:

WHEREAS, All the workers are familiar with the long-drawn-out struggle which was waged by the copper miners of the State of Michigan and the fact that the fight was declared at an end by them because of the inability of the international organization to further provide the necessities of life for its striking members and those dependent upon them. In addition to the many hardships imposed upon the striking miners, 631 arrests were made, the offenses ranging from making a noise in the streets to the crime of murder. Many of these cases found their way into the court, but out of the entire number only two convictions were recorded on minor offenses; but there are yet three men confined in the jail of Houghton, Mich., charged with a crime which we are convinced we will be able to prove to a fair and impartial jury was committed by gunmen in the employ of the Waddell-Mahon and Ascher strike-breaking agencies. These men have been incarcerated since the early part of March, and are now being transferred to Marquette County, Mich., to be tried on a charge of murder. In addition to the direct charge of murder against these three men, thirty-six members of the miners' organization, including all of its officers and executive board members, have been indicted by a grand jury as accessories, and, in fact, are facing trial for the same offense should convictions be obtained in the cases of the three men now on trial.

WHEREAS, The Western American Federation of Miners, because of the long and expensive conflict in Michigan, which caused that federation to incur considerable indebtedness for commissary supplies to the families of the strikers, followed by a suspension of operations in the metal mines throughout its jurisdiction, owing to the depression brought about in the metal market through the European war; and

WHEREAS, The aforesaid conditions, coupled with the efforts now being made by many of the larger employers to disrupt the miners' movement, leaves us in a position which renders it impossible for us to finance the defense of the men now on trial; therefore be it

Resolved, By the Thirty-fourth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, that all affiliated bodies be called upon to render all possible financial assistance, by making such appropriations from their treasuries and otherwise as all may be able to give.

Your committee concurs in the foregoing and recommends that it be referred to the Executive Council with instructions to take whatever action it may under the law to secure the immediate assistance for the Western Federation of Miners.

The report of the committee was adopted.

C. W. McCURDY,

IT ISN'T YOUR TOWN—IT'S YOU.

If you want to live in the kind of a town
Like the kind of a town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new.
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town.
It isn't the town—it's you.

Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When every one works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.
And if while you make your personal stake
Your neighbors can make one, too,
Your town will be what you want to see,
It isn't the town—it's you.

COURAGEOUS CONTENDERS.

The above cut, taken from a group photo of our girls, members of Local 484, Chicago, Ill., is the first picture we have been able to secure of a part of the Courageous Contenders for a decent wage and honorable working conditions. Hundreds of our girls have volunteered their services to do picket duty and aid their union in its humane effort. The picture represents but a small part of the number who faced the music and stood their ground battling against odds such as no union in Chicago or elsewhere has ever been called on to meet. These girls have been on duty day and night since May, 1914, and are just as determined as when the contest began. The catering employers of Chicago have expended thousands of dollars to whip our girls into submission, they have urged, begged and tried to bribe, but the "nothing doing but trade union wages and conditions" sign still hangs in the same old spot and our girls are still out and putting up a splendid battle.

Chicago, or for that matter, no other city on earth, has been able to show a similar case where girls withstood the combined influence of big money and the ceaseless opposition, brutally effective, of the police force. Picket duty continuously for almost a year and still ready and willing to respond to the call, proves that our girls are unbeatable and the quicker the employers save the money they are now paying for flimsy injunctions and make up their minds to add it to their pay roll expenditures, the fewer of them will be closed out by the sheriff. All honor to these girls for their fine example of loyalty and aggressiveness—they have shown a spirit which speaks well for their organization.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December:

"A word to the wise is sufficient," is a saying as old as the hills, and yet I doubt very much whether those who are devoting their energies towards segregating our International Union, will profit by the lesson taught us in the recent November elections, where we lost the states of Washington, Oregon, Colorado and Arizona, the recent loss of Virginia and West Virginia, and the prospects of other states being legislated dry, as well as the result of the vote in Washington, D. C., on Wednesday, December 23rd, 1914, when the House of Representatives of the United States Congress, after a ten-hour debate on the Hobson resolution, which had for its purpose amending the constitution of the United States to prohibit the manufacture and sale of beers, wines or liquors in these United States or any of its territories, gave the said resolution a majority of eight votes; however, as a resolution having for its purpose the submission of an amendment to the constitution to the several states requires a two-third vote, the Hobson resolution failed in its passage. In the minds of some, that may be construed as a splendid victory for our cause, yet to those who read between the lines and look beneath the surface, it spells "Danger ahead," and surely and truly there is serious danger ahead; and our own membership and those who are earning their livelihood at the catering industry, must realize the danger ahead sign and unite themselves into one International Union, an International Union covering all branches of the catering industry, as each branch is interlinked with the other in such a way, that to segregate them under separate branches under different leadership, with no head to cement their bond of brotherhood, would place them in the same position as a large army on the field of battle, with several army corps and no commanding general to guide their various manoeuvres, each working out his own destiny in its own humble way, to unity of action, result: disaster and defeat.

To segregate our International Union and divide the workers engaged in the catering industry into separate International Unions covering its various branches will prevent unity of action, a division of responsibility, and a continuous turmoil; result: disaster to the organized workers of our crafts, a loss of many advantages gained by our membership through their affiliation with each other and a possible return to the old conditions that prevailed not many years ago, when the men and women engaged in the catering industry were considered as little better than slaves and were compelled to suffer innumerable hardships and insults if they desired to maintain their positions. Do you desire those conditions to return? If so, then I say favor segregation, but if you desire to see the conditions of the workers improved, to see them join with their fellow worker in bettering their conditions of employment, then it is your duty to aid in bringing that about by a closer affiliation of the various crafts, to discourage any thought of segregating the present International Union, to cause a closer union of thought and action and to bind our brotherhood together, so that it matters not whether it is the forces of our employer or that of the anti-saloon or prohibition type who desire to match their forces against ours, that we will be in a position to meet them and to repeat the words of that celebrated admiral of one hundred years ago who, after a naval battle, sent the following message to his superior, "We have met the enemy, and they are ours."

During the month I visited the cities of Worcester, Lawrence, Gardner and Boston and adjusted matters in the interests of our crafts.

While in the city of Boston, I witnessed the annual election of Local 77 and I was amazed at the interest that was being displayed. Thirteen hundred and nine votes were cast and everything run just as smoothly as a city election. Twelve booths were erected for the members to mark their ballots in and a city election ballot box to record them when voted.

With the advent of this report we usher in a new year, may its shadows bring forth glad tidings of prosperity, a revival of business, which will mean more work for the toiler and better opportunities for him to improve his conditions of employment. May the year 1915 bring an abundance of good luck, health and happiness to each and all of you and your loved ones, is the wish of the undersigned.

Decision No. 543.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 26, 1914.

MR. CHARLES A. SIMPSON, Secretary Local 659,
Dallas, Texas:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 5th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Can a manager of a restaurant who is a member of this local have the privilege granted him by this local to work seven days a week? We have some members who are managers, they do not take or serve orders; they have the hiring and discharging of the employees and do the buying."

Decision No. 497 says in part as follows: "That a manager is amenable to the same laws as an active member and therefore is not permitted to work seven days where a six-day law is in effect." The application of that decision is in cases where a manager performs some of the active duties coming under the jurisdiction of one or more of our allied crafts; but in a case where the said manager neither prepares, takes or serves orders of food or drink, I am of the opinion that the local union could consistently exempt him from complying with the provisions of the six-day week law of the said local union. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 544.

November 30, 1914.

MR. E. G. REYNOLDS, Secretary Local 507, 2117
Pensacola Ave., Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 26th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following questions:

"Our by-laws places a fine of $5 on a member for failing to act when appointed pallbearer. A member appointed failed to appear at the house at the proper time, they waited for him for fifteen minutes and then had to call on a stranger, however, when we were coming out of the church this member was standing outside. At the next regular meeting a fine of $5 was placed against the said member for not being on time. The member protests against the payment of the said fine, on the grounds that no charges were filed against him in writing and he did not receive a trial in accordance with section 169. Is it necessary in a case of this kind, that section 169 be applied?"

The fact that a penalty for violation of the law is set by the by-laws of the local union, does not signify that a member is not entitled to his right of trial, granted him under section 169 of the International constitution; there may be some elements brought forth in a trial to show that the member was not at fault and he cannot be denied his right to prove said facts in accordance with our law. Therefore my decision is, that the member is entitled to a trial as provided for in section 169 of the International constitution.

"We have several members who buy out the bar privileges at dances and are compelled to take out a government license in order to receive a permit or special license. Does this mean that section 80 would apply to the said members?"

The fact that these members do not become bona-fide proprietors, notwithstanding the fact that their name may appear on a government license, they do not come under the provisions of section 80 of the International constitution. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 545.

November 30, 1914.

MR. W. W. HINTON, Secretary Local 300, 70
Lambard st., Toronto, Ont.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 26th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"In many lunch rooms we find that there are sometimes two and three partners who do the work of waiters and cooks, sometimes there are more partners than employees. Can we take them into the union as passive or active members and allow them to wear the monthly working button?"

You cannot elect proprietors to either passive or active membership; I do not consider a man who loans or advances another man money or other valuables to establish a restaurant business, even though the said party may be given a part ownership in the said house, pending a settlement of the said loan, as a bona-fide proprietor; hence such a man, if qualified, would be eligible as an active member, but in a case where they are bona-fide proprietors, they would be eligible to neither passive or active membership. Where men assume charge of a lunch counter or restaurant and assume no financial risk, other than for their stock and labor employed, the actual ownership resting with the owner of the hotel or cafe, which is very often the case in Canada, the said men could not be termed as bona-fide proprietors, hence would be eligible to active membership. Where an actual bona-fide ownership exists, you should not recognize more than two working proprietors and then only when they employ one or more members of your local union.

"Should we be allowed to take dues from them?"

Not unless they are active or passive members.

"Should they be allowed to attend meetings, or to know what transpires in them?"

If they are active members they should be allowed to participate in the meetings and to enjoy all the benefits of active membership; if they are passive members, the local union has the right to refuse to permit them to participate in the meetings of the local union.

"What constitutes a partner? If a cook or waiter loans a proprietor money, does that make him a proprietor?"

The first question is answered in the forepart of this letter; to the second question, No. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 546.

MR. W. M. SPEARS, Secretary Local 17, 230½
South Spring St., Los Angeles, Cal.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 17th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

THE MIXER AND SERVER

"In our new by-laws recently approved by you, there was a clause which reads as follows: No officer having served two consecutive terms in one office shall be eligible for the same office until at least one full term has intervened. It is contended by some of the members, that any of the present officers who have served two terms, are not eligible to run for the same office at this coming election and we would like your decision as to whether this section in our by-laws applies to the present officers, or to the officers that assume office after the approval of the said law?"

The adoption and approval of this law did not make it retroactive, hence it does not apply to present officers, but the incoming officers who are to be elected under its provisions; and it does not prohibit present officers who have served two or more terms in office, from continuing in office if elected, for two full terms under the present law. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 547.

November 30, 1914.

MR. EDWARD EARLEY, Secretary Local 118, No. 1
Catherine Slip, New York:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 16th, wherein you ask for a decision on the death claim of the late Brother Thomas F. Breen.

In going over the records of his account on the ledger page, as well as the stamps in his due book, I find that on May 25th, 1914, he paid his dues for the months of January, February, March, April and May, at which time he was two months and twenty-five days in arrears, or in accordance with our International law, he was a suspended member, having become so automatically when he became sixty days in arrears, or on the 1st day of March, 1914. I find further, that at the time of his death, he was not in possession of a current month stamp, he having died on the 10th day of July and his dues for the months of June and July were not paid until after his death, or July 13th, 1914.

Sections 159 and 163 covering the payment of death benefits by the International Union, says in substance as follows: that a member must be in continuous good standing for a period of six months preceding his death and in possession of a current month stamp, and as the said late brother, Thomas F. Breen, was not in continuous good standing for the period of six months prior to his death, nor in possession of a current month stamp, he therefore was not entitled to the death benefit. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 548.

December 1, 1914.

MR. A. B. DEVERELL, Secretary Local 310, Box 312, International Falls, Minn.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 16th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"We have several members who work in surrounding towns where they keep open on Sundays and the question came up whether we had the jurisdiction to stop them from working on Sunday, or whether the by-laws which reads: 'Bartenders working in the city of International Falls' will hold good to men working only in the city of International Falls?"

A local union has a right to regulate the conditions under which their members should work, and while the by-laws of a local union are adopted to govern all the members of a local union, yet where it specially states that no members working within the city of International Falls shall work on Sunday, that would only apply to the city of International Falls and could not be interpreted as governing the surrounding towns, unless it was made general in its character. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 549.

December 1, 1914.

MR. JAMES REDENBAUGH, Secretary Local 572, 1119 E. Main St., Stockton, Cal.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed by Local 572 against Brother George Anderson of Local 62. The charges, briefly stated, are that the said George Anderson, a former member of Local 572, took a traveling card and deposited it with Local 62 and on the same day returned to the jurisdiction of Local 572 and went to work in an unfair house.

On September 2nd, 1914, I forwarded a copy of the said charges to the secretary of Local 62, with the directions that he forward the same to Brother George Anderson and that the said brother should be advised that he would be given thirty days in which to file his statement with this office. Up to this writing he has failed to file any statement and his failure to do so, is accepted by this office as an admission of his guilt and with that conclusion in mind, the said Brother George Anderson is found guilty of the charge and expelled from membership in this International Union, and Local 62 is directed to so advise him and to record his name as an expelled member on their next monthly report to the International Union. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Note—The extreme penalty is being imposed in this case on account of the seriousness of the struggle now going on in the jurisdiction of Local 572.

Decision No. 550.

December 1, 1914.

MR. FRED BLATTNER, President Local 342, 95 Park Row, New York:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed by Local 342 against Brothers Peter Reid and Percy Smith of Local 2; after having carefully looked over all the briefs and affidavits submitted, I fail to find any grounds whereby these brothers can be found guilty of entering the headquarters of Local 342 with malice aforethought; it is admitted by both the defendants that they visited the headquarters of Local 342 and possibly did imbibe too freely, but that there was no intention on their part to injure, either by word of mouth or action any of the members or property of Local 342. I therefore find the said Peter Reid and Percy Smith not guilty of committing any offense against the membership or property of Local 342 with any malice aforethought. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 551.

MR. FRED EBELING, Secretary Local 865, 167 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 13th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"If a candidate for membership pays his full initiation fee and is elected, but fails to appear for initiation on account of leaving the city, can we after the expiration of six months and while he is working in the jurisdiction of another local union, initiate him or request the local union under whose jurisdiction he is to do so, and could we issue him a traveling card immediately after the said initiation?"

Article I, section 4, of the by-laws of Local 865, reads as follows: "The initiation fee shall be determined by the local. Applicants failing to report for initiation, forfeit their fee within thirty days unless a reasonable excuse is offered."

In accordance with this provision of your by-laws, this applicant forfeited his fee thirty days from the date of his acceptance; the fact that he had left the city could not be construed as being a reasonable excuse.

A member may be issued a traveling card while holding probationary membership, but the card must be marked across its face, "Probationary member," and the said probationary member must pay the difference in the initiation fee between the local union that he secured his membership in and the local union that he deposited his traveling card with.

The party referred to above, will have to make a new application for membership and that with the local union under whose jurisdiction he is working. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 552.

December 3, 1914.

MR. JOHN BOOKJANS, Secretary Local 106, 1120 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed by Local 106 against Brother George Kraus who was reinstated to membership in Local 273, Springfield, Mass. It is charged that the said George Kraus, while working in the city of Cleveland, made application to Local 106 for membership and stated on his application that he never was a member of the International Union, hence he was accepted into membership; later on two assessments were levied against the members of Local 106 on account of a strike that was in progress and the said George Kraus failed to pay those assessments and allowed himself to become suspended. He then left the city and went to Springfield, Mass., and when he sought to renew his membership, it was discovered that he was a suspended member of Local 273, of Springfield, Mass., at the time of his becoming a member of Local 106; and after considerable correspondence had passed between the secretaries of Local 106 and Local 273, wherein both local unions claimed the right to his reinstatement fee and membership, with the result that Local 273 reinstated him against the protest of Local 106.

Brother George Kraus admits that he was a suspended member of Local 273 at the time he made application to Local 106 and that he stated on his application blank that he never was a member of the International Union before and offers as his excuse for the said action, that he was ignorant of the International constitution and its contents.

Upon investigation, I find that the statements made in reference to George Kraus being a suspended member of Local 273 at the time that he secured his membership in Local 106, to be correct, therefore his membership was not legal and is therefore cancelled; and in view of the fact that the said brother made false statement in gaining admission to Local 106, he forfeits all rights to any claim for the return of any fees that he may have paid therein, and I further find that as the law requires that a member—and it includes all members whether active or suspended—must deposit their traveling card with the local under whose jurisdiction they are working within three days after going to work, under a penalty of $5, and hence makes the said member subservient to the laws and regulations of the said local union under whose jurisdiction he is working and as Local 106 during the period that the said George Kraus was under their jurisdiction, levied an assessment against their members of $4 on account of a strike that was then in progress, I therefore find that the said George Kraus is legally indebted to the said Local 106 for the amount of the said fine and assessment, a total of $9, and he is hereby directed to remit to the secretary of Local 106 the said amount within fifteen days from date or stand suspended from membership in this International Union pending the payment of the same. Local 273 or its authorized representative, is hereby directed to see that the provisions of this decision are complied with. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 553.

December 5, 1914.

MR. JOHN BOOKJANS, Secretary Local 106, 1120 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed by Local 106 against Brother Gomford Antanosa, a member of Local 209. It is charged by Local 106, that the said Gomford Antanosa came to Cleveland with a number of waiters engaged by a strike-breaking agency in New York for a certain hotel in Cleveland while a strike was in progress. Repeated efforts were made to get him to come out in sympathy, without meeting with any success. After an agreement was signed with this hotel and he was compelled to go outside of the hotel for his lodging, he only remained a short while and then left the city.

Brother Gomford Antanosa admits that he was engaged in New York to go to work in a hotel in Cleveland where a strike was in progress and offers as an excuse, that he was indebted to another waiter who was engaged as captain and that he got him to go, and that the said captain took charge of his baggage and in order to get the same after he got to Cleveland, he had to go to work in the said hotel; he realizes now that he had done wrong and promises, if given an opportunity, he will never allow himself to be led into anything of that nature again.

The above is a brief outline of the case. The amount of correspondence in this office bearing on this case is so bulky that a complete review of the same would be impracticable.

After a careful review of all the evidence submitted, giving full thought to the possibility of the said Antanosa being in a position where he may have been sold into slavery—as the trend of his defense would lead to that conclusion—and with all that thought in mind, I cannot conceive how in this age of freedom, over a half century after slavery had been abolished in this country, that one of full age could maintain that he did a certain wrong because he owed a debt to another and that that other person held him and baggage in bond until the said debt was apparently paid.

This, in my judgment, is not a sufficient reason to warrant any man in selling his life's blood into slavery—that is the very thing that you are doing when you accept employment in an establishment where a strike is in progress and where your fellow man is striving to bring about a more humane condition of employment.

I therefore cannot conceive any logical reason why the said Gomford Antanosa should receive any different treatment than would be accorded any of the other strike-breakers in the establishment referred to in the above, or for that matter in any other establishment, and I don't believe that the best interest of the International Union can be conserved by retaining into membership the said Gomford Antanosa. I therefore do hereby cancel his membership in this International Union and Local 209 is hereby directed to remove his name from their roster of membership, and to so record it on their next monthly report to the International Union.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 554.

MR. ROY PONTIUS, care Standish Bar, Denver, Colorado:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your appeal from the decision of the L. J. E. B., said Board sustaining the action of Local 8 in penalizing you the sum of $10 for accepting extra employment while holding a steady position, said action being in violation of the by-laws of Local 8, and for working under the scale of wages at the said time.

In the brief filed by Local 8, it is stated that you pleaded guilty before two different trial committees on the charges of working; that at the club where you worked extra, there had been another member employed and that you informed the secretary of the local union, that the member of the club had asked you at least three days before this day that you worked extra, to work.

In your brief you state that you are a member of the club in question, was at the club rooms on this particular day and the manager being busy asked you to help him out, and for working or helping him out you received $2.50, which later on you contributed towards the Charity Fund of said club.

Decision 259 gives to a local union the right to regulate its extra work as best suits their local conditions, therefore there isn't any question as to the right of the local union to deny to members holding steady positions the right to accept extra work; however, it appears in this case, that the member in question who violated that law contends, that being a member of the club, he simply accepted the work in order to help out the manager, as there happened to be a number of extra people at the club that day and the bartenders were rushed. He does not deny accepting $2.50 for his services, which were below the scale of wages of the local union, but pleads that having given it over to charity, he should not be held guilty for the said violation. There is a true saying: "That charity covers a multitude of sins," but I cannot conceive how a member of one organization can plead as an excuse for violating its laws, that the money that he received from another organization for the said violation, was given to charity.

The membership of our International Union are amenable to our laws and those of our local unions that they are members of, and it matters not whether a violation of those laws is committed for a monetary consideration or for charity, it remains a violation just the same. I am, therefore, denying your appeal and sustaining the action of the L. J. E. B. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

MR. JOHN R. THOMAS, Secretary Local 741, Box 642, Pasco, Wash.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 30th ult, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

The State of Washington voted dry on November 3rd, 1914, the same to take effect January 1st, 1916. Can the local unions in the said State accept new members until the said law goes into effect, or are we in accordance with section 25, article "b," prohibited from accepting them from the date the law was passed?"

Section 25 (b). "A Bartenders' Union in a town or city cannot initiate candidates into their local after said town or city votes 'no license, etc.'"

In the case referred to above, it is my judgment that the section referred to, Section 25 (b), does not become operative until the law goes into effect, in other words, the State of Washington having voted dry on November 3rd, 1914, the same not going into operation until January 1st, 1916, our local unions in that state (bartenders) can elect and initiate into membership in their local unions, candidates desiring admission, up to and until the law, which voted the said state dry, goes into effect, or January 1st, 1916. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,

MR. CHRIST. DAVIS, 607 Webster Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 11th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"A member deposited his traveling card in Local 209, on the day of nomination of officers, although he had been working in the city a month before the said day, he was nominated for office on the same day that he deposited his traveling card and we would like to be advised if, in accordance with the International constitution, he is eligible to run for the said office? We have no local by-laws."

If you have no local by-laws, then all that is necessary in order that a member may seek office in your local union, is that he be a member in good standing of Local 209. With holiday greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 557.

MR. G. HARRY DUNDARDE, Secretary, Unionizing and Grievance Committee, C. L. U., 987
Washington St., Boston, Mass.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 1st before me, wherein you call my attention to the trouble existing between Local 6 and Local 80, over jurisdiction in the Revere House, Boston, Mass.

I have given this matter my personal attention, and I find that there is existing an agreement between Local 6 and Local 80, which agreement has been approved of by the General Executive Board of the International Union, whereby the said Revere House in the city of Boston, Mass., is assigned to the jurisdiction of Local 80 in its entirety, therefore Local 6 has no right to permit their members to accept employment in the said house, without depositing their traveling cards with Local 80 and Local 6 is directed to see that all members of their local union employed in the said Revere House immediately transfer their membership in Local 80.

Local 80 having full jurisdiction over the Revere House, Boston, Mass., so far as it applies to their craft, therefore any agreement with the management of the said house, so far as it applies to waiters, must be made with Local 80. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 558.

December 17, 1914.

MR. JERE L. SULLIVAN, Gen. Sec'y-Treas., Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 7th, where in you ask for a decision on the following:

The following is a brief synopsis of the correspondence exchanged between the general office and Local 273:

"November 12, 1914, Local 273 request privilege to strike four hotels in their jurisdiction.

"November 25, 1914. The general office request information as to whether this request has received the approval of the L. J. E. B.

"November 27, 1914. Local 273 advises general office that their request has not received the approval of the L. J. E. B.

"November 30, 1914. General office advises Local 273 that in accordance with the rules it will be necessary for them to submit their request to the L. J. E. B. and get their approval.

"December 1, 1914. Local 273 claims that their demands were endorsed by the L. J. E. B., April 12, and submitted to the G. E. B., and at the June meeting of the G. E. B. they were endorsed and funds set aside.

"December 7, 1914. The general office advised Local 273 partially as follows: 'I have your communication of December 5, 1914, responding to our communication of December 2, wherein you say, 'On April 12, the L. J. E. B. endorsed our demand for one day off in seven. It was referred to the General Board. At the June meeting of the Board, the G. E. B., it was endorsed and funds set aside.' Permit me to advise you that the foregoing quotation from your letter of December 5, 1914, is incorrect for the following reasons. It would seemingly indicate that the L. J. E. B. of Springfield, Mass., on April 12, 1914, endorsed this proposition, when as a matter of fact, the records submitted by Local 273 were received in this office in the month of March, 1913, and submitted to the G. E. B. on the 18th day of March, 1913. This matter refers to the wage scale of Local 273, which was submitted to the G. E. B., March 18, 1913. The Board did not endorse your wage scale at its meeting in June, 1914. The Board endorsed your wage scale in March, 1913, not in the year 1914, as the quoted paragraph from your communication would seem to indicate."

After carefully reviewing all the above correspondence and in view of the fact, that in the communication addressed to the general office by Local 273 under date of November 12, 1914, wherein they state as follows: "Per motion passed at our regular meeting held November 11, I am instructed to ask the G. E. B. permission to allow our members to strike for one day off in seven at the following hotels." This action in itself is an acknowledgement that it was not embodied in the request of Local 273 for the endorsement of their wage scale, which endorsement was given by the G. E. B. in March, 1913.

The established rule of the General Executive Board—and it dates back for a number of years—is that where there is more than one local union in any city, it is necessary when submitting a request for the approval of a wage scale, or a permission to strike is requested, that the same first receive the approval of the Local Joint Executive Board of the said city. The approval of a wage scale by the G. E. B. does not carry with it the right to strike or financial assistance, unless it is so specified in the request and endorsed with that understanding embodied therein.

When a local union receives the approval of the G. E. B. to strike, it is assumed by the G. E. B. that the said local union intends to put the same into operation—in the event that it is necessary—within a reasonable time, the said approval when given, is not with any intent of having it apply at some far distant date. It is my judgment, that a reasonable time as applied above, would be within ninety days from date of approval, should conditions warrant an extension of that time, a request made to the G. E. B. for said extension could be granted.

Therefore my decision is, that the approval of the wage scale of Local 273 by the G. E. B. in March, 1913, did not carry with it the right of Local 273 to strike in November, 1914, nineteen months after; nor did it apply to the present request of Local 273 for an endorsement of a strike for one day off in seven. Therefore in order that this matter can properly be brought to the attention of the G. E. B. for their approval, it will be necessary that it first receive the approval of the Local Joint Executive Board of Springfield, Mass. With holiday greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 559.

December 17, 1914.

MR. GEORGE ZIMMERMAN, Local 35, 450 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your appeal from the decision of the L. J. E. B., which Board sustained the action of Local 35 in penalizing you the sum of $10.00. In view of the fact that at a regular meeting of Local 35, held December 15, a motion was passed requesting the General President to remit the said fine on the grounds that the call for the special meeting did not specify the purpose for which the said special meeting was called. Therefore in view of this fact and in compliance with the request of Local 35, I do hereby reverse the action of the L. J. E. B. and sustain the appeal of Brother George Zimmerman and direct that the amount of his fine which was deposited with Local 35 under protest, be remitted to him. With holiday greetings.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 560.

MR. GEORGE WENZEL, Local 35, 167 N. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your appeal from the decision of the L. E. J. B., which Board sustained the action of Local 35 in penalizing you the sum of $10.00. In view of the fact that at a regular meeting of Local 35, held December 15, a motion was passed requesting the General President to remit the said fine on the grounds that the call for the special meeting did not specify the purpose for which the said special meeting was called. Therefore in view of this fact and in compliance with the request of Local 35, I do hereby reverse the action of the L. J.

E. B., and sustain the appeal of brother George Wenzel and direct that the amount of his fine which was deposited with Local 35 under protest, be remitted to him. With holiday greetings.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 561.

December 23, 1914.

MR. L. L. MONROE, Secretary, Local 20, Box 639, St. Louis, Mo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 21st, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"A brother member deposited his traveling card with Local 20, June 27, 1914, his dues were paid to Local 35 for the month of June; at our regular meeting, held December 9, 1914, the said brother was nominated for the office of Secretary-Business Agent, and the President of Local 20, ruled his nomination out of order, on the grounds that Article V, Section 5, of the local by-laws says that a member in order to be eligible for nomination, must be a good standing member for six consecutive months preceding the date of nomination.

"Article V, Section 5. A member in order to be entitled to hold an elective office or delegateship, must be a member of this local and have been such for the preceding six (6) consecutive months, in good standing prior to nomination.

"Was the ruling of the President legal?"

The section referred to above, is not in conflict with the International constitution, hence it is legal and can be enforced.

A local union has a right to exact from its membership a specific length of membership before they will be eligible to run for any elective office within the gift of the said local union, and if that clause is in their by-laws, no member can be considered legally entitled to run for any elective office within the gift of the said local union, until he has been a member the specific length of time specified in the said by-laws.

Therefore my decision is, that the section referred to above is not in conflict with the International constitution and that a local union has a right to exact a specific length of membership from a member, before the said member is eligible to run for an elective office within the gift of the said local union, (provided that the length of membership exacted is reasonable) and as the brother's membership, referred to above, with Local 20, began on the date that he deposited his traveling card with Local 20, he would not be eligible for nomination to any elective office within the gift of Local 20, until six months from that date. With holiday greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

WHAT OHIO DOES NOT EXPECT.

In September, 1912, Ohio voted on a woman suffrage amendment to her State constitution. The amendment lost by about eighty thousand votes.

In November, 1914, another woman's suffrage amendment was submitted to the voters of Ohio. This amendment was rejected by a majority of more than one hundred and eighty thousand votes.

In view of these facts it will take a lot of cold nerve for any Ohio congressman to vote "yes" at this session on the resolution to submit a woman's suffrage amendment to the Federal constitution. Ohio does not want woman's suffrage—and she does not expect to have it jammed down her throat by the votes of her own congressmen, acting in flat contradiction to the expressed wishes of the "people back home."—Times-Star, Dec. 17, 1914.

LUKE MCLUKE SAYS:

A boy always feels sorry for a pampered, lap-raised poodle that never gets to play with other dogs.

When two liars meet, the first liar is going to be outclassed as soon as he gets through talking.

When a single man finds things unpleasant in his boarding house he can pack up and move to another boarding house. But a married man hasn't that kind of a cinch.

The man who carries Shooting Gallery cigars to give to his friends is always surprised to learn that you have quit smoking when he meets you the second time.

The Safety First campaign has worked a lot of good. But the Innocent Bystander is still getting his with great regularity.

There is too much bull in the world. It has got so that driving a garbage wagon is a "position" and not a job, and $7 per week is "salary" and not pay.

A woman will stall around the house wearing a green boudoir cap, a red kimmono with orange trimmings, and a pair of Bulgarian Massacre bedroom slippers. And then she will wonder why it is that she feels so nervous.

When the Bartender begins to fix a drink for a man as soon as the man enters the door of the cafe, and before the man has ordered anything, you can bet that the Bartender is fixing the right drink and that the man is a fellow who brags that he is a Moderate Drinker.

This is a speedy age. Some brides begin saving up money to pay a lawyer for a divorce before they get all the rice out of their hair.

It is funny that a girl knows that you can't see the hole in the heel of her stocking, but is afraid you will see the hole if it is located

The old-fashioned man who believed that any man who would let a barber shave him was a Dude, now has a son who lets a girl manicure his nails three times a week.

There are lots of Perfect 36s on the street who are Imperfect 23s when they are in the Hay and the Props are on the Dresser.

Nature doesn't give the men a fair deal. Why is that the young girls run to dimples and the young fellows run to pimples?

As a rule you could leave the bridegroom's name out of the "among-those-present" list at a wedding and nobody would notice the difference.

They can Reform all they want to. But there will always be trouble in this world as long as kisses taste as good as they do.

And if kisses tasted as good after marriage as they did before marriage a whole lot of lawyers, Judges and detectives would be selling wringers for a living.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who didn't need a tie because it would only hide his plate-glass-studded collar button?

Every girl wants to marry an economical man. And every girl would hate to be engaged to one.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

HOLYOKE, MASS., December 24, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

November 27 held two open meetings, afternoon and evening, in the interest of the waitresses of the city of Boston. I regret to say that both meetings were poorly attended, while those who did attend were interested and signed the charter list. I haven't given up the fight by any means, but am going to work all the harder, and by the first of the year I hope to see a waitresses' union established in Boston. One of the many obstacles I am up against is the fact that the waitresses were organized in this city some time ago by an individual who collected a considerable sum of money and hasn't been heard from since. The former organization has no connection whatever with our International, but was a clever scheme to get the girls' hard earned money; consequently, the girls working at the craft are rather skeptical about joining another organization, and I guess we will have to show them. However, I hope to win out in a short time.

I attended a meeting of Local 843, Worcester, which was largely attended, and several important matters were taken up and acted upon, as well as a financial report made regarding our work in going over the former financial officer's books and accounts and of the present incumbent in office. I submitted my report to the General Office on same, and recommended certain changes in the system of bookkeeping, which were adopted. I believe the new secretary-treasurer, Brother Peterson, is fully capable of carrying on the work as it should be done. The former financial secretary was allowed a reasonable time to make good and straighten out matters.

To Springfield in the interests of Culinary Local 416, also to Holyoke to be in attendance at the city election. The Yes and No question was one of the hardest fought battles in years. The No-License League had funds unlimited, with the press and the Ministers' Association of the city working zealously for them. The members of Local 81 deserve credit for the able and efficient manner in which they carried on their fight. Notwithstanding the many obstacles, the city went license by 1,400.

To Lowell to take up work in that city. I stopped off at Worcester, called on a number of the cooks and waiters in the interest of the formation of a local in that city that I am trying to establish. While this work is rather slow on account of the business depression and the large number of men out of work at the present time, I anticipate success in the near future. On my arrival in Lowell, I called on the officers of Local 85, went over the existing trouble, and, with the assistance of Secretary J. J. Quirk, took up several grievances that were pending, and was fairly successful in straightening out the trouble in some of the houses that were employing non-union men. Others were allowed to go over until a later date, when we hope to be able to reach a satisfactory adjustment. I also had the pleasure of presiding over one of the largest attended meetings in the history of Local 85. Officers for the ensuing term were elected, and most all of the old officers were re-elected. It is too bad the members could not see their way clear to turn out in such large numbers once a month. It would then certainly be an honor to hold office in Local 85. If this was carried out, there would be something doing in 1915. I addressed the meeting along the right lines, particularly on the license question in Massachusetts and other states throughout the country.

To Boston in the interest of the formation of the waitresses' union. I left for Worcester to meet General President Flore, at which time the existing trouble between the wholesale wine clerks and bottlers and drivers was taken up with both organizations holding a joint conference, which resulted in a better understanding by all concerned. In company with President Flore, I attended a special meeting of Local 843. The members were much impressed with the able address delivered by President Flore, and the results obtained by his visit. The report of the outcome of the joint conference was well received.

I left for Dover, N. H., to take up work in that city in establishing a bartenders' local, and I am pleased to say that I was successful in my efforts. I sent to the general office for charter and outfit and hope to have the new local in working order by the first of the year.

To Worcester to continue work in the interest of the culinary workers. On the 21st held an open meeting of the waiters. The meeting was not very well attended. The only excuse that can be offered for the slim attendance was the severe storm we had that day. However, I secured several signatures to the charter list, and in a short time I anticipate sending for a charter.

To Holyoke to attend a meeting of Local 619, to straighten out trouble that had arisen at a recent date. Officers were also elected for the ensuing term, and I installed same.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Nov. 28—To Worcester	$ 1 00
" 30—To Holyoke	1 40

Ft. SMITH, ARK., Dec 24, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December, extending from November 25 to this date.

As I explained to you in my last report that I had just come to the State of Arkansas, and that I had found the city of Ft. Smith, the home of Local 559, dry, and had been so since August 1 of this year owing to the ruling of a defeated (for another term of office) Circuit judge after the city had been granted license in January by the county judge and had run openly for seven months. I informed you in my November report of the bad conditions existing in Ft. Smith after only four months of prohibition, and they are steadily growing worse at this writing, and will continue to go from bad to worse until the city has been granted license and the saloons re-open, which, in my opinion, will be done before this is in print. Our people have secured the names of what they believe is a large majority of the white adults of the city, women from eighteen years old and over included, and have had them published, as the notorious Going law directs. This law, passed by the 1913 legislature, compells up to secure the names of a majority of the white adults, women from eighteen years old and over included, and publish the same in a bona fide newspaper at least twice ten days before license can be lawfully granted by a county judge. The law eliminates the negro entirely, or in other words, it disfranchises him. It matters not if he was born in the State and is worth a million dollars. As I have told you in former reports, this law was fathered by the biggest pinhead in the State of Arkansas, who, since the bill became a law, has been indicted by a grand jury for trying to bribe a jury and for giving whiskey to a minor.

As stated, our people in Ft. Smith have succeeded in getting the petition perfected and it has been published according to law, and we have a promise from the county judge that he will convene court on January 1 to hear the claim for license, and if found according to law will grant the same. I think there is no doubt but what 12 o'clock January 1, 1915, will find our boys at the same old places dishing out the same old goods to the same old smiling faces of yore. Organized labor to a man in Ft. Smith have shown their loyalty to us in this fight, which will show to the world the great good of our boys organizing and affiliating with every branch of organized labor. Without the help of the union men and women in Ft. Smith we could have no possible hope of winning out against the long-haired bunch.

I attended a regular meeting of Local 559 on the 20th, and a very enthusiastic meeting it was, too. The boys have been scattered to the four corners of the earth since the city went dry, but they are returning to their first love in droves, expecting to go back to their old jobs January 1. There were many glad faces present at this meeting. Numbers had not seen each other since the city went dry, when each started out to find work to feed their families, which the sky pilots and hypocrites had deprived them of doing at their home. Just think of a bunch of long-haired holier-than-thou's stepping up and saying: "Sir, you shall not work any longer; your job don't suit us, and if you don't like it, hit the road, rob trains, or beg. We don't care if your wife and kids go hungry, naked or freeze to death; it's all right with us. Get out and hunt you a job, they are plentiful and easy found." How long, oh Lord, are we to be tormented by these animals in the shape of human beings? There is only one way to fight these people, and that is to organize. I would to God our people everywhere could realize these facts for once. Organize and remain organized. Don't organize today and disband tomorrow. We have got to organize our forces if we hope to hold our positions, otherwise we are gone.

At the above stated meeting Local 559 elected the following named officers for 1915: Tom Fenolio, president; Sam Rainey, vice-president; Tom Bridges, chaplain; Dave Henderson, recording secretary; D. E. Weakley, financial secretary; M. W. Grober, treasurer; W. O. Gilbert, inspector; H. G. Martin, inside guard; J. R. Skidgel, T. F. Green, Pete McAdams, trustees; T. W. Bridges, Tom Fenolio, John Angel, delegates to Trades and Labor Council. A good selection of officers, and all that is needed is for Ft. Smith to be granted license for another year and then Local 559 will come into its own again.

We are going to try to revive the culinary workers in Ft. Smith if there is a possible chance to do so. We once had a live culinary local here, but the members became unconcerned and allowed the local to go suspended for nonpayment of per capita tax to the International. I believe that if we can get a live culinary local in Ft. Smith we will put some of the non-citizens out of business or force them to naturalize. Ft. Smith, from a culinary standpoint, is like every other city where we have no union. The Japs, chinks and other classes of non-citizens find good picking. Where we have local unions these people find it hard for them, and generally move on. Ft. Smith is today overrun with just this kind of people in the hotel and restaurant business, and they have almost got the city grabbed, from a culinary standpoint.

Wishing you and yours a happy New Year and that 1915 will be the most prosperous year of our existence, believe me to be

Yours fraternally,

JERSEY CITY, N. J., December 24, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December:

December 1st attended meeting of Bartenders' Union 488, of Jersey City, N. J. This local union has lost the stride it had in recent years, which possibly may be accounted for their changing around in headquarters and failing to hold well attended meetings. There is a lacking interest somewhere, and if the rank and file fail to locate same very soon, something is going to snap. The members of Local 488 are old enough in the movement to know that they should support their officers continuously. They should learn at once that Business Agent Murphy's time could be better utilized other than going around from saloon to saloon collecting their dues. It's a bad practice and the chief cause for non-attendance, because quite frequently the average member figures that with his dues paid up to the local he should cease right there. Permit the writer to state to that element, if the Rev. Dr. Fraser, of Hudson County, connected with the First Baptist Church is successful in his mission, you members in Hudson County will perhaps realize that the obligation administered upon becoming affiliated meant more than you gave thought to. Brothers Oxele, Schwartz, Cahill, Hale, and many others are boosters, and I trust from now on they will get together and take heed to the advice that I gave them and bring Local 488 to the same standing that they were in when they held meetings on Jersey avenue. If you fail, rest assured the wages and hours you are now enjoying will certainly take a slump.

December 2 attended Hudson County Labor Alliance meeting, which was held at the Musicians' Union, Local 526 in Jersey City. There was very little work for the alliance to handle, and after a few remarks to the representatives present pertaining to the close relationship that existed between the musicians, cooks, bartenders and waiters of Hudson county, this meeting adjourned to meet the following week in Hoboken, N. J.

December 3rd had the pleasure of attending and addressing the members of Waiters' Alliance, Local 575, of Jersey City, who held a special meeting at their cozy headquarters on Mercer street. Brother Muldoon presiding, certainly handles the gavel in a masterly way, and much credit should be given him. The green button boys of Jersey City are on record as opposing segregation.

Business Agent Bill Kavanaugh, of Local 575, is a candidate for delegate to the 18th general convention which convenes at San Francisco, Cal., next June, and from the way things look Bill has a grand chance of capturing the credentials. I want to say that this local, considering the times in the East, is holding its own, and that every member of Local 575 is at all times willing to assist any man or woman that possesses a union card without any hesitancy. Brothers Kavanaugh, King and the undersigned captured a waiter that they have for a long time tried by waiting in his place of business until nearly 4 a. m. That's the kind of stuff that goes to make up Local 575 nowadays. Their steward, Brother Green, must also be complimented for the way in which he keeps their headquarters and the manner in which he receives traveling members.

December 7th went to Elizabeth, N. J.; got in touch with Brother Froelich of Local 682 and learned that his members were mostly working and receiving fairly well conditions taking into consideration the slump in their mainstay, which is the manufacturing plant of the Singer Machine Co., 75 per cent of these employes being on the idle list.

From Elizabeth to Plainfield, and upon my arrival there met Secretary Guinee, Local 377, at Queen City Hotel, and later on Brother Angerbauer at the Kensington Hotel. This local union from all accounts is doing very nicely and I am led to believe, if nothing hampers them, will be on the map at San Francisco next June. I have instructed Brother Guinee of the necessity of sending his monthly reports in time and the inconvenience it makes to all concerned when our local representatives falter. Local 377 will hold their annual election shortly, and from all accounts there will be some changes made in the various offices for the good of the craft. By that I am not and don't want to offend the first officers of this grand little union, but the present incumbents figure as though it is time that every member does his little share of the executive work of their union.

December 8th—One year makes quite a difference in a person. This day a year ago in the company of Secretary Sallee, of Dover Bartenders' Union, Local 404, we visited the Dover Hotel and used every effort imaginable to induce William Kanause, a so-called manager, to affiliate but failed. This year on same date he is knocking on the door of Bartenders' Union, Local 404, of Dover, for admission and willing to pay any fee they ask, but the boys in that mountainous district are wearing "ear muffs" and refuse to hear him pleading. This individual when he was rejected by Local 404, with his employer, H. A. McGillivray, whom I am led to believe was a former member of Bartenders' Union, Local 152, of Minneapolis, Minn., jumped a train for Newark, N. J., and through misrepresentation an application was filed and he was admitted to membership in Bartenders' Union, Local 131. It took the Dover boys very little time to cite section 8 of our International law and had this man's membership cancelled. Before this was done I had an interview with Mr. H. A. McGillivray, also with his bartender, Wm. Kanause, and stripped him of his membership book and blue button that he received in Newark, N. J. I advised his employer and himself that in the event that he at some future date would seek admission in Local 404 it would be much more pleasant to speak kindly of organized labor in Dover than they were in the habit of. From all accounts they pursued the opposite path, and when Kanause again presented his application for consideration, once more did Local 404 reject him. In the meantime I took the matter of McGillivray Cafe up with the Knitters' Union of Dover, N. J., and requested of them to patronize only establishments where the union bar sign was displayed. This organization of textile workers is one of the chief supporters of our industry at Dover and I am convinced if a little effort shown on their part, McGillivray will dispense with the services of Kanause and place to work a member of Local 404. The boys, I am informed, are going to give him a fight along these lines, and I don't think they will have any trouble in making him sit up and take notice.

From Dover I went to Orange, N. J., the home of Bartenders' Union 340. After visiting a number of cafes to get a line on the general conditions of our craft in that city, and learning more than I cared to know, set out to locate the officers of that organization. Located the new secretary, Brother William Hardwick and found him to be a person with fairly good knowledge of what might be expected of him. Had the pleasure of meeting Tom Lipsitt now in business and former member of Local 340. Took up the general conditions of the liquor traffic in his town and the relationship that should exist at this time with the employe and employer. Inasmuch as he is a member of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, he informed me that he tried time and again to bring about such a relationship with the members of the employers' association for the protection of the industry, but he had a queer lot to deal with and was not successful. Times have changed a little and he is of the opinion that with the newly elected officers, he will be more successful, and if such proves he will try to locate me so as I can be of some service to Local 340.

Dropped into Bartenders' Union 131 and reviewed case of Kanause and made report to the general office on same. Stopped off at the Waiters' Union, Local 109, of same city in the hopes of meeting Brother Malone or Maertens as to the success the Cooks' Union, Local 294, was making since they were placed on business lines a month ago. Secretary Isaacs giving me the information desired, I then traveled to Jersey City to attend meeting of Bartenders' Union, Local 488. A poor attendance being present, and again permit me to say that if you Jersey City bartenders don't wake up and take some advice a bundle of you will be working the old 14-16 hour trick you done prior to the time Bill Big Kavanaugh organized you. I was pleased to note the spirit our visiting members displayed from Locals 4 and 575, and if Local 488 will please copy hereafter, the undersigned won't have any cause to find fault. Local 488 is also on record as opposing segregation, and Brother Schwartz from all accounts will be the logical candidate to represent that local in San Francisco.

December 10th attended meeting of Bartenders' Union, Local 4, of Hoboken, N. J., and was pleased to note the fine showing the boys made. Bartenders' Union, Local 4, not like Local 488, is attending every meeting of the Hudson County Central Labor Union and receiving the support of that central body. Quite a number of speakers from other crafts attended this meeting and I might say just at this time that Local 4 certainly has a friend in Brother Charles H. Felten, president of the central labor union. There is no doubt in my mind that Brother Felten has seen that there is a "punch" behind this local and is willing to give them his attention during his spare moments. The members of Local 4 requested of me to notify all traveling members to keep away from Hoboken as there is not sufficient work in their city to supply the members of their local, owing to the European trouble and the mooring of the steamships to the piers of their city for the past six months. The crews of the ocean greyhounds are now not under salary and you might imagine the number of culinary workers employed there that would jump into either a bartender, waiter, or cook's job if they get the opportunity. Local 4, if everything turns out O. K., will possess a working agreement before January 1st with the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of Hoboken, something that they have long sought. If success favors this local they will be represented on the floor of our next convention, and will oppose any division in our present International Union.

December 11th went to Englewood, N. J., in the hopes of saving Bartenders' Union, Local 728, and upon interviewing nearly every bartender in town figured it was a hopeless job. I then took up the matter with Brother Chris B. Stephen, secretary of the building trades council of Englewood, and upon learning what he knew and what I had already saw myself, considered it best to withdraw the charter of that local. Some day or other if Mr. Prohib strikes this jerk water center not only will the bartender begin to pull tight on his thinking cap, but his employer will do likewise. Returned to Hoboken the day following.

December 14th, with President Felten, Central Labor Union of Hudson County, Brothers Thiery and Rowoldt of Local 4, Brother Wragge of Local 10 and their business agent, we toured the city, stopping in numerous places in the interests of the cooks, bartenders and waiters, resulting with some success.

December 15th, with Brother Kavanaugh, Waiters' Union, Local 575; Rowoldt, Bartenders' Union, Local 4 of Hoboken; President Felten, County Central Labor Union, appeared before and addressed the executive board of the New Jersey State Retail Liquor Dealers' Association in the Eagles' Home, 15 West Park Street, Newark, N. J., on matters concerning our crafts in Hudson County. Presented a resolution to this board; same was referred to committee on labor inasmuch as a similar committee of the State Federation of Labor was to meet the liquor dealers the day following in Newark.

December 17th left Hoboken for Yonkers, N. Y., under instructions, and after a tough time of it in that city managed to place Waiters' Alliance, Local 501, on the map once more. Was assisted to some great extent by Business Agent John J. Kennedy of Bartenders Union, Local 355. These men in the city of Yonkers under no consideration whatever would reorganize unless they were protected by someone that possessed a fair knowledge of union affairs and selected Brother Kennedy while in conference to handle their financial and business accounts from now on. To this Brother Kennedy readily accepted, knowing how they were trimmed by past officers that especially held their money. While in the city I found quite a number of culinary workers that were bitter towards organization, but with the assistance of Organizer John T. Windell of the Federation of Labor; Brother James Norris, President Local 355; Brother John Myer, of same local union, and F. M. Haight, secretary of Trolley-men's Union 490 of Yonkers, I imagine the biggest "little man" of Yonkers, that is, John J. Kennedy, should have no trouble in bringing Waiters' Union, Local 501, around again, as he had it for some four years ago.

December 18 and 19th visited about fifteen restaurants and cafes in the city of Yonkers with Brothers Mullen, McNamara and a few others. Pointed out to them the unsanitary conditions of the same; have also taken up the flagrant violation of the 54-hour law pertaining to the employment of females in restaurants and hotels. Brother John E. Connors no doubt will be assigned to this matter as soon as I hear from Commissioner of Labor, James Lynch. Women are employed in various restaurants working twelve and fourteen hours daily without any rest in seven days, and if this is not a nice time to place some of the "blood-sucking employers in jail" by a little action on the part of the Yonkers Federation of Labor, then I don't know what I am talking about. The names of the places where these unfortunates are toiling their life away I have furnished and I believe there will be a battle on in the near future. I told a few that I only wished that I was the turnkey in some penal institution, and they being placed in my care to give them a taste of long hours to see how they would relish it.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

Saturday afternoon of the 19th tried to get in touch with the Confectioners and Bakers' Union 144 of Yonkers, N. Y., for the purpose of putting a similar question up to them that they four years ago placed before Waiters Union 501, which took place in the "slave drivers'" lunch room conducted by a person by the name of Blanchard, but when wanted they could not be found. Waiters' Union 501 went out on strike for the Bakers' Union 144 of this city four years ago because Blanchard employed non-union bakers, and through going out made it possible to win the strike. Now today Bakers Union 144 permits their members to remain at work in Blanchard's on Getty Square working with scab culinary workers. I wonder if they intend to be as liberal trades unionists as they found the boys of Local 501 when they were almost in their infancy. New York State Department of Labor laws pertaining to the employment of women are very plain and should be given a fair trial at this time in the city of Yonkers for the protection of the feminine sex. Same reads as follows:

Article 12, Section 161. "Hours of labor of minors and women; no child under the age of sixteen years shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in or in connection with any mercantile establishment, business office, telegraph office, RESTAURANT, HOTEL, APARTMENT HOUSE, theatre or other place of amusement, bowling alley, barber shop, shoe-polishing establishment, or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise, articles or messages, or in the distribution or sale of articles more than six days or forty-eight hours in any one week, or more than eight hours in any one day, or before eight o'clock in the morning or after six o'clock in the evening of any day." This being the law, the undersigned is of the opinion we have right and just grounds to force same at once in the hotels and restaurants of the above city, and seek the aid of the Yonkers Federation of Labor.

December 21st returned to Jersey City to take up some unfinished work, and on the 22d attended meeting of Bartenders' Union 488. President Hilleman being absent I was requested to preside. Took occasion to note that this local union has failed to carry out previous instruction pertaining to the bonding of their president and gave them one week more to fulfill the requirements of section 64, and when said bonds are executed to notify the general office. Business Agent Murphy of Local 488 explains the inconvenience he has been put to regarding the auditing of 1914 books by his members failing to send in their membership cards. Should the members of this local want to be "on the level" with themselves and get a complete audit for the current year by all means assist Brother Murphy by sending in your books so as this matter can be straightened out.

December 23rd New Jersey State Federation of Labor Executive Board will confer with the Jersey City Retail Liquor Dealers in the Fuller Building, 3 p. m. There is not a doubt in the mind of our crafts in Hudson County but what they will be well taken care of in the hands of Business Agent Kavanaugh, who is a member of this executive staff.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., December 28, 1914.
DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December:

December 1st I went to the city of Chicago and on my arrival was met by Vice-President Maloney and Special Organizer Frakes. After getting settled I called on the officers of the Chicago Federation of Labor and discussed the strike of Waitresses' Union, Local 484, also met officers of our different local unions and attended a hearing before Judge Baldwin on the "Knab Injunction" and met with the attorneys for our local unions. After meeting with the different representatives of our unions I settled down to the business which prompted my visit to the "Windy City."

During my visit I attended a meeting of the Bartenders' District Council and got better acquainted with the officers of our bartenders' organizations. After the meeting of the council I attended a meeting of Waiters' Union, Local 35. An exceptionally large membership greeted me and it was quite a pleasure to renew old acquaintances. The meeting was well conducted and the arguments presented of an instructing and educational character. After the meeting I met with President Mayer and Brother Parker. We spent a pleasant evening and disposed of several matters upon which we differed.

The following day after attending to business at hand, I made arrangements to meet with the following brothers: Secretary of L. J. E. B. Kilgus, Fred Ebeling of Cooks, Business Agent Stein of Waiters, President Philip Hartmann, (Loop) Bartenders, formerly of Local 131, Newark, N. J.; Secretary Schober, (Loop) Bartenders, and Brother Schwartz, of Local 35. A pleasant evening was spent. We met for the purpose of discussing business propositions. The outcome of our deliberations was highly satisfactory to all, so much so, that we decided a little recreation in order and as the guest of the aforementioned we proceeded to pay our respects to the noted places of the city.

During my visit Vice-President Maloney and

I went over in detail the existing trouble. Everything possible is being done to bring about a victorious settlement. It's a hard fight, but one that's deserving of every possible support. A powerful combine is arrayed against our members, but the dissolution of the existing injunction, which we expect, will mean that a successful fight has been fought and the benefits will be far reaching. Space alone prevents my mentioning the many "old timers" whom I had the pleasure of meeting during my visit, omission of their names in my report does not by any means mean they're forgotten. I hope to have the pleasure of meeting them all again soon.

I returned to Belleville, Ill., in time to attend a special meeting on the 9th. A reception had been arranged in my honor, and being a little unused to such attention and consideration, I was at a loss how to proceed. We had as our guests, officers of the Liquor Dealers' Association and all past delegates to our International Union's conventions. We enjoyed an exceptionally pleasant evening. The entertainment and reception was held in the bartenders' own home, which is a credit to a union and city the size of Belleville. I am authorized to announce, that Belleville will be represented at the next convention in Frisco. Her only miss in 14 years was Denver, and the excuse advanced was a worthy one.

After a week spent in St. Louis I went to Jefferson City, Mo., where by appointment I met a committee of gentlemen who will preside as part of the law making body of the State of Missouri, during January, February and March, 1915. My business attended to in that respect, I proceeded to Kansas City, where I arrived on the morning of the 19th. I was met on my arrival by President Hyles, of Local 420. After meeting with the different officers of Local 420, I made arrangements for conferences with the officers of the Cooks, Local 266, Waiters, Local 19 and Waitresses, Local 503.

Sunday, December 19th, I attended the twelfth anniversary banquet and reception of Local 420. It was without exception the most elaborate undertaking I have ever witnessed by a local of our International Union. All our local unions were represented and the banquet was in charge of Brother Dan Balling, business representative of Cooks' Union, Local 266. The table decorations were elaborate and as pictures were taken, I hope our members will have the pleasure of seeking the fac-simile in the MIXER AND SERVER. Our guests of the occasion numbered judges of the circuit and district bench, lawyers and professional men of the city. The principal address was delivered by Brother John T. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the Missouri State Federation of Labor and the organizer of the union. He brought us back to the day of the union's inception, with six members and a charter fee of $10.00, through its many struggles, its victories and defeats up to the present, and with just pride pointed to the fact that Local 420 today stands as the largest individual local union in Kansas City, Missouri. Other addresses were delivered by prominent men of Kansas City, and it sure made us all feel good to listen to the words of praise and the position we occupy in the hearts of our friends. Local 420 has good reason to feel proud of her record and the conditions enjoyed by her members. It will take more than idle talk to break through her solidified ranks.

December 20th and 21st I held meeting with our local officers of Locals 19, 266 and 503. Work is very scarce in Kansas City and the culinary workers have a fight on their hands involving about thirty-five men and women. The manner in which this trouble is being handled warrants me in saying they will win out in their struggle.

December 23rd I returned to St. Louis for the holidays.

Christmas Eve I attended the celebration extended to the families of the trades unionists of St. Louis by the trades labor assembly. It was one of the largest and most successful undertakings ever attempted by the unionists of this city. Over two thousand families were provided with all that goes to furnish an elegant Christmas dinner. An entertainment from 7 p.m. until 1 a.m., under the auspices of the Theatrical Unions, the dining room which was continuously occupied, was under the direction of the cooks, waiters and waitresses of St. Louis and last but not least, the chairman of this gigantic undertaking, was no less a person than one of our own members, Brother George Miller, of Bartenders' Union, Local 51. Brother Miller worked night and day for two weeks to make the affair a success and too much credit cannot be given for his wonderful accomplishment. Brother Miller had a good working committee, but the bulk of the work fell upon his own shoulders. The waiters were in charge of Brother George Ringler, of Local 20; the cooks in charge of Brother Lang, and the waitresses in charge of Sister Walsh. The service was gratis and exceptionally well performed.

On Christmas Day I was invited to attend a dinner tendered the unemployed members of Local 20 by that organization. As Brother "Jack" Carpenter said: "There were no hard times, at least not in Local 20's headquarters that day." There was plenty and to spare. We sure enjoyed one Merry Christmas, despite the fact that we had over one hundred unemployed members present on the occasion.

Our local unions in this section are having a hard time providing for their members in this section, and I would advise all traveling members to "steer clear" and give Illinois and Missouri a wide berth. Many matters of importance were handled during the past month, but as space would not permit of a resume, I have filed a report in detail with general office.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

SPOKANE, WASH., December 25, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December, also November 27th to 30:

As stated in my November report, I had called a special meeting for culinary workers of North Yakima for the 27th. The attendance was fairly good and we had as visitors Brothers Wilkenny and Smith of Local 33, of Seattle. President Otto Nickel presided. President Nickel called attention to the fact that several of the offices were vacant and proceeded to call for nominations. As stated above, the attendance was fairly good, but in spite of that fact it was not possible to get anyone to accept office. After discussing matters, it was decided, in view of the fact that I had made arrangements to be in Walla Walla on the 29th, that I would return on the 30th, and in case the local could dig up someone to take the secretary's position, that I would make another effort to straighten matters up. To stimulate interest in the membership, we decided to give a dance, Brothers Nickel, Reglein and myself being selected to take full charge.

To Walla Walla, arriving in time to stir up the boys for meeting on the 29th. Attendance very good, the boys voting unanimously to continue the organization to the last ditch. Sorry to report the death of Brother Ed. Carter, who passed away on the 28th in the city of Pasco. The Pasco boys wired to the effect that the body would arrive early on the morning of the 30th. Walla Walla secured a floral piece and several of the members met the body on arrival, attending funeral services. At this time I also want to report that Brother Jack Robinson who passed away on November 20th, was given burial honors by the boys and girls of Seattle on the 22nd of November, the writer also attending. Brother Robinson was at the time a member of Local 485 of Spokane.

Back to North Yakima. With Brothers Nickel and Reglein final arrangements for the dance to be held in Eagles' Hall, December 10th, were made, also went over the books, finding a total in good standing of 59 and a bank account of $66.18, surely sufficient encouragement for the boys and girls to keep going. Attended meeting of the Labor Council on the 2nd and found the council interested in the welfare of the culinary workers.

December 3rd, meeting of culinary workers. Attendance good, Brother Fred Reglein elected as secretary-business agent. Brother Joe Davis being elected as recording secretary; address, Box 1214.

December 4th to Cle Elum on case of ex-member Martin Bogoty, at request of President Ernest Marsh of the State Federation of Labor. Satisfactory settlement will no doubt be made at the Federation Convention in January.

December 6th meeting of North Yakima Bartenders Local 555. Considerable important business transacted, officers elected for next term, and delegates elected to Federation Convention. The local has decided to hold a dance in the near future. While there was some talk of disbanding, the sentiment has evidently changed and the boys are determined to hold the fort.

December 7th assisted in attempting to elect a member of organized labor as city commissioner, but sorry to state we were defeated by the very narrow margin of 71 votes, chiefly because many union men instead of voting a "plug-vote" for our candidate alone, voted for either one or the other of his opponents along with him and thereby assisted in his defeat.

December 8th, with President Nickel and Business Agent Reglein, made a tour of the cafes and restaurants, lining the members up, and advertising the dance.

December 9th, found to our surprise that Mr. Gronvold of the New Grand Hotel had replaced his union kitchen crew with a bunch of "Japs." As the Labor Council was meeting at 8:30 P. M., the case was called to their attention, with the result that a committee of three was appointed to visit Mr. Gronvold. This the committee did only to find Mr. Gronvold in the bath (5 P. M.), evidently having been tipped off that the committee was in waiting for him. Feeling quite sure of the result, we had a banner painted for use at the dance, calling attention to the fact that the New Grand employed Japs in preference to white help. As Mr. Gronvold did not care to talk matters over, we proceeded to go on about our business and of course placed the banner across the hall above the orchestra. As there were over 150 couples dancing, and most of them were in the habit of visiting the New Grand for refreshments, as that place was the closest to the hall, the result was a transfer of business to the Kensington Bar around the corner. About 12:15 P. M., Gronvold and several of his employees came to the dance, Gronvold being very much under the influence of liquor and insisting upon being allowed to make a speech to those present, from the platform. He was informed that those present did not come to hear him make a speech, and that he would have to do his talking to the committee from the Labor Council. As this is the third city in which he has discharged white help in favor of Japs, Mr. Gronvold will undoubtedly find that he has about reached his limit.

December 11th to Toppenish, where, with President "Teddy" Roosevelt, and Secretary Dave Blight, reports for balance of year were made out and matters of interest gone over.

December 12th to Pasco. Tough times have certainly hit this little town, but the boys there are made of the right stuff and propose to stick until the finish.

Sunday, December 13th, 2 P. M., attended meeting of the local and afterwards enjoyed one of those "famous Mulligans" which the Pasco boys pull off every meeting. Officers were elected for the next term, our old friends "Jeff" Fausset as president, and John Thomas as secretary-business agent.

To Spokane, and on arrival got in touch with the officers of the locals relative to conditions in the city. At night attended meeting of the Labor Council, being assured that our culinary locals would be given all the assistance possible. Sorry to say, the labor movement here is not as aggressive as it should be, this city being sadly in need of a movement such as Philadelphia has had, a labor forward campaign.

December 14th attended meeting of Waiters' Local 63. Attendance very poor, however, arrangements were made for a general meeting of culinary workers on the 19th, when arrangements will be made for a strenuous campaign.

December 17th placed a picket on the Quick Service Cafe after a futile attempt to settle the trouble without picketing. With Secretary Gray and others visited other places in an attempt to line them up, but failed, so we will have to pay them a visit after we get through with those now on fire.

December 18th attended meeting of Cooks' Local 450, the members displaying considerable interest in proposed plans for the betterment of the crafts.

December 19th also placed a picket on the College Inn Cafe, this place employing "Chinks" in the kitchen. Banners seem to be delivering the goods, as both proprietors are making desperate efforts to get injunctions.

At 9 P. M. called special meeting of culinary workers to order, Brother Allen of Local 63 being elected as chairman for the evening. Plans were discussed and it was agreed that each local would select a committee of six to form a general committee which would have full power to handle all matters of importance relative to the picketing. The membership of each local was assessed a certain amount for expense purposes. It was further agreed that there would be a special meeting on the 21st for cooks and helpers, on the 22nd for waitresses, and on the 23rd for waiters.

December 20th attended meeting of Bartenders' Local 485. This being the day for election, the attendance was above the normal. Delegates were elected for the State Federation of Labor as well as officials.

December 21st again on the picket line. During the afternoon some "shyster" lawyer called up the headquarters and informed Secretary Gray that in case the pickets were on the line for dinner that we would run up against an injunction. As we were on the job for dinner and nothing doing, I presume we called their bluff. The next day I received a telephone call saying that the injunction was waiting for us at noon, and before I had time to answer, the phone was hung up. Anyway, we were there on the proper time, still no injunction.

At 8:00 P. M. attended meeting of cooks and helpers, they unanimously agreeing to the plans proposed. Later attended meeting of Labor Council.

December 22nd passed peaceably except for a demonstration by the proprietor of the Quick Service Cafe. That lady became very much excited and after trying to knock the block off of the picket and the writer, attempted to tear the banner to pieces. Failing in both she subsided and retired to the inside of the cafe.

On the 22nd and 23rd attended meetings of waitresses and waiters respectively, both organizations agreeing to plans of strike meeting. At the meeting of Waiters' Local 63 the writer was elected unanimously to represent the local at the State Federation of Labor at Olympia, in January.

We are, at this writing, still up and at them. The proprietors in Spokane, hiding behind the plea of "poor business," are trying to cut wages on all the employees. Our boys and girls are united for the first time in several years and don't propose to stand for the cut. To the victor belong the spoils.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., December 23, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December:

Ever since I have been in San Diego, my time has been taken up with the work of Locals 768 and 402, and also trying to get a line on who and how many cafes would be in operation in the San Diego Exposition, but for some reason or another, better known to the management of the Exposition, they have seen fit to keep the matter very secretly and almost impossible to secure any information from them; and although the Exposition will be opened on New Year's day, have only been able to secure the information that one cafe will be opened, and the management of said cafe will import the help to San Diego, notwithstanding that San Diego has more help than can be employed if ten cafes would run in the Exposition.

Local 768 has signed one of the last places it had on the unfair list, the saloon realizing at last that it was a good thing to have the good will of everybody.

On December 13th Bartenders' Local 768 had the annual election, and the following were elected for the ensuing term: President, Earl Hyatt, (Brother Hyatt comes from that good Local 721 in Salt Lake City); vice-president, Adolph Groux; secretary and business agent, C. E. Kiser, and with Brother Kiser's re-election Local 768 is bound to progress in leaps and bounds; treasurer, John Sachs; trustees, Al Cutten, Jas. Griffin and O. C. Wade.

Local 402 is doing nicely. In the last few days four new restaurants have signed up with the local and the prospects for the future are very good. Press agent, Brother Bulius Becker, is right on the job and also every member of the local. The following were elected at their last meeting: President, Al. Wilt; vice-president, Sister Margaret Lockbaum; secretary and business agent, Claude McClellan; recording secretary, Fred Moore.

December 8th attended the regular meeting of Bartenders' Local 591, of San Pedro, Cal. As usual the good fellowship that exists in the local is beyond expression. The following officers were elected: President, H. G. Abnet, formerly of Local 339 of Portland, Ore., and no doubt that those who know his union principles will know that Abnet will make good; vice-president, C. J. Steinkamp; secretary and business agent, A. J. Smith, (he tried to let some other member be business agent but they would not stand for it; consequently he was elected by acclamation); chaplain, J. J. Fitzgerald; trustees, H. Parks, Wm. Olsen and H. Hansen.

At the same meeting Local 591 voted unanimously for a bigger International Union and against segregation.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Since my last report our locals in Philadelphia have kept up their stride, each local increasing their membership to a considerable extent. This has been more than pleasing, as the calamity howlers were prophesying nothing but failure, claiming that our success rested solely on the American Federation of Labor Convention, and after the adjournment of the convention there would be a sudden decrease in membership, and activities would be a thing of the past. But nothing of the kind has happened; actually the reverse. Our locals, at the present writing, in the city of Philadelphia, have been inoculated with the spirit ("I will") that spells success. There is just one little handicap that confronts all of our locals, and that is a percentage of the members—a small one, thank goodness—seem to think that their duty ceases when they proudly show their book with the current month paid, and perhaps a few months in advance. There does not appear to be any remedy for this. They are not to be convinced, notwithstanding the colmans that have been printed in our journal along the lines of every member becoming active. Now for a case of my own personal knowledge. Local 115 received an application for membership and the candidate, Brother Wood, was accepted and initiated. He immediately became active, and at the first meeting following secured 15 applications. At this meeting our International officers were present, and they touched on the matter of activity among the individual members. Sequence: At the next meeting Brother Wood had 25 new applicants, and several members all the way from 1 to 5. When I left Philadelphia Brother Woods informed me that he was going to have 40 at the next meeting. That stirred up the rest of the members, and they are all on the job. The same can be said of Local 279. All the members are becoming active, and all are striving to do all in their power to put Philadelphia on the map.

Our new local of waitresses are progressing, not in leaps and bounds, but in a steady manner. The Local Joint Executive Board is doing all in its power to assist this local. We realize that theirs is not an easy task for several reasons we do not care to go into detail about at this writing, but suffice it to say, that from the very organization of this local they were handicapped by a Judas who saw fit to inform certain managers that perhaps in the near future the girls would try to better their conditions.

The State Brewers' Association held their convention in Philadelphia this month, and along with Mr. Bonner, president of the State Retail Dealers' Association; Business Agents McDevitt, of Local 115, and Weinstock, of Local 279, I mingled with the delegates and had an opportunity, through the courtesy of Mr. Bonner introducing us to the delegates, to lay the matter of closer affiliation with our International. I believe much good will come out of this talk. Mr. Bonner has the happy faculty of calling a spade a spade, and not a shovel. If there is a man in the State of Pennsylvania who recognizes the power of organized labor in a wet and dry fight it is Mr. Bonner. He is not a theorist, but a practical man.

In reviewing my work in Philadelphia I want to say that I honestly believe that the large increase in the membership in our locals spells permanency. I take this opportunity to thank the trade unionists for the staunch support they gave me, particularly Brother Ritchie, chairman of the Labor Forward Committee. This committee, by their active work in behalf of the unorganized workers, proved a revelation to those skeptics who laid down on the job and who said it could not be done.

The following is my expense account for the month of December:

Local car fare for month.....	$3 30
Expense incurred on account of Brewers' Convention	4 00

DETROIT, MICH., Dec. 26, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In my last report I left the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER in Madison, Wis., where I found the affairs of Local 468 in a complicated condition, the main cause being internal dissension, the officers having been quarreling among themselves for the past year, and some of the members claim that Local 468 was not receiving the support of organized labor, that they thought they were entitled to. Others were dissatisfied with the benefits paid by our International, and there were several protests along other lines, which clearly convinced me that the members of Local 468 were sadly lacking in their knowledge of unionism, and also in the way our International was financed and conducted, and we will not condemn them for this lack of knowledge. We held a meeting on December 6th and I am sorry to say it was not a very harmonious one, so we made preparations for a special meeting for December 13th.

On December 7th I visited the meeting of the Madison Federation of Labor and informed the delegates present as to the condition of affairs in Local 468, and I was told very plainly that our boys had been very negligent in their attention to the federation, and this was the principal reason why they did not get the support of organized labor. I also found out that the Madison Federation had done a great deal of work for Local 468, but our boys did not seem to appreciate it, neither did they do anything to help themselves, so I will relieve the Madison Federation of any responsibility for the dilapidated condition of Local 468. I also thanked the honorable body for their efforts in our behalf in the past.

We had a good crowd at our special meeting on the 13th and I gave them all kinds of advice in regards to what they must do if they wanted to build up a good organization, and what to do in order to receive the support of organized labor, and I hope and trust that they will heed my admonition and all get busy and each do their share towards building up their organization. For if they desire to remain in business they will have to do something to protect their interests against the onslaught of the antis in the spring of 1915. Madison had only sixty-seven majority for the wets in 1914, so it is up to the members of Local 468 to get right down to business. But in order to have success crown the efforts of our work, we must, first, be regular in attending the meetings of the union; second, let harmony prevail in our ranks and among our officers, and also have the delegates to the federation be on the job at every meeting. And by doing this you will be in a position to gain the support of organized labor, for this will be the means of demonstrating to them that your members are real union men and want to do their share towards advancing the cause in Madison.

I went to Racine the 14th and attended the "booster meeting" of Local 322 on the evening of the 15th. We had a splendid crowd in attendance and initiated sixteen new members. This makes seventy members for Local 322, the high water mark for this organization. New officers were elected and the fact that several of the offices were contested for, it made the election very interesting. The new president, Pete Beck, is a fine fellow and a good worker. Vice-president Joe Kapauen is a live wire and one of the hardest workers in the organization and well liked by everyone. No change was made in the office of the secretaries, for it would be hard to find a team like Brothers Henningfeld and Feleatreau. Geo. Henningfeld is a glutton for work and is busy all the time, and is one of the best recording secretaries I ever met. Lew Feleatreau is a good running mate and I must compliment the boys of Local 322 for their wisdom in choosing such a splendid bunch of officers. Brother Henningfeld has a set of by-laws all ready for its first reading and the outlook for a successful organization in Racine is much brighter than ever before, and I feel that the interest will continue and that Local 322 is in the race to stay.

I went to Milwaukee on the 16th and attended the meeting of Local 64 on that evening, and as this was the day for the election of officers there was a good crowd present. Brother Sorweid was chosen as president without opposition, and also as delegate to the International convention. Brother Engler was also the unanimous choice for recording secretary, and the old war horse, John Hart, was elected as treasurer without opposition, and the hustling agent, R. H. Robson, was given a big majority over Brother Philips, which clearly demonstrates that Brother Robson's work is appreciated by the members of Local 64. "Bobby" claims that Local 64 must have at least three hundred members the ensuing year and we will start out on a campaign about January 20th to try and bring about this result.

I went to Joliet on December 18th and attended the meeting of Local 714 on that date and there was a splendid attendance. It was a most interesting meeting, and the spirit of enthusiasm displayed was pleasing to note. Local 714 is in splendid shape, and although only six months old, has a nest egg of $417 in the treasury. Local 714 will elect officers on December 29th and there will be several spirited contests. Secretaries Becker and Conway and Treasurer Sullivan have no opposition, and this goes to show that their work is entirely satisfactory. This is a trio that would be hard to beat, all being hard workers and well liked by all their associate members, and I feel that with these boys in the job, Local 714 is destined to be a splendid organization.

I went to Kalamazoo, Mich., on the 19th and attended the meeting of Local 368 on the morning of the 20th. There was a fair attendance and there seems to be a little more life in the organization than was displayed a few months ago, but a little more ginger will not do any harm. Brothers Jones, Phelps, Harrison and Smith work hard for Local 368, but they do not receive the encouragement from the members that they are entitled to.

I went to Jackson on the afternoon of December 20 and attended the meeting of Local 671. There was a good crowd in attendance, and after the meeting all present enjoyed the luncheon and the many good things provided for the occasion.

Local 671 is in good shape and I find that Brothers Essen, Golden, Turcotte, Fallon and Kruck on the job all the time and doing all in their power to keep up the interest in the local. They have close to a one hundred per cent organization, but there is one place where they are lacking and that is a very important one; that is, that their delegates do not attend the meetings of the Jackson Trades Council. Now if Local 671 wants the support of organized labor, get in the game and show them that you are entitled to it. Get busy now, boys, as you will need their support in your wet and dry fight in the spring of 1915. A stitch in time saves nine, so get busy, boys, and do all you can to assist Brothers Essen, Golden and Turcotte.

I arrived in Detroit on Sunday evening, December 20th, and was met at the depot by Brother Fred Hobby. Brother Hobby has been working on the waiters in this city and from what he tells me he is up against the same old game that I bucked last summer, and the working conditions now are even worse than at that time, but these poor mortals are afraid to say their soul is their own. I hope that Brother Hobby can line them up, but no one knows what he is up against as well as some one who has been in Detroit and tried to do any work in the organization line. It is an awful tough game to beat in this beautiful city of Detroit.

My expense account for the month of December is at follows:

Dec. 14—R. R. fare Madison to Racine..	$ 2 12

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of November, 1914:

After submitting my report for the month of October, I remained in the city of Logansport, Ind., until November 3rd, using my best efforts to establish a culinary local. I was assisted by the following members of Local 341: Hart Wilson, president; Geo. J. Gross, secretary, and Earl Schorting, treasurer. We took the matter up with the Organization Committee of the Trades and Labor Assembly. Brother Gross, being secretary of that body, was in a position to render assistance. After we had canvassed the situation, however, we were compelled to come to the conclusion that the few white culinary workers in that city were of an inferior quality and those who had sufficient experience to make good at the craft were not willing to join hands with organized labor to better their conditions. We gave the matter up as a bad job for the time being, with the understanding that our brothers in Local 341 in conjunction with the Trades Assembly, would keep them in mind if at some future time things cleared up we could expect their assistance. I wish to say for Local 341 that they have the right idea when they keep active workers upon the floor of their central bodies. I feel that if more of our locals would emulate their example in this respect we would have less dry cities to contend with.

November 3rd to Peru, Ind., where I met several of the officers and members of Local 520, including Brothers John Marshall, Ellis Hance, Geo. Eppert and W. P. Sturnes, who showed me around the city, until I became convinced that there was nothing doing in the culinary line until the burg grew large enough to support a few better class eating establishments, and a demand for skilled culinary workers. I was informed that Local 520 was getting along fine and that conditions of the trade were good.

As I had previously received instructions to reach Detroit, Mich. as soon as possible, I left Peru November 5th for the city of Ft. Wayne, and stopped over long enough to say howdy to those of our members whom I could come in contact with. I met Brothers E. Redrup, M. G. Botzler, Wm. A. Jackson and others of Local 305 and learned that the bartenders were a strong local and doing fine. I also met a number of the members of Local 489, including Brother E. L. Brown, and I was pleased to hear of the progress that is being made by that local.

November 7th to Detroit, Mich., to take up the work allotted to me. I attended a meeting of Local 562, November 24th. I find the conditions of the bartenders improved since my visit to the city about seven years ago. The Bartenders' Union is much stronger than at any time in the history of the city. They are making good headway in the line of organization and if they keep the good work going there is no reason why Detroit could not be among the best in the near future. President O'Brien and Business Agent O'Rourke seem to have the support of the balance of the officers and members and I think that they will soon have the situation fairly well in hand.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Nov. 3—Transportation and baggage from Logansport to Peru..... $0 85

DETROIT, MICH., Dec. 27, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December.

Since my last report my entire time has been put in working in the city of Detroit, Mich., with the exception of one day, when I paid a visit to the city of Pontiac, Mich. Pontiac was not upon my route list, but as I had a little time and had received favorable reports from there, I decided to look the situation over. About seven years ago I was successful in forming a bartenders' local there, but in a few weeks the city was voted dry by a county option vote. I believe that there is an opportunity to start another local in January that will be more successful.

I mentioned in my November report that Bartenders' Local 562, Detroit, was doing nicely. There is one thing that I wish to mention at this time, however, and that is the fact that the men that come here from other cities and carry a traveling or withdrawal card from the International Union had better live up to the International laws in the near future. We have several on the list now, and some working managers as well. Take notice, as Local 562 can today boast of about 500 members.

I have assisted the local upon several occasions when called upon to protect the label, as well as to visit brothers who came here from other cities and failed to deposit their cards.

The balance of my time has been taken up with the waiters and cooks, but I have no report to make for publication at this time other than to say that Detroit is a good place to stay away from unless you have plenty of money or a return ticket to a man's town. There are over 200 waiters walking the streets today who are living from hand to mouth. I have discovered about 40 union waiters here, or at least they were union men when they arrived. I hope they will still fight for the principle. I know, however, that many of them have been compelled to let their cards go by default because of the bad condition of trade. I have said more than I intended at this time regarding this matter, but you can look for some unvarnished facts in the near future.

As I did not appear in the last issue of the MIXER AND SERVER, I will, at this late day, extend to the officers and members of the International Union the greetings of the season.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

December 19, Pontiac and return.....	$1 10
Local car fare for month.....	1 75
Telephone for month.....	1 90
Postage	2 20

Total $6 95

ST. PAUL, MINN., Dec. 26, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December.

With the ebbing away of the eventful year 1914 and the advent of 1915 many will ask: What will it bring to us? I think it will depend a great deal on us; on every individual member of our great International union; on our work, steadfastness and our resolution to do better. Many locals paid dearly last fall for their inactivity—for their slumber. The question is: Will the others wake up? Will the culinary workers, who are made to believe that they have no direct interest in the closing of saloons and bars in hotels and clubs, wake up to the fact that they have? Will the locals all over the States brace up and see to it that every member is a bona fide voter, and when election comes, that he votes? When that is done the culinary worker will have something to show his boss why they should get their support. The only plausible reasons I can find why cooks in large centers are not organized is because they are afraid of losing their jobs if they organize. Still, the bosses themselves are strongly organized, and so are the stewards and the clerks. Here in the Twin Cities the waiters (hotel and club) are dominated by headwaiters high up in the Geneva Association, and prevented by them from joining our organization. But the cooks are not, and that is why we have such a splendid local as Northwestern Cooks' Association No. 458 in Minneapolis. We also have Local 600, Duluth-Superior, a 97 per cent local, and Local 408, St. Paul, which bids fair to emulate the others if the newly-elected officers get the support they deserve from the members. The lack of interest of the individual member, shown by his absence at the meetings, discourages the officers, and has been the cause of the downfall of many a union. Waitresses are refusing to join the ranks because they think they don't need to belong, as the fifty-eight-hour State law for women workers is protecting them. I suppose if we had a like law for men it would be the same excuse. Still, organized labor is the sponsor of that law. Take a mirror and give yourself a kick!

On November 30 Local 408 nominated its officers for the ensuing year, and the election was held on December 14. On the 6th Local 287 nominated their officers and two delegates to the San Francisco Convention, and the election was held on the 20th. On the 11th Local 458 held its annual election. Local 152 held its election on the 13th. This local re-elected practically all of its officers, the only race being run by the seven candidates for delegate to the San Francisco Convention, the lucky ones being Brothers Gigrich, O'Brien and Kaehn. Brother Alberti is saving his money, as he couldn't miss a convention. Local 593 held its election on the 22d. Bro. Thomas P. Wood is acting in lieu of Sister Louise Parks Riordan, who is sick, but is recovering. Last month twenty-six applications were made to this local, of which twelve were initiated. All members are working. On the 11th Local 408 gave a free entertainment to its members and to the members of Local 287 at the new bartenders' hall. The reason for giving this was for the families to get acquainted. The boys know one another, but not the women folks, and we all know how much one wife could help another brother's wife in case of sickness. Their first venture was a big success, and let us hope they will keep it up, and that other locals will follow suite. Minneapolis was well represented. Local 458 is going to have a public installation on the 8th of January, followed by festivities. Christmas Day I spent with my family.

The following are the results of the elections in the different locals:

Local 408, St. Paul: Wm. Stevens, president; Chas. Durose, vice-president; H. Landis, recording secretary; Carl Bennett, financial secretary; Aug. Baumgartner, treasurer; Tom Rose, chaplain; F. Stone, inspector; A. Miller inside guard; H. Landis, A. Kirmser, Wm. Stevens, trustees.

Local 287, St. Paul: Al Johnson, president; Ad. Hentges, vice-president; C. Leighton, recording secretary; C. Stone, financial secretary and business agent; T. O'Malley, treasurer; M. J. Lally, inspector; H. Schiller, inside guard; F. Neid, chaplain; Ad. Hentges, J. Kennedy, Chas. Dewey, trustees; Adam Hentges, J. Biersdorff, delegates to San Francisco Convention.

Local 593, waiters and waitresses, Minneapolis: Chester Beiter, president; Alice Slosser, vice-president; Louise Parks Riordan, recording secretary; A. Bogardus, treasurer; Thomas P. Wood, financial secretary and business agent; Jas. McDonald, press secretary; Hattie Lange, inspector; M. Buckwalter, sergeant-at-arms; F. A. McTaggart, chaplain; Carrie Atkinson, Anna Ashland, Michael Stevens, trustees.

Local 458, cooks, Minneapolis: Ad. Burger, president; G. Reynolds, vice-president; Chas. Gearon, recording secretary; Leslie Sinton, financial secretary and business agent; J. M. Sullivan, treasurer; Frank Perry, inspector; J. Bernier, inside guard; Wm. Brushweiler, press secretary; W. Day, Wm. Briggs, Vic Nelson, trustees; Dan Smith, chaplain; Dr. W. Taft, physician.

Local 152, bartenders, Minneapolis: W. Gigrich, E. O'Brien, J. A. Kaehn, delegates to San Francisco Convention.

As seen by the foregoing all the locals seem well represented. Let us hope that the rank and file will give them all the support they need.

My expenses for the month are:

Car fare Minneapolis-St. Paul and return for month	$5 20
Local car fare.....	1 60
Postage	16
Telephone	30
Total	$7 26

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 28, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month follows:

Left Pittsburg on December 3rd, arriving in Johnstown, Pa., the same date and immediately took up the matter as per your instructions in a previous letter, advising me of the situation in that city and the possibilities of organizing a bartenders' organization there. After seeing a number of those working at the business, a conference was agreed upon for the next day, as there were some matters that had to be settled pertaining to the old local, etc.

At the conference the next day everything was satisfactorily explained and it was agreed that a postal notice be sent out for a called meeting for the following Sunday. There was a large attendance at the Sunday meeting and I requested Mr. Elmer Marsh, now Brother Marsh, to take the chair, state the object of the call, and then I would discourse on the necessity of organization, etc. The result of the meeting was upon the question being put, "All being in favor of forming a bartenders' local in Johnstown, will please arise. Every one in the room, and there was sixty-five present, immediately responded. Brother Marsh turned to me and said: "McCarthy, can you beat that?" "No, Mr. Chairman," I replied. "I'll be d—d if you can beat a unanimous vote."

The books were then opened and all present paid the initiation fee. Before adjourning it was agreed to that we would meet the following Sunday in the same place, Eagle Hall, Main street. Brother Wm. J. Brawley was present at the meeting and by request from Brother Mash acted as secretary. Brother Brawley works over in South Fork, Pa., and has maintained his membership in the I. U. as a member-at-large for several years.

At the following meeting, December 13th, twenty-seven new members were added to the roll, making a total of ninety-two. We had expected to cross the one hundred mark, but the weather was in blizzard shape and we felt more than gratified for so large an increase under such weather conditions.

The union was then instituted and the following officers elected: Elmer Marsh, president; J. Kelly, vice-president; W. J. Scollins, recording secretary; C. Caughey, financial secretary; G. Shaffer, treasurer; W. McCauley, chaplain; E. Lysett, inspector; M. Strayer, inside guard, and Ben Gribble, outside guard. After installing the officers I addressed the organization along the usual lines and gave them many valuable hints from the result of my experience how an organization should be run.

The bartenders of Johnstown impressed me very much, clean cut, level headed men and above the average in their enthusiasm for the cause. The possibilities of the organization when it is taken into consideration that there is a number of small cities adjacent, looks awfully good. They anticipate in a short while to have a local union that will be close to the three hundred mark. I want to say further that I heard many compliments passed upon them by the proprietors, for their activities in the November election, in helping to elect by good majorities officials who were friendly to their interests. I want to thank the members of Local 188 for the spirit they manifested in our efforts to organize Johnstown. It was the old story of suspended members, and instead of Pittsburg demanding its full reinstatement fee, I was informed by Secretary Hackett that his local had agreed to let down the bars for thirty days and any one of their former members working in Johnstown, would be reinstated for the initiation fee that they were charging in Johnstown. Thanks again to the boys in Pittsburg. This is the true spirit of unionism as I see the light, may its influence spread farther and the example become contagious throughout our International Union.

Left Johnstown on the 17th, arriving at Harrisburg the same day. Soon got in touch with M. A. Hagey, treasurer of the local there, 569; spent the evening and the best part of next day meeting many old acquaintances and making new. Called on President Maurir and Secretary Quinn of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor. Brother Hagey states that the local there is in good condition; their membership has gained since I was there last. The boys have a fine meeting hall which they fitted up at their own expense, and rent the same to other organizations. They are striving to reorganize the central body here and I am informed the prospects are excellent.

Left Harrisburg on the 18th, arrived in Baltimore the same evening. The next day visited quite a number of places where our boys hold forth, meeting President Flanagan, of Local 532, and later in the day Business Agent Chenoweth. Both express themselves as more hopeful now than for a long time since that Local 532 is at last on the road to success.

Left Baltimore on the 19th, arriving in Washington, D. C., the same date. On my arrival I soon found that the Hobson amendment was the talk of the town and speculations as to its possible passage in the house were pro and con, with the under feeling amongst the local trade that at last the showing made would reveal positively what hopes they had to continue in business here, for there are at present two bills in Congress for total prohibition in the District of Columbia to take effect January, 1916. While the anti-saloon forces are disappointed over the vote December 22nd, which was a 197 to 189, falling away short of the necessary two-thirds vote, yet they are gratified to know that they can, as they believe, hand out here that long coveted package. Already they are lining up their forces and to my mind we are in for the hardest fight of our lives to save the capital city from their wrath.

My expenses for month follows:

Dec. 3—Pittsburgh to Johnstown.....	$2 30

THE UNQUENCHABLE.

The power of Armies is a visible thing,
Formal, and circumscribed in time and space;
But who the limits of that power shall trace
Which a brave People into light can bring Or hide, at will—for freedom combating
By just revenge inflamed? No foot may chase,
No eye can follow, to a fatal place
That power, that spirit, whether on the wing
Like the strong wind, or sleeping like the wind Within its awful caves.—From year to year
Springs this indigenous produce far and near;
No craft this subtle element can bind.
Rising like water from the soil, to find
In every nook a lip that it may cheer.

—From WORDSWORTH.

The Mysterie of Berbruers

The following is an inventory of the utensils of the brewhouse of Richard, a minor, son of Laurence le Long, situate in the Parish of St. Martin, Ludgate, in London, in January 25th, 1335.

Two leaden vessels.
One leaden cistern.
One tappetroghe (tap-trough) of lead.
One old chest.
One mash-fat (mash-vat), value 18d.
One raryng-fat (fining-vat), value 6d.
One heyr (?) for tuns, value 12d.
Three sets of handmills, value 4s.
One piece of lead, value 2d.
One tun.
One-half tun, value 8d.
One yel-fat (ale-vat), value 18d.
Two kemelynes (tubs for brewing), value 10d.
One cleansing becche, value 4d.
One alegeste (gist or stand for small cask ?).

The said Richard possessed one brewhouse and three shops, probably the earliest mention extant of "tied houses." The nett yearly value of the whole was 40s. 2d. (223).

The year before the foundation of the free town Hull, Henry le Galeys, Mayor of the city of London, presents a writ of our lord the King to this effect:—"Forasmuch as we have heard that bakers, brewsters, and millers, do frequently misconduct themselves in their trades, and that misdoers by night going about the city aforesaid with swords and bucklers, and other arms, as well at the procuration of others as of their own malice, do beat and maltreat other persons, and are wont to perpetrate many other offences and enormities to no small damage and grievance of our faithful subjects," the Mayor and Sheriff were bidden to chastise all such bakers, brewsters, and misdoers with corporal punishment. This writ was dated 28th May, 26 Edward I. at York (224); at the same time the King was considering the humble prayer of the people of the vill of Hull, that he would grant them the liberties of a free town.

In 1345, we find that "whereas of old a certain conduit was built in the midst of the city of London, that so the rich and middling persons therein might have water for preparing their food and the poor for their drink," the brewers had well nigh taken possession of it. The Mayor and Aldermen thenceforward forbid the water of the chepe to the brewers. If any disobeyed, the tankard [a large pail holding about 3 gallons] or tyne in which he brought it was forfeited, and he was to be fined 40d. (225).

In Hull, among "the most ancient laws, ordinances, and constitutions of ye town, which were according to custom proclaimed every year in ye Market Place (226)," were the following:—"That no Taverner, Brewster, nor Tippler keep any guests after coverfeu be rung, on pain of 4d." "That no one presume to sell a pound of candles for more than one penny, or a gallon of ye best ale for more than ye same, or a gallon of small ale for more than a half-penny." Again in the ordinances of 18 Henry VI., "That all brewers shall sell their best ale for no more than 1d. a gallon, and their small ale for no more than $\frac{1}{2}$ d." In 1426, "That no vintner or aleseller sell any ale or wine unto any one before 11 o'clock on Sunday, unless to strangers, under penalty of 6s. 8d." It is interesting to find modern early and Sunday closing regulations thus anticipated.

The ordinances which follow contain several points of interest. People of various trades had taken to brewing beer, but this was to cease, except for their own use. Only

Mr. Mayor and his brethren the Aldermen might have a craftsman to assist them. This, however, seems to have been resented, and the words "every honest burgess who may dsire it" were inserted. The two kinds made were "doble bere" and "merchaunte (or shipping) bere," and both were to be "lastyng and helthsome." For every tun of beer made, 2d. was paid in the town. There are no express ordinances as to searching. It is stipulated that the hired workmen must be those who have served the seven year apprenticeship.

The Hull ale was celebrated. The Merchant Company's Book shews that a cask of ale was a favorite present for sending to London to the members of Parliament, when engaged in special services on behalf of the Company, and the same practice was in vogue by the Mayor and Town's Chamber. The following ordinances shew the trade as it was in the time of Queen Mary.

To all trewe Xpian people unto whome theis Composytion indented shall come:—

STILL PLAYING UNDER COVER.

Last September we printed an item which directed attention to the well laid plans of the Sacred Septette in depriving the rank and file of Local 30, San Francisco, Cal., from securing at their home addresses the official monthly magazine of our International Union, the MIXER AND SERVER.

We also set forth in later issues of the MIXER AND SERVER our conclusions as to why the approximately SIXTEEN HUNDRED members of Local 30 were so ruthlessly denied a privilege which their monthly dues entitled them to.

The management of Local 30 evidently is under the thumb of the Sacred Septette and from this distance it would seem that they are in accord with the scheme which prevents the men who elected them to office from obtaining what they help support, via the payment of monthly per capita tax.

If for example, your local union officials were to imitate the tactics of the "management of Local 30," and instead of withholding the monthly issues of the official magazine, laid plans to withhold for their own use the payments made to your local union for Death Benefits, what would you call such an action? What name would you apply to the officials guilty of such an abuse of your confidence? Supposing another case—that your officers laid plans to convey the impression that there was no such thing as a Death Benefit Fund in connection with our International Union, and that they so manouevered things as to deny legal and proper benefit payments. In other words they laid a scheme to "put the International Union in bad," yet did not benefit financially by their work, and that their scheme was as partially outlined, to pay tax, to keep from the membership the official journal, so that the membership might be kept in ignorance as to financial transactions, and when the member died, these foolish officials would neither seek to secure proper forms or records for filing benefit claims, in fact would act just the same as if the International Union had no such benefit. What do you think you would do with such officials after discovering their criminal actions?

Now don't misunderstand us, we are not accusing the "management of Local 30" of manouering any one out of a death benefit, that would be an accusation which so far as we know is untrue, but we do accuse the officers of Local 30 with positive and seemingly premeditated neglect of their plain duty as officers of that local union when they deliberately decline to furnish the general office with the names and addresses of all of their members; we emphatically accuse them of doing in a minor way a proportionate injustice as that which would be committed by scheming to hide the benefit fund and ignore its existence. We are convinced now and have been for many months that the Sacred Septette is not giving expression to the united judgment of the over sixteen hundred members in Local 30 that the MIXER AND SERVER is not wanted, we would have to be furnished with more reliable evidence than the unsupported statement of the Sacred Septette, who have already shown a disregard for truthful utterance rather startling to behold.

Probably the fact that the membership of Local 30 which puts up the "dough" for The Culinary Craft does not receive that publication may in a measure lessen the enormity of the allegations which we make. In the September, 1914, number of The Culinary Craft we find this bit of illuminating information: "The total cost of this publication (The Culinary Craft) is less than $90 per month." Any one who pretends to know the cost of printing and publishing a paper the size of The Culinary Craft need not express doubt over that quoted statement; that is approximately the cost of one thousand copies which is about the total circulation of The Culinary Craft.

Just take your pencil and calculate that probably out of that number of copies they have a paid circulation of two hundred, that they attempt to send one copy to each of the secretaries listed on the official roster of our International Union, approximately 600, which means under the estimate noted that the Seven Sacred Scribes have left exactly two hundred copies of The Culinary Craft to satisfy over sixteen hundred members of Local 30.

Perhaps we will be advised in a later number that the circulation is sufficient to care for all that over sixteen hundred members of Local 30, but just how they will be able to reconcile a larger circulation with that claimed expense of "less than $90 per month" we are anxious to observe.

If, as appears to be the case, The Culinary Craft is as exclusive among the membership of Local 30 as the MIXER AND SERVER, we again arise and want to inquire, what kind of sleep producing stuff has that Sacred Septette discovered and used on their fellow members in Local 30?

We are still writing 1914, as this is being written, and it is with confidence that the statement is made that the "management of Local 30" is afraid to permit their membership to read the MIXER AND SERVER and that no mail list will reach us before closing forms on Christmas Eve, for Waiters' Union Local 30, of San Francisco, Cal., the self-styled leaders for segregation which is but another word for secession.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

LIVING UP TO THEIR REPUTATION.

A perusal of the editorial (?) page of the November, 1914, issue of The Culinary Craft, offers added evidence that, the proclivity for prevarication and misrepresentation appears to be a part of the nature or make up of the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh street, San Francisco. After pinning them down and compelling admission that they were careless in the handling of the truth, we have another opportunity of further showing them up as about as ruthless and conscienceless a bunch of fabricators as have clouded the horizon of our organization in years and attempted to divert the attention of our members from the work of endeavoring to further increase their numbers and perfect their respective local unions.

In the article referred to the following appears:

"The opposition forces consist of our Big Little Chief, our Jerry, salary $225 per month. Our private assistant to our big chief, salary —. Our great Lobbyist in Washington, salary $200 per month. Our eleven General Organizers, salary $200 per month. Our Delegates to the A. F. of L. conventions, remuneration $8 per day and expenses. Our Vice-Presidents, generally selected by the little chief, some of whom eat at the pie counter. Our thirteen Special Organizers, $15 per week. Our three Auditors, salary $5 per day and expenses, and twice as many job seekers as there are jobs at the pie counter.

"We admit that this is a formidable army who when driven to the wall will no doubt battle for their lives—or jobs! But hirelings have ever fought against the rank and file and their loyalty to principles, with varying degree of success for a time, to eventually succumb to the wrath of those they have deluded for years. This army is being continually augmented by new appointments as special organizers and by promises of future patronage. Just how large it will be by June, 1915, is hard to foretell.

"The friends and supporters of segregation can depend, however, on their presence as delegates to the convention, for many small locals, unable to financially bear the burden of sending delegates, are induced to issue credentials to these hirelings, on the ground that it will not cost the local anything as the general membership foots the bill. It will be well to note that during the time that this army is representing locals as delegates, their salary goes on even though not engaged in their work.

"Never before has such a formidable army been organized by the little chief or such activity displayed."

The quotations offered contain in their entirety a sample of the "done" upon which the secessionists hope to create dissatisfaction and secure converts, and if the reader permits an analysis of the statements made by the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, will follow:

That salary of "$225 per month to the Big Little Chief, our Jerry."

Refer to the proceedings of the Boston convention and you will find that Resolution No. 100 was referred to the Committee on Law and said committee reported favorably on same. The convention, without dissenting vote, concurring, and said resolution became Proposition No. 15 on the referendum ballot which was submitted to the membership for a general vote. In the returns you will find (page 14, August, 1911, MIXER AND SERVER) that Local 30 returned exactly six votes in opposition, while ninety-six (96) voted yes, it is significant that the number voting no is one less than the present editorial staff of The Culinary Craft. The fact that a majority of the members attending the meeting of Local 30 believed that the General Secretary-Treasurer was entitled to a raise in salary seems to put the Sacred Scribes at variance with proportionately that number of the present membership, who as heretofore intimated do not attend meetings, hence unaware of what the management of Local 30 is doing. "Our private assistant to our big chief, salary —."

Assuming that the title big chief refers to the general president, although direct reference to him is not included in any other portion of the "formidable salaried army" if the general president has such a "private secretary" he is paying the expense out of his own pocket, and so far as we have knowledge of our laws, he has a perfect right to spend his salary in that direction if he feels so disposed. The expenses of the general president are printed in the MIXER AND SERVER every month, he makes no secret of his expense account and has the manhood to subscribe his name to whatever he is the author of. If, on the other hand, the reference to the "big chief" and his "private assistant" is intended for the general secretary-treasurer, the use of dashes can be dispensed with hereafter, for he is not fortunate enough to have any private secretary or private assistant. The employees of the general office are paid out of the funds of the International Union, and the Sacred Scribes' veiled insinuation is quite in keeping with the smudging campaign which they have carried on for a year or longer.

"Our great lobbyist at Washington, salary $200 per month." Every member of our International Union, excepting something like Sixteen hundred members of Local 30, who have been deprived of the privilege of reading the MIXER AND SERVER by methods and for purposes fully set forth in these pages, know that International Organizer Brother Jere F. McCarthy has been stationed at Washington for the purpose of watching and endeavoring to overcome inimical legislation to the catering industry; there has been no effort to conceal that fact, for the brother makes his reports monthly and if space permits we print it. His reports contain the amount of expenditures incurred, which reference thereto will disclose the fact that they are smaller generally than his co-organizers on the pay roll of our International Union: "Our eleven general organizers, salary $200 per month." The writer will shoulder his share of the responsibility for the continuation of the men carrying credentials as international organizers; the general secretary-treasurer does not appoint them, they are the candidates who were successful in securing the approval of the present and previous General Executive Boards. They were informed when they were engaged that their employment was not a reward for alleged wire pulling or to make good on pre-election promises.

Each and every one of them were advised in language quite as plain as could be written that "they were now regarded as employes of the International Union, that their efforts should be so directed as to bring to the organization the greatest measure of success." "If you have enemies in the organization you cannot afford to descend to such a thing as using your official position to get even with them, or to in any way annoy or harass them. All members in good standing are equal in the eyes of an officer and are therefore entitled to consideration. As an employe of the International Union you are not the personal representative of any officer or individual, you are not appointed for either political purposes or for payment of alleged or so-called promises made by any officer or member, and you should always keep constantly in mind that no matter what impression may prevail among the general membership, you are laboring for the International Union and not for the general president, general secretary-treasurer or members of the general executive board.

"As an organizer you will be expected to do your utmost for the advancement of the general welfare of the entire membership; time and patience will be required, problems will confront you and you will be called on to solve them in a manner which will enhance the real value of the organization. Organizers are not expected or required to do any boosting for officers, nor for that matter would it be fair to have them as employes knocking said officers. If the officers of this organization have not by their labor endeared themselves to the membership, have failed to perform their full duty, then no amount of hot air slinging by paid representatives will ever convince the membership that they are in error. You don't have to please me or any other executive officer; your work and the results secured therefrom, is the one and only method employed to judge your success. Personal friendship should not and does not cut any figure with the general secretary-treasurer who, under our laws, directs your efforts. The one way and the only way to merit my friendship on the part of an organizer, is to have him show by good hard hustling that he knows what he is on the job for and can produce the goods in the shape of good working locals and satisfied members.

"I do not expect the impossible, I know that every man tries to do his level best and consequently, so far as I am concerned he is given the greatest measure of consideration and whatever help I can offer to win success.

"Don't make the mistake that the possession of an International organizer's credential gives you the right to 'lord it over the members,' remember that you are as much an employe of that member as if he were, and in reality he is, a part owner of the International union. That don't mean undignified cringing, it means simply that all members are entitled to courtesy and kindly consideration, no more and no less is exacted. Lead, don't push, for you can obtain better returns by showing how than uselessly interrogating why?"

The writer challenges any present holder of an organizer's credential or any ex-holder of such to produce any evidence which will show that the organizers of our International have ever been directed to perform work at any time or place, not even excepting conventions, which was contrary to what is set forth in the foregoing literal copy of instructions given to all such employes. As to the success achieved by these men, that remains for the general membership to decide, it is not left to the exclusive judgment of the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh street.

The organizers who attend conventions are not retained on the pay-roll during the week of the convention, the exceptions are those employed in the work of the convention. At the Denver convention two of these men assisted in keeping the records of the convention and their names appear in the printed records of that gathering as "Assistant Secretaries of the Convention."

The members of the general executive board meet before, during and after the convention and are compensated for that service; one of them was employed in San Francisco, Cal., as an International organizer before the convention and his salary was paid him for the week of the convention. Organizers Merryfield and Reynolds did not attend the convention. They were employed as organizers and were compensated for their work during that week the same as for weeks before and weeks since that event. Therefore the statement that the organizers are being paid by the International while representing poverty stricken locals at our conventions is unwarranted and opposed to fact.

"Our delegates to the A. F. of L. conventions, remuneration $8 per day and expenses." It will be news to the delegates of our various conventions to be advised that they have been bunched into adding to the formidableness of "That Army" which The Culinary Craft takes exceptions to. It will also be news to many of them to be informed that the "expenses" so glibly referred to in the quotation consists of transportation to and from the seat of the A. F. of L. conventions by the most direct route. It is true the laws provide for paying our delegates $8 per day, but it is not true that we pay their expenses, their hotel bill is an expense, and they pay that out of their own allowance, hence the use of the word "expenses" is misleading and was used for no other purpose than to create the impression that our funds were used to provide junketing trips for delegates to the A. F. of L.

Probably the pertinent fact that "Our Delegates to the A. F. of L." refused to be instructed by the management of Local 30 may have some bearing on the mental attitude of the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh street.

"Our vice-presidents, generally selected by the little chief, some of whom eat at the pie counter." Section 100 before its amendment at the Denver convention read: "The President, Eight Vice-Presidents and SecretaryTreasurer shall be elected at the General Convention." That is the law as it read when the present general executive board was elected by the Denver convention, in substance it is the law now. San Francisco Locals 41 and 44 sent six delegates to the Denver convention, five of that number voted for President Flore; and a similar vote was cast for the present general secretary-treasurer.

First Vice-President Hesketh was nominated by delegate McEachern of Local 167, Cleveland, O. Among the delegates offering a second to the nomination was delegate Steiner of Local 44, San Francisco, Cal. Brother Hesketh was the unanimous choice of the convention; Secretary Sullivan did not beg the convention to take that action, it was unnecessary, for the delegates without exception were as warm admirers of Bob Hesketh as the "little chief" ever claimed to be. If it were left in the hands of the writer to make the "selection" Bob Hesketh would be his choice.

Second Vice-President Hoffman was the recipient of similar favors at the hands of the delegates, there was no opposition to his re-election and it was made unanimous. Had it been up to the "little chief" to "select" he unhesitatingly avers that Hoffman would be his selection.

Third Vice-President Foster was the one and only nominee for the position, and the delegates took similar action as to his "selection," as his two colleagues that preceded him. There was one dissenting voice, a delegate asked to be recorded as not voting; the "little chief" did not at that time acquiesce in that dissenting vote, nor does he now as he believes "Bill" is all right.

For the Fourth Vice-Presidency late Brother James J. English was put in nomination by Delegate Conley of Local 77, Boston, Mass. Jas. H. Anderson, retiring fourth vice-president, seconded the nomination and Brother English was unanimously elected by the convention. Needless for me to add that no man or woman in our International Union occupied a warmer spot in the hearts of our general membership than late Brother James J. English and, had the privilege been accorded the "little chief" to make a "selection" for the position which the convention elected him to, Brother English would have been the man.

There was a contest for the position of fifth vice-president, and the records disclose the fact that four out of the six delegates representing San Francisco unions voted for the winner, Brother C. W. McCurdy. The fact that he won in an election indicates that the majority believed in him and his work. The "little chief" did not "select" Brother McCurdy; if, however, he were asked to do the selecting McCurdy would have been the man.

Sixth vice-president was another officer whom the "little chief" did not "select." Brother Sesma was nominated by a Californian, Brother Al. Hassel of Local 284 and two other Californians seconded his nomination, and he enjoyed identically the same pleasure and privilege accorded to the First, Second, Third and Fourth Vice-President nominees, election by acclamation. Had the convention said "little chief" you "select" a member for Sixth Vice-President, the ballot would have read F. Sesma, and Sesma is one of those referred to as "some of whom eat at the pie counter."

For Seventh Vice-President Delegate Josh Brady said, in placing in nomination his candidate: "Fellow Delegates, there is little need to eulogize the candidate whom I have in mind to present to you for the position of Seventh Vice-President. She has shown that she measures up to the best brains in our organization and has the courage to give expression to her convictions, Sister Elizabeth Maloney, she has made good." That the delegates to that convention agreed with Delegate Brady is evidenced by the fact that she was elected by acclamation, and the writer unqualifiedly approves of the verdict rendered. Another "selection" of the "little chief" had he the power which it is alleged he "generally" uses. And now we come to the Eighth Vice-President, which position was sought for by two members of our International Union, both excellent men and active members, and the convention record discloses that our California delegates, six in number, voted one way and landed on the winner, Brother Paul Steffler, of San Antonio, Texas, so it will be noted that they aided materially and owe apologies to no one in the job of "selecting" the present members of the general executive board, and the writer is confident that none of the brothers from Locals 41 or 44 either asked the "little chief" for advice or were solicited by him to vote one way or the other on that "selection" or any other before the convention. Despite the foregoing absolute facts, the statement made that the Vice-Presidents are "generally selected" by the "little chief" was offered to the readers of The Culinary Craft to mislead them and to create the impression that the "little chief" was a tough little rascal wielding an iron hand which could not be unclamped, not even by several hundred delegates, many of whom he had never seen before the ninth day of June, 1913.

"Our 13 Special Organizers, $15 per week." Local Special Organizers have accomplished a great deal of good. To include them in that "formidable army" would be humorous if it were not a fact that, in the main, the general secretary-treasurer accepts the appointment made by the local unions and his sole duty thereafter is to sign a check which is forwarded to them weekly, and to give such Local Special Organizers whatever suggestions may be of value to them in trying to increase the membership of their respective local unions. Out of approximately one hundred local special organizers who have worked for their local unions and received part compensation from the International Union, less than ten of those members have ever put in an appearance at any of our conventions, so that whatever of "formidableness" may attach to the alleged "army" they will have to show up at San Francisco in greater numbers than heretofore to be even a minor factor. In connection with the subject of Local Special Organizers, the General Executive Board authorizes the general secretary-treasurer to grant local unions such assistance for limited periods. The local unions invariably selecting the member for the job.

"Our three auditors, salary $5 per day and expenses." As every member knows our laws require local unions to submit the names of nominees which, when received at headquarters, are re-submitted to the members of the General Executive Board. The members of the board have seldom acted on these names without being importuned by local unions and members to favor their special candidate; the General Executive Board is wholly responsible for the selections, the general secretary-treasurer possessing gumption enough to refrain from voting for any candidate for auditor whose duty it is to audit his accounts.

The International auditors receive the amount stated, $5 per day, the only expense allowed them is their transportation to and from Cincinnati. Out of that five dollars per day they pay their own hotel expense account, therefore the word "expenses," as used by the Seven Sacred Scribes, is as misleading as its use in other parts of their joint mental dribble which they flatter by calling it an editorial.

If as the Sacred Seven aver the organized opposition to segregation centers entirely with the job holder and job seeker, then there are many thousand job seekers inside of our organization. Formidable, indeed, is that army, so conscious of what they want that when the end of the week June 14, 1915, has passed into history they will have shown the real job seekers of Seventh Street that they don't measure up to the requirements of live organizations such as our International Union. The crude effort of the Sacred Seven Scribes to make it appear that the "little chief" is a bone of contention and that he is the obstacle in the path of progress, finds mighty few friends among the intelligent membership of our International Union. It would make positively no difference to the Seven Sacred Scribes who was an officer, he would be an obstacle unless he swallowed their dope and followed their directions.

The predictions of the Seven Sacred Scribes is about on a par with their courage, they combine their puny brain drips in the construction of insinuating and prevaricating drivel. Their use of the terms "Big Little Chief" and "Little Chief" in their productions indicates neither approbation or recognition of ability or service; they studied the effect of bestowing titles which would convey "bossism" and all that such implies. In that action they were crude imitators, which prompts repeating Ashton Stevens' comment: "Originality is known by the frightful friends it makes."

Their attempt to create an impression that the general secretary-treasurer contrived by some hocus-pocus to organize and then foist on the pay roll of our International Union that "formidable army," emphasizes how splendidly equipped they are to assume directorship of one big or two small International Unions and to prevent the "official scoundrels" now in office from continuing their damnable machinations.

In thus insulting the intelligence of their fellow members in Local 30 and the readers of their monthly "effort," they but repeat and emphasize how truly small they are, yet the article as a whole is about as wise as their concept of the intelligence of the rank and file permits.

Being provincial and dense themselves, the Sacred Septette assume an attitude which is not any too complimentary to those whom they claim as followers and advocates of secession.

They assert that "Segregation is sweeping the country," probably they were thinking of prohibition, which is truly doing a sweeping stunt of no mean proportions. Let us say again what has been printed in these pages before, Segregation is DEAD, but SECESSION is a very much alive proposition in and adjacent to where the Seven Sacred Scribes manage to hold sway.

If the readers of the compositions of the Sacred Septette required any further admissible evidence to convince them that the Sacred Seven were morally unfit to lead any procession except of their own kind, their combined effort as described in this article is presented for consideration.

Men who pretend to criticize, yet use doubtful methods such as perverting facts and figures, who deliberately offer untruthful declarations and illustrations may be honorable and sincere, let those who read these lines be the judges.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

GENEVAISM.

Reading the criticism of an article by Mr. Sharp on the Geneva Association in our official Journal of October, 1914, by General Secretary-Treasurer, Jere L. Sullivan, I think it appropriate to add these few comments:

The Geneva Association commonly known as the kindergarten, with its splendid record of scabrecruiting wherever it came into evidence and an opportunity presented itself for its most beloved activity, pursues tactics, which explain the otherwise unexplainable fact of its maintenance and support on the part of a goodly number of craftsmen.

Yes indeed, the perpetuation of ignorance and the imbuing of false ideas on the part of the lickspittels among the membership, which by the way is almost wholly recruited when they, as mere inexperienced boys, enter our trade, is one of the main principles and general practice of the Geneva Association.

Sure enough, no one who is not a lickspittel that will always heed the pallbearers of Genevaism, or is sufficiently ignorant so he can be molded according to the Geneva recipe, can never be an officer of the Geneva anywhere for any length of time. Those who doubt this may try for themselves.

The Geneva brand of education for its membership runs from these fundamental fountains of "wisdom." Discussing the position of the Waiter as a social asset, that is to say, the strata in which the craft finds itself in every day life, runs something like this in Geneva doctrine:

The Waiter is a class by themselves, they have nothing in common with anyone who is earning his livelihood by the performance of labor, they are people who, owing to the (other) privilege of being permitted to wait upon marquis, earl, count and (no-account) other titled and not titled (?) (parasites and bloodsuckers) can never put themselves on a level with the fellow who happens to contract horny hands or wear overalls while earning his living, why the Waiters never soil their hands, they never wear overalls, they are wearing a white collar, they perform their pleasantries in evening dress (which is often decorated with gold or silver braids for the reason that some lady (?) who happens to have indulged in a little too much of the pearly stuff may not make a mistake) they never touch objectionable things, they are always in society (and if they should soil themselves while in it even that dirt is refined). This is about the condensed gospel of the Geneva bible.

Again they say, when you belong to the Geneva, you are so much so privileged by the proprietors, managers, chefs and headwaiters, etc., that they, whenever they visit our clubrooms, look upon you with a footing of equality, why this alone should make you realize your importance of being a Geneva (product), keep this everlasting in mind and do not lower our standard by even once entertaining the thought of joining a labor union which says, that you are a workingman, that the interests of the horny-handed son of toil and your interests are the same, that you must stand side by side and help to remove the yoke of oppression which bears you and them alike down, why never degrade yourself in that manner, because if you do you no longer are one of ours, you will be beyond repair, boy, those with such doctrines, they are all revolutionists. Heavens, boy, for Geneva's sake never think or do that.

Now let's see how this doctrine applies itself and how much the products of the kindergarten benefit by it.

In Germany in the early part of 1902, a law came into effect, giving the hotel and restaurant employees a twenty-four-hour and a twelve-hour rest-day within two weeks. As soon as this law made itself felt it caused consternation in the camp of the then well organized proprietors. Resolution after resolution was presented to the legislative bodies arguing, pleading and begging for the repeal of that law. Aside from the argument that it would destroy their business, the main argument in these resolutions was this: That the hotel and restaurant employees were invariably drunk on their day off and were unfit for work the next day, that the otherwise thrifty employee did not know what to do with himself on his day off and consequently got drunk, which in due time would lead him to the road of an immoral life. (Prohibitionists take notice! Advocate fourteen hours work a day, seven days a week and the now prevailing immorality which you so much bewail shall be cured.)

Here Genevaism puts its official stamp of approval on these resolutions by endorsing them in full. (Copies of these resolutions are in the hands of Br. Baumeister, Secretary of the Gastwirthsgehilfen Verband in Berlin, Germany.) Just imagine a resolution which not only places their own rank into that of imbecility, but also endorses seven days' work a week for their loved ones. Oh Ignorance, thou art the most powerful of all gods!

Now a few instances of their unlimited scabbing record:

In a strike of Waiters in London, England, at the Poplar Cafe and Trocadero of Lyons' and Co., with their fame as union-wreckers, the Geneva branch on Shaftesbury avenue, furnished the strike-breakers for these establishments. Two shillings 6 pence was charged the members of their own organization for the privilege of being strike-breakers. A Scotchman who was then secretary of that branch got two sound thrashings for his excellent service by some of his own clan.

Here you must understand that in Europe one largely depends upon the employment shark for a job and pays very heavily, if he happens to get you one. Naturally the Geneva Association is not behind in running such offices, as it reaps them a rich harvest, especially of non-members, which they, as a rule, charge double the amount of fees than members. (Another fine instance of Geneva administration.) Also I wonder if Mr. Sharp has ever heard of the strike in Paris in 1906, where the scabs in the Hotel Continental and De Russe were sent from the Geneva Association, and whereupon the French Federation of Waiters excluded every foreign member from their organization.

Yet only take the recent strikes of the now defunct I. H. W. U. in New York, where it is only through the occupation of the Geneva Club rooms on the part of the members of the I. H. W. U. which kept Mr. Engelhardt from sending out scabs as at Lyons, Elster, Blochlinger and Hinze, officials of the then I. H. W. U. can verify.

But what else can you expect of an organization created as a dual organization to labor unions, by proprietors and managers and financed by them and of which a great number of them are members and direct Geneva affairs.

After such a mass of facts of doings of the Geneva Association I do not understand how Mr. Sharp interprets solidarity as a slogan used by a Geneva Association.

Strange it is indeed that Mr. Sharp, who I suppose is an active Geneva member, never heard of any of these few facts mentioned above, but I suppose like many others, Mr. Sharp has never studied Genevaism at its birthplace in Europe.

PAUL K. BENNET,
Member of Local 209.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, December 19, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Permit me to express my views through the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER, in reference to the question of Segregation of this International Union. I have read with much interest the question discussed in the past few issues of the MIXER AND SERVER. I have also read the subject matter discussed in the Culinary Craft, a Journal published by Local 30, San Francisco, Cal. While my vote is on record in the Toledo convention as having voted for segregation, I did so at that time under instructions of my local who at that time thought that this would be to the best interests of the International Union, however, at the following convention I was instructed to vote and oppose such action if such became necessary. Glad to say, however, that the question of segregation was never since the Toledo convention introduced in any of the succeeding conventions.

My personal views on this question is known to many delegates to the past conventions as opposed to the question for various reasons, a few of which I shall discuss: First, I can see no real reason for wanting to destroy the present International Union. It has grown in the past fifteen years in proportion more than the majority Internationals of other crafts; it has fulfilled its obligation to its members in every sense of the word; it has organized thousands of men and women in the catering industry, thereby making life happier to untold thousands in the labor field; it has developed a higher craft skill; it has materially assisted in the battle against antagonistic legislation in order that we might follow our chosen vocation, and last but not least it has paid out thousands of dollars to the widows and orphans of members of this International. Then why segregate? To please whom and what?

In some of the arguments made by those in favor of segregation they assert that their main reason for wanting to segregate was because the workers in the culinary crafts were not being organized as they should be. Having been a member of the G. E. B. for the past two years I am in a position to know what the International has done along this line, in fact throughout the entire South our organizers have devoted their time principally to organize the culinary crafts. I hear of the organizers in other sections of the country doing all in their power to organize culinary locals. It is true that bartenders' locals are easier to organize, but why not organize them when an organizer is in a locality where such is possible. A house divided against itself can never stand and our International divided would not in my opinion be of interest to either craft. We are too closely allied to be apart and the catering industry rightfully belongs together. Our interests are identical, and we should share each other's burden. I respect the opinion of those that honestly believe that segregation would be of benefit, but they should be fair with those that differ from their opinion. I believe that the greatest calamity that could befall our International Union would be to segregate, and those in favor of this move have not been able to convince me that such would be of interest to either craft.

It has taken years of hard, relentless work to bring our International Union to the position it occupies today in the labor field, and to those that have enlisted under the banner of the Segregationists let us say, you have been led astray, come back to the fold and boost for one great International Union.

With New Year's greetings,

Fraternally yours,

PAUL STEFFLER.
Seventh Vice-President.

DES MOINES, IOWA, December 24, 1914.

MR. EDITOR—I am a waiter. "Broke in" in 1891, joined Local 23 in 1898, have worked in "Stew Joints," have "Slung Beer," been a "servant" in clubs and "served" in first-class hotels. I represented my local at the Louisville convention first and have been in attendance at every convention of our International Union since. Have served as an organizer and have been a member of the General Executive Board for several years. Have I qualified? Yes? All right.

I have watched the rise of the department store tea room, the drug store luncheonette and the cafeteria, and the corresponding fall of the waiter and prophesy that ere many years roll by the field for waiters will be restricted to clubs, high-class cafes and hotels. Have the waiters in such establishments enrolled under our banner in the past? No. Why? Because the "tip system" imported and encouraged by the hotel interests, gave them compensation in excess of any scale of wages we could enforce. Conditions? Oh! Well! of course conditions are bad but the "pickings" are good and we can stand the rotten deal we get from the boss.

Have we tried to organize them? You bet we have and they have promptly told us: "You could never enforce a scale of wages in the house where I work for the "prop" expects the guests to take care of his pay-roll and besides I won't mix with that bunch of 'Stew Peddlers' and 'Beer Slingers' you've got in that local of yours." Out of such material have sprung associations and where our locals of good honest struggling workmen and women have become strong enough, they are willing to let our organization help them, through unholy alliances but their "first love" still remains with the subsidized association. Thousands of waiters have been enrolled under our banner only to lapse and these associations have been one of the principal causes of disorganization. Statistics are not available but my experience leads me to believe that ninety per cent of waiters in clubs and associations have at one time or other been members of our International.

We are now told by the editors of Culinary Craft that we have been "barking up the wrong tree," that we have not been going about it right. They even intimate that the management of the International is incompetent. Had the present organization been in their hands, things would have been different. Every trick known to "natural born insurgents" has been used to throw discredit on the present management of this International Union. They say we have failed and add as a small detail, that the organization as a whole is wrong. We have not done our duty; could not do our duty for the whole plan of organization is wrong, but listen. Eureka! they found the solution—SEGREGATION. That will solve the whole problem. But will it? Have they shown how they are going to organize these thousands of club and association waiters? They confess to an alliance with them and this is open violation of Section 24 of our laws. Are law-breakers good people to tie to? What particular inducement will they offer to the culinary workers of this country that has not already been offered by the present organization?

In a recent article in the Culinary Craft an argument is offered to the effect that cooks and waiters naturally should be organized under one head on account of the close relation one bears to the other, both working for the same proprietor in the same establishment, but that the bartender belongs to quite another class and should be in an organization by himself. They convict themselves. Show me any combination of crafts more closely related than are the bartenders and waiters. If their argument will hold water then it is the cook who should desire an International by himself for he is farther away from the waiter than is the bartender.

The fact of the whole matter is, that the cook, the bartender, the waitress and the waiter all work at the same calling for the same man in the same building and barring the waitress have nearly all worked at one or all of the different callings named, at some time in their lives. They are just exactly what the Culinary Craft calls them—"Conglomerants." They are a conglomerant whole so closely allied in their calling that the only improvement I have to offer is that we should also have the bakers and butchers under our wing. "Overhead expenses" should be considered. It takes too much money now, to oil the machinery of labor organizations. What improvement would we gain by two or three separate Internationals, each with an "overhead expense" of its own. Let's get closer together still and eliminate this cumbersome "overhead expense."

This article is written by a waiter and from a waiter's standpoint, but those who know me, know that I am a strong International man and have fought with equal energy for the cook, bartender, waitress and waiter and should my fondest dream come true it would be something like this: OUR INTERNATIONAL protecting waiters working under decent conditions for good wages, proud of their calling, spurning gratuities and carving for themselves a place alongside of skilled craftsmen who do not have to offer an excuse for their calling; cooks, "the noblest handiwork of God," working in sanitary kitchens, short hours and happy in good work well done; waitresses proud of their independence and calling and unashamed to look any man in the eye, and bartenders working alongside, dispensing that sunshine that comes from a contented heart. Yes and I would like to see the butcher and baker in our International too, and then it would sure be some dream.

Every opportunity to the unorganized is open now, how can Segregation accomplish more than has been done? CONGLOMERATE: remove overhead expense, continue education and success will eventually crown our efforts.

C. W. McCURDY,
Fourth Vice-President.

WHEN? WHERE? WHY?

To the Officers and Members of All Affiliated Locals:

SISTERS AND BROTHERS—Having read quite a few articles from the pen of Brother Jere L. Sullivan in our official journal, the MIXER AND SERVER, it has occurred to my mind, probably some of the members might become imbued with the idea that his articles upon that "spook" Segregation, were unsupported by members of the General Executive Board. As none of that body has as yet been heard from upon that subject—Segregation—permit me at this time to offer just a few lines as a member of the G. E. B., and as one of the rank and file as well.

I thought that the subject matter of segregation was dead, buried and forgotten, and in fact would still carry that impression, being justified in doing so after hearing from the general membership.

Why do those who are seemingly clamoring for Segregation want it?

They have not advanced one positive fact or argument whereby such would benefit any of our allied crafts, and surely not the culinary workers which end of the trade they are presumably engaged in.

If it is a fact that the alleged dyed-in-the-wool Segregationists mean what they say and believe in it; why so secretive with plans; why not advance something which the membership can understand; why not give them something to mull over?

What was the object of establishing a journal? Was it to reach all or only a selected few? If the reasons are so strong for segregation why conceal them? Why not come out in the open and let the men and women who are the final court get wise to what you have to present.

Our International has had this subject up for discussion at several conventions and it was rejected often enough to satisfy almost any one.

Is it necessary to further discuss it, to take up time and divert the membership from truly important things.

Advocates of segregation emphatically declare that segregation will take place at San Francisco during June, 1915. From whom do they derive authority to so declare, are they the possessors of evidence which would convince the ordinary member that they know whereof they speak?

Making claims is an easy and pleasing task to some, probably the segregationists are having enjoyment easily secured now, but how about the convention's judgment, is that also cut and dried?

To assume that our membership is anxious to follow in the footsteps of other allied crafts' disputes, to invite strife and discord, to seek for trouble in addition to what already confronts them, is to accuse our general membership of weak mindedness. They have had a sufficiency of other labor organizations fighting, they have heard the accusations one against the other, and that sort of thing does not appeal to them; at least it does not secure favor from those who know what has transpired.

Craft jurisdiction troubles are serious enough as it is without seeking to accentuate them by adding to the numbers engaged in that folly.

Where the wave of fanaticism that is now and has been sweeping the country will end, none of us can foretell. Shall we make our burden heavier by helping the fanatics, or shall we get closer and do our best to overcome the opposition?

Words molded into pretty meaningless sentences may attract the idle and win support from those who fail to think; conditions in this great land compel thought in order to combat fanaticism, the unthinking don't care, but they will suffer quite as heavily as the thoughtful worker.

Our members after a careful study of conditions and an understanding of what our International Union has succeeded in doing, are not likely to complain for something to retard their progress and make less the benefits for the future. If they seek to decrease their prestige and usefulness by division such as segregationists desire, they block the road wherein real success awaits.

What is to become of our financial system and the accumulations set aside for benefits? Can these be disposed of by simple motion or resolution of a small body of representatives? Are you acquainted with any plan or program submitted by segregation advocates which will answer that query?

I take it that the membership of our International Union desire to go ahead and win support by reasonable activity and sensible plans; if in such a conclusion I am anywhere near correct, then the advocates of segregation will get a short, swift jolt during the week of June 14, 1915. If, on the other hand, we are tired of reaping a fair amount of success, why we will join the divisionists and jar our organization out of existence and substitute what? Have the lessons taught by the electrical workers' dispute been forgotten so quickly? There have been others quite as serious and few of them quit until strife had exhausted their funds and their future was dismal enough to satisfy the worst enemy of unionism.

Where will our International Union be after the San Francisco convention? In my judgment it will be doing business at the old stand with all of the symptoms of belly-ache and other disorders eradicated.

I am now and always have been opposed to a division of our allied crafts into separate International Unions, those who call themselves segregationists can have that privilege, but this much I know and am confident of, that I know I don't want any of it in mine.

W. H. FOSTER,
Third Vice-President.

SEGREGATION.

By E. D. SKINNER.

Several months ago a flood of "Segregation" literature was poured down upon my unoffending head. Since then I have been putting in my spare time trying to digest the whole business. I have read all their arguments carefully, I have read the MIXER AND SERVER and I have approached the whole subject, in the light of some personal knowledge of the most of our country, for the single purpose of determining what is for the best good of the workers concerned.

I know the "Segregation" crowd to be a "live bunch," and they show that they have some real criticisms to make and that they have some good writers in their outfit, but I cannot avoid the suspicion that somebody has an ax to grind. "Somebody" would like to be the international head of an international labor organization or I miss my guess. While this may be no crime, still it is a long ways from a good reason for tearing the entire fabric of our organization to pieces. In other words, they would suit me better if they would be satisfied with reforming the organization that we now have without attempting to "reform" it out of existence. One strong union looks better to me than two weak ones.

While some of their criticisms are the real thing, still I fail to find any that necessitates the disruption of our present international. Their criticism of our failure to effectively handle the "clubs" and "associations" appears to hit the mark, but they fail to tell us why we cannot change our laws so as to create a special classified membership to solve the special problems of this special class of culinary workers.

Their howl about there being no culinary local in Cincinnati makes a noise entirely out of proportion to its size. If they would tackle the job of organizing a culinary local in Cincinnati perhaps they would discover the difference between that place and San Francisco. I have been in both places and know something about the matter.

The above also applies to their complaint that the bartenders are being favored in our organization work. I have taken the trouble to check up the reports of our International organizers for several months back and find that, in the aggregate, they have devoted considerable more effort to the organization of the culinary workers than they have to that of the bartenders. If they would get out and work in the general field for awhile perhaps they would learn that there is a difference between organizing the culinary workers and turning the same trick with the bartenders. In fact, there are a number of things they might learn with benefit to themselves, but this one fact outweighs any argument and all arguments they have produced for segregation. The two crafts are closely allied in many of their working conditions and can both materially benefit the other in one International organization. But if we are separated, who is going to hold the culinary workers together? "Uncle" Jere hits hard when he calls attention to the failure of the "national" culinary union already in existence.

The perfection of their local organization in San Francisco is indisputable and their success in fighting prohibition in California deserves all praise. I believe they have done their share and would not rob them of the glory, but without a perfectly organized backing, how much would they have accomplished all alone by themselves? California has learned one lesson and learned it well. All unions, strictly organized and working harmoniously, may be welded together into a solid force that can rule the earth. Here again there is a difference between doing things in California and trying to do the same thing in the East.

Finally one fact weighs heavily with me. When our present secretary-treasurer tackled this job our International had one foot in the grave with the other slipping fast. Our reversal of form after he took hold was one of the startling events in union labor history, and our progress since that time has been steady and consistent. Others may be found with greater abilities for beautiful flights of poetic fancies, but he has delivered the goods and I feel timid about trying experiments.

OVERCOMING PREJUDICE AND MAKING CONVERTS.

Some years ago one of our boys wrote, asking us to try and help him and his colleagues out of a pocket which they had gotten into. The case, as we recall it, was a certain craftsman—a high-class workman—who, for some reason or other, did not think very well of unions generally, and had no special love for one composed of men working at his own trade.

It was suggested that, at the next meeting, and beginning alphabetically, the president should appoint seven members, one for each day of the week, they to stand instructed to make a visit at the most opportune time, get into casual conversation with the non-member, and without using up much of his time—a few moments at most—say, on leaving him or during the conversation, using his name of course: "I sure would like to have the privilege of bringing up your application to our union and having you as an active member." As the local in question did not meet but twice a month, the brother who made a Monday call would repeat, thus getting to the non-member twice in fourteen days, and the other six "visitors" would do likewise, making fourteen requests during the fortnight. If the non-member managed to resist the importunities of these seven brothers, another batch of seven were to be appointed, and that line of effort persisted until the non-member surrendered.

The plan was tried, and at the outset things looked anything but encouraging, for the non-member would either decline or be drawn into conversation or else replied curtly that he never intended to affiliate with any union, no matter what its purpose. Three sets of committeemen or visitors had worked on this one man without success, and the fourth installment was appointed, and the second day afterwards the non-member woke up to the fact that he was the center around which was revolving a rather persistent effort to secure him as a member. Turning to the last visiting committeeman he inquired if it were possible to see him that evening. Receiving an affirmative reply, he made an appointment. Meeting the committeeman that evening, he dug right into the subject of the union and inquired how many members the local carried on its roster. He was advised that every craftsman in the town, sixty-four in number, were members, and that if he were to put in an application they could claim to be 100 per cent organized.

"I suppose," said the non-member, "that it is the intention of the union to keep up this daily visiting until I succumb."

"Yes; that is about the size of things," replied the committeeman.

"How does it happen that none of you men have approached my employer and urged him to discharge me and put a union member in my place? Surely your union, with the support of the labor unions, could make it rather warm for both of us if we refused to accede to such a request."

"We have considered such a step, but, my friend, we have a real object in our efforts to secure you as a member. In fact, our aim is to organize all of the men working at the trade, and we would fail of our mission if we allowed you to get away without making use of every legitimate persuasive method in order to induce you to become one of us. We might use coercive tactics and force you into the organization, but what would be your feelings after we succeeded? You would feel aggrieved; you would not be in accord with us nor our general aims: you might never be required to make a choice between doing what we asked and what you were inclined to do, but if the test came, and you were what we call a forced member, more than likely you would, to use a common expression, fail to make good as a union member, not because you thought the principle involved was contrary to your views, but to get even with what you probably concluded was an invasion of your rights. We want you as a member, and will do any reasonable thing to convince you of our sincerity. We desire that you shall come to us feeling kindly toward us and our union, for we know that if you come in of your free will and on our invitation you will feel like a member of our family and genuinely pleased with your decision, as well as the closer acquaintanceship of our boys."

The result of that effort, as set forth briefly, was making a convert and overcoming a prejudice of long standing. Several months later that convert moved to another city, and in writing back to his local union said:

"I have had many experiences in my career, but one of the most pleasant occurred to me within two days of my arrival in this city. I went, as you suggested, to visit the secretary and deposit my traveling card. He gave me a very cordial greeting and inquired whether I was ready to accept employment in the event of a call coming in for a man. Really I did not want to begin working right away, for I figured on having a few weeks' vacation and rest, but I replied to the query that I was ready to start to work just as soon as an opening occurred. The following morning my sister called me to the telephone, saying: 'Who in the world are you acquainted with in this city.' Taking up the receiver I quickly recognized the voice of the gentlemanly secretary of the union asking me to call on him in an hour; that he had an opening for me. I said nothing about my appointment to my folks, but went to the place where the secretary was employed, and he forthwith put me in communication with the employer who wanted a man. I advised the employer that I was an absolute stranger, and that if he desired references it would be necessary for me to write for them. He quickly disposed of my uncertainty by saying: 'You are a member of the union, and that is good enough reference and recommendation for me. Come on up and go to work. At that juncture the secretary pulled out an outfit and offered to loan it to me until I could get my own. With all of this crowding itself into a very few moments, I still had time to recall what a real boor I must have been in the days when I lived in the old town and persisted in holding aloof from the union. Really, brothers, felt ashamed of myself, and I promised myself to do penance so as to clean up that blotch on my record, and my penalty is going to consist of offering my services at any and all times to reach just such blockheads as I must have been for years, and use every bit of patience and persuasion to convert them to the cause which prompts such fraternalism."

At another time a similar plan as described in the forepart of this screed was put in operation, and added thereto was the following. Inside of other local unions there are numberless men who willingly accept suggestions and act on them. These members patronize establishments where our men and women are employed. They are known to be craftsmen connected with the metal or building trades, or for that matter, any one of the hundred trades organized. They were asked to suggest to those who served them with food or drink to consider the advisability of affiliating with the union of their craft. It is surprising how many other trades unionists there are who are willing to put in a boost for other unions, and who really do it with finer grace than when boosting for their own craft organizations. And it is also passing strange that our crafts are more susceptible to reason and urgings when an outsider endeavors to convert them to trades unionism. Just why this is partially so is one of those problems which is rather difficult to solve.

In every town or city there are forces which can be set to work for the benefit of our crafts. All we need to do is to look for them and utilize them. But lest we make the mistake which some have made, refrain from asking other workers to do something for you and your union unless you are equally willing to reciprocate. Seeking for co-operation and getting it, and then rewarding those who have aided you in creating a good, strong local union by denying to them similar effort for their union or for the products which bear the label of their craft, is mighty close to ingratitude which none of us care to be accused of.

It is, indeed, a poor union which does not possess one or several hardworkers—members who allow no opportunity to get by without trying to secure additions to the membership roster—but even these members become discouraged when they discover that the great majority of the members are indifferent. When you find yourself confronted with such conditions don't surrender; make up your mind that the spirit of that old Biblical saying, "That there is more joy in Heaven over the return of a sinner," etc., is going to tinge your efforts. Wade in and test your ability as an "inducer," for if you are successful in bringing to wakefulness the lagging, indifferent members of your union, the satisfaction of such accomplishment is very sweet.

A man must be a pretty poor "stick" if he can't inspire confidence in the breast of another man. Let that thought sink in deep when you feel inclined to get on the "Oh-what's-the-use Wagon." Carrying even a light load of discernment will enable you to see and take advantage of many an opportunity to put in a word here and there for the trade union movement, and every time you boost the other fellow's union you are helping to make the general movement that much stronger. Some men are so constituted that the easy things are slighted. They want hard, difficult problems to handle, and it is to that very fact we attribute much of the success of many locals which were formerly on the down grade and are now live, aggressive, worth-while unions.

We have just begun the new year. There are many events to occur during the interval before you can salute your friends and acquaintances with another Happy New Year. If you are in accord with the desires and wishes of most of our members, you will show a willingness to decrease the number of non-unionists and increase the number of trades unionists. Our International made a very fair record during the year just closed, but not by any means as fine headway from a numerical standpoint as could have been achieved. We lacked that steady, insistent pull and boost. We did not go after non-members with a determination to stick on the trail until they were inside and converted. With over Sixty Thousand men and women giving a few moments' time to obliterating the prejudices which non-members possess, and converting such to active members of our organization, we ought to walk into our general convention, June, 1915, showing an increase of substantial proportions. In fact, produce such a record as has not been made in recent years.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

WHAT WILL IT COST?

That is one of the real problems for local unions which have in mind the election and sending of one or more delegates to the coming convention at San Francisco, Cal., beginning June 14, 1915.

In order that our members may get a pretty good idea of the probable cost, the following definite information may be helpful. This information is gleaned from official circulars issued by the Trans-Continental Passenger Association.

As a basis for locals situated in the Middle and Eastern States the rate from Chicago to San Francisco and return is $62.50. That means by what is known as direct routes. The dates of sale for securing such rate is March 1, 1915, to November 30, 1915, inclusive. The time limit is three months from date of sale. It therefore follows that if one were to purchase a ticket on June 1 the ticket would be good until the last day of August.

A generous measure of stopovers is permitted either going or coming, but they must be taken advantage of within the final limit of the ticket; that is to say, within the ninety days.

The fare from St. Paul and Minneapolis, by direct route, will cost $63.85.

The fare from Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, Colo., will be $45.

The fare from Memphis, Tenn., will be $57.50, and the same for the trip to and from St. Louis, Mo.

The fare from Salt Lake City, Utah, will be $35.

The fare from Dallas, Ft. Worth or Houston, Tex., will be $52.50.

The fare from New Orleans will be $57.50.

The fare from Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can., will be $80.60.

From Missouri River Gateways the fare will be $50.

Validation of tickets at destination is imperative.

The Eastern and Trunk Lines Passenger Associations have not supplied us with information relative to reduced fares, but it is a fair conclusion to reach that proportionately reduced rates as those based on the rates herein quoted will be offered.

Intermediate rates and conditions will reconcile with the rates as offered.

Unions situated in territory not coming under the rates as herein presented can obtain definite information from their local ticket or passenger agents. It is suggested that such information be secured in order that our unions may be in a position to know positively what amount shall be set aside to care for sending delegates.

A pretty good idea of the amount saved under the proffered rates for the time mentioned can be obtained from the fact that the writer secured a ticket, Cincinnati to San Francisco and return, which included all the stops made on the trip which was described in the November, December, 1913, and January, 1914, numbers of the Mixer and Server, including San Diego, but excluding side trip to Great Falls and Helena, Mont., for $141.25. A similar trip under the reduced rates as offered by the railways for 1915 could be made for $80 or $90. That is to say, for transportation alone. Sleeping car rates west of Chicago depend on whether one prefers standard or tourist service.

As to hotels and rates, there is little doubt but what the Convention Arrangements Committee of our San Francisco unions will forward for publication at an early date all the information which may be required by our delegates and visitors who propose to visit San Francisco during the week of the convention.

Local unions are urged to direct one of their officers to visit the local passenger agents of their respective cities and secure information in connection with rates and stopover privileges going and coming from San Francisco.

Reservations for sleeping car accommodations should be made in ample time to prevent disappointment. It is barely possible that such reservations can be made several weeks in advance. There is likely to be considerable travel toward the Pacific Coast States during the year 1915. Thousands who formerly made annual trips to Europe will find that privilege denied them on account of the war, hence the suggestion relative to making reservations in advance seems appropriate.

REMARKABLE ALLEGORY WRITTEN OVER THREE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

In a publication called Omens of the Great War the following remarkable allegory, written by Brother Johannes three hundred years ago, appears. In deciphering the allegory it must be remembered that France is represented by a Cock;

England by a Leopard;
Russia by a White Eagle;
Germany by a Black Eagle; and Austria by the "other Eagle;"

while the Lamb stands for justice, mercy and truth.

"Toward the year 2000 the Antichrist will manifest himself. His army will surpass in numbers all that can be imagined.

"There will be Christians among the legions and there will be Mahometans and savage soldiers among the defenders of the Lamb.

"For the first time the Lamb will be all red. There will not be a single spot in the Christian world that will not be red, and red will be the Heavens, the Earth, the Waters and even the Air, for blood will flow in the domains of the four elements at once.

"The Black Eagle will throw himself on the Cock, who will lose many feathers, but will strike back heroically with his spurs. He soon would be crushed were it not for the help of the Leopard and his claws.

"The Black Eagle will come from the country of Luther, will surprise the Cock from another side and will invade the country of the Cock up to the middle of it.

"The White Eagle, coming from the North, will surprise the Black Eagle and the 'other eagle' and will invade the country of the Antichrist from one end to another.

"The Black Eagle will see himself forced to liberate the Cock in order to fight the White Eagle, and the Cock will pursue the Black Eagle into the country of the Antichrist to help the White Eagle.

"The battles fought up to then will be as nothing compared to those which will take place in the country of Luther, for the seven Angels will together pour in the fire of their censers on the impious Earth, which signifies that the Lamb will order the extermination of the race of Antichrist.

"When the Beast sees that he is lost he will become furious, and for many months the beak of the White Eagle, the claws of the Leopard and the spurs of the Cock will furiously strike at him.

"They will cross rivers over the bodies of the slain, and these, in places, will change the course of the waters. They will bury only the men of noble families, the leading commandants and the Princes, because to the carnage made by the armies will be joined the wholesale death of those who will die of hunger or the pest.

"The Antichrist will ask many times for peace, but the seven Angels who walk in front of the three Animals defending the Lamb have declared that victory will only be granted on the condition that the Antichrist be crushed like straw on the barn floor.

"The executors of the justice of the Lamb can not stop fighting as long as the Antichrist possesses soldiers to fight against them.

"That which makes the decree of the Lamb so implacable is that the Antichrist has pretended to be a follower of Christ and to act in His Name, and if he does not perish, the fruit of the Redeemer would be lost and the doors of Hades would prevail against the Savior.

"The fight which will take place where the Antichrist forges his arms will not be in any way a human fight.

[This may have reference to Essen, where the Krupp works are, and many authorities believe that the decisive battle may take place in Westphalia.]

"The three Animals defending the Lamb will exterminate the last army of the Antichrist, but they will be forced to erect on the battlefield a pyre as large as a city, for the bodies of the dead will change the aspect of the countryside, as there will be mounds of the slain.

"The Antichrist will lose his crown and will be in solitude and madness. His empire will be divided into twenty-two states, but none of them will any longer possess fortresses, armies or vessels.

[Curiously enough, this number coincides with the number of German states.]

"The White Eagle, by the order of St. Michael, will drive the Crescent from Europe and will install himself at Constantinople. Then will begin an era of peace and prosperity for the earth and there will be no more wars, each nation being governed according to its desires and living according to the rules of justice.

"There will no longer be Lutherans or Schismatics. The Lamb will reign and the supreme happiness of humanity will begin. Happy will be those who, escaping the perils of that period, will be able to enjoy the fruit of the reign of the Spirit and of the purging of Humanity, which can only come after the defeat of the Antichrist."—New York Herald.

ALONG THE FIRING LINE

ACTIVITY OF ANTIS IN MONTANA.

It is also a recognized fact that the most corrupt influence in the public life of today is the power of the saloon in politics. The Progressive party stands for a rigid regulation of the liquor traffic. It is probable that bills will be introduced for the elimination of the saloon in the rural districts, and of restricting each to a certain percentage of the population in the cities. And there is a current report that a bill may be presented for the purpose of submitting the question of prohibition to a referendum vote on the same lines as was done in Washington at the last general election. Among other things to be legislated upon will be the question of reduced railroad rates, the recall of all elected officials, and an investigation of the affairs in the state land office.

John Barleycorn is beginning to mobilize his forces in the state of Washington. John is one of the kings that sits upon a somewhat wobbly throne. It is even beginning to look blue for His Hilarious Highness in the state of Montana.

If the new plan of regulating the saloons of the state to one for each thousand of the population goes into effect, Butte will not have any more "poor men's clubs" than Helena has now; and Helena will have about as many as Clancy.

The above clippings were taken from the Montana Progressire, the official Bull Moose paper for Montana. The intention of such editorials is obvious, the party ran in fourth place last fall in the election returns and the most of us thought that politically they were a dead one, but they have started out on a new program. Every issue of the paper is playing the prohibition issue in the editorial columns, while the other papers of the state may make reference to some speaker still to date they have refrained from making any editorial comment on the question. With the Bull Moose party it is different, they wish to get in power, and about the only chance they have left is by playing up the prohibition propaganda to the newly enfranchised voters of the state, that is, the women.

Already they are distributing buttons all over the state with the inscription of Prohibition 1916. Who is responsible for the distribution no one seems to know as yet. They are using women for the work and the women I have talked to do not seem to know who is really responsible either for the expense or the distribution of the buttons.

CINCINNATI TIMES - STAR REFUTES STATEMENTS OF ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SPEAKERS.

Various heads of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League are traveling through the State, speaking in churches in different towns and cities, in an effort to collect funds for a State-wide campaign for 1915.

A spectacular climax to their "Vaudeville Act" is the statement that at the recent election, revolvers were flourished at the polls in Cincinnati to scare citizens into voting wet.

This is such an obvious untruth that it should need no explanation. The impossibility of such acts is sufficient to guarantee the falseness of the statement.

The Cincinnati Times-Star is not partisan to the wet interests. The following statement which appeared unsolicited in the regular issue election night, November 3, was not elicited by any particular friendship for the liberals, but was simply a fair statement of facts brought out by a true and deserved admiration of the manner in which the wet element did their work at the polls.

Any further explanation of the dry speaker's statements would be an insult to the intelligence of the citizens of Ohio:

"WET" WORKERS TOOK NO CHANCES ON VOTERS.

WENT TO SUBURBS NIGHT BEFORE TO BE ON HAND EARLY.

The perfect organization of the "wets" at the voting places was evident at the opening of the polls Tuesday morning. Each voting place had a worker guarding every approach to the voting place, just outside the "dead line" and not a voter escaped a personal appeal. In addition a man with an automobile made rounds of the various voting places within his district to see that the workers were "on the job" and understood their duties. In the extreme outlying districts of the city and county these workers arrived Monday evening and remained over night, so as to take no chances of not being at the voting places on time for the first voter. It was noticeable that these workers were not of the kind so familiar in the days of "practical politics" of several years ago, but were clear up to the present standard of present day workers at the polls—well dressed, courteous and tactful. Many of them had the appearance of being traveling men or office employees.

THE USE OF ALCOHOL ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

The article below appeared in a late issue of The Lancet, published in London.

The Lancet is recognized as the leading medical journal of England.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LANCET:

Sir—The great wave of temperance which has swept over civilized peoples in recent years has gained much of its impetus from the efforts of many distinguished members of our own profession. It is, therefore, with great diffidence that I venture to raise the above question in your columns. Nor do I wish for a moment to advocate any esential modification in the non-alcoholic diet of our army in the field, however anxious I may be to prove my own thesis that the value of alcohol in the present campaign should not be under-estimated.

I will endeavor to put my points as concisely as possible. One of the arguments against the use of alcohol even medicinally, often quoted by scientific temperance lecturers, is the statement that alcohol inhibits phagocytosis, thereby impairing the first line of defense against the infections. I have never discovered the experimental evidence upon which this statement is made, and about five years ago I did some research work on my own account to ascertain its accuracy or otherwise. The Lancet, of November 5, 1910, published a research which I had made upon the influence of quinine and morphia on phagocytosis, and it was on the same lines that I endeavored to investigate the influence of alcohol on the same process. My researches, though they entailed much intricate and laborious microscopic work, did not appear to me of sufficient importance to publish until I had confirmed my early conclusions by many repetitions of the experiments, nor was I anxious to enter the lists against the champions of total abstinence until I had made my weapons more effective. The experiments, so far as they went, showed clearly that large doses of alcohol (e. g., the equivalent of 10 oz. for an adult of 10 st.) destroyed the phagocytic action of the blood upon all the common pathogenic bacteria used in my experiments (pneumococci, B. coli streptococci, and B. influenzae), but that moderate doses (2 oz.) distinctly increased phagocytic action against these organisms. This confirmed conclusions which I had come to in clinical observations spread over twenty years of active practice, and I have met many able practitioners who have agreed with me on this point.

Last year, at the International Congress of Medicine, a paper was contributed to the section of Bacteriology and Immunity by Professor Besredka, of the Pasteur Institute, on the subject of anaphylaxis. One series of his experiments quoted therein showed how anaphylaxis could be brought about in test animals. They received an injection of some foreign proteid, and on a subsequent date had become so sensitive to this that a second injection produced rapidly fatal results. Another series of experiments was made in which the test animals were divided into two sets; all received the same initial dose of proteid, and all received the same lethal dose on the day of greatest sensitiveness, but one-half—the controlled animals—during the interval had been given a certain amount of alcohol. All the teetotal animals died and all the alcoholics survived. It was evident that the alcohol had in some fashion neutralized the poison, stimulated the animal's blood to develop an anti-toxin, or narcotized the nervous system so that the higher centers were impervious for a time, and the virulence of the poison abated before the protective effect of the alcohol had passed away.

It is conceivable that, given an injury—say, an infected wound—followed by a prolonged exposure to cold or damp, and also in many diseases, conditions are met with closely analogous to this experimental anaphylaxis. Many apparently healthy people are unwitting carriers of pathogenic bacteria, such as various types of influenza, bacilli, pneumococci, the large family of streptococci, and the B. coli group. These only need some depressing factor in the shape of danger, hunger, damp and cold to lose their normal resistance to the germs and fall an easy prey to acute infections which may assume the form of influenzal fever, rheumatism, pneumonia, bronchitis, or septicæmia. When numbers are herded together severe epidemics may easily arise from such a focus, and a virus which has suddenly taken on a greater degree of virulence spreads very rapidly. I have not the slightest doubt that in the first stages of most of this group of cases moderate doses of alcohol are valuable in aiding the natural resistance of blood and tissues. It is too late to be of any service when the patient's tissues are already infiltrated with excess of toxin, and I believe that it is the futile attempts to save dying men by the administration of alcohol which have led so many able observers to say that alcohol is useless as a medicine.

I suggest that if there were under the control of company officers a supply of alcohol which could be served out at their discretion, very much in the same way that our naval officers ordered tots of Jamaica rum to the spent sailors in the days of Nelson, there would not be much fear of abuse. It would be distinctly understood that it was an emergency ration, and since the dose need not exceed 1½ oz. of alcohol (good London gin, Scotch whiskey, Jamaica rum, or good cognac is available) it would not form a very bulky addition to the ammunition columns. Our heroic troops are not likely to be brutalized by this "prophylactic" use of alcohol, and if it prevented the death of only one in every one hundred of them it would be well worth the cost and trouble of supply. If I have not misread Mercier's delectable writings upon alcohol and insanity, it is not the use of alcohol which drives men mad, but the insane man who makes insane use of it.

I am, sir, yours faithfully,
H. LYON SMITH.

ALCOHOL AND LONGEVITY.

Many Long-Lived Men Who Were Moderate Drinkers.

In view of the recent statement made by an insurance actuary before the Association of Life Insurance Presidents relative to the high mortality among persons making free use of alcoholic beverages the results of an investigation made by the British License Trade Organization are interesting.

This organization recently made inquiries into the habits of persons over 80 years of age whose deaths were reported in the press, or to whom, if living, public reference was made. On September 20, 1913, 1,408 cases had been recorded; 595 from 80 to 85 years of age, 346 from 85 to 90, 260 from 90 to 95, 87 from 95 to 100, and 120 from 100 and upward. Since that time 200 cases have been added, every one of them reporting the use of alcoholic beverages in moderation, with beer the prevailing drink.

The United Kingdom Alliance, formed more than 50 years ago, "for the total and immediate suppression of the liquor traffic," was greatly perturbed at the result of this investigation. Through its official organ, the Alliance News, it called upon its friends to exert themselves to discover all the instances possible of total abstainers who lived to be 90 years and upward. The result was far from gratifying to the prohibitionists. After a six weeks' investigation made by thousands of the total extremists, scattered over the whole of Great Britain, but five such cases were discovered.

It is a matter of history that very few really great men were total abstainers. Men of character and ability, like Gladstone, Asquith and Salisbury; giants of intellect like Carlyle, Macaulay, Tennyson, Bismarck, Milton, Shakespeare, Luther, Bunyan, Wellington, Pitt, Socrates, Napoleon, Darwin, Dickens and a host of others, were temperate, but not total abstainers.—New York Sun.

WRY THOUGHTS ON RYE TO GOVERNOR RYE OF GOOD BOURBON STATE FROM SECRETARY BRYAN.

The "wets" and "drys" of politics will no doubt be interested to read a letter written by the Secretary of State to Governor-elect Thomas C. Rye, of Tennessee. It says that the liquor element must be driven out of the Democratic party. Here is the letter:

"MY DEAR GOVERNOR—I wired in answer to your telegram, but must write again since learning of your majority. It was so large that my trip was shown to have been unnecessary, but I am glad to have come—glad to have had a chance of becoming acquainted with you.

"You have a great opportunity to unite the party, make the State permanently Democratic. Such an opportunity comes to but few. If I can be of service to you, call on me.

"You will note that four more States went dry, and two more went for woman's suffrage. The taking of the liquor side defeated us in Colorado and Ohio, and a whiskey Democrat defeated us in Kansas, because we did not take the wet side.

"The liquor element must be driven out of the Democratic party. It disgraces us when it is with us, and betrays us whenever it can serve its ends by doing so.

"We did well in the nation, gained three in the Senate, and have thirty-one in the House. This would look big but for the fact that we have a larger majority in the present Congress. But this larger majority is due to a division in the Republican party, now almost healed.

W. J. BRYAN.

"NATIONAL PROHIBITION WOULD DESTROY LOCAL GOVERNMENT"

Former President Taft Declares That National Prohibition Would Result in a Great Political Machine.

Boston, Dec. 29 (Associated Press Dispatch)—Speaking before the Bar Association last night, former President William H. Taft discussed national prohibition, during which he said: "It would revolutionize the National Government. It would put on the shoulders of the Government the duty of sweeping the doorsteps of every home in the land. If national prohibition legislation is passed, local government would be destroyed. And if you destroy local government, you destroy one of the things which go to make for a healthy condition of the National Government. National prohibition is non-enforceable; it is a confession on the part of State governments of inability to control and regulate their own especial business and duty; if the matter were placed under Federal control it would result in creation of a machinery of Government officials large enough to nominate and President, and would offer too great an opportunity to persons seeking to perpetuate their power in Washington."—Times-Star, Dec. 29, 1914.

CATHOLIC BISHOP WILL BRING SUIT.

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 5.—Bishop Henry Granjon, head of the Catholic Diocese of Arizona and New Mexico, has engaged attorneys to contest the validity of the State prohibition law. The contest, it is stated, will be instituted in the name of Rev. Thomas Connolly, pastor of All Saints Church in this city, and will be based on the contention that the prohibition measure is unconstitutional because its sweeping provisions would prevent the use of wine in the sacramental ceremony of Mass and thereby contravene the fundamental rights of religious organizations.

THE MASTER'S EYE.

The Master's eye knew beauty well—
The wondrous glow of sky and sea,
The radiance of blossomed dell
And sweet Judean lea;
But, finer than this witchery,
He found a sight as forth He went Unmatched by star or sod or tree—
The gaze of penitent!

The Master's ear held music's store—
The chant of breeze and chime of rill,
The flutes of feathered throats galore
On gay Judean hill;
But something stirred Him deeper still,
He caught a sound more eloquent
That zephyr's call or songster's trill—
The cry of penitent!

The Master's hand was tuned to bliss—
The Virgin's clasp from day to day,
The patriarch's and pilgrim's kiss
On blest Judean way;
But more than these He felt the stray,
Sad token of an anguish pent—
Where yet the nail would pierce it lay—
The tear of penitent!

He saw them bowed in drear array—
The sinners, seared by error's stain;
He heard their sob of soul dismay
Across Judean plain;
He thrilled at touch of tragic pain
As, lorn and lost, and racked and rent,
The wanderer came home again—
The heart of penitent!

MUSIC.

A ripple of music,
Like waters at play;
Like little birds waking
To sing of the day;
Like pearls of the Orient,
Paler than dew;

Like silver bells ringing
Or violets blue;
Like revels of fairies
On pansy beds sweet:
Like tales of vague beauty
The soft winds repeat;
Like blooms of wistaria
Blown on the air:
Like hyacinth perfume
Or columbine fair;
Like gold of the sunshine
Or green of the grass;
Like tiny winds laughing
That dance as they pass,
So ripples that music
So winsomely wild—
That sweetest of music,
The laugh of a child!

NEWARK, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to the MIXER AND SERVER.

Local 109 held its semi-annual election on December the 18th, and all officers except those who declined, were re-elected without opposition. The following officers were duly elected and installed: President, H. Harringer; vice-president, C. Rittelman; secretary-treasurer, H. Maertens; financial secretary, L. Isaacs; trustees, A. Putman, E. Pinkney and L. Selig; business agent, J. Dowling; inside guard, A. Freedman; inspector, H. Mulvany; chaplain, D. Stein; local joint executive board, H. Maertens, J. Flint and J. Oehl.

Local 109 has a bunch of good fellows who have always been enthusiastic workers and when occasion demands have always been found on the firing line.

Things in Newark are slow at present, I wish to warn all traveling members to stay away from Newark, as we have a large list of unemployed on hand.

Fraternally yours,

H. MAERTENS,
Secretary-Treasurer.

CHAT OF THE CRAFT

Where was the Red Cross during the recent Colorado war, which, as a matter of fact, is not yet concluded, for federal troops are still in the district? Of course it was an amateur war, but it was waged with much vigor on both sides and a great deal of bloodshed and misery resulted, quite enough, we should think, to get the attention of at least a small corner of the Red Cross. But maybe the Red Cross is somewhat particular as to the kind of wars it associates with, and maybe the Colorado war was not quite respectable enough for it. May be such relatively small quantities of dead and wounded are beneath the notice of a mammoth organization with international influence. Maybe an organization that has real kings and real emperors on its visiting list can be excused from bothering with mere industrial kings and labor emperors. But if the Red Cross is going to pick out only the more glorified and high-toned affairs, we ought to know it, so that we can get up a Blue Cross or a Green Cross or a Pink Cross for local and internal application.—Life.

Our idea of procrastination is putting off till tomorrow or next week that effort to convince the non-union craftsman or craftswoman working at the catering industry the need of organization and especially the immediate necessity of their getting into a mental attitude of friend-ship towards organized labor. Don't procrastinate. Do it now; if you begin this month the eleven that follow will find you helping your local to gain numerical strength which is the need of the hour. Get your persuading duds on and go at the job now.

Secretary C. W. Miller of Culinary Alliance Local 626, of Walla Walla, Wash., replying to a communication from headquarters seeking information as to the effects the operation of the prohibition law would have on culinary workers, writes optimistically and asserts that the members of 626 will do everything in their power to keep going along as heretofore. The final paragraph of his letter is quite complimentary to the members of Local 627 and reads: "Nevertheless, we shall continue to hope for the best, and the cooks and waiters of Walla Walla cer-tainly take their hats off to Local 627 for the stand they have taken in continuing their organization here, instead of disbanding as one would naturally suppose they would in the face of such odds." That is the brand of stickto-it-iveness which has made so many converts to our movement—may it increase and grow to tremendous proportions, for there is no gainsaying that without organization there is little chance of reaping results. To quit after the first wallop does not mark the aggressive craftsman; you've got to lick our boys and girls and lick

'em good before you can boast of having them down and out; that fact has been borne home to the Anti-Saloon agitators long before this, and it is the main reason why they are waiting with anxiety to see whether we are big enough chumps to make it easier for them by weakening our own forces.

THE BAIT WITH A STING.

The railroads of the country, especially those who come under the heading of Trans-Continental Lines, have expended millions of dollars advertising the beauties of the States with per-petual sunshine and flowers. They make the average reader of their advertising WANT the Climate and Flowers, as well as the Sunshine. Thousands of poor devils who have perused these alluring lines and looked at the splendid pictures used in the advertising literature get the "bug" and begin making preparations to set out for the country where they imagine over-coats are never used, and where milk and honey is to be had in generous profusion. Members of our allied crafts are famed as "tourists," and that does not except any of us. Pretty near every one of us have the wanderlust imbedded in our natures. We seem to breathe it in with our work. But whatever else we may be guilty of, no one can accuse us of lacking good, plain every-day horse sense, of taking a "peek" ahead and trying to see what is in sight. There are two expositions in California. One at San Diego, advertised to, and no doubt will, open on the date set, January 1, 1915; the other at San Francisco, equally well advertised, and no doubt will open its gates on February 20, 1915. At the present moment there are, in the two cities mentioned, enough surplus bartenders, cooks, waiters and catering industry employes to care for an added two hundred thousand visitors to each city in excess of the normal transient trade. Any one who has ever given the subject matter of exposition attendance consideration can easily appreciate the fact that, with an occasional ex-ceptional fete day, the attendance falls consider-ably lower than estimates made months in ad-vance of such affairs, and none of the fairs held in America came within speaking distance of the estimated attendance. If the two cities men-tioned care for an average added population of two hundred thousand souls a day during the time the expositions will be open, they will not require another allied craftsman or craftswoman to be called into help them prepare food and drink and serve same. With such an outlook, and it seems within reason to take such a view, where are the thousands of men and women of our allied crafts going to locate a job or se-ure employment that will "pay expenses?"

During the St. Louis Fair "tourists" crowded into that city in such overwhelming numbers that they were almost eating each other for a chance to get a job, with the natural result that those who had lived in the city were forced into severe competition to hold a situation, and mighty few had the satisfaction of leaving the town with enough coin to warrant saying it was worth while. St. Louis, be it remembered, is situated right in the very heart of this country. Its facilities for absorbing visitors were greatly in excess of what either of the Pacific Coast exposition cities can boast of, and despite that advantage work was not plentiful, nor were wages in excess of what they had been previous to the fair, all things considered.

California is unquestionably a beautiful State. It has sunshine and flowers, and boasts of its magnificent climate, but these attractions will not fill an empty stomach, nor pay room rent. Then men and women of our own unions on the Coast should not be made to suffer, and that they will be required to do if one-half of 1 per cent of those of our allied crafts who propose to trek to that section of the country seeking employment during the expositions.

If, through your frugal habits, you have accumulated sufficient coin to make the trip there and back, by all means go to it, and we wish you the greatest measure of enjoyment and pleasure. But if it is your intention to enlist in that steadily increasing army of out-of-work barboys, cooks and waiters, we urge you to desist and do so as emphatically as our common language will permit. Keep in mind this one thought: Can I be truly a union man and at the same time assist in making my brother member suffer by trying to take from him his job—his bread and butter. Now is the time to think, not when that great expanse of country lies between you and the place you left, and no friendly side-door Pullman to make the way shorter.

"OLD STUFF."

About this time we may expect the Sacred Seven of Seventh Street to pull off some of their stunts, they have begun to urge their friends to send in proposed laws for publication, soon we will find "shine" proposals intended to attract attention and cause discussion, some of these may pass muster, in fact may be better legislation than they read, but the purpose is to get you and others impressed with the idea that there is a real campaign on for splitting up our International Union. We have watched the efforts of the Sacred Seven to organize what they call "Secret Sevens" in cities outside of California, perhaps they have been successful, then again perhaps not, at any rate we are willing to admit that some of their "sevens" are following instructions carefully, but writing letters to headquarters and trying to keep the official stationed there so confounded busy that he won't find any time to pay attention to the Secession movement, is so crude and ancient that it is wobbly, in fact it is "old stuff." That little maneuver has been worked before and, well it didn't succeed in doing other than increasing the general postage account. Members whom the editor visited during the months of October, November and December, 1913, will testify to the fact that he manages to get along with less sleep than the average man engaged as an employee of others, and they will readily agree that at no time or spot on the road did he yell to quit. If it becomes necessary to put in 21 out of the 24 hours in order to put our members wise to the efforts of the Secessionists, that number of hours will be used, but we haven't even been asked to go at moderate speed as yet, and it will take more than several fake resolutions and added correspondence to make us throw in the speed clutch, and even when going "fast" we will always have our eyes peeled for the next move of the Sacred Septette.

GETTING "HEP" TO THEMSELVES.

"Medical men are discussing whether the brain is of any use to human beings. Judging from the vast number who make no use of their brain, the medical men may be right."—The Culinary Craft.

The editorial Septette of The Culinary Craft have evidently been taking stock of the mental equipment of themselves, their readers and the members of Local 30, which presumably pays the printing bill for getting out The Culinary Craft. The information relative to medical men is probably accurate enough, for the press dispatches relate that the medical fraternity are busy these days, for instance, over in Philadelphia they are deeply interested in a man whose skull has thickened an inch in the last nine months; they are trying to discover something to stop the further growth of that man's skull. Can it be possible that one of the Sacred Seven Scribes is absent or missing from dear old San Francisco and that he has been sending the "editorials" by mail to his colleagues on Seventh street? The Sacred Seven should be a bit more cautious in emphasizing their lack of possession. The readers of The Culinary Craft probably concluded long ago that the Sacred Septette were getting along without gray matter and were probably a part of the "vast number who make no use of their brain," though to accuse the Sacred Septette of having even a small portion remaining is to offer fulsome flattery.

EVENING PRAYERS OF A PEOPLE.

Lord, from this storm-awakened isle,
At this dark hour on land and sea,
'Twixt bugle call and Sabbath bell
Go up our prayers to Thee.

For the long years of sanctuary
We tender thanks, O Lord,
For peaceful fields and sacred hearths,
And the unused sword.

Thine be the praise. And now when quake
The world, and trials come,
O God, preserve inviolate
Our ancient island home.

O had we died untried, unproved,
And missed this hour of stress—
Praise be to God for this last gift,
The joy of steadfastness.

Where'er our people be to-night,
Our husbands or our sons,
Tossed on the thunder-bolted deep,
Or bivouacked by the guns;

Who tread the mire of foreign lands,
Or guard our native coasts,
Be Thou their shield and comforter,
We pray Thee, God of Hosts.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

A BLACKTHORN STICK FOR JERE L.

As the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER have frequently observed during the trouble in Europe the use of the term, "Delayed in Transmission," indicating that the news imparted was not exactly up to the minute, we propose to revise that somewhat by saying that the following information was "hooked" and left hanging. After the meeting of the General Executive Board last June, Vice-President Hesketh made a visit to Scotland to see his dear old mother and relatives in that section of the world. After a brief visit Bob couldn't very well resist the temptation to visit the land of the Shamrock where he spotted a fine Blackthorn Stick and forthwith exchanged the necessary shillings and pence, thus becoming the owner of that valuable bit of property. On arriving back in this country Bob shipped the Blackthorn to Jere L. with his compliments, the stick arriving in the best of condition and even as we write "smiles" at this bit of belated acknowledgement and thanks.

Big Jim Duncan, first vice-president of the A. F. of L., once said that "an Irishman was incomplete without a blackthorn or a shillalah." Jim being a Bonny Scott all the same Bob Hesketh, the latter can feel satisfied that he has helped finish the job of completing a "Mick."

A NATURAL CONCLUSION.

During the Philadelphia convention of the A. F. of L., ex-Secretary of Local 134, Scranton, Pa., Brother Henry W. Zeidler, dropped into the Hotel Walton to pay his respects to our delegation, which of course included ye editor. During the evening Brother Zeidler put this one over:

"The automobile was a thing unheard of by a mountaineer in our community, and he was very much astonished one day when he saw one go by without any visible means of locomotion. His eyes bulged, however, when a motorcycle followed closely in its wake and disappeared like a flash around a bend in the road.

"Gee Whiz," he said, turning to his son, "who'd s'posed the dam thing had a colt?"

TOOK AN ALUM DIP.

Secretary Joe Lane, of Local 721, Salt Lake City, Utah, when writing us not long ago injected the following bit of news into his letter:

"Prohibits and Betterment League held convention in this city October 5, 1914. They made arrangements for an attendance of 1,000 or more; they had by actual count 58 present. Needless to say that they refrained from nominating candidates for their ticket.

"Outlook so far as legislation is concerned affecting the beverage industry appears encouraging at this session of State Legislature. Local 721 has the habit of remaining on the Firing Line, hence won't be caught napping."

The United Mine Workers' Journal, in its new dress, is a pleasing advance which the hundreds of thousands of members of that organization will appreciate. The quartette in charge of the Journal are William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers of America, Edgar Wallace, Joseph Poggiani and Michael Halapy, each contributing his share in such a manner as to produce a clean, classy weekly magazine worth reading and keeping for reference.

Vindictiveness is one of the first things a member must get rid of before he can even pretend possessing the required ability to act as an officer of a local union. To accept office with the intent of avenging one's real or fancied wrongs indicates that such officer is too small for a big job, a task which to accomplish successfully must adhere to the spirit of the Golden Rule.

THE COUNTRY.

I am longing for the country where they still eat mush and milk,
And where the socks have not yet changed from wool to lustrous silk;
Where the good wife still wears calico and 'bout styles never frets,
Where girls still smell of wood smoke, not of talc and cigarettes.

—Cincinnati Enquirer.

I'm longing for the country where I used to have cold feet;
Where the winters are a terror and the summers are a treat;
Where the women and the children do not fear the outdoor air,
And a fellow's private business is no neighborhood affair.

—Nebraska Journal.

I am longing for the country; I am longing just to be Where I can let the whiskers grow upon the face o' me;
Where I can let my hair grow in a wild and woolly way,
And where father does the farmin' and there ain't no board to pay.

—Houston Post.

If you have by active experience discovered a good, quick method of convincing non-members of our locals to become attached to your local union, it is safe to assume that similar methods employed by a fellow member in another city might produce satisfying results. Why not take time, jot down occasional memorandum and when you have a chance compose an article for publication. You may be sure that there will be many readers who will peruse your article and accept your suggestions. What method are you using to secure converts? Don't be backward; tell us about it and give us a chance to get alongside with a stronger and better organization than we have now.

CASE OF 50-50.

Alabama furnished Hobson and Underwood, leaders of both sides in the prohibition fight, which is a delicate feat of balancing for any sovereign State.—Chicago Herald.

WILL THE PROHIBITIONISTS TRY TO GET COLONEL GOETHALS' SCALP FOR THIS?

Colonel Goethals and his wife visited New York City just before Christmas, and in an interview said, among other interesting things:

"I wanted to establish canteens on the zone where good cold beer could be sold to the men at reasonable price. Congress disagreed with me and we have no canteens. The consequence is that when the men feel like drinking they go into Panama or Colon, outside the zone, where I have no control, and drink too much. Men who drink to excess and are brought to my notice are dropped from the pay roll. If we had canteens the trouble over the liquor question would be greatly diminished, if not completely wiped out."

In view of the determination of the Antis and Prohibs to "get" the scalps of every one of the 189 congressmen who voted against the Hobson bill, they are not likely to overlook such a shining mark as Col. George W. Goethals, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone. Of course we can judge how very popular such a move would be when it is known that the Colonel comes real close to being one of the biggest men of this century. But, pshaw, the fanatics would re-crucify Christ were he to come to earth again and try to make their followers believe they had accomplished something nifty. It has been said by students who study the rise and fall of more or less popular fanatical fads, that the higher they go the harder they fall, and it seems to the ordinary observer that the DRYs are about due to get an old-fashioned trimming, which will set them back where they belong. But that desirable event won't transpire as long as the men and women who depend on the catering industry are too busy "pecking at one another" instead of getting rid of superfluous junk and wading in to whip those who are making it more difficult for them to earn a decent living. This is about as fine a season of the year for our boys and girls to set their thinking cap on and not take it off until they have sized up the situation. That is all we ask. If you do that we are willing to bank on your judgment. Clear thinking is what made Colonel Goethals master of his profession. You can't do less than imitate such men.

Just a little spare time and a bit of energy, some persuasion and an application blank. Result: a new member. Huh?

General Secretary-Treasurer H. J. Conway of the Retail Clerks Protective Association, with headquarters at Lafayette, Ind., made many of his friends and fellow members of his organization smile with pleasure over a holiday remembrance which the recipients will retain and use. A signature blotter with autographed signature of the recipient tastefully gotten up was what Secretary Conway sent, and the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER is glad that he was on H. J.'s mail list. Speaking about clerks brings to my mind that the Retail Clerks' Protective Association is going along very nicely and making exceptional headway; the fact that our members are boosters of that organization must make them feel gratified over the knowledge that the clerks are gaining ground and growing husky with added members. If you haven't acquired the habit of asking for a union clerk to wait on you, it is none too late to begin. Remember, every boost for other labor organizations is a boost for your own.

SNIFTERS

New York, Dec. 23.—Because his house is too small to accommodate all his 141 descendants at one time, John August Bach will celebrate his one hundredth birthday, which falls next Monday, with a two-day party beginning Sunday morning, at the home of his grand-daughter, Mrs. Frank J. Brohm, in Newark, N. J.

Mr. Bach, hale and hearty, said:

"When I want a drink of beer or whiskey I take it and if I want two I take 'em. It's going to bed early each night that has kept me young. I look forward to living another 20 years or more."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

We wonder if the Prohibitionists can match that youngster with one of similar age. Who ever heard of a centenarian who didn't take his toddy or his beer? The good die young; but who wants to die?

250,000 PRESBYTERIANS QUIT IN LAST FIVE YEARS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 18.—More than 250,000 members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States have been placed on the "suspended" roll within the last five years, according to the report of the Rev. William Fulton to the General Assembly Committee on educational policy, now in session in the city.

He gives as the cause "the growing love of pleasure; disregard for the Lord's day and the word of God; the increasing craze for amusements and the influence of worldly company."—Chicago Tribune.

It is not our purpose to question the Reverend Doctor Fulton's conclusions, but he reminds us forcibly of our friend Will Whelan's poem, "He Never Thought—He Jumped." Students of the trend of liberalism as well as the persistency of church organizations in their departure from purely Christian policies and their overwhelming invasion of the political field, especially that part of politics having to do with liquor legislation, are not at a loss to understand why church communicants are willing to be "suspended" from church rolls. Most of us take church matters seriously, quite as seriously as we do affiliation to political parties and platforms, and when one attempts to dictate to the other they invariably cause a smashup which usually leaves the political warrior victor. The Presbyterian General Assembly seldom permitted an opportunity in the last fifteen years without attempting to invade fields other than ecclesiastical or theological, and such invasion being generally regarded by communicants as assuming functions not laid down in the Good Book, they have shown resentment in the one way which was open to them—they cut loose. Two hundred and fifty thousand "suspensions" in five years indicate that the powers that be directing the affairs of that organization are due to wake up and get back to first principles—teaching communicants the Word and showing the right way of living a Christian life. The Rev. William Fulton probably could have, in fact, may have, adduced other significant reasons to his associates while in session, but if he overlooked the point made in the foregoing he is due to make a more careful examination of conditions which caused such an enormous addition to non-supporters of the faith and such an immense decrease in revenue. Just as long as the Presbyterian General Assembly ties up with the Anti-Saloon League, it will be looked on as it should be—as a quasi-political combination seeking for the promotion of political success.

ATTEMPT IS RIGHT.

A lot of individuals will attempt to adopt prohibition on January 1, however.—Detroit Free Press.

Louis Coltenhouse in charge of the several dining rooms at the Holtel Walton, Philadelphia, made a splendid record for himself during the convention of the American Federation of Labor. He was one of the busiest officials under proprietor Lukes and gave such general satisfaction that everyone departed for their homes with a feeling which made them boosters of Hotel Walton service. The banquet service especially came in for some very pretty compliments on the part of men who are frequently guests of honor at such affairs in all sections of America, therefore when they offer praise it must be real class. Needless to say that Mr. Coltenhouse receives the hearty co-operation of his large working force, all of whom are paid up to date members of our locals.

The General Office reports with some pride, as well as pleasure, the result of the recent election in Ohio as it relates to our craft industries.

The offensive, unfair Rose county option law is annulled and Home Rule on the liquor question is restored throughout the state by a decisive majority. Prohibition overwhelmingly defeated. The vote in Hamilton County, where our headquarters is located, is as follows:

For Home Rule	90,542
Against Home Rule.....	21,694
Majority for.....	68,848
For Prohibition	17,496
Against Prohibition	82,490
Majority against	64,994

These figures are official.

WILL CONGRESS MAKE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA DRY?

To the members of our International Union the most significant and important action taken by the United States Congress previous to the holiday recess, was the vote on and defeat of Congressman Hobson's pet prohibition measure. The vote stood 196 for and 189 against the measure, which means that a majority of the law makers in the lower house are seemingly favorable to dry legislation. The two-thirds vote for ratification were lacking but there is little doubt in any one's mind as to the attitude of the major vote casters on the question of prohibition. The Anti-Saloonists and Prohibitionists are greatly elated over their success, and while enjoying their victory, as they call it, they propose to keep right on the job and get half a loaf if possible, but a few slices at any rate. The prospects of having the upper house consider prohibitionary legislation before the close of the present session in March are fairly encouraging to the Prohibitionists.

Senator Sheppard, of Texas, has a similar proposal as the Hobson bill before the Senate, and there is every reason to believe that he will not be influenced by the vote taken in the lower house, but will endeavor to bring the measure forward for disposition. To adopt the Hobson measure it would have required a two-thirds vote; there are 386 votes recorded; that means that the measure lacked sixty-one votes, 258 being the required two-thirds. The District of Columbia has been a mark for the Anti guns for many years, and for that reason anxiety is felt by our members in the District, for, as we understand the regulations, it would not require other than a majority vote of the house to instruct the commissioners of the District to cease the issuance of any further licenses for the sale of liquors. The drys are feeling rather cock sure of their ground, for they have demonstrated that they have a following which can not be sneezed at, and if that following agrees to vote "yes" on a bill to make Washington DRY, it is going to be DRY. There is just a ray of hope in the situation—the law-makers are not a bit different from others who are willing to legislate restriction just so long as the law does not affect themselves; they spend most of their official existence in that city, and it is doubtful whether they are so wedded to the prohibition stuff as to deprive themselves of their little "nip" when they want it, and many of them want it pretty regularly. Restrictive measures, such as the Hobson bill, are usually passed along for home consumption—that is to say, for the patriots who do the voting at the ward or precinct booth, but the law-maker is a hesitating cuss when he is asked to pass anything which may squeeze his own toes while engaged in the laborious task of reforming things by law.

With Washington City DRY, many conclude that the next logical step will be to insist on injecting a DRY PLANK in the dominant political platforms, and it is a foregone conclusion that if one party adopts such a plan the other will follow just as vigorous a declaration. We may assume that this is an improbable expectation, but the lean facts point to continued aggressive agitation on the part of sumptuary legislationists with no stop or weakening effort in the near future. A perusal of the Congressional Record of December 22, 1914, will disclose many things, not the least of which is the recorded vote of the advocates and opponents of the bill which contemplated putting many of us out of a job and the chance to make a living.

Just a little patience and perseverance will help you wonderfully in converting that non-union craftsman whom you tried to secure as a member of your local in 1914. Years ago there was a popular song which, as we recall it, began with "Never take NO for an Answer." If our bunch of persuaders will keep that idea in mind and continue to insist, the harvest will be bounteous enough to satisfy. New and reinstated members is the need of the hour; just as soon as they have been induced to get right, that moment they should be started off on a series of thinking stunts, each of which should have the idea of active citizenship well in evidence.

Unionism and citizenship should go forward hand in hand, for one does not thrive without the company of the other. If you doubt that statement just make a quiet investigation and you will discover that a large per cent of union failures are due to the separation of these twins or an attempt to get along without giving them serious consideration.

Make up your mind that you can truthfully state that you have helped your union to reach a numerical point greater than it occupied in the year just closed; and the way to do that, need we say, is by swallowing the foregoing at one gulp and putting it into practical use with several sustained efforts. Our bee hive does not kill the drones, or rather the occupants of it are not of homicidal proclivities, yet they feel more or less exasperated with those occupants of the hive who neither dig for bait or hold a line.

THAT NEW YEAR CARD.

Whisper—take a look at the picture of the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER on page 2 of this month's cover and guess who would be tickled to the point of exhaustion if the Little "Turk" was really trimmed as the illustration shows. Bet two "chuckles" and a "jit" you can guess the first time. Too bad we didn't label some of that Irish confetti, secession and segregation.

Write to your congressman and ask for a copy of the Congressional Record containing the reports of the debate and vote on the Hobson measure, and after you secure it, make up your mind to read every line, in order that you may the better understand what our allied crafts are facing in the not too distant future. After you have perused it carefully, make up your mind to quote extensively from it and let the quoting stunt be pulled off before employees and employers who persist in carrying the impression that the antis are a bunch of pin-heads shooting hot air for exercise.

If any incident which has transpired in America in several decades is of more importance to bartenders, cooks, waiters, waitresses and catering industry employees and employers than the discussion and action on the Hobson bill at this session of the United States Congress, we have not had the privilege of its acquaintance, nor have we knowledge of it.

The MIXER AND SERVER has for years urged not only the members of our International Union to get on the firing line, but endeavored to show our employers the necessity of doing likewise, but we have failed to make them see how important and ceaseless was the opposition. Probably after giving a little time and thought to the incidents surrounding the consideration of the measure referred to, it may dawn on them that we have been telling them real facts and telling them in plain, every-day language.

Some of our folks may think that we won something, but a little real serious reflection and sound thought will disclose a different view.

There is ample room on the firing line for every man and woman engaged as an employe or as an owner; there is no chance to renig unless you don't care a continental, and if that is the way any of you think and feel, then you should have the decency to get out of an industry which you refuse to protect when its very existence is jeopardized.

WELL, IT IS NONE OF OUR BUSINESS.

Mrs. Henry Kruskamp was at Gallipolis Friday shopping and came back loaded.—Vinton (Ohio) Leader.

EASY GOING—MAYBE. BUT TOUGH COMING BACK.

Just for the sake of absorbing a little bit of information which may prevent heartburnings later on, take up a railroad map and give it a glance.

For instance, you are a resident of New York State, and of course that State is rather well cut up with railways, but just let your eyes glance at New York City, and thence on to the city of Chicago—some distance—make no mistake on that point. From Chicago to Denver is quite some traveling; at least you would so conclude if you had remained in a car from New York City. In fact, you would begin to think you had "gone some" from Chicago to Denver. But do you realize that Denver is approximately but half way to the Pacific Coast from Chicago, and that you travel over the Rockies in reaching San Francisco. Schedule train time back East is one thing, and schedule train time going over the "hills" is another. There are no sixty-mile-an-hour trains shooting through the mountains. You could easily understand that little point if you ever had the privilege of making the trip from coast to coast. The writer recalls many, many miles of what some folks call "God Forsaken Country" which must be passed to reach the "hills," and there are two sets of these "hills." He has seen an occasional "Boe" doing that "long, long way" stunt, and none of them looked happy; not a one of 'em but what would have "loved to be setting on the cushions," for it's easier on shoes and temperament. Before you "lay out your route" for the year, just let this little thought seep into your brain-box. There will be so many side-door Pullman seekers that their very numerosness will compel the railways to "brush 'em off" before they leave the water-tanks. And believe me, water-tanks are not a bit more "comfy" in the hills than those you find in the lowlands. You may get to the Golden Gate on the cushions, but how about getting back on the "rods," or worse still, trekking it back a la bo.

A mile in the sands of the desert, another in the hills, may be the same number of yards, but jumping sassafrass, what a difference between 'em and a mile of real country pike! The writer knows, for he has tested all of them, and thinks he is putting you wise to facts. Distance lends enchantment, so it is said, but what a foolish fellow you will be if you take a chance of riding out to the Coast on velvet and expect to make enough to come back in similar fashion. Look at that map; it's level, but that is only a map. It does not picture the number of tired steps COMING BACK.

THE EYES HAVE IT.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE HAPPENED.

The trial of a notorious old moonshiner was over, and he had been found guilty. The Judge lectured him severely on his long criminal record and then sentenced him to thirty-six years' imprisonment, saying that the court had no feeling of anger toward him, but only of pity.

The prisoner listened stolidly, and said as he left the court room: "Well, I suah am glad he wasn't mad at me."—Worcester Labor News.

APPRECIATIVE REMEMBRANCE.

The General Secretary-Treasurer was the recipient of quite an avalanche of Christmas and New Year greetings, cards and more substantial remembrances, all of which he would have been exceedingly pleased to acknowledge and thank the generous presenters directly and by suitable card, but the task would be so formidable that he begs the indulgence of his numerous well-wishers and asks them to accept this method of receipt and sincere thanks. "May you live long and prosper" is the prayer of Jayelle.

LABOR EDITORS' SPLENDID HOLIDAY NUMBERS.

The exchange table of the MIXER AND SERVER was loaded down with some of the finest products of printers' ink, and without exception each paper was the Christmas number of the fast increasing labor papers of America. We tried to pick out a reasonable number in order to make special mention of their excellence of matter and dress, but gave the job up as a task too difficult to dispose of without exceptional expert judgment to aid us. If we are to judge the labor movement of America by the splendid Christmas numbers of the labor press, the outlook is indeed very encouraging, for we noted with satisfaction that each of the labor papers carried a very fair share of advertising patronage, and much of it setting forth the fact that merchants were carrying union labeled products.

It is the rank and file of trades unions which make it possible for daily or weekly papers to thrive and prosper, and it has always seemed to us that union labor papers, which invariably expound the doctrines of organized labor and are everlastingly boosting the trade union movement, should be rewarded with a greater measure of patronage from the men and women whose cause these papers espouse. The laborer is worthy of his hire, and that goes many, many times when the laborer is devoting his talent and time, as well as what little funds he may own, to getting out a paper for and in behalf of the workers. Many labor papers make special reductions to local unions for club subscriptions. In the main, all of them ask really but one-tenth of their real worth as advocates of labor's cause, and we know of no more deserving institution than the labor press, hence urge members and unions to set aside some portion of their income for the support of their local labor paper. Labor editors who secure support are enabled to put up a better medium, without support they can not do the things which they truly desire.

The annual auditing of accounts in local unions could be made an event of considerable interest and importance if comparisons were offered which covered, in addition to the finances, a resume of several years, showing number of members at January 1—number taken in by card, initiated and reinstated, and number of suspensions, withdrawals and deaths. Some of our locals follow out that idea and print an annual statement which the members appreciate very much. If your auditing committee has not finished its labors, why not submit the suggestion? It will involve but a few hours' added work to their task, but it will greatly help the union to know what's what.

GREAT!

If Mr. Bryan must take a whirl as a prohibition candidate, why doesn't he move to Russia?—Boston Transcript.

It is quite appropriate, during this month, to inquire from the officers of your local union how the union stands financially and numerically in comparison to January, 1914. It might be in order to supplement, as a suggestion, that the secretary prepare a list of members, showing how many new recruits each has to his credit for the year 1914. Such a list might not attract the attention of members who never try to secure a new member, but it will give proper recognition to the real builders in the union.

The disgust of one of our boys of Local 68 who went to the Odeon to an opera, and who, after the performance, said he couldn't see anything worth looking at, may be understood when the information dawns on him that it was the Springer Opera Club which gave the performance and were not advertising that kind of chicken.

GERMANY VS. THE ALLIES.

The Allies' left is trying to move around the Germans' right, but the Germans' right is also moving around the Allies' left. Now, if the left of the Germans' right moves around the right of the Allies' left, then what is left of the German right must be right where the Allies left. But if the Germans' right's left is left right where the Allies' left's right was right before the Allies left, then the left is left right where the right was right before the left's right left the right's left.

Stutes says: Isn't that right?
Or is it?

A TREAT THAT COUNTS.

If you truly feel kindly toward that old pal of yours who lost out after the parks closed, and whom you know is just about ready for suspension for non-payment of dues, why not treat him to a monthly due stamp, or make it several, and thus help him to pull through until something turns up. He would do the same for you if he were in and you were on the bricks.

As a general thing, we endeavor to furnish our membership with accurate information, and take pride in the boast that we have made a success of our effort. In a recent number of the MIXER AND SERVER we presented a list of publications gotten out by the Anti-Saloon League, and when doing so carried the impression that we had the list complete. We are making admission now that we overlooked one publication which carries the title Collier's, the national weekly. We were given to understand that Collier's was owned and published by the P. F. Collier & Son Co., but if we are to judge from the editorial utterance in each weekly number, the referred to company is heartily co-operating with the plans and policies of the Anti-Saloon League; in fact, offers more and stronger editorials in opposition to the beverage end of the catering industry than all of the Anti-Saloon League publications put together.

It is for that reason that we have arrived at the conclusion that Collier's, The National Weekly, is one of the Anti-Saloon League's "Issues" under another name. Every week Collier's editorial page shows the editor of that publication to be obsessed with the idea that it is his job to say something real harsh about the saloon. In the last issue to hand he offers fifteen editorials and one illustration, the latter and five of his editorial expressions hit the liquor industry a stiff wallop. Collier's double-page cigarette advertising in colors rather puts a crimp in its strength as an advocate of prohibition. Possibly the editor is a "coffin-nail" consumer.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

Local 69, Galveston, Tex., held their ninth annual ball on the evening of Dec. 17, 1914. That the affair must have been a social and financial success is conceded by all those who have ever enjoyed the pleasure of taking part in an entertainment under the auspices of that union. Local 69 has been in continuous existence since June, 1896, but evidently waited nine long years before they pulled off their first annual ball. Eighteen years in existence, having had its share of vicissitude, yet a vigorous youngster, speaks well for the membership of that union.

Now that Yuletide and New Year's have passed into the great book of records, may we be pardoned in calling your attention to some of the things which the outlook for the present year prompts. From pretty near every point of the compass advice is offered that "times are bad and business dull; many of our members are unemployed, and the immediate prospects none too encouraging." Hardly a city or town in the whole of North America but what has confronting them the urgent need of providing food and shelter for innumerable homeless and jobless people. Quite a few of the larger cities are admittedly up against the most severe problems on account of armies of unemployed, and despite a forced campaign for "looking at the bright side," real want prevails quite as much in America as it does abroad, where warring nations are at each other's throats. Many of our members travel to less severe climate for the winter months, and that means overcrowding the towns and cities on the Pacific Coast with allied craftsmen and women, who truly become a menacing factor to those who are real residents of that section of the country. Great efforts have been made to advertise the two expositions in California, and thousands of our allied crafts seems to carry the impression that there is sufficient employment in connection with these two affairs to employ all who may come. A moment's reflection should convince them that the opposite is the case. These expositions are, to all intents and purposes, completed. Hundreds, aye thousands of crafts other than catering industry workers, will be thrown out of work, if that has not already occurred, and these workers alone constitute an immense unemployed list, who probably are seeking for a job at anything in order that they may remain on their own stamping ground. Hundreds of bartenders, cooks, waiters and catering employees out of work in the Coast States now does not offer a very encouraging prospect for those who are thinking of making "Frisco" for their next stopping place. If you must go, take the price along, for you will need it. Those who have hiked across the country from the Golden Gate say it is pretty tough walking, and real hard, hungry work.

FATHER DAN O'MALLEY.

Whin Father Dan O'Malley came as curate to St. Ann's.
There was work in Dublin Alley layin' ready to his han's.
Aye! 'twas work o' sich a nature that no common man could do,
Fur, indade, the only t'acher that the Alley gossoons knew
Was the Devil that was lukin' in the badness of their hearts,
And it's never aisy wurkin' fur to strive again his arts.
But although he's cute; fur, shurt, it is the Devil's trade to shame, Ye can trust an Irish curate fur to bate him at his game.

There was little dilly-dally in the layin' out of plans

When Father Dan O'Malley came as curate at St. Ann's.

Now, the trouble jisht was layin' in the fact that as a rule

The gossoons thought more of playin' than of goin' to Sunda' school.

Ev'ry plisant Sunda' mornin', faith, ye'd find them at their game,

Nor could any threat or warnin' make them feel a sinse of shame.

An' of all the little divils that desp'iled the holy day,

The ringleader of their rivels was that rascal Paddy Shea.

He could set a top a-spinnin' till ye'd think 'twould never stop,

An' the marbles he was winnin' would have aisy stocked a shop.

Not a soul in Dublin Alley 'd won a vict'ry from his han's

Till Father Dan O'Malley came as curate to St. Ann's.

Father Dan was big and jolly, wid a heart that filled his chist,

An' a smile that it was folly fur ye tryin' to resist.

Well, it took a bare half-hour of one Sunda' morn in May Fur to dimonstrate his power over roguish Paddy Shea.

Though the bells had rung their rally to the Sunda' school, the hall

Showed no lad of Dublin Alley had appeared at all, at all,

Father Dan wint out a-gunnin' fur the rogues that stayed away,

An' the rascals started runnin', but he captured Paddy Shea.

Thin it was that Dublin Alley passed from out the Devil's han's.

Fur Father Dan O'Malley now was curate at St. Ann's.

"Now, me boy," saz he to Paddy, "you're the champeen player here,
So you'll play wid me, me laddie, jisht to make yer title clear;

Is it marbles ye've been playin'? Well, we'll start agin to play,

But you'll bend yer knees to prayin' whin I've licked ye, Paddy Shea.

Come along, you rogue! Your luck'll not avail ye now to win, Whisht! More power to me knuckle, 'tis the Church's work it's in."

From the very first beginnin' Father Dan out-played the lad,

An' he wasn't long in winnin' ev'ry marble that he had.

After that the Dublin Alley lads was putty in the han's

Of Father Dan O'Malley, who is curate at St. Ann's.

So the Sunda' school is crowded to the doors this blessed day,

Fur the lads had lost their marbles to the skill of Paddy Shea,

An' the leader o' the Alley has in turn throwed up his han's

To Father Dan O'Malley, who is curate at St. Ann's. — T. A. DALY, in Boston Traveler.

UNION COOKS HOLD RECORD ELECTION; 258 BALLOTS CAST.

Confidence Shown in Old Officers and They are Returned; "Bob" Hesketh Polls Highest Vote.

Two hundred and fifty-eight votes were cast at the semi-annual election of officers of the Cooks' and Assistants' Local Union No. 33, held on Friday afternoon and evening of last week at headquarters, 87½ Pike street. The polls were open from 12 noon until 9:30 p. m. Harry Mitchell, president, and E. L. Hollingsworth, treasurer, were re-elected without opposition.

William H. Fraser's capable administration of the office of secretary and his personal popularity among his fellow craftsmen gave him a decided advantage over Harry Knowlton, his opponent in the race, and he received 203 votes, coming within 2 of leading the ticket, which honor went to Robert B. Hesketh, who was re-elected as a delegate to the Central Labor Council by 205 votes.

Walter Record, running for re-election as business agent, proved that he has made good by annexing 150 votes and a majority over his opponents, Dave E. Jones and George Winslade, who finished in the order named.

Don W. Comeron, renominated for inspector, was re-elected by 127 votes, his opponents being Fred Riggins and Ben B. Beach, who finished in that order. S. H. Hine, sergeant-at-arms, got 131 votes, and was re-elected over Calvin H. Mullen. George Reover, running for re-election as vice-president, received 152 votes and won over William H. Wait.

NINE CANDIDATES IN RACE.

Nine candidates were in the race for the five places on the Executive Board, and Frank Guilky, Joe Porter, Jack Gregory, Arthur Whittier and Ed. Madigan were the lucky ones. Guilky leading with 173 votes and the others following in the order given.

Of the six candidates for the three places on the Local Joint Executive Board, which exercises a general supervision over the common interests of the union cooks, waiters and waitresses, Hesketh, Al G. Moffett and C. L. Gallant won, Hesketh coming first with 198 votes.

Ten candidates were in the running for the honor of representing the union in the Central Labor Council, to which No. 33 sends five delegates, and Hesketh, Fraser, Record, Mitchell and W. W. Levi went under the wire to victory well bunched.

As the heavy vote cast indicated, the members of the union took a lively interest in the election, though the rivalry was friendly throughout.

The voting was done under the Australian ballot system, and the counting was not finished until 3 o'clock Saturday morning.

The newly-elected officers were installed at the regular meeting of the union last night, and a smoker was held following the installation.—Seattle (Wash.) Union Record, Oct. 3, 1914.

SEATTLE, WASH.

LOYAL UNIONIST IS BURIED BY FRIENDS.
An honest woman, here lies at rest,
As e'er God with his image blest;
The friend of man, the friend of truth,
The friend of age, the guide of truth.

Few hearts like hers, with virtue warmed,
Few heads with knowledge so informed;
If there's another world, she lives in bliss—
If there is none, she made the best of this.

—BURNS.

The full funeral ritual of the International Alliance of Hotel and Restaurant Employes was used for the first time by the Waitresses Local Union No. 240 yesterday afternoon when the organization paid a parting tribute to Mrs. Christine Keller, a member who died in the Swedish Hospital last Tuesday after an illness of two weeks. At the request of Mrs. Keller, made upon her deathbed, the union took entire charge of the funeral and no minister of the gospel was asked to officiate. The funeral was held from the Collins chapel, 918 East Broadway, cremation following. About 250 friends and acquaintances, including members not only of the waitresses' organization but of all other local unions of the culinary craft, attended.

The funeral oration was delivered by Robert B. Hesketh, member of the city council and also a member of Cooks' and Assistants' Local Union No. 33. Hesketh eulogized the dead from the viewpoint of a friend for many years, and paid an eloquent tribute to her as a loyal trade unionist, a sincere and earnest worker for the upbuilding of her organization, a true friend and a faithful wife, closing with a quotation from the famous epitaph written by Robert Burns, beginning:

"An honest woman lies here at rest,
As e'er God with His image blest."

May Lambert, a member of No. 240, was the soloist, and Pearl Waring, also a member, acted as her accompanist.

The ritual was carried out by Agnes Adamack, president of Local No. 240, assisted by Margaret Watson, vice-president; Elizabeth Bodwell, recording secretary; Georgia Proctor, inspector; Bessie Palmer, sergeant-at-arms; Alice M. Lord, financial secretary and business agent, and Ida L. Levy, chaplain. The closing prayer was offered by Mrs. Levi as chaplain.

The casket was heaped with floral offerings, notable among which were elaborate wreaths from Local 240 and Bartenders' Local Union No. 651.

Mrs. Keller was 34 years old and had lived in Seattle about eight years, having been a member of No. 240 all of that time. She is survived by her husband, Charles Keller, also a member of the international alliance, and her mother, who lives in Germany. Mrs. Keller's last days were saddened by the fact that three of her brothers have been killed while fighting under the German flag since the war in Europe began last August.—Seattle Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Conditions are very bad in Syracuse, and there is positively no work; would advise all tourist waiters not to stop off here. While we would do all in our power to help all brothers in distress, we have quite a number of our own members on the out of work list at present.

At our last meeting we held a special election for business agent to take Bro. George Carlisle's place; Brother Dudley Forster was elected. Brother Forster is one good fellow and is doing all in his power for Local 150.

Our annual ball was held on December 17, 1914, and was a great success. With best wishes to all members of the International, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

JOSEPH BAKER,
Rec. Sec'y and Press Agent, Local 150.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Our annual election was held Friday, December 18, 1914, and the following officers were elected for 1915: President, Frank Brown; first vice-president, Chas. E. Girard; second vice-president, Albert Roy; recording secretary, Bert Merlink; treasurer, Vincent Stockman; chaplain, J. Geo. Hafle; inspector, Joseph Ball; trustees, Harry Dixon, chairman, Patrick Arthur, Herbert Stanford; inside guard, Wm. Watkins; outside guard, Wm. Kelley; financial secretary and business agent, P. J. McGowan.

Some of our members can be found at the following places: W. Peters is steward at Local 196; J. Burns, M. J. Crosson and J. Harrison are at Shea's Buffet; J. E. Kieffer, R. J. Warfield, and P. A. Mullen are at the Iroquois Hotel; J. Andrews, R. J. Smith are at the City Hotel; F. V. Poppe at the Hofbrau Cafe; J. P. Kane at Sohern Hotel; L. C. Ganger at Webber & Knab's; H. Fredricks, E. M. Golden are at Percy Albright's Hotel; Wm. Fredricks at Ferry Hotel; Geo. Fraser at Gayety Cafe; Chas. Lytle, John Reilly, Wm. Walters are at Olympic Club.

Local 175 wishes all members of the International a bright and prosperous New Year.

With fraternal greetings,

FRANK BROWN,
President and Business Agent, Local 175.

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SISTERS AND BROTHERS—Whenever a judge stoops down so low as to prevent workers from picketing for one day's rest in seven, and whenever he is upheld in his action by the people of any community, then that community itself is like France before the revolution, and like Rome before its fall. From every part of the city comes the protest that the Baldwin injunction is un-American and unconstitutional; two thousand people have sworn to affidavits before notary publics that the picketing was lawful and orderly; the Women's Trades Union League has issued a pamphlet denouncing the outrageous injunction; the Women's Congress in its convention, indorsed the one day's rest in seven measure, and thereby the basic principle of the waitresses' strike. The Chicago Federation of Labor has sent out a financial call, while the Illinois State Federation is sending copies of the injunction to every affiliated local. The Restaurant Trust, with John Vogelsang at its helm, in the face of all this, is cutting wages, increasing hours, and thereby is still increasing the misery of the workers.

On the other hand, reformers are shedding tears for the unfortunate girls. They want to close up the dance halls, saloons, cabarets, bowling alleys, pool rooms, nickel shows and amusement parks, so all the girls would have no other place to go than to church to spend their money. If a bona fide step is taken, however, by the girls themselves to protect their womanhood and characters by a reasonable wage and workday, these reformers line up with the plutocrats in order to prevent the girls from helping themselves. The Chicago reformers are like the Chicago saloon and restaurant keepers; they want to reform everything, if there is money in it. The capitalist newspapers have been called on the job by the State street stores to assist the restaurant keepers in crushing organized labor, thus they stand for low wages for the girls, and on the other hand pretend to stand for a better and higher womanhood. If our International Union forces the Knab, Powers and Efting lunch rooms to sign the contract with our joint board, it will have accomplished more for the real reform than all the reformers ever desired to accomplish.

A girl who works every day without a day of rest has no chance to rise higher than its workshop environments. Give a girl a short workday; a day of rest; and more than merely a living wage, and you will find that it won't be long before hope and reason will be its guide. The fight for organization and education must go on, not only amongst the workers, but also the bosses must be taught that organization and education, and not class and injunctions, are the inevitable solution of the class fights and class differences between employers and employees.

The Chicago Cooks and Pastry Cooks' Union has selected the following officers for the next six months:

President, John Staggenburg; first vice-president, Julius Cook; second vice-president, Albert Ehrhardt; third vice-president, John Bernhard; recording secretary, Gust. Politsch; financial secretary and business agent, Fred. Ebeling; treasurer, N. P. Christensen; trustees, Gust. Hegen, J. Haggerty, Martin Hanson; inspector, B. F. Johns; inside guard, Fred. Schable; outside guard, Frank Zeitvogel; Local Joint Executive Board, Chas. Corrigan, John Staggenburg, Martin Miller; delegates Central Federation of Labor, Fred Ebeling, John Staggenburg.

Fraternally yours,

FRED. EBELING.

Sec'y and Bus. Agt.

THOMPSONVILLE, CONN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I suppose it will seem like a voice from the dead or a letter from a long forgotten relative leaving you a legacy of a million, more or less, for the brothers to once more hear from Local 148. However we are still very much alive, as I shall prove to you before you have finished reading this article. I am forced to admit that I have been lax in my articles to our valuable journal, but the fact of the matter is that owing to the beautiful weather of the past summer and a few of our bar-boys being the proud possessors of motorboats and buzz-wagons, and that taken together with clam bakes and baseball, has been the means of keeping a majority of our members from attending meetings, but now that cold weather has set in I shall not be called upon to make any more excuses.

Local 148 held their monthly meeting at Central Labor Hall Sunday, December 6th, and am happy to say that a large attendance was present. Brothers who had not been near the meeting hall since our last election of officers a year ago were on deck. Two new candidates were admitted to membership and new applications were read. Business is quiet, but our boys are all working. We also have a committee at work scouting around and rounding non-union men and back sliders, of which I am sorry to say we have a few, but we expect to have a halter and kicking strap on those few very soon. We also held our annual election of officers Sunday, at which the following were elected to serve for the ensuing year:

President, Wm. Hyland; vice-president, Joseph Ryan; financial secretary and treasurer, T. J. Connors; recording and press secretary, Dan. J. Quinn; trustees, Brothers Hyland, Ryan and Connors; auditors, Thomas Flanigan, James Malley; inside guard, Peter Hygenick; delegates to Central Labor body, T. J. Connors, chairman, J. Higgins, P. Hygenick, T. Flanigan, R. Carroll. Bros. T. J. Connors and Dan J. Quinn are the only brothers succeeding themselves in office.

After the meeting adjourned a smoker and entertainment were held, for which invitations were sent to all cafe proprietors in Enfield, Suffield, Warehouse Point and Windsor locals. Invitations were also sent to brothers in Holyoke, Meriden, Hartford and Springfield.

Brother Joseph Ryan, as chairman of the reception and entertainment committee, in welcoming the guests made a very eloquent and impressive address, but absolutely refused to respond to an encore. Brother Wm. Hyland, our president-elect, filled the office of toast master in a very able manner.

Remarks on the good of the local were made by M. Scanlon of Windsor Locks, an old time member of Local 148, but now in business for himself.

Addresses were made by Phillip J. Sullivan, national secretary of the A. O. H., former Senator M. J. Connors and also by a number of other leading lights of Enfield and vicinity who are not connected with our craft, which only goes to show the good feeling and harmony which exists between the cafe proprietors and other business men and our blue button boys. Vocal and instrumental selections and recitations were rendered by the members of the local, and the smoker advanced at a late hour, with the best wishes of all present for the future success of Local 148.

With best wishes to all, I remain,
Fraternally yours,

DAN J. QUINN,
Recording and Press Secretary Local 148.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A couple of issues of the MIXER AND SERVER have been sent to the various locals and members without an iota of news from Local 106. The only apology or excuse that can be offered is that our former press secretary was out of the city.

At our regular meeting Friday, November 26, I was elected to the office of press secretary to fill the unexpired term, the office being declared vacant at the previous meeting. I will say that I had a strong opponent in Brother Rezac, as we were going neck and neck until the last ballot was counted, the same being in my favor, so I assure you that all readers of the MIXER AND SERVER will hear all the news regarding the doings of Local 106.

At the meeting of Friday, November 12 a resolution was adopted to amend Article IV of our constitution to provide that "all applicants for membership must have first made application for their citizenship papers." Also we are inducing present members who have not as yet made application for their citizenship papers to do so as soon as possible. This question of having all its members naturalized citizens has been puzzling the different labor organizations of Cleveland for some time, but it was up to Local 106 to set the pace for the other organizations to follow. We are in hopes that the Cleveland Federation of Labor will see the logic in this movement and that they will take a favorable stand on the question involved. Also I think it would be an uplift to the International should the locals of our crafts follow this precedent.

Through the courtesy of the Musicians, a conference was called in which the Musicians, Engineers, Electrical Workers and our crafts were represented. The object was to instill a feeling of brotherhood among all the departments where workers of the affiliated crafts are; in fact, that we work in harmony with one another.

The weather is very cold at present, so our club room is being well patronized. Our members take advantage of our large library and while off watch they while away the time here where it is warm and comfortable, where they can play a game of pool or cards.

Business is quiet, and we have several members out of work, so I would advise any that intend heading Cleveland way, to change their route until spring. There is still an influx of waiters, but I am glad to state that they are very well paid up as a rule.

Brother Farrel has been on the sick list for two weeks, but is back on the job as secretary of the Cleveland Federation of Labor. He is working for the federation with the same vim that characterized his work as business agent of Local 106.

Bro. Ed. Whissemore, our present business agent, is also a hustler, and is working along the same lines that Brother Farrell had been. There is nothing that gets by Brother Ed. Any extra job, be it large or small, is taken care of in a way that is favorable to the employer and our members. That is why the hotel and cafe managers are calling on us for any emergency, for they know by experience that Local 106 is always reliable.

There will be several extra jobs now that the holidays are near, and this will be a great help to the members that are out of work.

Our membership is better paid up with their dues than at any other time in our history.

With greetings of the season to all members of our crafts,

Fraternally yours,
E. J. CARTER,
Press Secretary Local 106.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am sorry to inform the membership of the death of Bro. Adolph Herman. By his death the labor movement has lost a consistent worker, whose congenial disposition won for him a host of friends who mourn his loss. His striking resemblance to Mayor Wittpen won for him the nickname of Mayor. His funeral was supervised by Bro. F. Stacy. All the boys who could possibly attend were present at the cemetery, where our ritual services were performed by the officers.

Whatever the condition of things are in other parts of the country I do not know, but I do know that the business people of this city and surrounding cities are kicking about poor business, especially in our line.

Sorry to hear that Local 30, San Francisco, is out for segregation. It is too bad that men are elected to office in our locals who can not see any farther than their own nose. The sooner some officers of our locals stop swelling out their chests and begin getting their gray matter working for the benefit of the general membership the sooner they will have peace and well-oiled machinery going nice and smooth.

We are going to hold a ball on the night of Feb. 5, 1915, at Opera House Hall, Bayonne, and it is going to be a success. Brothers Muldoon, Stacey and Kavanagh are hustling like beavers.

Bro. Bill Kavanagh looked after the interests of the labor movement of our county at the Convention of the American Federation of Labor in Philadelphia, and his report was well received at the last meeting of the County Federation.

President James Muldoon sticks to the ship, and makes a good pilot. He has his weather eye out for those who would try to tear down solidarity.

"No division in our ranks is the slogan," says Bro. Bill Kavanagh. "United we stand, divided we fall," is as good today as ever it was, and we culinary workers here can't see such dam nonsense as secession or segregation.

Bro. Bill Joyce has been here doing good work for the barboys and culinary workers. A visit from one of our general organizers is always appreciated. Come again, William B.

It is so cold here that Brothers Volz, Teehan and Brevogel have put in a good supply of coal for the rest of the winter. Go to it, boys, we will get sense like you some day.

The Anti-Saloon League is on the job in New Jersey, so wake up, boys. Get together, fight together, and if we must, die together. No division in our ranks. I need you, and you need me.

Fraternally yours,

F. BURNS,

Corresponding Secretary Local 575.

SPOKANE, WASH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Last month we voted on the eight-hour law and lost, by nearly one hundred thousand majority in three hundred thousand votes; two to one against us, isn't that some? I don't think it surprises you or me very much. We have had too much experience with the so-called intelligent masses, but the big majority is what hurts—two hundred thousand voters in this progressive state think eight hours is not enough for a man to work, when today there are tens of thousands in the state that can't get one hour's work.

Curtailing the laws of labor is an educational question and one that is worthy the efforts of the greatest minds in the country in studying the result, and so important is the subject to humanity that any man who does not understand and does not spread his knowledge to the world, is a traitor to God, his country, and humanity.

Our government understands the question and eight hours per day is there on the government books, in black and white. But the petty mercenary bunch, that have the upper hand in this great state, think different; and backed by the tricking press and other corrupt influence, they went down the line, fighting as they never fought before. There never was such a lying campaign, and the devil must have had a busy day recording the mass of false prophecy that threatened us with bankruptcy, poverty and starvation, if the law carried. The people fell for this junk, and we lost; and we will have to fight it all over again and again. Aye, a hundred times if necessary until patriotism, humanity and common sense prevail. We knocked out the employment offices by eighteen thousand majority, but they are running just the same, though their time was up on December 3rd. You know how it is, some friendly judge granted an injunction of some kind, and for all we know, the sharks may continue in business forever.

Union business is very quiet, as the election hit us very hard, but we are not crying over spilled milk, as we believe there are better times coming for all of us, and unionism does better in good times.

Local 450 has had, as you know, a hard time of it. A year ago we were two hundred dollars in the hole and only seventy members in good standing, today we have one hundred and eight members in good standing, and we are three hundred to the good. The waitresses have thirty-eight and $125. Both are under the management of Business Agent Charles Grey. I think this is a good record and I had thought that all the good men in Local 450 had gone to better localities, but I am mistaken, for Grey has made good, and you have to have good men behind you before you can do that. The waiters have about seventy-five in good standing, and the majority are working.

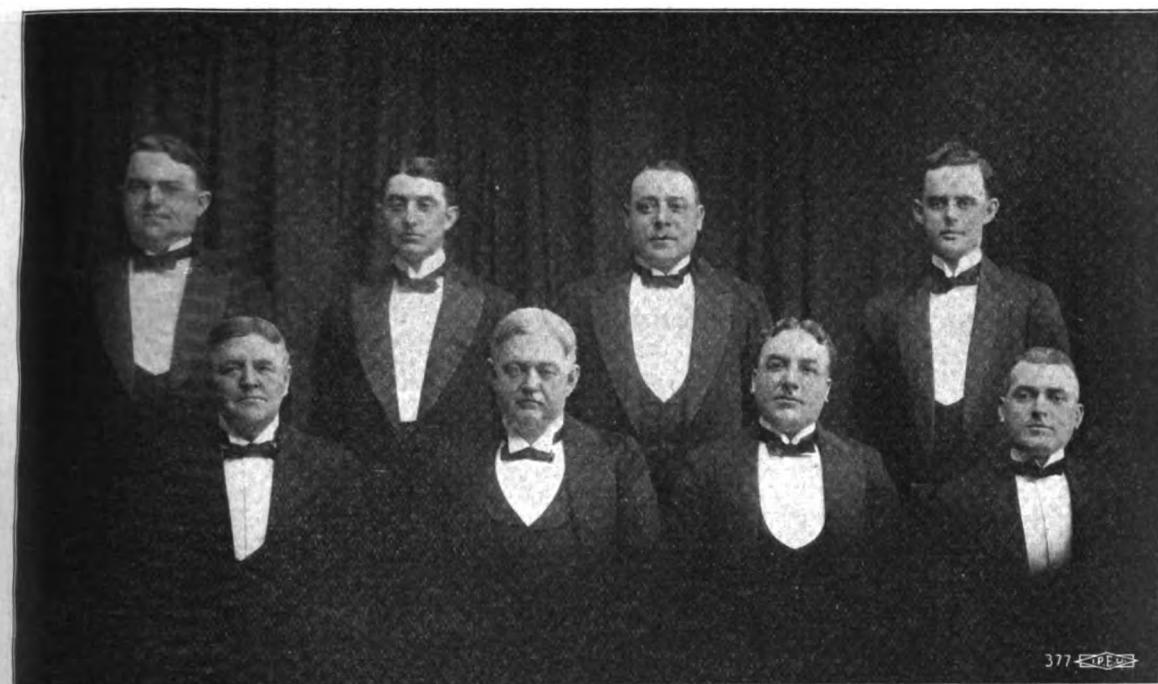

There seems to be some disappointment over the amalgamation idea being turned down, and many think that the locals ought to be granted one single charter owing to the hard times. I do not know the entire sentiment but will canvas the matter, and let you know if you say so.

With the season's greetings, I am

Yours fraternally,

W. L. THOMASSON,
Local 450.

DANCE COMMITTEE 1914 BALL.

377 EXPED

Members of Local No. 97, Fitchburg, Mass.

Back row, reading from left to right: Brothers John P. Regan, Tarven Bonin, Louis St. Germain, Paul F. Horan. Front row: H. F. McManus, Martin Flannagan, James Breau, Edward B. McKenna.

FITCHBURG, MASS.ELECTION NIGHT DANCE

Bartenders' Union Hold Annual Party in City Hall with Large Attendance.

The Bartenders' Union, as for several years past, observed election night with its annual dance in city hall, the pastime being enjoyed by nearly 200 couples from 8 till 1 o'clock. Music was provided by Miller's orchestra, which was assisted by the Booster quartette of this city. There was a grand march, led by Mr. and Mrs. John P. Regan, who were followed by about 75 couples. The only decorations were evergreen trees on the stage. During intermission ice cream, cake and other refreshments were served by Caterer J. A. Hills. A souvenir program was issued to all present, containing a group of the officers of the organization.

James Breau was floor manager and John P. Regan floor director, the aides to the latter being Edward B. McKenna, Henry F. McManus, Paul F. Horan, Tarven Bonin, Louis St. Germain, Martin Flannagan, Andrew B. Crowley, Henry C. Bean, Frank H. Hart and Amedee Leclerc. The floor committee was also the committee of arrangements in charge of the party, which was by far the most successful yet held by the organization.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As it has been some time since the good brothers throughout the country have heard anything concerning Local 71, of Connellsburg, I thought I would write for a small space in your valuable MIXER AND SERVER. Well, we moved to our new quarters we have fitted up for ourselves. We have a cozy lodge-room with a neat little buffet attached. Come and see us.

Well, boys, we held our nomination and election; we had an old time union meeting, our retiring officers were as happy going out as our new ones going in. After the meeting we had a turkey lunch and it was fine. Brother Ike Frances rendered a selection, "Won't You Give Me A Nickel?" A nice talk from Brother Toomey. A few remarks from Brother Evans, the retiring president, also a song, "Take Back the Engagement Ring." Brother Dougherty was on the job with the report from Trades Council. If the brothers shine at all meetings like this one we will have two turkeys. You know we meet on the first Sunday of every month.

Things are very slack around here at present; we have seven men on the extra list. We only have eleven hotels and it keeps us hustling.

Well, brothers, our new officers expect to make things hustle. The new officers are as follows: Thos. Keenan, president; Thos. Forkins, vice-president; Tim V. Daily, secretary; Jas. F. Doyle, treasurer; I. W. Francis, chaplain; trustees, Thos. E. Evans, Chas. Thornell, M. Dougherty; audit committee, Jerry Toomey, Walter Wynkoop.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

L. Gethery; inside guard, John Clark; outside guard, J. Murphy; inspector, Jacob Santemeyer.

Now, brothers, don't forget we meet and install our new officers on January 3, first Sunday in the new year. Come, lots of good eats every meeting and any brother not getting his MIXER AND SERVER must give his name and address to our Secretary.

I also have a cake receipt which may come in handy to some of the brothers' wives, it is called an economical cake, no butter or eggs; 2 cups brown sugar, 2 cups water, 2 tablespoons lard, 3 teaspoons cinnamon, $\frac{1}{2}$ box raisins or currants. Boil five minutes and add $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon baking soda dissolved in water, add 3 or 4 cups flour, bake in slow oven.

With best wishes to the National office and officers, I remain,

Yours Fraternally,
TOM EVANS,
Journal Agent, Local 71.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—No doubt our friends have been scanning the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER every month, expecting to see something from Local 19, so here we are:

Almost everyone knows that about eight months ago our treasury was depleted by an absconding secretary. Not only did he take all the cash, but left us about $275.00 in debt, bills we thought were paid. We are glad to say that we have survived (the fourth time) the storm. We have a few dollars in the treasury, our debts are all paid, and, although the path is not very smooth, you can rest assured Local 19, the direct descent of old Local 32, is going to be on the map, when others are not. There may be wars and rumors of wars, but Local 19 will go on forever.

I had the pleasure of attending the Twelfth Anniversary of Bartenders' Local 420, on Sunday, December 20. When I say pleasure, I mean that it was indeed a pleasure to me to be present and partake of the hospitality of one of the best bartenders' local in our International—about three hundred and fifty loyal union men assembled about 2:30 in the afternoon, two long banquet tables, a number of good cooks, and members of Local 420 acting as waiters, dealt out as great a feast as ever a bunch of union men sat down to. One of the best features was the elimination of the oratorical bombardment so prevalent on such occasions. The toastmaster, C. B. Nelson, Mr. John T. Smith of our Central Labor body, and our own John P. McGinley, being the chief speakers. Organizer McGinley was introduced by Brother James H. Anderson, in Jim's own original way. Then something happened, Brother McGinley was presented with a handsome gold watch by Local 420, as a token of thanks for his efforts in assisting in the defeat of the County Unit Law, at our last general election.

The barboys of Local 420 think pretty well of Mac, and they have a just right to be. He has the "pep." All that was left of the pig, turkey, etc., Local 420 sent to the charity organizations. How many banquets dispose of their left-overs in that way?

Local 19 has the Missouri Waiters' Association (a dual organization) to deal with. We are holding our own, but not gaining to any great extent. Now and then we gain a few, and then we lose a few.

I wish some one would tell me how to handle the club proposition in this town. I have about tried everything my brain can figure out.

Trusting every one enjoyed the Yuletide, and that all will understand that in Unity there is Strength, that nothing can be gained by a division of our force, let us get closer together. I am sure I know what I am talking about.

I will appreciate a letter from anyone. My kindest regards and 1915 greetings to all that know me, mentioning Bob Hesketh, Chet McCurdy, Jere McCarthy, Tim Sullivan, Ed. Horne, Charles McKee, "Frenchie" of Local 14, Conrad Schott, Fred Hobby, Jim Butler, Tom Farrell, and a host of others, not forgetting the force in the general office.

Very fraternally.

C. C. GLOVER,
Business Agent Local 19.

GALVESTON, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As it has been a long time since anything was heard from the hotel and restaurant employees of Local 69 through the MIXER AND SERVER, I thought I would write a few lines just to let the members of our Big International know that we are still alive and doing just fine.

Last Tuesday, December 15, was our regular meeting night, we had a fine attendance and quite a lot of business was disposed of. The most important event was that of election of officers for the ensuing year. The following names appear on the minutes as the result: M. W. Lusk, president; Antone Pinto, vice-president; Martin Ohnstein, secretary-treasurer and business agent; George W. St. Amand, recording secretary; J. R. Jackson, inspector; Gus Whoelke, chaplain; Louis Ricci, inside guard; Clem Martin, trustee, three years; J. R. Jackson, trustee two years; Gorton Marecraft, trustee, one year; delegates to Labor Council, Brothers Lusk, Ohnstein, Ricci and Mealy.

A letter was received and read from our general secretary-treasurer, Jere L. Sullivan, in which was the acknowledgement of the receipt of our invitation to attend the ninth annual fancy dress and masquerade ball, given by Local 69, but stated that he was sorry that he was unable to attend owing to the fact that it was quite a little distance between Cincinnati and Galveston. Well the ball was a grand affair despite the fact that the weather was unfavorable. The ball room was filled to its capacity with jolly couples; music was rendered by a union orchestra from nine p. m. to one a. m. The grand march was led by Brothers Fred St. Marie and Mike De Vatie, both members of Bartenders' Local 749. Brother De Vatie was masked as Aunt Jimmie, and looked almost real. The ball was a success in every way, the only complaint there was, was the fact that the ball room was too small for the crowd (but it is the largest hall for rent in Galveston), so you well know that we had a crowd when there was not room for all to dance at the same time. The ball was pulled off on Thursday, December 17, 1914.

Everything is getting along nicely with our members and very nearly all of them are working at present. There will be a new house opening before New Years.

We had a visitor in our midst from Waitresses' Local 240, Seattle, Washington, at the close of our last meeting.

The following Christmas donations were made to Brother Lusk; Ohnstein and St. Amand, $15 each, and to Brother Ricci (our janitor and old war-horse) $25.

With best wishes for a bright and prosperous New Year (don't forget the convention in Frisco, 1915), I am with greetings,

Yours fraternally,

M. W. LUSK,
President Local 69.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been quite a long time since Local 335 has contributed any news to the MIXER AND SERVER, and to let our brothers and sisters know we are still in the land of the living, we send these few lines:

Our local, the small, is one composed of those who have enough of the fighting spirit to keep ourselves in evidence and surmount whatever obstacles may confront us. We have had some trouble in the past year, various bosses over the city having tried to make us believe we could exist on three or four dollars a week by trying to make us swallow some of their stale brand of smooth talk. The waitresses in Toledo demand at least half-way decent conditions, and to a degree we have gained them, for we work six days a week and at the very most, nine hours in one day, with a fair price for the same, $7.00.

Like the vast majority of women workers, our education, along lines pertaining to organization and unionism, had been sadly neglected. However we began to see the light of day two years ago, when Brother Durnin and members of Local 216 worked night and day to bring together a little handful of girls. Then began the battle which has been kept up, aided by our brother bartenders, our International officers, and a degree of progressiveness ourselves, and this battle still is being waged, and will continue until we can no longer find anything to fight.

We are all thankful for the assistance given us by the men and women of organized labor, but more especially do we appreciate the aid of those affiliated in the same industry. It is the earnest wish of Local 335 that every man and woman in our grand organization of the catering industry will see the urgent necessity of keeping ourselves all together in one big family, so we may be able to fight our common enemy, the boss. Surely in Union there is Strength, in our keeping together to lend to each other that assistance which real, true, human brothers and sisters should believe in, we can have the strength of Gibraltar and stand the onslaughts of the enemy without even a tremor. The earnest wish of every member of Local 335 is for a very Merry Xmas, and a Happy New Year, with a New Year's resolution to stick to the Good Old Ship of our International Union and turn our back upon the False Pleadings of Segregationists.

Fraternally yours,

NIDA R. PRANGLE,
Business Agent Local 335.

NEWARK, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Will you please correct in next issue of MIXER AND SERVER, Bartenders' Local 131 will hold their thirteenth annual ball and masque of the sick and death benevolent fund at Krueger auditorium, Belmont avenue, on Monday evening, January 25, 1915. The committee, under the able chairmanship of Philip Warshauer, are doing good work to eclipse all previous events. All members of our International are cordially invited to attend. A handsome prize will be awarded to the sister local (residing out of Newark) who have the largest representation, diamond earrings to the lady having the fanciest costume and a gold watch to the gent wearing the most comical.

With greeting for good luck and prosperity in 1915, I remain

Fraternally yours,
GEO. BROOKS,
Press Agent Ball Committee.

TAMPA, FLA., GOES WET.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Hillsboro County, Florida, has just gone through with a "wet or dry" election in which the "wet" side won.

Much interest centered in the affair, especially in Tampa, which is the county seat and contains the great bulk of the voters of the county.

The prohibitionists were carrying on a strong fight, and expressed great confidence in being able to dry the county. The state has been running under a local option law heretofore, and much of the confidence the drys felt was no doubt due to the fact that a few years ago, in an election in which a couple of prohibition amendments were submitted to the people, this county voted a majority in favor of them. There were also a great many of the voters on the wet side who were not at all over-confident, as the fight was generally considered to be a very doubtful proposition up until December 15th, the day of the election. Hard electioneering work on the part of the wet forces, however, who were supported by the big cigar manufacturers and other business men generally, resulted in a victory in most of the precincts, many of them being carried by overwhelming majorities. Only a couple of the city precincts went dry, and this was not surprising, as they were residential districts in which no saloons had ever existed, but in each instance adjoined territory that went strongly wet. The final vote as canvassed and certified by the county commissioners was: "For selling," 3,692; "Against selling," 2,260; leaving a wet majority in the county of 1,432.

Under the local option law as applied here, those precincts which went dry will have to remain dry, and only those which voted wet will have the right to maintain saloons, which seems a very unfair construction of the law, inasmuch as, it being a county-wide election, had the county gone dry by ever so small a majority, the whole county would have been declared dry. "It's a poor rule that don't work both ways."

Too much cannot be said in commendation of the hard work done by the members of Tampa Local 765, B. I. L. All the saloons in the county were closed and the members of Local 765 were out working hard all day. Even with such strongly opposing forces arrayed on each side of the question, on one side of which were what the prohibitionists are pleased to class under the general head of "the lawless element," it was one of the quietest, most orderly elections ever held in the county, and there was almost universal satisfaction expressed when the result was finally known.

Fraternally yours,
TONY SCHIRO,
Recording and Financial Secretary, Local 765.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

PUEBLO, COLO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to let the general membership know that we are still here and while you have not heard very much from us of late, we are just as enthusiastic as we were in the summer and feel just as proud of our little organization as we ever have at any time. We have not got what we want, we have got a good start and part of what we want and we are not going to quit until we gain what we want. We have worked very hard and have not as good a scale of wages as we would like to have, we have got six days and ten hours. We have not been making any headway for only about eight months, and we have just gained enough through our organization to make us feel that it is up to us and us alone through the support of organized labor to get what we want and our members are waking up to the fact that it is only through organization and amalgamation that we can get anything, therefore we feel proud of the fact that most all of our members are getting the habit of demanding the label on all their purchases, no matter where or what they are, and that naturally has a tendency to make boosters of them, and when they are boosting for other organizations they are boosting for their own.

We have a good meeting hall, and have good meetings. Our membership seems to be realizing the fact that it is up to us to row our own boat and that there is no one that is going to row it for us, all other organizations will help, but they will not and cannot run our organization if we do not try, but when we are trying we find plenty of help ready and willing to come to our assistance. Therefore we are all boosting all the time, and if we have any petty grievances we do not bring them to the notice of the other locals, but go to the Trades and Labor Assembly and ask for what we want, and we always found them ready and willing to help us. We have always been very considerate in our demands before the Central body, and have gained what we have gained, without asking the Assembly to put but one house on the unfair-list (and it is trying to sell out). We have not asked them to declare them unfair, but have appealed to them to support only houses that display the cards and buttons. We find that it is better to first educate our own members and teach them to be consistent, and then the different organizations will at all times cheerfully give us their support. It is a great pleasure to go to meetings and find that there is no two gangs but that everything is harmony, and if we do find a member that feels that things are not going as they should a good heart to heart talk with them will soon convince them that there is nothing to be gained by dissention, and it is easy to make a booster of them. All members are entitled to their views, and if they are allowed to express them and are showed where they are wrong there is no hard feelings and all is harmony. In unity there is strength. By concerted action is the only way we can gain anything. A house divided against itself can not stand, and the same thing applies to a union. So quit your wrangling among yourselves, if you have a gang go to meetings and eliminate it and get harmony and then boost and get some conditions.

Now for the banner year, amalgamation and organization, I remain

Fraternally yours,
J. N. BUTLER, Secretary Local 43.

MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 563, Bartenders' International League of America, held a large and well attended meeting on Sunday, December 6, 1914, at which the following officers were selected to serve for 1915: August Shoecker, president; George H. Thomas, vice-president; Jos. A. Ducourneau, recording secretary; George E. Sygalas, financial secretary and treasurer; Jno. F. Flinn, chaplain; George F. Torrance, inspector; Edward P. Barrett, inner guard.

All of the above officers will be installed at our January meeting. The boys also paid up nicely and Brother H. C. Unrath paid his 1915 dues in advance. We also took in one new member and reinstated one. We also donated $5 to the Salvation Army including Christmas fund; $5 to the Ladies' of Charity Christmas fund for the poor, and $1 to the Red Cross seal committee for seals for Christmas. We also adopted the monthly working button for the year 1915.

Business is a bit quiet for this time of the year, but we are all holding our own and expect things to pick up soon.

With best wishes for a Happy New Year to you and yours and all our brothers of the white apron from the boys of Local 563, I beg to remain.

Sincerely yours,
E. E. SYGALAS,
Financial Secy-Treasurer Local 563.

HARTFORD, CONN.

MR. EDITOR—Local 304's program of 1914 has thinned out somewhat; in our estimation it has surpassed all previous years in advanced progress. We have enlarged considerable area of influence in teaching the unbelievers the value of skill, citizenship and combined effort; we are lifting the veil and showing the workers what can be done by concerted action to secure a larger proportion of this world's good for labor expended in justice and fair wages. For those who know and those who have yet to know, the toilers will in their slow current have better things, better transformed conditions. Thousands have cried out of their semi-engulfed slavery for more adequate working hours, and an opportunity to enjoy life with family and loved ones.

A classy 1915 is entering with brilliant prospects in the adoption of one day rest in seven. This will be the most far-reaching step for those employed in the seven-day houses.

Our officers have been elected and they are the vanguard in building up and perfecting our organization, and are extending the hand to all men and women employed in the catering industry.

With the lessons of the past and the knowledge born of experience, our work will go forward reaching the less fortunate who toil 84 hours a week. I am proud to say that had Local 304 not existed we would now be working for the same low wages and long hours of labor that the non-unions are still working for in the unorganized places. We shall continue to rely on the trade union movement to accomplish our ends in which our faith is pinned.

Fraternally,

ALBERT FORNI,
Secretary Local 304.

HAMILTON, ONTARIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been some time since you have heard from us, so just a few lines to let you know that we are in the land of the living but up against pretty hard times at present. We have about 20 or 25 out of work, but hope it won't be long before things take a turn. We had a large attendance and transacted a large amount of business at our last meeting.

Sunday, December 20th, we had an election of officers for the ensuing six months, and the same officers were all elected by acclamation as follows: President, George Hibberd; vice-president, Wm. Cassaday; treasurer, H. Graham; financial secretary, R. Lanaway; recording secretary, J. Murray; chaplain, W. Colyer; inside guard and business agent, W. Pardell; doctor Dr. Wardell.

We are up against an ordinance to be voted on New Year's day reducing hotels to the number of ten, and six or seven liquor stores. We are going to fight hard to defeat it if possible.

Fraternally yours,
ROBT. LANAWAY,
Financial Secretary.

OMAHA, NEB.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Omaha Bartenders' Local 264 held their election of officers Monday evening, December 21, when the following officers were elected: President, Harry E. McConnon; vice-president, Wm. F. Coffee; secretary-treasurer, Ted Huber; recording secretary, Frank E. Sackett; chaplain C. B. Dean; inspector, H. B. Smith; inside guard, Chas. Simonson; outside guard, Geo. L. Miller; business agent, Chas. B. Dean; custodian, E. A. Connolly; trustees, H. C. Edwards and Chas. E. Sheridan. Installation of officers will take place on Sunday afternoon, January 3, 1915.

Brother Joe Bennett has been confined in the Nicholas Senn Hospital for several weeks on account of weak eyes; Brother Chas. F. Shenadan is laid up with the small-pox, but is getting along in first-class shape and will be out in a week or two.

Local 264 is taking in new members at every meeting, and with our newly-elected officers hope to double our membership.

Wishing all the members of the International a happy New Year, I remain

Yours fraternally,
H. C. EDWARDS,
Recording Secretary Local 264.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We held our election on December 16th. The following brothers were elected: David Lynch, president; Joe Goldman, vice-president; Chas. A. Simpson, secretary-treasurer; L. A. Glauburg, recording secretary and business agent; Jack Ramsey, inspector; Bert Skiles, guard; R. L. France and Joe Hayes, executive board; Mike O'Brien, Ed Dale and W. L. Cumbie, trustees..

We sure had a lively old time on election day. A relief committee was started with Bro. John L. Stubbs as chairman and Sister Willie Brookins as secretary; Joe Hays, Ed Hodges, Joe Goldman, and Joe Daniel are the committee.

Hard times, war times and no sale for cotton has caused a slump in business to the extent that some of our members are not as prosperous as they are in the "sweet summer time," so we have adopted a relief fund and also we have donated to several charitable institutions for their Christmas gifts to union men's children, so I think that Local 659 are surely doing their part towards humanity.

Wishing you a happy New Year, I am

Yours fraternally,

CHAS. A. SIMPSON,
Secretary-Treasurer Local 659.

WINNIPEG, MAN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A few lines from Local 592 of Winnipeg, Manitoba, to let the membership know how we are progressing. We held our election of officers on December 10th and the results show that there was not much to complain of in the officers of the year just passed. Frank Evison was re-elected president; Frank O'Brien, vice-president; Teddy Crump, recording secretary; J. Porter, chaplain; W. Ellington, inspector; E. Therien, inner guard, and Frank Sterrock, outer guard; A. W. Smith, business agent; Brothers Crump, Evison, and Sister McFetridge as sick committee, and Brothers Crump, Wacker and Smith as delegates to the Trades Council.

Our local will be one year old on January 7th and we are celebrating the occasion by a big banquet, to be held in the Manitoba Hall on that date. We are also having an at home for all the members and their families on Christmas day in the hall; this is to make sure that every one has a good time on that date. There will be an abundance of refreshments, and a dance and lots of fun for the kiddies.

Speaking about conditions: well, I suppose some of the trades are catching it worse than we are, but at the same time things are very quiet and conditions and wages are a thing out of the question, but the local is holding together and if good times ever strike these parts again, I think we shall be able to make things hum.

We have been able to secure comfortable quarters for ourselves, which have been fitted up into a club where the members can spend an hour or two in comfort, and play a game of billiards or cards to pass away the time.

A number of our men are busy feeding the soldiers these days, and as there are a large number to be fed it is helping to tide the boys over the winter season without feeling the hard times too much.

With the season's greetings from the members of Local 592 to all members of the International.

Fraternally yours,

A. W. SMITH,
Financial Secretary Local 592.

OWENSBORO, KY.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In spite of a fairly long absence from the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER, Local 690 desires to convey the information that it is still in the "Land of the Living" and making progress commensurate with its efforts.

On the 6th of December our election resulted as follows: President, T. M. Ashley; first vice-president, J. L. Ivey; second vice-president, F. P. Whitescarver; secretary-treasurer, B. L. Nixon; secretary, H. L. Hawkins; inspector, U. S. Bretz; librarian, Benj. H. Cummings; guard, Estil Ward; chaplain, John Holzknecht; trustees, W. C. Medley, R. A. Jackson and O. Matthews.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

As the majority of the foregoing have worked in harness before, there is excellent reason to believe that Local 690 should emerge at the expiration of their term with a splendid record and be in an excellent financial condition as well.

As the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER are aware, we had quite a contest during the month of September, 1914, and succeeded in winning against the opposition. The election, which occurred on September 21st was rather an "eye opener" and while it is true that we have defeated the Prohibitionists, it would seem to the undersigned that many of our members are inclined to become indifferent to their immediate surroundings. The so-called Prohibition or "fanatical" party are rushing their best speakers in on us and in fact are continuing a very persistent campaign for statewide prohibition, consequently it behoves every individual connected with the beverage industry in Kentucky not only to be on the job early but to remain there, using such efforts as their abilities permit. If they refrain from doing so, our opponents are going to give us a wallop one of these days, and when we wake up we will discover that they have surely got our "goat." Unfortunately, the catering industry in Kentucky is not as well organized as it should be. We have done our level best to spread the gospel of organization but haven't been any too successful along that line. The unorganized, whether they realize it or not, keep our hands tied so that we are unable to receive the service in behalf of our employment which we could receive if there was more thorough organization apparent. We know that efforts have been made, in fact are being continued, but notwithstanding, they somehow or another refrain from getting into line.

I see from recent issues of the MIXER AND SERVER that the divisionists are busy. I think that they are making a serious mistake. They may call themselves by whatever title they choose, yet their intent means a body blow to this International Union if their efforts are successful.

We will more than likely be represented at the Kentucky State Federation of Labor Convention at Louisville and trust that we will meet representatives from every local union in the Blue Grass State. We shall also endeavor to be represented at San Francisco, and Local 690 wishes to emphasize its position, namely, that we regard our International as the best institution of its kind and will use every effort to maintain it and increase its usefulness.

Trusting that all of our members enjoyed a merry Christmas, wishing them a prosperous, successful and enjoyable 1915, I am

Yours fraternally,

B. L. NIXON,
Secretary Local 690.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has not been but a month since I have asked permission for space in the MIXER AND SERVER, but feel it my duty to let all the brothers know that Waiters' Union, Local 2, of Brooklyn, requests all traveling members to pass Brooklyn up for some time to come, as we have an overabundance of hotel and restaurant workers here now. Business is very dull, with no relief in sight. Quite a number of our members are out of work here at present and we can offer no inducements in the way of work; but in the face of all this we still have travelers coming our way, and I want to say to the traveling brothers on behalf of Waiters' Union, Local 2, of Brooklyn: "STAY AWAY FROM BROOKLYN."

Hoping you will give this space in the January MIXER AND SERVER, and wishing yourself, the Executive Board and general membership, a Happy New Year, I remain,

Fraternally yours,
MAX HASSENBERG,
Rec. Sec'y and Press Agt., Local 2.

ALTON, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from Local 243 to the MIXER AND SERVER.

Last August, 1914, Brother Bert Armstrong of Local 387, Evansville, Ind., came to Alton to look for work. As business was slack he was unable to find any. He got a loan from our Local 243, Alton, Ill., for five dollars, he was then on the way to Joplin, Mo. Any information to where he is would be appreciated as we need the money. We still have his book.

Business in our line is on the bum, we have thirty-five men on the spare list. Out of seventy-four saloons we have four unfair, but we are urging them to get their feet wet and join us.

We have had as high as five brothers on the sick list but all are improving. Our financial secretary, Brother Mark Bruggeman, had a streak of bad luck, he was sick for two weeks, and lost his wife just two weeks ago.

I am sending you a little poetry, composed by Bro. Orvie Gunn, which we would like for you to publish with this correspondence.

Thanking you for same, and with best wishes to you and all the brothers.

Yours fraternally,
BEN ROSE,
Secretary Local 243.

It was on a December morning,
And the snow was falling fast;
We had a worthy brother,
And his wife, her life had passed.

She had been at her death-bed for some time,
"Till now is said:
"She had the rest to come."
And now she is lying dead.

Although 'tis sad to brother,
And the local too,
We will live up to our obligations
And see our brother through.

For you know these things are awful,
But we will try and bear them through;
For we cannot tell the time,
.When our time may be due.

And in sympathy are our feelings,
And as God has made us man,
We will always extend our feelings,
And also a willing hand.

Now, as our brother is broken hearted,
And the best friend he had is gone,
We may hope that some day they will meet
In the Land of the Great Beyond.

“Jitney” Judiciousness

For a number of years the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America attempted, and in a measure, carried on the affairs of organization on a per capita tax which called for the payment of a Whole Nickel for each and every member in good standing in each of its affiliated local unions. Needless to say that the number of live local unions were extremely limited and the total amounts paid to headquarters were insufficient to even expect, much less think, of increasing their numbers to any appreciable extent. In fact, the collection of “jitneys” seldom totaled up more than enough to meet the bills for limited correspondence, postage and office rent. For example the report for the month of February, 1898, showed per capita tax income of $65.35. Just how the salaried secretary fared is illustrated by quoting from the reports: November, 1897, Secretary on account, $43.60; December, 1897, Secretary on account, $44.45; January, 1898, Secretary on account, $45.45.

Those were the good old days of “Jitney Management” and even at that period there were fellows obsessed with the idea that they were paying an “exorbitant salary” to their general secretary. Perhaps after all they were, considering the fact that but two years previous the Executive Board presented a statement from which we quote the following:

“When the present administration assumed control of the offices, April 19, 1896, just two years ago, the organization consisted of sixteen locals in good standing and only nine cities were represented. The total membership was less than one thousand in good standing, the receipts averaged about $70.00 per month.” The “Jitney Management” in the same report boasted of having reduced the per capita tax from seven and one-half cents per member per month to five cents. As far as final results were concerned may be gleaned when it is recorded that in the month of July, 1899, the “Jitney Management” had shoved the old ship on the rocks with unpaid bills aggregating several thousands of dollars and a roster calling for nineteen locals with a membership approximately of 750 on the continent of North America. Yes indeed those were the good old days when “Jitney Management” which believed in Segregation and practised it to a finish and that finish Bankruptcy both in membership and funds.

The “Jitney” as per capita tax was the law when the present general secretary took over the affairs, but “Jitney Management” was put into the discard never to return, and following right on its heels went single craft organization, that lovely (?) flower which has been watered and cared for by those who style themselves Segregationists.

Are we on the eve of trying another “Jitney” period, are we dissatisfied with a fair measure of progress, shall we experiment with what we know from sad experience is fossilized and non-result producing?

Under the old order, the single bore idea, the pop-gun stage, so to speak, when the “Jitney” and management of the same caliber were in control, our International Union consisted of what? Think it over.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in Hotels, Clubs, Cafes, Buffets, or Bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

To know deep down in your heart that you are in error, yet persist in your efforts based on such a foundation, may be pleasing and satisfying to the meagered-soul individual, but such an attitude, coupled with insistent performance along those lines simply proclaim to him who may wish to see, that you are not master of yourself; therefore, being minus that positively essential thing, you are abusing the friendship and confidence of your friends and acquaintances by pretending to be the possessor of the one thing above all others—mastery of self—which characterizes genuine leadership, for it has been truly said that "He who can not master himself has little need to seek leadership of his fellows."

There are leaders and generals in all walks of life. In the labor movement of our continent we find industrial generals whose start in life was of the most humble, in fact, the great majority of them who have left their impress on the economic movement of previous periods, came from the homes of struggling workingmen, and what is true of the generals of the industrial army yesteryear, is applicable to those leaders or industrial army generals of today—men and women selected by their fellow wage earners, who are steadily marching onward toward that better tomorrow when the workers of our time will secure and enjoy a greater measure of remuneration for labor done and additional time to employ in healthful recreation and study. The economic movement of our time is not receding, this, too, despite the seeming slowness of achievement.

A comparison of what the workers enjoy today and that which they were forced to accept a decade ago will show innumerable benefits and advantages which, unfortunately, are frequently minimized by the beneficiaries who in no sense were responsible for the improvement. Efforts are occasionally made by seekers for leadership to inculcate the idea that what has been secured by aggressive generalship and activity is microscopic or imaginary; their sole idea in attempting to create such impression is of doubtful value to themselves and surely of negative value to the movement with which they are identified. Such men secure a small measure of popularity and a following of miniature proportions, for a time, but even their meager following quickly discern that attempting to apportion blame for alleged lack of progress, and basing the blame on individuals instead of on an imposed system adopted by the rank and file; to feed the flames of discontent because of personal dislike, or to secure a petty revenge for fancied or real wrongs presumed to have been committed, or to make aggressive war on officials whom they are unable to influence, marks such self-seekers as wholly unfit to lead or to be followed.

It takes time to inculcate trades unionism and when the individual absorbs the gospel of mutual helpfulness he quickly develops into a constructive agent and allows nothing surmountable and reasonable to chance or action of the elements; he truly places his shoulder to the wheel and aids the movement onward and upward.

The constructive trades unionists are not always satisfied, they too, find shortcomings in those whom they elect to executive positions, but they are intelligent enough to appreciate that no man or woman is perfect, all are liable to err, and the spirit of advancement prompts them to get in and push; not get out and bestrew the road with further obstacles. They are not greatly concerned whether the executive may temporarily secure or enjoy the reflected glory of the combined efforts of all; they are, however, concerned in the advancement made, for in that they know that reaping benefits is possible; they appreciate fully the need of executives and will, invariably, bestow on such as prove themselves capable and active, generous measure of praise and suitable reward. The constructive trades unionists believe implicitly in the creed which stands as their platform of principles; they know that their organization will live, thrive and prosper long after its present day officials have passed to the great beyond; they know it will live, not because here and there has been selected from their ranks men or women who develop into bright, brainy, clever generals, executives who diffused energy and light, who endeavored to administer affairs to the best of their ability and with no other thought than the general good of those who honored them by support. They know that all of the ability and brains of the catering industry is neither confined in one person or period and in that knowledge they will continue patiently striving to reach the goal set forth in their professions of trade union faith.

The swan song of our International is neither being prepared or will it be sung as predicted by those whose wish is father to the thought—that fact transcends—all other alleged predictions may occupy thought for a moment, but quickly disappear under the steady light of logic and plain, every-day intelligence, for when the last word has been uttered as to the wisdom of our general membership, no one as yet dared accuse them of being a collection of mental irresponsibles, nor have they, by action, warranted any such conclusion. The one dominant, imperishable fact is—our International Union is now on the trade union map; let him who dares attempt to displace it calculate the consequences before inserting the first wedge.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

After six months of unremitting warfare the contending nations of Europe are as far away from settlement of the differences as they were at the beginning. The American newspapers and magazines have been filled with descriptions of what each side is doing, proposes to do and what they may be expected to accomplish in the months to come. Reams of paper and tons of printer's ink have been used in illustrating the various events which have allegedly transpired; great attention is paid to the methods used to transport troops and care for their well being on long marches, how the medical departments look after the poor victims of shrapnel and bullet, how the signal corps succeed in arranging methods of communication and by no means last or least the splendid success achieved by the department having to do with food and serving of same. In pretty near every article written stress is made of the equipment which cares for the inner man, how hot coffee and food are served to soldiers in the trenches, how infrequently the soldiers have to miss a meal is due, all writers say, to the methods organized for that specific purpose. The word organization creeps into all truly descriptive articles about the war, for the writers recognise the one impelling fact that, without thorough organization the men in the field would be unable to remain very long in the trenches or elsewhere unless organized effort produced certain effective and definite results. Take the one matter of subsistence and consider it from the viewpoint of men and women who have to deal with such questions in their daily toil. The average layman who simply drops into a cafe or bar and gives his orders does not grasp the significance of the toil required to be able to serve him promptly with the things which he desires, either beverage or food. He does not see the wagons arriving and unloading at the doors of these establishments; he pays little or probably no attention to that phase of catering—all he knows or cares for is that he wants a certain thing, and orders it. If perchance he fails to get it he wants to know why.

He does not look back to the growing grain, nor does he see it carted to the railway stations and loaded on cars; he does not see the railroad men, engineers, firemen, switchmen, working their day or night in aiding to haul that growing grain to destination; he overlooks the teamsters who take care of it on arrival at destination, he knows nothing of the innumerable other workers whose service is required in order that the transportation end is cared for and the grain landed where it is to be prepared for food or beverage. If it is to be flour he does not see the miller and others employed who grind and care for it; if it is to be converted into beverages he does not follow it to the distillery or brewhouse. He sees it when it comes to him for final disposition, and that is about all that concerns him, unless it might be the price which he has to pay for it. What is true of grain is quite as true of meats, the patron who orders his chop or steak seldom looks back to the farm or range from whence the animal came, nor does he follow the animal to the railway car and thence on through its many stages until it is finally delivered to the kitchen; he does not see the irrepressible ice man, the milk man and the other men each bearing burdens and delivering them where they are cared for and prepared for consumption of the hungry and thirsty public. To the lay man none of these moves are noted, yet without them the machinery which brings such speedy results would be handicapped, ineffective. The farm where the stock and the grain was grown accomplished results by a species of organized effort, even our catering industry workers overlook that point at times, yet they must admit that some definite method must have been employed or else the stock or grain would never reach a stage where it would be useful for the purpose designed. Transportation as we understand it today, is organization working to a definite end. That is also true of fabricators of any article which we use or handle in our daily employment. Organization is everywhere for without it there would be chaos. Returning to the subject of organization among the combatants in Europe, one can pick up almost any daily paper or current magazine and read about the initial steps being taken by the various nations involved. Here is an item about one or several thousand "rookies" being taught how to march, how to jump, how to run, how to mount horses, how to load and carry a gun, how to care for their feet, how to get the most service out of themselves under abnormal conditions; officers drilling thousands in this place how to do this, that or some other maneuver on foot, other drill masters teaching thousands somewhere else how to mount horses and care for their mounts; still other thousands being shown the intricacies of loading and aiming field artillery and larger field guns used in sieges. Other teachers showing how to dig trenches and make them as comfortable as human mind can devise and as impervious to shot and shell as possible. Another item carries the information that aviation corps are teaching recruits how to handle "air birds" under normal and adverse conditions, and another recites the experiences of officers teaching sailors the rudiments of submarine warfare, still other items recite what the navy departments are doing in the way of teaching young men to fill the places which may be made and are being made by losses. Every move, every effort indicates organization, the opposite of individual effort. One does not have to possess great military knowledge to understand how necessary all of this work really is, nor need one possess exceptional intelligence to see what unity of purpose and action produces. We wonder if our general membership truly appreciates the lesson being taught in all of this world trouble; the lesson which all writers on war topics drive home in every other sentence—organization wins where disorganization fills the long shallow grave with dead. Our employers have for years and years shown us the benefits of sticking together; they never question a man's political or religious beliefs, they simply seek his co-operation to the end that the investment which they have in the catering industry shall return to them every penny possible. Employes see these efforts made, watch them grow from infant institutions into national and international bodies which meet at stated periods presumably to discuss ordinary matters in connection with the industry, they make public only such matters of minor importance as they know will not divulge their real campaign, yet deep down at the foundation the meaning of these annual conferences are to make provisions to prevent any further encroachment on the part of the employes to secure any better wages or improved working conditions. We may pat ourselves on the back and assume the position that, our employers pay little heed to what we are doing, but those of you who care to give the matter more than superficial examination will discover that while here and there may be found an employer who seemingly pays little or no attention to what we are doing, the organized employer is paying attention and paying close attention to every move which we make as locals or as an international body of catering industry employes. Every State and many of the large cities have their organizations of our employers, some call themselves by names which do not indicate their real membership, but they are catering industry employers just the same; they have even gone further than the average employer in other lines of industry, they have caused their chief aids, stewards, chefs, clerks and head bar-men to establish organizations. For instance in the past hotel clerks were known as such, now they parade as Greeters Clubs, the Stewards Association was called by that name, now they appear in some cities as the Purveyors Club, while the barmen and cooks carry quite as misleading titles to those who are unacquainted with the inside facts. Annually these associations and clubs get together and the catering industry journals spread themselves out telling what a brilliant affair it was and then follows a list of catering employers "who honored the event by their presence."

We may work along as individuals until the crack of doom, but we will never accomplish what we are seeking to bring about until we take leaf after leaf from the book of experience of our employers; we need to understand the meaning of organization and just as soon as we absorb that knowledge we must endeavor to inculcate our workers with similar ideas, to induce them to become members of our International Union, and once inside, to encourage them to continue membership and heartily co-operate with us in converting those working at our allied crafts to become members.

Thorough organization is the keynote of every bit of success which we have read about the warring nations; when equal organization meets, then we find them battling for supremacy; when superior organization meets lack of organization we find news items corresponding to what we call routs.

The forces of catering industry employees of America need to get closer and not farther apart; the scattered force is quickly whipped in military contests, quite as quick as in industrial conflicts, and that is the big lesson which the warring nations offer to the reader who is not blinded with a veil of craft superiority. Imagine, if you can, the artillery of any one of the warring armies trying to produce, unaided, what has been accomplished by the combined branches of that army; they would have met with such defeat that the world would have stood appalled. In military tactics each branch serves a special need and in combining the branches they exhibit organization in effective working shape. So it is with the workers in the catering industry—no single craft engaged in the industry can secure tangible results without the co-operation of all those engaged in the industry, and the best way to obtain that character of returns is in an army which can control directly its own destinies. As in military maneuvering, it occasionally happens that the navy or the army wins an occasional victory, but that does not mean a general victory, no more so than the winning of concessions from the employers of one city mean that the workers in all other cities will benefit by it directly. Organization all along the line and united action is the keynote; just as soon as we understand that point, just that quickly will we get together and stick to a finish.

MUSSING THE MESSAGE.

One of the chief obstacles in the way of our business men capturing their share of the trade in the countries to the south of us has been their failure to learn by hard study just how to approach the people with whom they want to trade. One of the chief reasons why Germany has succeeded in getting that trade is that her business men have made a study of the Latin American countries and found out in what spirit and in what manner they do business. In other words, the Germans have beaten us at our own game. We had just as much of a message to take to Central and South America as Germany had but we mussed it in giving it expression; Germany did not.

Without dwelling longer upon our relations with the countries to the south of us, we may inquire if in bringing their message to this city the so-called flying squadron did not muss the message they had to bring. The flying squadron have been visiting New Haven for the avowed purpose of interesting the good people of this locality in nation-wide prohibition by means of an amendment to be made to the constitution of the United States. They have a perfect right to visit this city and, to speak in the vernacular of trade, to sell their goods. There is no city on the globe better perfected for the consideration of all questions. In fact all questions are threshed out here day after day by men trained in their subjects. So here, indeed, is an open forum, as it were, and the flying squadron violate none of the courtesies of hospitality by occupying it.

What we would have advised these speakers to do had we been familiar with their literature was to study this field before attacking it, to learn what our habits of thought are, how we like to be approached, how best we can be approached, etc., etc. To tell the thinking people of this community that it would be better for the three thousand studens of Yale to attend the meetings of the flying squadron than sit under the instruction of Mr. Taft, because he does not believe in prohibition as a cure of the evil complained of, is to offer their wares under conditions that make their usefulness unappreciated. We are not accustomed to that method of being led out of the darkness into light. And so in the case of another speaker attached to the flying squadron. He declared that "in the murky atmosphere of the smoking compartment there is more downright philosophy than there is in all Yale University."

We overlook the abuse of hospitality embodied in these views and the statements of them to again remind these and other crusaders that this is no way to sell their wares in the historic city of New Haven. Our habit is to deal with men who respect the views of their adversaries even though dissenting from them. We have not formed the habit of questioning the moral fibre and intellectual integrity of those with whom we are in disagreement. We may pray for them but we do not hit them over the head with a brick.

TAFT MAKES REPLY.

Sets Forth His Attitude on Liquor Question and Gives Reason.

The three days' visit of the Flying Squadron of Prohibition talkers closed in Calvary Baptist church Saturday evening with addresses by former Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana; Dr. Ira B. Landreth, president of the Ward-Belmont College, Tennessee, and Oliver W. Stewart, a former member of the Illinois legislature. Friday night's address by former prohibition candidate for president, Eugene Chafin, referring to the stand of Presidents Wilson and Taft on the prohibition question caused quite an amount of comment.

When President Taft was asked Saturday if he had any reply to make, simply gave out the information that his views on prohibition were clearly outlined in a speech he delivered in 1908 at Yale on the subject of "Citizenship." On that occasion he said that nothing was more foolish or more utterly at variance with sound public policy than to enact a law which, by reason of the conditions surrounding the community in which it is declared to be a law, was incapable of enforcement and the result was the great argument for local option which was really an instrumentality for determining whether a law can be enforced before it is made operative. "In cases where the sale of liquor can not be prohibited in fact," said the president, "it is far better to regulate and diminish its evil than to attempt to stamp it out. By the enactment of a drastic law and the failure to enforce it there is injected into the public mind the idea that laws are to be observed or violated according to the will of those affected. I need not say how altogether pernicious such a loose theory is." —Journal-Courier, New Haven, Conn., December 7, 1914.

CONDEMNATION WITHOUT CAUSE.

We have always maintained that our International Union should be judged by its critics as an institution and not by one or two individuals here or there in its affiliated local unions. We want to be weighed as a whole and not by samples taken from the lot; and while we believe we have a good general average which will compare with other organizations of similar scope, to judge justly of others we must be willing to permit them to render judgment of us. That thought, though probably not as clearly expressed as we should like, offers the opportunity to say a word or two to those locals which appeared to have cause for dissatisfaction on account of the seeming indolence or indifference of other trades unionists in the recent elections. There may be men of other crafts and trades situated in towns or cities who give expression to opposition to the industry which employs so many of our members, but that is no good reason to believe that all of that particular craft or trade wherever found is equally antagonistic to us and the catering industry and would get out on election day and vote us out of our jobs. Because a baker smokes a scab cigar in your town it does not follow that all bakers are smokers of scab cigars. If a carpenter votes the DRY ticket in your city, it does not necessarily mean that all the carpenters in the country are Anti-Saloonists; if a printer advocates no license in a part of your town, it don't follow that all type-stickers want to close out every cafe and saloon in America; if a machinist fails to patronize the eat shop where the Green and White Button is worn by our members, that is no reason to conclude that all machinists are patrons of non-union catering houses. Judge other trades in a similar manner as you want ours to be judged, by the actions of the general membership, not a few here and there who have failed to absorb the true teachings of brotherhood and fraternalism. Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

In response to numerous inquiries, the information is imparted that the resolutions alleged to have been sent out by Local 401 of Chicago, Ill., were never submitted to the General Executive Board for investigation or endorsement. Local 401, of Chicago, Ill., is a SUSPENDED UNION; said local has made no report since August, 1914, and has been dropped from the roster of our International Union. The "long list," printed in each issue of the MIXER AND SERVER, gives an accurate record of the financial standing of our local unions. Local unions which are over TWO CALENDAR MONTHS IN ARREARS are not entitled to consideration and should be denied usual courtesies.

When in doubt on matters of this character, write headquarters and obtain official information.

Local 459, Victoria, B. C., informs us that their former secretary, Ray L. King, departed for parts unknown immediately after that local's recent entertainment and forgot to make any accounting whatsoever of the funds of the entertainment of local union. King is described as being 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing about 148 pounds, light complexion, slightly bald, with lump on right cheek; wears, as a rule, stiff hat and light overcoat, shows front teeth when laughing; cook by trade. Information of the whereabouts of said Ray L. King should be addressed to C. B. George, Box 14, Victoria, B. C.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Any reader knowing the whereabouts of Grover H. Smith, who left his home at Ketchikan, Alaska, and went to Seattle, Wash., where he was last heard of a year ago last September (said Grover H. Smith may possibly be using the name of McCarthy), 22 years old, 5 foot 6, weight in the neighborhood of 145 pounds, blue eyes and very heavy dark red hair, more than likely to be found working in a theater, restaurant or tending bar, and will kindly send the information to his mother, Mrs. Charles A. Smith, P. O. Box 193, Ketchikan, Alaska, it will be greatly appreciated.

Traveling cards issued by former Local 476, Tucson, Ariz., bearing date subsequent to December, 1914, are null and void, and should not be given recognition by any of our affiliated locals. There is a debit of $12.08 against all holders of such traveling cards. The amount must be paid to the general office before legal transfer can occur.

IMPORTANT NOTICE FROM MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Beware of cooks coming from Minneapolis who do not carry paid-up membership books. We have had two strikes during the past year, and these cooks may have a history connected with them. Perhaps they are in bad with us, as we had to lose a few members for reasons during the last year.

We request all locals and members to show no courtesy to any cook coming from Minneapolis before writing the secretary, Leslie Sinton, 104 Washington avenue S., Minneapolis, Minn. NORTHWESTERN COOKS' ASSO., LOCAL 458.

WALLACE, IDAHO, Dec. 23, 1914.

WR. J. L. SULLIVAN:

Dear Sir and Brother—Enclosed please find charges of S. Dilly, former secretary of Local 426, who left town last June with the understanding that he was only going on a visit for a few days and would return, but after two weeks' absence we mistrusted him and we investigated and found him to be short $159.20 in bank. We therefore put these charges (as instructed by the Executive Board) before you, requesting that the same be published in the MIXER AND SERVER, so that if he should obtain work where there is an existing local, they may try and collect the shortage due Local 426.

Trusting I have complied with the by-laws and general constitution in notifying the International, and with best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year,

Yours fraternally,

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES.

"Mamma," said little Lauretta, "Aunt Mary is getting awfully fat, isn't she?"

"It isn't polite to say 'fat,' dear. You should say 'stout,' rejoined her mother.

At dinner that evening when she was asked what kind of meat she would like, Lauretta replied: "A little of the lean and a little of the stout, please."

Little Lola's papa was very homely and one day after looking at him steadily for some time she said:

"Mamma, was papa the only man there was left when you got ready to marry?"

"You have a bad cold, Elmer," said his mother. "I'll wrap your throat with flannel and give you some cough syrup."

"Wouldn't flannel cakes and maple syrup be better, mamma?" queried Elmer.

"Harry," said the teacher to a pupil in the junior grammar class, "what gender is 'phonograph'?"

"Feminine gender," was the answer.

"No, no," said the teacher. "It is neuter gender."

"Well, it ought to be feminine," replied Harry. "because it repeats everything it is told."—Times-Star.

A large negro woman, followed by a child, was heard to say: "Come on here, Egg-nogg, what you mean by coming 'long so slow?" A by-stander asked her why she called the child by such a name as Egg-nogg, and she replied: "You know dat nigger Julie Johnson? Well, she done got twins what she calls 'Tom and Jerry,' and I ain't 'g'wine to let no nigger get ahead o' me naming her brats. Come on here Egg-nogg."—National Monthly.

BUFFALO, N. Y., January 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

One of the important subjects to be brought to the attention of the Eighteenth General Convention to be held in San Francisco, Cal., during the week of June 14, 1915, will be that of segregating the culinary workers from the bartenders; this subject is worthy of careful and sober study on the part of those who have been or will be selected to represent their local organization at this convention and the rank and file in general. To segregate, is to divide, to weaken and to lessen the efficiency of the organization, which is organized to better the conditions of those engaged in our allied trades, morally, socially and financially.

What is to be gained by segregation? Those advocating that propaganda tell us that the present International has failed to organize the culinary workers, and that to organize them it will be necessary to establish an organization composed strictly of culinary workers; if this is true, then their argument might have some foundation, but is it true? I say most emphatically, NO! The present International has made every effort possible to organize the culinary workers, and I can truthfully say that our efforts to a large extent have been successful, considering the lack of interest on the part of a large proportion of the culinary worker of this country for organization of a trade union character, he being content with a social club where he can spend his few leisure hours and rest in a peaceful mind that his employer is satisfied with his choice of recreation, knowing that were he to discuss the question of bettering his conditions of labor, that his expulsion from the said club would follow immediately. But notwithstanding that feeling on the part of a large number of the culinary workers, we have successfully organized and bettered the conditions of the culinary worker; and every effort has been made by myself, my colleagues on the General Executive Board and those in the employ of the International Union to do everything possible to make the cook, waiter, waitress, bartender and other workers of the catering industry realize that organization of a trade union character is their only salvation to bring about emancipation and their freedom, and the quicker they realize that the sooner they will be able to get a living wage for themselves and their fellow employees.

What have those favoring segregation got to show that they will be more successful than the present International? NOTHING! Nor have they attempted to present any evidence whereby they will be able to make good. They leave us in the dark on that question and endeavor to cover up that deficiency in their propaganda by trying to debase the intelligence of the rank and file of our membership with the argument that this International, with over Sixty Thousand men and women, is sustained and maintained for the sole purpose of keeping the secretary-treasurer and others in a position, or in other words, on the pay-roll; the most absurd and ridiculous argument that could be fostered upon the intelligence of our members, who, knowing that organization was necessary for the amelioration and final emancipation of labor, have banded themselves together in this International Union.

In a recent issue of their paper, they gave a review of the salaries paid to the officials and representatives, as well as the employees, of the International Union. Have they considered that to form two organizations out of the present International would mean doubling that salary list? And if they have not, then may we ask, is that their reason for advocating this division, in order that they themselves may feed at the "pie counter" as they call it?

During the month I installed the officers of Locals 175 and 196. Both organizations have elected a capable and efficient set of officers for the ensuing term, and they are set on making this year the banner year of their respective organization. Go to it, boys; may your efforts be crowned with an abundance of success, is the wish of yours truly.

On the 13th I visited the city of Hamilton, Ont., and was greeted at the station by our congenial friend, Brother George Hibbard. After depositing my baggage at the hotel, we started out to visit some of the officers, and later in the day, accompanied by Brothers Hibbard, Cassidy, Lanaway, Ollcott, Beven, Cotter and Graham, we got into a buzz wagon and called on several of the members and renewed old acquaintances. During the afternoon I had the pleasure of meeting Brother John Farr, who is now manager of the Jockey Club, but still maintains his interest in our organization.

On the 14th I left for Toronto; was met at the station by a delegation composed of Brothers O'Leary, McCaffrey and Riggs, of Local 280, and Brothers Hinton and Humphries, of Local 300. After registering at the hotel I proceeded to the headquarters of Local 300 and discussed with their executive board several matters of interest to their local union. In the afternoon, accompanied by Brothers O'Leary, Humphries, Parks and McGregor, we witnessed the "Third Party," and in the evening I attended meeting of Local 300 and a meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board.

On the 15th had arrangements for a meeting with some of the old officers of Cooks' Local 439, but none of them showed up; however, I mapped out a plan whereby they were to reorganize and amalgamate with Local 300, which will greatly strengthen that local union and place them in a better position to organize the unorganized workers of their calling in their jurisdiction.

Attended the sixteenth annual ball given by Local 175, and it was a splendid success. The committee that had the ball in charge is entitled to considerable credit for the success and manner in which the same was conducted.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

Jan. 13—To Hamilton	$1.95
" 14—To Toronto	1.15
" 15—To Buffalo	3.10
Telegram, car fare and phone.....	1.00
Postage	6.00
Traveling expenses	9.00
Total	$22.20

Respectfully submitted,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 562.

January 2, 1915.

MR. H. MAERTENS, Secretary Local 109, 260 Washington Street, Newark, N. J.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 26th ult, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Last summer one of our members left our city, after a few months he returned; we charged him back dues for the time of his absence, which he paid. Now he calls on section 55 of the International constitution, claiming that he was not working at the craft and that we had no right to charge him back dues. Did the local union do right in charging him his back dues?"

Section 55 in part says as follows: "When a member is actually leaving the city and can show proofs that he is in a town where no organization exists, that it shall be optional on the part of the locals as to charging him back dues." "That it shall be optional," the phraseology of that sentence puts the question of charging back dues up to the local union, and unless the question is clearly set forth in the by-laws of the local union, they would not be justified in making any exemptions. If this matter is set forth in the by-laws of Local 109 and this member had been living in a city where no local of our International Union exists, and that he had not been following any of the callings coming under the jurisdiction of our International Union, then the local union can exercise their own autonomy in the premises. With season's greetings,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 563.

MR. EUGENE FISCHER, Secretary, Local 273, 22 E. Court Street, Springfield, Mass.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed by Local 273 against Local 67, for placing a bar label in the Hotel Chandler after they had been duly notified that the members of Local 273 were on strike in that hotel.

Local 67 makes a general denial of the said charges and submits statements from the present proprietor and two former proprietors, certifying to the fact that there has been a bar label displayed in the Hotel Chandler dating back beyond the year 1898, and that the reason for a card of recent issue being displayed in the bar at this time, is that the previous card issued had been mislaid.

It is further contended that the said strike referred to was not called in accordance with section 157 of the International Union constitution and therefore Local 273 was not entitled to any financial or sympathetic strike support.

After having carefully perused the contents of all the statements submitted, I fail to find any grounds upon which these charges can be based; they are therefore dismissed.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

MR. A. A. HUOT, Secretary, Local 116, 47 Madison Street, Chicopee Falls, Mass.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your communication of the 4th day of January, wherein you ask for a decision anent the death claim of the late brother, Frank C. Hunter.

In looking over this claim I find that his dues for the months of March and April were not paid until May 10th, thereby being two months and ten days in arrears, or having automatically become suspended on May 1st. I further find that the said brother did not straighten his membership out until June 27th, that being the time that he actually became reinstated to membership. The due stamps for the months of March, April and May and the reinstatement stamp for June are also missing from his due book. This member having died on the 3rd day of December and not having become reinstated to membership until June 27th, was not in continuous good standing for a period of six months preceding his death, therefore not entitled to the death benefit of the International Union.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 565.

January 9, 1915.

MR. J. L. VITTELOW, Secretary Local 480, 430 Washington Street, Henderson, Ky.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 6th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"It was voted and passed to place a fine of $1 on any member that did not turn out and march on Labor Day, with no excuse accepted. Now some of the members who failed to turn out and were fined, refuse to pay their fine because they had to work. Has the president the right to take the fine off, or does it have to be voted on and passed by the local?"

The penalty having been imposed by resolution adopted by the local union, it can only be abrogated by authority of the local union; therefore the president has no authority to remit the said fine and the same can only be remitted by action of the local union. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

MR. G. S. ANDREWS, Secretary, Local 482, 241 W. Jefferson Street, Butler, Pa.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 9th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Our by-laws provide that when a member is absent from any meeting he shall be fined fifty cents, unless he offers a satisfactory excuse; and, further, that no excuse other than that he was not in the city, that he or some other member of his family was sick on the meeting night, can be accepted by the local union. A member presented an excuse that he had a business engagement on the meeting night and that he did not feel justified in breaking the same; did the local union have a legal right to penalize him for failing to attend the said meeting, notwithstanding the fact that he offered the above stated excuse?"

The local union had a legal right to penalize the said member for his failure to attend the said meeting, the by-laws of the local union set forth very clearly just what excuses will exempt a member from attendance at meetings. The member in question should have known when he made his business engagement, that the same would conflict with his attendance at the meeting of his local union and should have set some other time for the said engagement. I consider the action of the local union in penalizing the said member as being in compliance with its by-laws. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 567.

January 12, 1915.

MR. W. C. DUNNING, Secretary Local 820, 839 W. Work Street, Sheridan, Wyo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 8th wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Can we rent our bar labels to proprietors where they are doing their own work?"

Local unions cannot rent bar labels under any circumstances.

"Can a proprietor retain our label where he does all his own work, with the exception of having a union bartender work the meal hour?"

Where an employer does all his own work and is not a passive member of your union, the fact that he employs a union man a few hours each day to relieve him for his meals, would not entitle him to the use of our label.

"We have a manager that is working a shift, does he have to become a member of the local union?"

See Decision 117, May, 1912, issue of the MIXER AND SERVER.

"We have several boys who have taken out withdrawal cards and are scattered all over the country and are tending bar where there are no local union, can they do that and retain their withdrawal cards?"

See Decision 285, April, 1913, issue of the MIXER AND SERVER.

"We have two proprietors who have withdrawal cards and are doing all their own work, is it necessary to deposit their withdrawal cards?"

If these proprietors desire the use of our label and do not employ any of our members, it will be necessary for them to deposit their withdrawal cards and become passive members. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 568.

January 12, 1915.

MR. EDGAR L. BROWN, Local 504, Filbeck Hotel Bar, Terre Haute, Ind.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 6th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"In November, 1913, we amended our by-laws and provided the following section: 'No member of this local shall hold an elective office in Local 504 unless said member has been in good standing for a period of twelve months.' The member recently elected business agent was in arrears for dues from August 1, 1914, to December 1, 1914, was his election legal?"

The final paragraph of Decision No. 355 will advise you that all amendments to the constitution and by-laws must receive the approval of the General President. The amendment referred to, not having received the approval of the General President, cannot be recognized as being operative so far as this office is concerned; therefore, if this member's dues were paid up and he was reinstated to membership prior to his nomination and election to office in the local union, the said nomination and election was legal. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.Decision No. 569.

January 16, 1915.

MR. FRED EBELING, Secretary, Local 865, 167 N. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 14th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Has this local the right to give a waiver, so that a suspended member of Local 865 is not compelled to reinstate with this local and can join some other local union? Would his membership be legal?"

Section 18. "Suspended members shall only be reinstated by a vote of the local suspending them."

Section 22 (a). "Any member suspended or expelled from any local is ineligible to membership in any other local of this International Union, except by the consent of the local by which he was suspended or expelled."

Except by consent of the local by which he was suspended or expelled. Section 18 sets forth very clearly that a suspended member can be reinstated only by the local in which he was suspended; therefore, it is my judgment that when a local requests another local for the privilege of having a suspended member renew his membership, they can only comply with that request by reinstating the suspended member in their local and issuing him a traveling card, so that he can transfer his membership into the local union making the request.

In the case of an expelled member: a local union in expelling a member severs his connection with the International Union, and if he should desire to become a member again, he would have to join as a new member; and if, after the expiration of one year as provided for in section 171, the said expelled member desires to renew his membership through some other local, the local to whom the application was made would have to secure the permission of the local in which he was expelled, and if they gave their consent, then and then only, could the local to whom the application was made accept the said expelled member into their organization and thereby renew his membership with the International Union. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 570.

January 20, 1915.

MR. FRED SCHWENKER, Secretary, Local 79, Box 591, Louisville, Ky.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 18th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"We have been carrying a sick member as provided for by section 165 and at our last meeting the local was advised that the said member was declared insane by the court and committed to an asylum; do we have to continue him in good standing under section 165? A brother member has offered to pay his dues and keep him in good standing, must we accept the same?"

An answer to your first question will be found in Decision No. 435, published in the April, 1914, issue of the Mixer and Server.

In reply to your second question: "can a brother member pay his dues for him?" I am of the opinion that he can and that the local union could not legally refuse to accept the same. There is nothing in the constitution which prohibits one member from paying the dues of another member, and so long as this member who has been committed to an asylum is kept in good standing with the local union, whether by a brother member or friends, the local cannot suspend him or issue him a withdrawal card as provided for in Decision No. 435. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 571.

January 21, 1915.

MR. C. R. JOHNSON, Secretary, Local 639, 1632 Second Avenue, Moline, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 18th, wherein you state that you desire a decision on the following:

"Local 850 of Rock Island issued to Elmer Mizer a probationary travelling card. Brother Mizer was initiated in Local 850 December 13th, 1914. Brother Wynn told him that he could work under the jurisdiction of Local 639 as a probationary member. Brother Wynn on January 11th, 1915, issued to Brother Mizer a traveling card and marked it "Probationary Travelling Card." There is no difference in our initiation fee. Shall Local 639 accept said traveling card?"

Under section 12 (a) of the International constitution, a probationary member is entitled to the privilege of a traveling card, but the secretary issuing the same must write plainly across the face of the said card "probationary member" and the member accepting the same must pay the local union in which he deposits the said card the difference in the initiation fee, if there be any difference; in cases where the initiation fee is the same, the traveling card is to be recognized in the same manner and form as the regulation traveling card is recognized and accepted.

Therefore my decision is that the traveling card, having been issued to Brother Mizer under Section 12 (a), the same must be accepted by Local 639 subject to those conditions. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 572.

January 21, 1915.

MR. JACK DWYER, Box 1365, Dallas, Texas.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your appeal from the action of Local 69 in penalizing you the sum of $5 for your failure to deposit your traveling card within the time allowed under Section 13 of the constitution.

During the month of July, 1914, Local 69 brought to my attention the fact that there were some members of Local 659 working in their jurisdiction that refused to deposit their traveling card. One case in particular, Brother Fredrick; his case was taken up with the secretary of Local 659 and he directed Brother Frederick to deposit his traveling card with Local 69 while working under their jurisdiction. I also advised Local 69 at that time that if any members of the International Union were working in their jurisdiction without depositing their traveling card within the time provided for in Section 13, that they would be justified in imposing upon them the penalty provided for in that section.

Now the fact that a member is working in an "open house" does not exempt him from the enforcement of this section, nor is a suspended member exempt; every member, whether active or under suspension, who fails to affiliate himself with the local union under whose jurisdiction he is working within three days after accepting employment, whether it is in an open house, or otherwise, is amenable to the penalty provided for in section 13 of the constitution.

I note in your statement that you claim to have only worked two days and a half out of the seven days that you were in the city, and that was in an open house, and that the business agent of the local never called upon you and that you should have been given permission to work, in order that you could secure enough money to pay up your dues and meet your obligations as a member of the International Union.

The secretary of Local 69 files the following statement: "Brother Jack Dwyer worked in the particular house he is speaking of and which we were working hard to unionize, not less than ten day and if necessary we can get affidavits to that effect. This brother came to me and introduced himself and then asked what right we had to call the "Breakers" an unfair house, and going on with his talk said that he was going to work there as long as he felt like it, without putting in his card, etc."

I am loath to consider your statement as facts, in view of the correspondence had with Local 69.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

in July, 1914, and the statements filed by them anent this appeal. I am therefore dismissing your appeal and sustaining the action of Local 69.

With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,

General President.

Decision No. 573.

January 21, 1915.

MR. BRUCE OVARLEY, Secretary, Local 800, 1713 Charles street, Lafayette, Ind.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the protest of Local 800 against the membership of Brother W. J. Butts, who was accepted into membership by Local 341 in violation of Section 8 of the International constitution.

Local 800 contends that the said W. J. Butts made application for membership to Local 800, and on July 5, 1914, his application was rejected and that on October 11, 1914, his application was accepted in Local 341 and he was initiated to membership, which is a clear violation of Section 8.

Local 341 acknowledges that the said W. J. Butts was elected and initiated to membership in their local union on October 11, 1914, and endeavored to defend their action by claiming that the said Mr. Butts was rejected by Local 800 for personal reasons. This charge is denied by Local 800 and they give as part of their reasons, that Mr. Butts worked on the side of the church at the last election, securing data for a vice pamphlet which was distributed among the voters of the city.

The only question involved here is, Was Section 8 violated? The evidence submitted shows that it was and that Local 341 accepted Mr. W.

"THE CLINK OF THE ICE IN THE PITCHER."

Notably fond of music,
I dote on a sweeter tone
Than ever the lute has uttered,
Or ever the harp has known.

When I awake at 5 in the morning
With a feeling in my head
Suggestive of mild excesses
Before I went to bed,

And a small, but fierce volcano
Seems vexing me inside,
And my tongue and throat are furred with fur
That seemeth a buffalo hide;

How sweet are the dews of solace
That over my senses fall,
At the clink of the ice in the pitcher
The boy brings up in the hall.

I've dreamed of the fiery furnace
That was one vast bulk of flame.
I've dreamed I was Abednego
Awallowing in that same.

I've dreamed I was molten lava
And rockets that fizzed and screamed.
In fact I have dreamed the cussedest dreams
That ever a human dreamed.

But all of their burning fancies
Are scattered quick as wink,
When the spirit within that pitcher
Goes clinking its clinkity clink.

J. Butts into membership in less than five months after his application was rejected by Local 800; hence their action was illegal and contrary to the law. Therefore, the membership of W. J. Butts is cancelled in this International Union and Local 341 is directed to remove his name from their roster and to so record it on their next monthly report to the general office. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,

General President.

Decision No. 574.

January 23, 1915.

MR. S. B. NELSON, Secretary, Local 126, 60 Broad street, Oneonta, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 20th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Does a member who is acting as manager in the place that he is working, have to attend the meetings of the local where compulsory attendance exists? If he is fined for non-attendance, can the said fine be collected?"

A member, acting in the capacity of manager, remains an active member of the local union and as such active member is amenable to all the laws governing active members, and if the local has a law which penalizes a member for his failure to attend meetings, that law would apply to all active members, and that includes managers. Therefore, if the said manager failed to attend meetings and a fine was placed against him, the said fine could be collected in the same manner as other fines are collected. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,

General President.

Boy! why so slow in coming
With that soothing, healing cup?
Oh! haste thee to the rescue
Of a man who's burning up.

The piteous clinks it clinks methinks
Should thrill you through and through.
An erring soul is wanting drink
And he wants it P. D. Q.

I never have felt the cooling flood
Go sizzling down my throat.
But I have vowed to Him a hymn.
To that clinkity clink devote.

So now in the prime of my manhood
I have published this lyric gem,
For the use of all good fellows
Who are thirsty at 5 a. m.

But especially for those fellows
Who have felt the pleasing thrall
Of that clink of the ice in the pitcher
The boy brings up the hall.

A REASON FOR FORGETTING.

We may be wrong in our deduction, but we can't help thinking that the Cincinnati man who lost his memory after drinking 100 glasses of beer a day for ever so many days, had been drinking them on tick.—Springfield Union.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., January 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January, extending from the 24th of December, 1914. In my December report I informed you of the conditions in Fort Smith, after five months of prohibition in that city, and I also stated that before my letter was in print our boys of Local 559 would be doing business at the same old stands, which has proven true. On January 2d, we were granted license in Fort Smith and saloons were immediately opened, and Local 559 came into its own again. But the prohibs are not satisfied and have appealed the case from the county judge's decision to the circuit court, which will convene in March. It seems that nothing short of a death blow will stop a prohi as long as there is a dollar in sight for him. But I think the business people of Fort Smith have at last had all the prohibition they want, at least, a good majority of them have.

On January 3d, Local 559 held their regular meeting, which was installation day for the officers of that local for 1915, but owing to the fact that they had been closed for five months and many of the boys had been scattered over the country, they decided to defer their installation of officers until the following Sunday and hold a public installation and have a nice spread and invite our friends who had stood by us so loyally to meet with us and all have a good time. A committee was appointed to arrange for a band of music and prepare a dinner fit for the gods and invite the best speakers in the city for the occasion which was done in tip-top shape. We met at 2 o'clock p. m. Sunday, the 10th, where everything was in readiness for one of the greatest banquets it has ever been my good luck to attend. We had good speakers and music until 6 o'clock, when we rolled back the curtains showing tables decorated with every thing good to eat and drink and invited our friends to come forward and partake of that which we had prepared for them and at the same time extending to them our thanks for their loyalty. The writer had the honor and pleasure of presiding at this meeting, a thing I was certainly proud of, and a thing long to be remembered by your humble servant. I left Fort Smith for Little Rock on the 14th, where I found the city as dry as a bone under the notorious Going law and it is still dry; but in my opinion Little Rock will be open before this is in print; in fact, I think ten days from now will find the saloons open and doing business as of yore. Argenta, just across the Arkansas river from Little Rock, has opened up and Local 594 is at home again. The free bridge between the two cities is full of people from early morning to late at night, from Little Rock, I suppose, to shop in the city of Argenta. I know they are not going over to patronize the saloons, for at least half of these going over are prohibs, at least they refused to sign the petition for saloons in Little Rock, and we know a man who belongs to the Anti-Saloon League would die before he would take a drink, even if he was sick and the doctor advised a little whiskey for the stomach's sake. Myself, with an acquaintance who lives in Little Rock and who knows as many people in that city as any man living in the city, stood just 25 minutes, near the foot of the free bridge last Saturday evening, and counted the men over 21 years old who crossed the bridge, going to Argenta, and we counted 202, and out of that number, my friend counted 118 whose name does not appear on the petition for license in Little Rock, and who claim to be prohibs; during the time we stood there, we saw several come from Argenta whom my friend said were prohibs, and several carried packages which did not look like dry goods; in fact, some of them looked to me like a half-dozen cold ones, while some were smaller, possibly just a couple of small ones—anyway, they were bringing home the bacon.

The Arkansas Legislature convened in this city on January 11th and every thing went along nicely until the 20th when Senator White, from Pine Bluff, introduced a very drastic state-wide prohibition bill, which has been advanced to second reading in the senate and will possibly come up for third reading and final passage next week in that body. This bill, which is Senate bill No. 75, don't look good to me by any means and the Lord only knows what will happen to us in the next few weeks. Ex-Governor Patterson of Tennessee, the Rev. Sam Small, of Georgia, and many noted national prohibitionists are stumping the state of Arkansas and asking the people to demand state-wide prohibition from their respective members of the present legislature, and petitions are coming in by the thousand from all over the state. President G. E. Mikel, of the Arkansas State Federation of Labor, together with the legislative committee from that organization, are all here and working like trojans to offset any sumptuary legislation, either affecting our crafts or any other craft of the state. They are rendering me great assistance, which is highly appreciated by our members.

The prohibition leaders very frankly claim they have a majority in both houses and openly boast that Arkansas will join Alabama in the down-and-out column on July 1st.

We have not as yet had an opportunity to test our strength in the lower house, but it is very close in the senate. We have lost one man in the senate that we considered pledged to us, but he could not stand the pressure brought on him by the long-haired dictators of what we should eat, drink and wear. One of these old hypercritical witches said to me, she would be willing to see the city burned to ashes if it would be the means of bringing about state-wide prohibition. Talk about Anarchists, what would you call that?

Christianity? Christ like? Well, I guess not. And we have thousands of just such people as this old devil running at large all over this land and country of ours claiming to be Christians and associating with civilized people.

I am unable to give anything definite at this time as to the probable outcome of the situation in Arkansas as far as prohibition is concerned, but I hope to be able to report favorable news before many moons. If we can hold what we have we are safe, and if not we are gone. One thing I can say, the enemy don't have to hunt us, we are on the firing line and easy found.

My expense account is as follows:

Jan. 14—Ft. Smith to Little Rock.....	$4 76
" 14—Sleeper	2 00
" 14 and 15—Baggage transferred.....	1 00
Street car fare and postage—two months.	4 50
Typewriter work, stationery and supplies.	3 75
Jan. 15—Bus hire	50
 Total.....	 $16 51

SEATTLE, WASH., January 28, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

The beginning of the new year found our pickets on duty in the city of Spokane. Evidently we were getting some results, as the Chamber of Commerce, in meeting, had appointed a special committee to find means of invoking the law against us; however, they haven't succeeded so far.

January 1st to 15th, busy with the culinary crafts in Spokane, attending meetings of locals, local joint executive board, labor council, etc. Assisted in moving into better headquarters, the boys and girls now have a fine place. Glad to report that the dance given on January 15th proved a success, both socially and financially.

January 15th, with delegates of other trades and crafts, left for Olympia, Washington, to attend the convention of the State Federation of Labor; January 17th, in company with Delegates Senac of North Yakima; Lundgren and McCormack of Spokane, attended meeting of Local 107 at Tacoma. Hope to get to another meeting of this local, soon; the boys are of the right material, attending to business in the proper manner.

While our crafts in particular have been rather badly hit lately, the showing made at the convention was very good, there being over 30 representatives present. As was to be expected, a considerable of the time was taken up with the question of unemployment. The Federation will undoubtedly work out some plan of relief in the near future.

Delegate Hughes of Spokane, who is the legislative agent of the Federation, gave a very interesting resume of the actions of some of the lawmakers. Brother Hughes assuring the delegates that unless we were on the job constantly the tools of "big business" would attempt to repeal most of the labor legislation which we are now enjoying.

The convention almost unanimously turned down a proposal to elect the officials of the Federation by referendum, evidence being introduced to prove that that system was not a successful one in the organizations that had tried it. After spirited debate, a proposal to raise the per capita tax one cent per member per quarter was adopted.

The legislature turned down all proposals made by petition and while we have not entirely given up hope, still it looks very much as though we are up against it good and hard. The following is my expense account for the month:

Jan. 5—Spokane to Coeur D'Alene, return.	$1 50
15—Spokane to Olympia and sleeper..	12 90
" 25—Olympia to Seattle.....	2 60
Car fare and telephone.....	3 90
Postage	1 50

Total $22 40

SAN DIEGO, CAL., January 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

The so much-heralded and anticipated Panama California Exposition of San Diego, Cal., which was to bring so much business to this city and surroundings, swung its doors open to the public on December 31st, with weather that you only find in sunny California. The citizens of this city and vicinity, made the grand opening attendance a record breaker. The buildings are very pretty and the grounds most magnificent. The exhibits are only partially displayed, but no doubt that in the near future the whole thing will be completed. But the expected prosperity which would, or was going to make every man, woman and child in this community independent for life, has failed to materialize; but it has on the other hand brought an enormous amount of job seekers, and the vast army of unemployed has jeopardized the positions of a large number of workers in our crafts, especially, the city is over run with men and women seeking employment, and the majority of them carry union cards, but they have failed to deposit them, and my advice to those who intend to come here to work is "Stay away from San Diego"; in fact, stay away from California until such time as the business depression that now exists disappears.

The work of organizing the restaurants is somewhat difficult, owing to the fact that not a single restaurant or cafe, or any other business concern is on a paying basis; nevertheless we are going on smoothly and quietly, and some of the proprietors begin to realize that the L. J. E. B. means to continue its work until every restaurant displays the house card.

We started to picket a place, and in just exactly one week after the labor council had placed the house on the unfair list of the council, they decided to sign the agreement. The police of this city, as usual all over the country, are very antagonistic to us; as soon as a picket is placed in front of a restaurant, he is taken away to the police station and kept there for two or three hours; he is given a nice sermon, but they have not as yet placed a charge against any of the pickets; their method is to scare them with threats that they will see that the pickets will be sent to the rock pile or deported out of town, but with all their intimidations we are going to continue the picketing.

During the month, have attended all the meetings of Locals 402 and 768, also the meetings of the labor council.

The following is my expense account:

Dec. 27—Los Angeles to San Diego.....	$ 3 85
Jan. 4—San Diego to Los Angeles.....	3 85
" 4—Sleeper	1 50
" 6—Los Angeles to San Diego.....	3 85

BOSTON, MASS., January 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month: Attended a meeting of Local 843 to take up several grievances that were pending. The meeting was largely attended. With a new set of officers for the ensuing year, things look bright for future success. I installed the newly-elected officers, and addressed the meeting along progressive lines and appealed to the members to co-operate with the officers in performing their duties. I desire to thank the officers and members of Local 843 for the courtesy and support received while in the city of Worcester, also for their useful gift, which I fully appreciate. I trust the members of Local 843 will carry out the policy laid out for them in the future.

Held an open meeting of those employed in the culinary craft in the city of Worcester, and was successful in securing a number of applications, and sent to the general office for charter and outfit. I look forward to see better results with the new Local 103 than we had with previous locals. This no doubt was on account of lack of interest and proper support that former locals went out of existence.

I attended a special meeting called in the interests of former Local 416, Springfield. The meeting was not as well attended as I anticipated. However, those in attendance seemed interested and promised to bring their friends to the next meeting.

To Dover, N. H., to attend a meeting of new Local 733, and instituted the new local. I assisted the new-elected officers on their books and so forth. The meeting was largely attended and the new local started off in the right direction. I installed the newly-elected officers and at the close of the meeting a fine entertainment and buffet luncheon was served, which was enjoyed by all. President Gibbons and Secretary Snow, of Local 309, delivered an able address, as well as a large number of visiting brothers from sister locals whose names I can not just recall.

Left for Lowell to take up work in that city. Stopped off at Manchester to take up important matters with Secretary J. T. McLoughlin, of Local 398. On my arrival in Lowell, met Secretary Quirk, took up several grievances that were pending since my last visit. I am pleased to report that we were successful in our efforts in straightening out matters. I also noted quite an improvement in local conditions. Brother Quirk reports that recent meetings have been well attended, which means future success for Local 85. I trust the members will continue this practice and encourage their officers.

To Springfield to be in attendance at a meeting of former Local 416. I regret to say that we were not any more successful than on previous occasions. Several reasons were offered for the small attendance. However, we will try once more and hope to have better results. Charter and outfit having arrived, I left for the city of Worcester to institute new culinary alliance. Held two meetings, afternoon and evening. Elected temporary officers. Transacted considerable other important business. Proceeded to Boston to take up work in the interests of the culinary workers. I attended a meeting of Local 6. Business Agent Lane made quite an interesting report on the progress he was making under the existing circumstances. Brother Lane is up against the same proposition that several of our culinary locals have to combat with. Head waiters and members of the International Geneva Association who take charge of dining room, make it their business to discharge our members and employ members of their association or some other dual organization. Local 6 has a good set of officers who are deeply interested in the welfare of their organization.

The balance of the month my time was devoted in the interests and formation of new locals now in hand, and we hope to be successful in our efforts. I have been ably assisted in this work by Vice-President Conley and Business Agent R. W. Garrity.

The following is my expense account:

Jan. 1—To Boston	$ 2 40
" 3—To Worcester	1 00
" 5—To Springfield	1 25
" 7—To Dover	4 05
" 12—To Lowell	3 00
" 15—To Springfield	2 85
" 17—To Worcester	1 25
" 19—To Boston	1 00
" 25—To Springfield	2 25
Printing	2 50
Postage and money orders	2 35
Hall rent	3 00
Typewriting notices	1 75
Telephone	70
Care fare	3 00
Stationery	1 40
Total	$33 75

HOBOKEN, N. J., January 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month of January follows:

Immediately after Christmas arrangements had been made by the L. J. E. B. to visit the American Hotel, owned by George Gonzales, a former mayor of Hoboken, in the interests of our allied crafts here. The morning of December 28th, this place went up in a blaze. The Dukes House and Hotel Venice are the points of interest at this time and we expect every department will be thoroughly organized in a short time. Hoboken has an effective L. J. E. B. and such officers as Brothers Mester, Doring, Local 693; Newberry and Wrage, Local 10, and Thiery and Rowohlt, Local 4, are bound to have success in their dealings with our employers.

January 2d and 4th, visited Mr. Emil Cogen, president of the West Hoboken Retail Liquor Dealers Association, with a committee of Local 4 and their former president, Gus Schildmuller. The prospects of that section of Hudson County are excellent from an organizing standpoint; we took up a matter with Thomas P. Ryan, a former member of Union No. 108 of Cleveland, Ohio, now in business for himself in Union Hill, N. J. A satisfactory adjustment is expected.

January 6th, attended meeting of Hudson County Labor Alliance in Jersey City. Want to state, especially for our members, that through hard work on the part of this alliance, which is composed of Local 4, 10, 693, Hoboken; Locals 488, 575, Jersey City, and Musicians' Union, Local 526, that they have broken the backbone of the I. W. W. musical union, known here as Local 41, by initiating 33 of their members in the American Federation of Musicians, Local 526, on January 5th, and a much greater number since that time. I sincerely trust that some member of our allied craft in Philadelphia will draw this matter to the attention of the officers of Musicians' Union 77 of their city; hope that they will imitate and make it possible to bring about a labor alliance in the City of Brotherly Love.

January 8th, visited Homestead, N. J., with Business Agent James Conlin of Teamsters Union No. 560 and was successful in organizing a place in that section. Accompanied Brother Rotwoldt to Passaic, and took up a matter that vitally concerns Local 4, with Brother Stryker, secretary Local 689. Had the pleasure of learning through Brothers Dime, Lane, and a few others of Local 689 which I can not recall at present, that their organization is in excellent shape. The blue buttons can be seen in every place in Passaic, and the members of Local 689 are certainly boosters. From Passaic to Patterson and visited headquarters of Waiters' Union 700 in the hopes of finding them in session. Took up various matters with President Henry Gross and learning where it may be possible for the writer to be of assistance to Local 700, have promised to return in the Silk City.

January 11th, upon invitation of President Felton of the Central Labor Union of Hudson County, attended a conference of the butcher workmen. The sausage makers are on strike in Jersey City, Newark and Hoboken. Strike breakers are being smuggled into this country from Germany, it is alleged. The commissioner of immigration has been asked to investigate this charge, and every person responsible for smuggling strike-breaking sausage makers will be prosecuted. Our allied crafts in this section have been of great assistance to those out on strike, and same has been greatly appreciated by International President Hart and Organizer Modest, who are now on the ground looking after their interests.

January 13th, attended meeting of Cooks' Union 693 of Hoboken. Am pleased to say that while the numerical strength of this local union is not the largest in the International, they possess the best class of workers in their line. Had the pleasure of addressing them. The following officers were elected for the year 1915: Paul Schoknecht, president; Rudolph Greimlinger, vice-president; Charles Mester, business agent; Paul Doring, secretary-treasurer; Tony Bruckmeier, recording and corresponding secretary;

Fritz Schultke, outer guard; William Dabrokow, inner guard; Fred Baccini, chaplain. Brothers Schoknecht, Mester and Doring will represent Local 693 as delegates to the Hudson County Central Labor Union, Hudson County Labor Alliance, and Local Joint Executive Board of Hoboken.

January 14th, presided at Union No. 4. Meeting was well attended. Took special care to recommend weekly meetings in place of monthly. Any member who can not find time to pay his dues at proper place ought to be taught that his book with a money order properly enclosed in an envelope, addressed to the secretary, with postage attached, will find its destination without any trouble, and the work assigned to their officers can then be taken up and which will no doubt bring about better results for all concerned. That evening, attended meeting of Central Labor Union and will say that Hudson County possesses quite a number of "live wires." Business agent of Local 4 was elected vice-president, and Brother Thiery of same local, elected as secretary-treasurer of Central Labor Union. At this meeting Business Agent Kavanaugh of Local 575 of Jersey City, had the pleasure of introducing Magistrate John Warren to the delegates who addressed the body on the necessity of a better compensation law; he told them in very plain words to put every member of the New Jersey Legislature on record immediately. Assemblyman Dolan was present and went on record to help organized labor in the state of New Jersey along the lines as specified by the friend of Bill Kavanaugh. Commissioner of Labor Bryant, coming in a trifle late, addressed the council on a matter concerning organized labor in the vicinity of Hudson County, and which his remarks lasted to the early hours of the next morning the delegates appreciated same, and informed him that they were willing to stay longer if he desired to continue.

January 15th, visited B. P. O. Elks, No. 74 of Hoboken. Had Brother Wm. Frankenberg of Local 10 introduce me to Gustav Bleda, chef, and was successful in arranging for him and his helpers to affiliate with Cooks' Union 693. While in the building, met Brother Fulling of Local 118 and was pleased to hear from him that he is now the manager of Val Schmitt's on North William street, New York City. Brother Fulling is very well acquainted in the downtown district of the big city across the river, and is bound to bring about the results that Val Schmitt desires. I am positive that no culinary worker will get an opportunity to toil in this establishment unless he possesses the proper credentials issued by Local 342 or 719. Brother Fulling explains to the writer that a company is being formed by Val Schmitt and the chain of stores controlled by said company will offer plenty opportunity for our crafts in the near future.

January 17th, attended meeting of Union 340, Orange, N. J.; 40 per cent of their entire membership were present. This local union is being cared for by John J. Tierney, president, and Wm. J. Hardwick, secretary. A labor forward movement is on by the Central Labor Union of that city, and a more effective organization of bartenders will follow if their representatives give more attention to the council meetings. Their cozy rooms on Center street are a credit to them.

January 19, attended meeting of Union 488 of Jersey City and am pleased to state that their officers have been bonded as required by our laws; report covering this visit was filed with the general office.

January 21st, attended meeting of the L. J. E. B. of Hoboken. Arrangements have been made to hold mass meetings for our allied crafts while the cold weather lasts. Committee appointed have determined to hold five meetings in all, dividing their jurisdiction equally in an effort not to pass up a single unorganized worker. The get-together spirit prevails and I sincerely trust that it is going to be permanent. The joint board have arranged for a ball, March 10, 1915, at New York avenue and Lewis street.

January 22d, attended meeting of Waiters' Union 575, Jersey City, and pleased to note the way same was attended. At the adjournment of said meeting, with a committee of Local 575, visited Arion Hall for the purpose of explaining to Mr. Fritz R. Borpe, the proprietor, the jurisdictional rights of Local 575, and came away with a better understanding. I want to say right now that Mr. Borpe or any other employer in the catering industry has the right to reject any employee that fails to present themselves in the proper uniform when ordered to work.

Our locals will be represented at Trenton during the hearings on local option bills, and those of prohibition, February 2d, to protest.

HELENA, MONT., January 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

January 3rd I attended a meeting of Local 51 of St. Louis, Mo. It was the meeting at which delegates to the convention to be held at Frisco were to be nominated. The interest manifested in the coming convention can best be testified to by the announcement that eighteen candidates are in the field, with four to be elected. Whoever the lucky ones will be, we can look forward to them giving a good account of themselves, as each of the eighteen are old timers and hard workers for the local union. Local 51 is to be complimented upon the manner in which the members turn out to meetings. I have attended two meetings of that union and on each occasion more than three hundred members were in attendance.

On January 6 I received instructions from the general office to wind up my affairs in Missouri at once and proceed to Great Falls, Montana. This order was issued after an urgent request for my services had been received from both Local 101, Cooks and Waiters, and Local 609, Bartenders. I left St. Louis on the 8th, arrived in Great Falls on the night of the 10th. I went by way of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and as I had a lay over of 35 minutes in the latter city, I wired Second Vice-President Hoffman, and was met by him on my arrival. I had time to visit the elegantly equipped home of Local 152 and chatter with a few old time friends.

On my arrival at Great Falls I was met by Brother Nelson, of Local 101, Brother Shields of Local 609, the officers of the Building Trades Council and Cascade Trades and Labor Assembly. After getting settled took up the business which was at hand.

The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association have changed their field of endeavor from Stockton, Cal., to Great Falls, Montana. A combine has been created by that body for the purpose of disrupting the trade union movement of one of the best organized cities in the Northwest. Building operations, with a few exceptions, are being carried on by imported scabs. The Builders' Exchange have made the threat that by spring they will have completely broken the ranks of the organized movement, but they reckoned without taking into consideration the "foreign" forces of organized labor.

The following International representatives are in Great Falls at present and rendering every possible assistance to our assailed sisters and brothers: Organizer Dowler, of the Carpenters; Organizer Stone, of the Bricklayers; Organizer Robbins, of the Electrical Workers; Grand President McNulty, of the I. B. E. W.; T. D. O'Brien, of the A. F. L. and myself. We have organized a joint executive committee of the Great Falls Building Trades and the Cascade Trades and Labor Assembly, and in their hands the future of the Trade Union Movement of this section is placed. The Builders' Exchange has organized against the building trades, the Commercial Club against the miscellaneous trades and the hotel and restaurant employers against the cooks, waiters and waitresses. This is to be a fight that will resolve itself into "a survival of the fittest;" and as there has not been a break in the ranks of labor since the inception of the trouble, the "fittest" in this, as in other like troubles, will be the trade union movement. Some of our members have been arrested and fined, others have been arrested upon trumped up charges of kidnapping scabs (imagine anyone kidnapping a scab). We have appealed for a hearing in all cases, but have been denied. We will have to await the pleasure of the "powers that be." Mass meetings are held every Sunday and each meeting surpasses the other in attendance. The liberal minded people of the Northwest are with the trade union movement in this struggle and have transferred their accounts from all merchants aligned with the interests seeking the destruction of the unions.

January 18th, Brothers Nelson and Shields, in company with myself, visited the city of Helena, to lay the case of organized labor in the city of Great Falls before people, whom we have every reason to believe, are in a position to assist us in bringing about an adjudication. While in Helena we called a special meeting of the cooks, waiters and bartenders and laid our case before them. On the evening of the same day we attended a meeting of the Helena Trades and Labor Assembly and made like representations.

On the 20th a hearing was held in the House of Representatives on the question of submitting to the voters in 1916 an amendment to the Montana State Constitution providing for State-wide Prohibition, to become effective July 1st, 1917. The Anti-Saloon League was represented by Mr. Pope, chairman of the Anti-Saloon League of Montana and Rev. Dr. Wolf, president of the same body for the State, and as many suffragettes as could crowd the Assembly Chamber in which the hearing was held. Our side was ably represented at the hearing by Mr. Kessler, of the Kessler Brewing Company of Helena; Bro. M. M. Donoghue, President of the Montana State Federation of Labor; Bro. Laurence Nelson, cook, president of the Cascade Trades and Labor Assembly, and Bro. Daniel Shields, business agent of Bartenders' Union 609, representing the Joint Executive Committee of Labor of Great Falls.

I returned to Great Falls on the 22nd to attend to business in connection with our trouble in that city. Returned on the 25th to Helena where, on the 26th, I am to close for the Wets in rebuttal before the committee on towns and cities which have the bill calling for submission before them on final hearing.

While in the city of Helena we held conferences with the officers of both the bartenders and cooks and waiters, and we are very thankful to Bro. Frank Murray, of Local 609, who is sergeant-at-arms in the House of Representatives, for the many courtesies extended us during our stay. The Montana State Federation of Labor convenes in annual session at Helena February 1st, and we look forward to one of the most interesting sessions in the history of that body. The representatives of the bartenders, cooks, waitresses and waiters, will hold a State conference a day preceding the convention to determine what legislation shall be presented to that body.

STOCKTON, CAL., December 28, 1914.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

The settlement of the four months' industrial war-fare in this city three days prior to Christmas, i. e., December 22nd, gave to the locked-out trades unionists and their families a two-fold cause for rejoicing. Conferences were held daily from the 8th to the 17th, when the following peace agreement was presented to both sides for ratification:

This agreement, made and entered into this 17th day of December, 1914, by and between a committee of three members representing the Merchants, Manufacturers and Employers' Association, hereinafter called the Association, and a similar committee of three representing the Building Trades Council of San Joaquin County and the Central Labor Council of San Joaquin County, hereinafter called the Unions, witnesseth:

That in order to speedily terminate the industrial struggle in the city of Stockton and prevent a further recurrence of the same, it is hereby mutually agreed as follows:

1. That the Unions agree to stop all boycotting and all picketing, and that notice to that effect be sent to all the parties boycotted in the same manner as the original notice of boycott was sent.

2. That the Association agrees to withdraw the letter sent by them to the Building Trades Council and to the Central Labor Council under date of June 26, 1914, and notice to that effect be sent to them in the same manner as the original letter was sent.

3. That the wages and hours are to remain the same as in force on July 8, 1914.

4. That a committee of three from each side be appointed to which shall be referred all questions affecting wages and hours which may arise between the two parties, the decision of said committee to be binding on both sides; it being definitely understood that no drastic action shall be taken by either side until after said committee has considered the matter and rendered a decision.

In Witness Whereof, this agreement is signed in duplicate and delivered on the date first above written, by the conference committee representing both sides hereto, thereunto duly authorized.

ROBT. INGLES,
F. J. VIEBROCK,
EDW. L. GNEKOW,

Committee representing the Associations.

J. T. Woods,
J. B. DALE,
JOSEPH ECK,

Committee representing the Unions.

The above agreement was duly ratified by both parties, and, on December 26th, the M. M. & E. Association in an official letter, withdrew the famous "Open Shop" declaration of June 26th, 1914.

The settlement of the deplorable Stockton controversy cannot be construed as a clean cut victory on the part of organized labor.

On December 2nd I left Stockton for Sacramento to consult with Brothers, Drake, Eddy, Somers and Reid, as to the activity of the M. M. & E. Association in their city, but was immediately recalled to San Francisco, owing to the serious illness of my wife; returning to Stockton on the 6th. I was again recalled to San Francisco on the 11th.

On the morning of the 15th my dear wife passed to eternal rest.

I wish to tender my sincere and heartfelt thanks to the L. J. E. B. of Sacramento for their floral offering and for their sympathetic thoughtfulness in delegating Brother Reid of Local 603 to attend the obsequies; to the L. J. E. B. of Stockton also for their floral offering and the delegating of Brothers Perrin and Doyle to Local 41 of San Francisco for their floral contribution and the attendance of Brother D. P. Regan; to General Secretary Jere L. Sullivan for his kindly telegram of sympathy and consolation, and to all those brothers and sisters of our International organization who so freely extended to me the hand of fellowship in my hour of sorrow and grief.

(Second Report.)

STOCKTON, CAL., January 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I beg to submit the following report for the past month:

The acute business depression incidental to the industrial war just completed shows little or no improvement. Months will elapse before the community regains the normal prosperity enjoyed prior to the invasion of the aggressive trouble makers of the M. M. & E. Association. Merchants who succeeded in weathering the storm now display the sickly grin that usually accompanies a series of "Never Again" resolutions; whilst the men and women of labor are calmly and cheerfully proceeding with the task of rehabilitation, wearing smiles that won't come off. The discontent apparent, among the rank and file, immediately after the "Peace Protocol" was signed, is rapidly giving away to elation as a result of the working out of the much discussed and severely criticized "Temporary Open Shop" concession. The spirit of organized labor is so strongly in evidence, that the scabs and strike-breakers, finding themselves without the protection of thugs and gun-men, are gradually emigrating to their natural habitat south of the Tehachapi.

Culinary Local 572, battle scarred and badly bent is still in the ring. After over six months' strenuous fighting, with 101 members out of 190 locked out on June the 8th, the local shows up strong with 120 members in good standing. At the recent semi-annual election Bro. James Redenbaugh was re-elected secretary-treasurer by an overwhelming majority over his opponent, Bro. P. H. Weston. Brother Jim has some very uncomplimentary remarks to make a'nen't the failure of certain locals to make good with the fifteen cent assessment levied by the California State Federation of Labor, particularly those who were so loud in proclaiming their undying devotion to the culinary cause. Approximately $40,000 was contributed by the unions throughout the State to the Stockton fight. This does not include the contributions from Internations that have constitutional provisions for strike benefits, our International contributing $1,200.

Left Stockton for Sacramento December 29th, where L. S. Calkins, manager of the M. M. & E. Association had transferred his nefarious mischief-making activities. The merchants of Sacto are not falling for Calkins' line of "bull" as easily as he had anticipated, but he is a very persistent individual and may succeed in fomenting trouble.

Left Sacramento for Stockton January 4th to attend a meeting of organizers representing the miscellaneous crafts at which a declaration of policy was drafted to be submitted to Federated Trades Council a'nen't the agreement signed with the Association of Employers. Returned to Sacramento the same evening.

Local 603 held its special installation meeting at Red Men's Hall on the evening of January 6th. Imbued with the efficiency of the "get together" spirit, invitations had been extended to all crafts connected with the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, and the capacity of the hall was taxed to accommodate the crowd. After the installation of officers the following resolution was submitted and adopted unanimously:

Purpose of Organization.

"Realizing the danger that threatens our interests, knowing the power gained by combined effort, and feeling the need of using all legitimate methods to protect our means of livelihood, all trades unions directly interested in the life of the liquor industry are taking this step to form ourselves into an organization for the purpose of better protecting our interests both individually and collectively and advancing our cause in any and every way that may help to keep the liquor interests as they are at the present time, a licensed business."

Therefore, we beg to submit the following resolution for the consideration of this meeting:

WHEREAS, The continued activity of the so-called "reform" interests in the State of California, who seek to eliminate the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages by means of sumptuary legislation; and,

WHEREAS, The success of any program to bring about State-wide prohibition, the extension of the Wylie local option law to cover county units instead of supervisorial districts, or any other ultra-radical, drastic regulation of saloons would result in depriving thousands of workers of their means of livelihood; and,

WHEREAS, We realize to successfully cope with future campaigns we must of necessity direct our best efforts toward more compact organization; therefore, be it

Resolved, That all labor organizations directly interested in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages send two delegates to devise ways and means for the formation of an executive council for this district to be known as the Liquor Trades Protective Council of Sacramento; that the secretary of this meeting be instructed to so notify all organizations and set a date for preliminary meeting.

The meeting then adjourned to the banquet hall to partake of the abundance of good eats provided through the hospitality of Local 603. President Somers, acting as toastmaster, introduced quite a number of speakers, and amongst those who particularly distinguished themselves, Brothers Drake, Reid and Fletcher deserve honorable mention.

On January 8th I left for Grass Valley and Nevada City, arriving in the midst of an old fashioned snow storm, an unusual experience in this State. The following day canvassed Grass Valley with this result: 27 saloons, only eight bartenders employed; one hotel with three white waitresses employed and Chinese crew in kitchen; two restaurants, one of which is operated by Greeks who hire Japs, the other employs two cooks and one waiter. Wages are far below the average, twelve hours a day and seven days per week. Next visited Nevada City, four miles by traction from Grass Valley; 21 saloons, only five bartenders employed; one hotel with Chinese crew and two white waitresses; one restaurant, employing one cool and one dishwasher. Conditions the same as prevails in Grass Valley. These twin towns boast a population of over ten thousand, and mostly Cornish miners. Some years ago a strong miners' union existed, of which a mere handful remains. The wages paid in the mine are very low, $2.75 for nine hours. There are no other labor organizations in the district. The large number of asloons is accounted for by the low license fee; $40 per quarter, and it is a puzzle how some of them manage to get by. Returned to Sacramento January 11.

Attended regular meeting of L. J. E. B., full board present. Considerable business was disposed of in a manner to indicate thorough knowledge of local conditions. Sacramento is fortunate in possessing so many able executives, and the harmony that prevails between the two locals is extremely gratifying when compared with other and larger localities.

On the 20th received telegram from the general office directing me to return to Stockton and assist Bro. E. H. Murphy, of Local 403, unravel the tangle left by its absconding secretary-treasurer, J. C. Doyle.

Audit of books shows shortage of $1,078.75, with an additional shortage of $12.65 in accounts of L. J. E. B.

The books were properly audited and deposits examined by board of trustees on November 1st. Everything being found all O. K. After this time Doyle seems to have got very busy; paid only such bills necessary to avert suspicion; secured credit from merchants for clothes, shoes, etc.; bilked his landlady for two weeks' room rent, and to cap the climax succeeded in working his bondsmen for substantial loans just prior to making his getaway. This was shrewdly accomplished with a story, that owing to a recent siege with John Barleycorn, he found himself a little short and thought it better to ask them for temporary assistance than to broach the union's funds. As usual in cases of this kind Doyle enjoyed the implicit confidence of all his fellow members, as well as of the rest of the community.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Jan. 28, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the last month's work is as follows.

On December 29 I attended a meeting of Local 562, Detroit, and found the boys are holding their own very nicely, which plainly shows Business Agent O'Rourke has been doing some tall hustling, for the odds have been against this local during the past six months. As I have related the conditions existing in Detroit in some of my previous reports, it is not necessary for me to make any further comment in regard to what we have to contend with in our work in that city.

I arrived in Madison on January 2. On January 3 Local 468 held its annual election of officers. While we did not have a very large number present, what we lacked in numbers we made up for in enthusiasm. All the old officers were re-elected, with one exception. Bro. Ed. Grove being chosen as secretary-treasurer. The office was formerly held by Brother Siefert. With the new lineup everything looks promising for Local 468. They started the ball rolling at once by making preparations for an open meeting and smoker, to be given January 10, in Woodman Hall. This meeting proved a success, and the crowd of union men that assembled on this day listened with great interest to the offerings of Bro. Joe Brown, president of the Madison Trades Council, and myself. Other meetings of this kind will be held during the winter months, with the hopes that they will have a tendency towards arousing a little more enthusiasm in the ranks of the organized workers in the city of Madison, where the interest in the movement has been at ebb-tide for some time. But Madison is not the only city troubled with this disease, for it seems to me to be a sort of plague in the Badger and adjoining States. Let us wake up, my dear friends, and try to make 1915 our banner year. When you read this do not pass that old remark, "It can't be done." With that kind of spirit, it is true, nothing can be done. The only way we can ever accomplish anything in our work is by persistent effort on our part, so please forget that word "can't."

I left Milwaukee on the 11th, and stopped off in Watertown that night and found Local 694 had taken a layoff. I interviewed several of the boys, who seemed anxious to get back into the fold. After talking the matter over with President Hinze and Secretary Killian, of the Central Labor Union, we decided to invite the bartenders to attend the meeting of the Central Labor Union to be held on the 22d, and our efforts were rewarded by the attendance of about a half-dozen of the members of Local 694. I was called on for a few remarks at this meeting, and after I had concluded the Central Labor Union went on record as assuring us of their moral support in our work. At the close of the meeting our boys got together and we decided to call a meeting on February 2 and put Local 694 on the map again.

Our work in Milwaukee will be a little slow for a while, but Brother Robson, business agent of Local 64, and myself, have done some hustling. We have been severely handicapped in our efforts, owing to some dirty agitation on the part of some of the boys of Local 64, who undertook to assume the role of special organizers in many places. They have gotten pretty strong, and it will take us some time to overcome the blow they have dealt us, but we hope to be able to land several of the fellows that have become aggrieved on account of the way they had it thrown into them by the over-zealous workers. Business Agent Robson had had a pretty hard row to hoe, but he tells me it is easy now compared with what he had to contend with a year ago. In my next report I will be able to give my readers more of an idea of what we have accomplished during our campaign in the "Cream City."

Brother Martel has done some splendid work in Milwaukee, and I feel that his efforts will be rewarded with an organization of cooks before many days lapse.

A delegation, composed of Brothers Sorweid, Engler, Robson, Martel and myself, attended a meeting of Local 322, Racine, on Tuesday evening, January 26. A fair-sized crowd was present, and all listened with interest to the reading of the by-laws of the local. As all were concerned in the affair in hand, some sections were entirely eliminated, and a final reading will be given on February 2. After short talks by Brothers Martel, Sorweid and myself, the meeting adjourned, and we then had a nice little social session. Local 322 is now beginning to look like a permanent organization, as everyone seems to display that spirit which means success in the future.

My expense account for the past month is as follows:

CINCINNATI, O., January 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On November 18, filed an application for a charter for the bartenders of Middletown, Ohio, the number issued was No. 732. On November 29th the officers of the union were installed; on December 13th we initiated quite a number of new applicants; also on the 27th and January 3d; the union is a 99 per cent one and it is expected that by next meeting the only non-union bartender in the town will have his application filed.

Local 663 requested that I attend their meeting, which would be held on January 7th, and install the officers elect; was surprised when I arrived at the hall to find so many ladies and children present. I was advised that the members had been instructed to bring their wives, children and friends with them, also that the locals in Cincinnati as well as the sister union in Covington had been invited to have representatives present on this occasion, as the installation of officers would be a public one. The officers were installed then the surprises began. First, we were all invited to partake of a nice lunch, after that was over, the tables were cleared away, and the members and their friends indulged in dancing; so that they would not get hungry again a nice buffet lunch was arranged on the side, with plenty of liquid refreshments, from coffee to wine.

On January 12th, organized a bartenders' union at Newport, Ky.; on the 26th attended its meeting. This local has all the earmarks of being as successful a union as that at Middletown, Ohio.

My expenses are as follows:

November 29—Middletown and return..	$1 10

MILWAUKEE, WIS., January 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

December 28th, 29th and 30th were spent in the city of St. Paul, winding up the business there, and giving the new officers of Local 408 instructions for their future welfare.

On the 31st I left Minneapolis for the city of Milwaukee to look over the possibility of organizing the cooks. I arrived there on the first day of the year, which, I hope, will prove a good omen. I at once hunted up Bro. Chas. Sorweid, president of Local 64, and introduced myself. I then went to waiters' union headquarters, where I met Bro. Sibilsky, secretary of Local 59. There learned of the presence in the city of Bro. Ben Gorton, International organizer, and had later the pleasure of meeting him. We both talked over the general situation of the beer city, and he showed me around town.

On the 2nd I met Bro. Bob Robson, secretary of Local 64; he at once put himself at my disposition and offered me the freedom of his office, which I gladly accepted. Bob is a fine fellow and a hard worker. I also met Bro. Vic. Marot, late secretary of Local 600 in Duluth. Vic., is working here now, and as a past secretary, will be a good asset to me here.

On the 3rd I visited the kitchen of the Pfister Hotel and was very much surprised to meet, an old friend of mine in the person of Mr. Chas. Schweitzer, steward; it was fully fourteen years since I had last seen him, when he succeeded me as chef-steward of the Natatorium Hotel in Waco, Texas. He introduced me to the chef, Mr. Rudolph Boerner, whom I found to be a member of Local 865 of Chicago.

On the 5th I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Hemingfeld, recording secretary of Local 322 of Racine, Wis. He invited me to attend one of their meetings and I promised him I would do so at the first opportunity. That night I joined the Cooks' Bowling Club, which meets every Tuesday night. Mr. Emile Reuber, chef of the Gargoyle, the elite restaurant of this city, being the president. I met here a former member of Local 167, Mr. Petersen, who is chef of the Hotel Charlotte. I communicated with Local 167 to inquire about his reinstatement. I got an answer from Bro. Ed. McEachern that Local 167, at a regular meeting, decided to reinstate any former member I might find here at the nominal sum of $2.50 while I am here. Their regular fee is $10. This shows very good spirit and I wish to congratulate Local 167 and thank them for the aid they are extending to me.

On the 6th I attended the meeting of Local 64, and had the pleasure to install the newly-elected officers. This local is going to the front, there is a good bunch of hustlers in it, besides Bro. Sorweid. That same evening I attended the meeting of the Federated Trades Council, with 153 members in attendance; that was election night. Was introduced by President Fischer and addressed the assembly, asking them for their support. There I also met Bro. Schmitt, International organizer of the Bakers, whom I met before in Minneapolis and Duluth.

On the 8th, in the afternoon, I attended the meeting of Local 59. I had also here the pleasure to install the new officers. I am glad to see at the head of this local Bro. J. Foley, who represented Local 59 at the Denver convention. He commands the respect of every brother by his strict discipline at the meetings. Local 59 needed a man like him to steer them to success.

On the 9th, in the afternoon, I received a letter from Bro. Fred Ebeling, secretary of Local 865, Chicago, with an invitation extended to me by the Cooks' Benevolent and Cosmopolitan Society of that city to attend their annual ball. I at once got ready and was on my way to the Windy City, this being my first visit to the big city. My first stop was at Hiller and Wohlgemuth's, where many cooks have their headquarters. I met quite a few boys I knew, but my surprise came when I went to the Coliseum Annex, where the dance was held. There I had the pleasure of meeting, for the first time, Bro. Fred Ebeling, secretary of Local 865, who was on the lookout for me. After the usual greetings he asked me to accompany him around the big hall, so he could introduce me to some of the cooks. To his surprise and to mine, we found that I was pretty well acquainted with many of them, having worked together years ago in the East, but I didn't know they were in Chicago. If you, readers, had seen that bunch standing at the bar, talking about long forgotten pranks we used to play on our chefs, and then singing those old songs over again, you could not have helped but enjoy it yourselves. Next morning Bro. Ebeling took me around town and showed me the different hotels and restaurants. In the afternoon we met sister Elizabeth Maloney by appointment. There is some worker for you. We passed the evening together, talking over the conditions of our crafts in the Windy City. The same night I left to return here. I am very glad of my visit there, as it gave me some idea of my future work there.

On the 13th I had the pleasure to meet Bro. Josh Brady, International organizer, who is going to stay here for a while. Josh is a fine fellow, but for an organizer to be in Milwaukee and not drinking any beer looks rather queer. But he eats in place of it and gets by with it; with me it is different, I am a Dutchman here.

On the 15th I attended a meeting of Local 59, and on the 20th that of Local 64. At this meeting the matter of segregation was brought up, and by a unanimous vote Local 64 decided to stick by section 5 of our International constitution. A signed statement to that effect was ordered sent to general secretary-treasurer.

On the 22nd Waiters' Union, Local 59, passed the same resolution, also by unanimous vote, and ordered same resolution to be forwarded to headquarters. (Bad news for some fellows in Frisco.)

The general situation in Milwaukee, although below par for our crafts, is not so bad as it was pictured to me. Of course the vicinity of Chicago has a lot to do, only yesterday the chef and crew of the Hotel Wisconsin were changed, a ney crew coming from Chicago. I had nine men promised there, now I'll have to start there again. I think I have the situation well in hand, and hope to have an established local of cooks before long. The chief trouble is to pick officers for a union. I'll have to get men that I know to be home-guards, because the majority of cooks here are not steady, today they are here, tomorrow somewhere else; and some of the old timers here, although willing to join, absolutely refuse to take any office. That is the difficult problem I have to overcome. And then Milwaukee is a city where nearly every labor organization is imbued with too much politics, and you know what kind; and that is just one thing we'll have to avoid, some of our locals have paid dearly for their experience.

I had pamphlets printed and distributed them in the kitchens and among the bosses. They done good work so far. I am trying to arrange for a meeting with some hotel proprietors in order to get their support. I haven't much faith in them, but at any rate they'll have to show me their color.

On the 29th Local 59 will give a smoker to the culinary workers of the city, which will do much to bring my efforts to a successful end.

On the 26th I went, in company with Bros. Josh Brady, Chas Sorweid, Bob Robson and J. Engler, to Racine to attend the meeting of Local 322. We were all well received, the boys there being glad to see that Milwaukee is taking an interest in their welfare. Local 322 is now seventy strong, with several applications to be acted upon. We all addressed the boys and gave them all the encouragement we could.

On the 20th I received a report from Bro. Al. Courtney, president of Local 600, which I wish to incorporate in my report. It is as follows:

"DULUTH, January 19, 1915.

"On January 14th the following officers were installed by Bros. Fred Bernard and Vice-President Weiss of Local 574: Al Courtney, president; W. D. Jones, vice-president; W. Blackney, secretary-treasurer; F. C. Martel, recording secretary; L. Hagensen, inspector; Geo. Bills, chaplain; Chas. Schofield, sergeant-at-arms; J. Gisch, M. More, W. B. Jones, trustees; delegates to trades and labor assembly, Bros. Courtney, Martel, Schofield; delegate to Trades and Labor Assembly to Superior, W. T. Smith.

Total money received.....	$476 27

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January.

Left Milwaukee for Mendota on the 1st. Was disappointed when I found the bartenders there were not ready to get in line, as I understood they wanted to organize. It was the same old story: "We had a local and the secretary got away with the coin [about thirty cents]. What's the use, no one would attend the meetings," and a lot more of that boneheaded stuff. I did not see one or two, but all the boys that I could find on watch, and was unable to even get a start. They seem to think they are safe as far as the drys putting them out of business is concerned, basing their opinion for this on the last vote. I saw there was no use of trying to convince them that another day was coming, and that the only safe plan would be to have something back of them. There being nothing doing, I made up my mind that I had better let them go at this time.

To Dubuque, where the central body is working on a Labor Forward movement. I have been addressing one or more meetings each night. Things look good for Dubuque to come back to the place where they were before the lockout a few years ago. Our meetings are well attended, and up to the present time the majority of our audiences have been men that were former members of the building trades, but have let themselves become suspended. We believe they are doing to come back to their unions. Brother Byrns, of the Boot and Shoe Workers; Brother Snyder, of the Garment Workers, and Brother Leslie, of the Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers, are in the city representing their internationals, and are on the job all the time. Local 527 is doing fine, there being only two unfair houses in the city, and before this goes to press we will have them in line. Brother Callahan was elected as a delegate to the Frisco Convention. I believe they made no mistake, for he is well thought of here. The central body elected him president at their last meeting, and he got on the job right away. Bro. Jack Hamel is the new secretary of Local 527, and no better could be found. He told them they would have to come to the meetings to pay their dues, and be there on time, or good-night for them when the time came, as he did not intend to hold them on the books. The boys are pulling for the Soxs to win the pennant, as Bro. Clarence Rowland, the new manager of the Soxs, was the first president of Local 527, and still holds his membership in the local. I am working on the culinary workers here, and hope to get them in line. I have held two meetings, but up to date have been unable to get them together, but hope at the next meeting to secure enough names to send for a charter.

My expense account for the month of January is as follows:

Jan. 1—Milwaukee to Mendota.....	$3 55
3—Mendota to Dubuque.....	3 16
Transfer of baggage, Illinois Central to St. Paul.....	50
Postage for month.....	40

Total. $7 61

Yours fraternally,

BEN GORTON,

International Organizer.

SPOKANE, WASH.

TO THE EDITOR—Having followed the wake for four years, we realize that an awakening must be called, and we have descended on the enemy with unfurled banners, declaring for just compensation for labor done. Dealers in general have a set price for their wares. Consumers must pay, or leave it. Human labor receives justice only from the honorable, just and righteous, not from the leeches and pilferers who drain the last drop for their selfish greed. Since the strike here conditions have been allowed to slip gradually away, until a halt has had to be called. Now is the time to take on new life. Many places in the culinary line, and others, closed because they associated the beast to the wage-worker. Restaurants that are making money here are the ones that stood steadfastly for our cause for fair wages. We feel the necessity for the amalgamation of the cooks, waiters and waitresses into one solid body at this time for various reasons. The depression that is felt here is felt all over the Northwest. In our line large places have gone to the wall, and small ones have taken their places. Many of these are operated by the boss, his wife, or his partners. This condition cuts into our membership, and is hard to remedy. In the larger places shifts have been cut to pieces, until four or five dollars constitute a week's wages. This must be stopped. The consolidated efforts of the three crafts, working to one end, is necessary to accomplish our aim for future welfare.

Fraternally,

C. ALLEN,
President Local 63.

BOYS, WAIT FOR THIS GIRL.

The girl who is unkind to her mother isn't worth a tinker's dog-gone. This isn't written in any part of the Bible, but it's written in the history of thousands and thousands of misfit homes. If one of you boys ever run across a girl with her face full of roses; with eyes that would dim the lustre of a Colorado sky and with a voice that would make the song of an angel seem discordant, and she says, as she comes to the door: "I can't go for a few minutes, I've got to help mother with the dishes," don't give her up. Stick to her like a burr to a mule's tail. Just sit down on the doorstep and wait. If she joins you in two or three minutes, so much the better; but if you have to stay there on the door-step for a half hour, you just wait for her. If YOU don't somebody else WILL and in time you'll be sorry. For you'll realize what you have lost.

Wait for her, boy. She's worth it.—Ex.

THE FORUM

DOUBLE-CROSSING THEIR MEMBERSHIP.

"Our international secretary, being short on matter to rave about, he took his pen in hand and wrote an article called 'Fear of Publicity.'"

With the foregoing as an opener, the Sacred Septette endeavors to wiggle out from under the charge made in recent issues of the MIXER AND SERVER that the management of Local 30 purposely and with intent to deny the membership of that local union the privilege of securing the official journal of our International Union—the MIXER AND SERVER—by the very simple expedient of "forgetting" to send to headquarters the addresses of their membership.

The Sacred Seven will tell their readers that they are on the level and would not, under any circumstances, use other than honorable methods in dealing with them; yet they have "stacked the cards" so as to prevent their supporters from getting any information except what the Sacred Septette properly prepares for their consumption. How exceedingly kind and generous they are; they say in substance: Boys, you are too tender and unsophisticated to permit you to read the ravings of that imp of darkness who is editing the MIXER AND SERVER; he would make you believe that the moon is made of green cheese; he would try to convince you that you are better off right now than you were way back "during the winter of 1900 (when) the cooks, waiters, waitresses, and helpers were paid the smallest wages and were compelled to work longer hours than had even prevailed previously."

He would try to convince you that a six-day week and a wage schedule of twelve dollars per week compares favorably with, in fact, is better than what you enjoyed during the winter of 1900 before Local 30 was granted a charter, when "it was not unusual for men and women to work fourteen and sixteen hours a day for one day's pay."

Why, if you were permitted to read that fellow's compositions, which he prints in the MIXER AND SERVER every month, you would really believe that we, your Sacred Seven Scribes, were just ordinary fellows, and you would take from us the halo which we have constructed, with great labor, pains and exceptional patience. We don't want you to listen to him, for he is too much of an iconoclast; he would ruthlessly destroy the images which we have constructed for your exclusive worship, in fact, he would try to pull the wool over your innocent eyes and convince you that he was not the arch conspirator which we have pictured him. We have, with your funds and at considerable expense, invested in a monthly journal of our own—read it, brothers—when we permit you—and you will find more than sufficient mental food for your growing intellects; you will find in OUR OWN paper an assortment such as will lead in easy stages along the road which WE have designated as the right one, and you will finally emerge purified and entitled to the distinguishing title which separates the believer from the unconverted comrade.

Just place your whole confidence in us, we will continue our efforts to get rid of that terrible fellow, the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER, and one of these days we will be by ourselves, and then you will be permitted to read what we write for your enlightenment. If any one asks you whether you receive the MIXER AND SERVER, hold your hands up in horror and say, "Nay, nay, I don't want that perfidious sheet; I've instructed our secretary to protect me, and he knows how."

In another portion of their attempt to excuse themselves, the Seven Sacred Scribes say: "It is very hard to obtain the address of all the members. Some of them do not wish to give their addresses for one reason or another." How complimentary they are to the men who are keeping them in office and titles; they leave the impression that there are members of their local who are ashamed of where they live, or that, perchance, some one might find them whom they didn't want to see. Usually, when a man hides his home or sleeping quarters address, he has by such secrecy indicated that he is wanted. Are the members of Local 30 willing to permit their Seven Sacred Scribes to convey the impression that approximately sixteen hundred of them are "wanted."

"Local 30 has only one secretary," is another crutch upon which the cripple comes into court. Local 30 has as many secretaries as Local 77 of Boston, Mass., which local has a larger membership than Local 30, yet we have never had to urge that local to supply us with its up-to-date mail lists, nor has Local 77 tried to avoid sending in its mail lists because there was only one secretary in their office.

In another portion of that referred-to article, the Sacred Seven print the following: "There is a big bundle of "The Mixer and Server" coming every month to headquarters." The average reader perusing that statement would have in mind the qualifying word "big" and conclude that it would require quite a "big" bundle to care for the wants of more than fifteen hundred members. That big bundle can be easily pictured in the reader's mind by sizing up his own copy of this month's MIXER AND SERVER and then mentally calculating how big a bundle twenty-four more copies of the MIXER AND SERVER added to his own copy would make. Headquarters began to send a bundle of twenty-five (25) copies of the MIXER AND SERVER to the headquarters of Local 30, February 30, 1913. Even if that number of copies had been distributed among the members who frequent headquarters daily, and we doubt that such distribution ever took place, there would be doubly that number left without a copy. When the writer visited the headquarters of Local 30, November 1, 1913, there were at least sixty to seventy members seated at tables or standing about in groups. Can the reader imagine that number of members being cared for with that BIG bundle containing, as stated, twenty-five copies of the MIXER AND SERVER?

As a final, and presumed to be sizzling, shot from the Seven Sacred Scribes, they say: "They (the MIXER AND SERVER) are very seldom read, if ever at all, and the past as well as the present secretary of Local 30 have yet to hear a complaint from members about not receiving the MIXER AND SERVER." But they did have several members ask them not to furnish their address to Cincinnati, as they did not care to receive the MIXER AND SERVER. "What a compliment to our official paper." We have in mind, too, individuals who made requests somewhat similar—"not to furnish Cincinnati with their address," but the authorities got them just the same. No doubt the Sacred Septette imagine that its interrogation, "What a compliment to our official journal," is complimentary to the members for whom they presume to speak; probably the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER may conclude differently. They may, after reading the foregoing quotations from The Culinary Craft, better understand why the Seven Sacred Scribes have such easy sailing and succeed in retaining their hold on that local union. They will also appreciate why the members of Local 30 are seemingly satisfied to pay the expense for a publication of their own and be denied the privilege of reading it. It is a safe wager to lay, that if the MIXER AND SERVER were circulated among the members of that local, the grip of the Sacred Seven would speedily weaken.

The Sacred Seven may continue to offer its excuses, may persist in advising that the members of Local 30 don't want the MIXER AND SERVER, but the lonesome fact remains that if it were not for the MIXER AND SERVER the Seven Sacred Scribes would have exhausted themselves erecting straw men and knocking them down.

As we go to press nothing resembling a mail list of the members of Local 30 has been received; the Sacred Seven are in mortal dread of the time when the MIXER AND SERVER may reach the members of Local 30; they are doing their best to postpone that day.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

MONKEYING WITH THE BUZZSAW.

Once more the Sacred Seven of Seventh Street, San Francisco, throw a conniption fit, the latest, presumably, because the delegates representing our International Union voted with the majority at the Philadelphia convention of the American Federation of Labor, held November 9th to 21st, inclusive, 1914.

The first time that the Sacred Seven castigated our representatives they intimated that our delegates had gone over, bag and baggage, to the camp of the enemy. In the MIXER AND SERVER for October, 1914, the writer offered a roll call, which showed that our delegates were in pretty good company and that said company cast a vote of 12,772, while those whom the Sacred Seven wished our delegates to follow, cast a vote of 5,504.

At the Philadelphia convention there were two resolutions presented and referred to the Committee on Resolutions; they were officially known as Resolutions No. 144 and 149. At the night session, held Friday, November 20, 1914, Delegate John P. Frey, secretary of the Committee on Resolutions, reported as follows:

"Resolutions 144 and 149 were acted on together, and the committee has endeavored in its report to announce the policy of the American Federation of Labor."

The committee offered the following as a substitute for the resolution:

"The American Federation of Labor, as in the past, again declares that the question of the regulation of wages and the hours of labor should be undertaken through trade union activity, and not be made subjects of laws through legislative enactment, excepting insofar as such regulations affect or govern the employment of women and minors, health and morals, and employment by federal, state or municipal government."

A motion was made and seconded to adopt the recommendation of the committee.

Immediately following the motion there ensued discussion which lasted during the entire evening, and finally about midnight a roll call vote was ordered by action of the convention. The vote for the substitute offered by the committee was 11,237, opposed to same was 8,107. Delegates representing 607 votes failed to respond to roll call.

The Seven Sacred Scribes use up two pages of the December, 1914, number of The Culinary Craft in setting forth their views and conclusions; they are obessed with the idea that unless our delegates to the American Federation of Labor accept direction from them and do their bidding, they misrepresent the men and women who elected them to office.

On another page of this issue of the MIXER AND SERVER will be found a letter of transmittal and protest submitted by Local 30 of San Francisco. It is suggested that you peruse same with care. The letter of transmittal bears date of January 5, 1915; the action taken occurred at a meeting held December 16, 1914, and, as already intimated, the Seven Sacred Scribes got their condemning machinery working in advance.

It may not be amiss to offer a suggestion to those who are interested in this subject matter. The records of the Philadelphia A. F. of L. convention can be secured for 25 cents the copy; enclose a remittance for that sum and address your request to Frank Morrison, 801 "G" street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and there is little doubt but what a copy of the proceedings will be forthcoming within a reasonable time. After you secure your copy, turn to page 443 and continue reading until you have finished reading the roll call, which practically closed that session, held, as already stated, Friday night, November 20th. After following out that suggestion you will be in a better position to know whether you are in accord with the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, or the majority of delegates representing international unions on the floor of that convention. The writer is rather proud of the fact that he has been accused of believing in the sentiments concerning labor legislation which is held and expressed by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor; he is exceedingly gratified with the knowledge that his colleagues, delegates from our International Union to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, appear to be equally impressed with the views of President Gompers, and while President Gompers has no doubt felt the sting (?) of condemnatory resolutions and utterances of the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, from last reports he was engaged in his usual labors as the chief executive of the American Federation of Labor.

We were rather concerned when we read in The Culinary Craft that, "The lame excuse offered was that they acted on the views of a Mr. Gompers." "They"—in this instance—the delegates from our International Union, have offered neither a lame or otherwise excuse to either the Sacred Seven or their local, nor do we believe they pay much attention to the mutterings of fellows in Local 30 or out, responsible for the above quotation. President Gompers has no doubt met up with that "A Mr. Gompers" before when perusing the official mouthpiece of the I. W. W., and it was to be expected from the source from which it came.

In the same wheezy voice the Sacred Septette refers to the vote on prohibition and eight-hour legislation at the recent election. Comparison of the vote returned for San Francisco County may interest the members of our International Union:

	Yes	No
Prohibition	21,678	105,271
Majority		85,593
Eight-hour law	49,629	70,909
Majority		21,280

Population of San Francisco, 1910 census, 416,912; total vote cast at 1914 election, 134,492.

Los Angeles County, with a population of 319,198 (1910 census), cast a total vote of 312,455. On the two proposition, Los Angeles County voted as follows:

	Yes	No
Prohibition	103,645	111,249
Majority		7,604
Eight-hour law	74,583	133,704
Majority		59,121

The readers of the MIXER AND SERVER need hardly be advised that Los Angeles, Cal. has been and is still the seat of probably the most unceasing opposition to trades unionism of any city in America; yet we have the rather startling result shown, that despite San Francisco's superiority in population and trade union membership, Los Angeles cast 74,583 votes for the eight-hour law, while San Francisco mustered 49,629; in other words, the city stricken with anti-unionism shows 24,954 more in favor of a shorter work-day than the city conceded to be the best organized municipality in America. And the Seven Sacred Scribes face such a situation and aver that "the worm has been trod upon," that "traitors will be removed," etc., etc., ad nauseum.

Look to home before you attempt castigation in the future. A local union which has been so frugal as to refrain from sending delegates to our conventions, as the local which the Sacred Seven presumably speak for, takes a rather economical method to express its dissatisfaction.

Local 30 nor the Seven Sacred Scribes were noted as being "present" at the Denver convention; in fact, that local has not seen fit to expend any of its funds to send representatives to conventions in recent years. The last time it had delegates on the floor of a convention was at Toledo in the year 1907, but in spite of its chronic absenteeism, it takes unto itself assumed dictatorship. Now that the convention is coming to its own city, and it won't cost them transportation expense to be represented, probably they may succeed in electing representatives to the A. F. of L. who will do their bidding—providing the convention agrees to such an arrangement, which we seriously doubt.

The Seven Sacred Scribes have occupied much time and printers' ink in presenting their threats as to what they will do next June; they are going to revolutionize things, and one of the principal tasks which they are really determined on, is cutting off the official heads of the delegates who voted with the majority at the Philadelphia convention of the A. F. of L., and that includes [wait a moment until I feel of my neck now] one of the delegates who signs his name—

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Now that the Sacred Septette of San Francisco makes the admission that "The policy of The Culinary Craft differs from that of the MIXER AND SERVER, we are willing to concede that probably after all the Sacred Seven do enjoy an occasional lucid moment. We are free to admit that we were somewhat concerned that our exceedingly busy membership, especially the few who have had the rather limited privilege of perusing The Culinary Craft, would not fully appreciate, owing to lack of time to consider, that there is a decided difference between the policy under which our official magazine is conducted and the policy of The Culinary Craft, which is supposed to be the property of Local 30, San Francisco, and the avowed champion of secession, even though the campaign is made under a segregation banner.

The policy of The Culinary Craft, as practiced by the Sacred Seven, differs considerably from month to month; it lacks stability, in fact is rather weak on its legs. For example and in order to illustrate how that policy works, we will quote from the "Announcement of the Press Committee."

"No hard and fast policy has been laid down by the committee to govern its editorial work."

"The committee reserves the right to edit all articles accepted for publication."

The foregoing has appeared as a part of the "Announcement" referred to in every issue of The Culinary Craft (August, 1914, excepted) since Local 30 assumed the burden of permitting its name to appear as owner of said journal. In the article, which acknowledges that there is a difference in the policies of the MIXER AND SERVER and The Culinary Craft, we find several statements which we shall call attention to.

For instance, the Sacred Septette say: "We aim to give every culinary worker a chance to express himself in this journal (The Culinary Craft) regardless of whether it pleases the Press Committee or not."

We know of one instance where that statement proved untrue. Brother Charles Fleischman, of Local 44, compiled a very interesting and instructive series of articles which were offered for publication. The Press Committee permitted several of these installments to occupy space, and when it insisted on coloring the compositions which had been offered, to close the series as we understood it, the author bucked and refused to permit his name to be used. In his letter relative to this experience, which was printed in the October, 1914, number of the MIXER AND SERVER, page 31, Brother Fleischman said: "I have for some time past published a history of the (our) unions here (San Francisco, Cal.) in The Culinary Craft of Local 30. When I originally started on the job my copy was acceptable as it was. Lately the committee in charge has changed same to suit themselves." Yet, "the Press Committee," the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, have the effrontery to continue printing such statements as "We aim to give every culinary worker a chance to express himself in this journal regardless of whether it pleases the Press Committee or not." The Sacred Septette are in error when they further affirm that "The editor of the MIXER AND SERVER does not understand such a policy." The editor of the MIXER AND SERVER "understands" better than those who carry out the policy of The Culinary Craft want him to understand; they may imagine that they are getting by unnoticed, but they will probably be convinced before they are through with their task.

But the real nugget in that article, on page 4, of the December, 1914, number of The Culinary Craft reads as follows:

"If the MIXER AND SERVER will adopt the same policy, The Culinary Craft would cease publication and its contributors would assist in making the MIXER AND SERVER readable to all the men and women that pay per capita to keep it going."

The editor and associate editors of the MIXER AND SERVER, the General Executive Board of our International Union, respond to that invitation with a vigorous and decided "NO," and in doing so voices the level-headed judgment of a general membership who would emphatically protest opening the pages of the MIXER AND SERVER to the unsigned dribble which characterizes every issue of The Culinary Craft under the management of the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco. A membership which would be heard in no uncertain language were we to even attempt to imitate the policy responsible for getting out The Culinary Craft.

We are not quite ready to assume an attitude indicating loss of reason and manhood, the price offered is too confounded cheap; it would not increase materially in value if included therein were the body, boots and breeches of the Sacred Septette.

Indeed, yes—the policy of The Culinary Craft differs from that of the MIXER AND SERVER.

The policy of the MIXER AND SERVER differs immeasurably and we expect to further accentuate that fact by steadily avoiding any semblance of following the unsteady gait of the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street.

The MIXER AND SERVER is an international trade union publication, which voices the collective expression of its owners—the general membership of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders International League of America—they have absolute power to make and insist on the carrying out of the policy of our International Union, which policy is not a doubtful or uncertain one. It is not the voice of one individual, nor yet that of seven, be they sacred or profane; its columns contain, without exception, the best thought of our people and our times, and if our general membership were as seemingly dissatisfied with the contents of their official paper as the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, they have not taken steps to bring about a change. When they desire a change of policy, they are intelligent enough to proceed with the job without promptings from the Sacred Septette.

The MIXER AND SERVER differs from The Culinary Craft to the extent that its management endeavors at all times to reach the "men and women that pay per capita tax to support it." It does not require its owners to pay for a publication and then deprive them of it, as is the case with the alleged owners of The Culinary Craft. They are paying the price, so we are informed, but are denied the privilege, doubtful though that may be, of reading the indiscreet and bewildering compositions presumed to have been constructed by the Sacred Septette.

The policy of the MIXER AND SERVER does not admit to its columns the uncouth and unsigned smudge which parades itself as humor; it does not give asylum and space to skulking, spineless individuals whose attacks from ambush conform to their ideals of manhood; it denies space to anonymous slime slingers and mud heavers, and wastes none of its pages in advocacy of sabotage, duel unionism or secession; it is not an I. W. W. tin whistle, nor does it secure its inspiration from those who urge culinary workers to imitate Lucretia Borgia; it neither solicits or carries political advertising, nor yet that of any concern which has non-union products to exchange for union earned wages; it carries no confused ideas as to its mission and makes no pretensions whatever of seeking the approval of those who lack intelligence enough to understand the definitions of manliness and decency.

Thank goodness, the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, recognize the distinction, that they realize there is a wide difference between the policy which obsesses them and which they exhibit in their combined editorial capacity, and the policy which carried the MIXER AND SERVER to its present splendid position, a policy which has met and merited the approval of the owners of the MIXER AND SERVER—the membership of our International Union.

CONCERNING CANADIAN CULINARY CRAFTSMEN.

The limited number of readers of The Culinary Craft, Local 30's burden, and the alleged official mouthpiece of the secessionists, have probably paid but scant attention to much which has been printed in that more or less turgid publication, and probably less to what has appeared under the caption "Announcement by the Press Committee." As the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER have been informed, Local 30 of San Francisco, Cal., took over as a possession, in January, 1914, a year go, a publication with the title, "The Culinary Craft," and forthwith selected seven members as a press committee; this committee immediately caused to be printed the referred-to "Announcement"; said announcement has appeared for one entire year, occupying rather valuable space which might have been used to print sensible suggestions on the subject of organization and the conduct of local unions, or otherwise, utterances of value to the men and women who are occupied in making a living at the catering industry. The first paragraph of the referred "Announcement" reads:

"'The Culinary Craft' is published by San Francisco Waiters' Union, Local No. 30, as a means for the interchange of thought and dissemination of interesting information, suggestions and plans for the benefit of the hotel and restaurant workers throughout the United States."

Culinary workers of the cities situated in British North America may accept the foregoing for exactly what it reads. Whether they realize it or not, the great, sympathetic hearts which we have been advised beat ceaselessly for the down-trodden, abused and much maligned culinary workers, the heart or hearts which have beat the air and sounded the tom-tom of alarm for these past twelve months, through the medium known as The Culinary Craft, does not beat or worry for them nor whatever of deplorable conditions they are confronted with now or may be henceforth.

Boys and girls, we tender to you our sincere sympathy; we have waited patiently for these twelve months, in the hope that that immense obstacle (?) the truly frightful prospect of being disowned by so-called fellow craftsmen, would be removed; but it is still there, warning you to be gone and help yourselves or depend on that awful mixed international union which the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, aver is such a terrible infliction and odoriferous failure. The Sacred Septette and those who support them are adamant, they are persistently obdurate, inflexible and because you are on the other side of that imaginary line, you can't be saved from the fates which impend. Perhaps it is well that you were not made acquainted with the attitude of the culinary saviors earlier, had you really known that you were outlawed by the Sacred Septette, you may have committed indiscretions for which you would now be sorry, and see what the lack of information has done for you. It has permitted you to go on and on trying to convert the benighted catering industry employe, and today in Canada your numerical strength compares very favorably with previous periods. Possibly some of you have eaten of the "dead sea fruit" and will have cause to beat your breasts and tear your hair, you may even have accepted some of the false friendship which has been offered you by those who sought your support only to throw you into the discard after they had used your strength. Flippancy aside, don't you, who reside in Canada and who are engaged in the culinary trades feel complimented? If not, you should, for that deliberate attempt to throw you over is it not an admission that you possess too much intelligence to be caught with secession chaff, that you are too wise to be led to slaughter on the altar of secession or so-called segregation; we are at a loss to find other definite reasons which would be susceptible of acceptance. Had that "annoucement" appeared but a few times, and then was amended to include you, we would have called it an oversight corrected, but men who make such professions of acute perception, who say that they possess a sure enough monopoly of the bright, brainy, clever, astute co-workers, who are specially proficient in finding flaws in the mangement, conduct and general administration of our International Union, would not leave such a definite and unquestioned declaration stand for 365 days, fifty-two weeks, twelve whole months, unless they meant that it should stand. Now, this little item, declaration, pronouncement or platform is neither indefinite or ambiguous; we have quoted it ABSOLUTELY word for word; it stands for exactly what it reads, "for the benefit of the hotel and restaurant workers throughout the UNITED STATES."

After all, fellow-members across that "imaginary line," it will be solace and comfort to you and your fellow countrymen to know that the Sacred Septette has not accomplished "throwing you out" of our International Union, and it will be comforting to you to be informed that, long before, and no doubt long after they have "shot their bolt" of wisdom (?) there was and will be an International Union composed of catering industry workers.

Before the Sacred Seven began their task of trying to dismember our International Union, it thrived and prospered, it is too big and great an institution to be obliterated by the orders of any small body, such as control the destinies of Local 30 of San Francisco; and you can rest quite secure in the conviction that, even if the Sacred Septette and their limited number of followers don't want you, your welcome as members of our International is quite as sincere and hearty as it was when yourself and your associate workers were invited to become members.

Speaking for every member of the General Executive Board and every trades unionist connected with our International Union, we express sincere regret over the action of a few men who, seeking to destroy our splendid International Union, are not over particular as to the methods they employ. You have the satisfaction of knowing that you will get over their slap, but the infliction which bothers them is deep seated and the careful service of skilled surgeons will never be able to supply them with what they lack.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

DES MOINES, IA., Jan. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In speaking of the "booze" question depriving so many wives and children of a living in this country, I wish to say that we have something worse than "booze" in this country that is robbing these poor ones of their existence. It is something that each and every voter should acquaint himself with before casting his ballot to decide the right or wrong. If the people who are so opposed to liquor being sold would only turn their attention to the real cause of the non-existence of so many laboring men's families, they would today be fighting what is known as the "dollar insanity man," who is stealing the production of the laboring man of this country. We do not have to guess at the homeless of West Virginia and Colorado. We know it to be a fact, and we know that liquor had nothing to do with it. The greed of the almighty dollar by the "dollar insanity man" was the cause of it all. We do not have to guess at the real cause of so many of our brother laborers being without the real sustenance of life during the winter season right in our own locality. We know that if they had gotten their share of the profit produced during the labor season, they would have been supplied with the necessities to tide them over the present crises of the no-work season. But our enemies must have something to hide behind; they must have a coat that shines on the outside with that purity of an angel, while on the inside it is stained with such rottenness that the reptile would scorn with shame. I believe all pleasures were put here on earth for us to enjoy, and should these pleasures be taken away from us, we would count life a sham. Many of us enjoy different pleasures in life. I may like to drink, smoke, chew or dance, and I may not, but some other union man and brother may like some of these pleasures, and why should he be deprived of any of them just because some other man makes them an excuse to hide his own robbing tyranny.

It is the extreme of anything that makes it bad. The extreme low profit on what we produce as laboring men today is what causes the insufficient supply to families of today. If I but had the time to write my full views on this question, they would certainly exonerate the use of liquor as the cause of so much suffering today.

T. S. DODD, street car man.

TEMPERANCE.

What's in a name? Or a word? Often a great deal. And catchwords are often of great importance in a fight of opinions, or rather sentiments.

This is true of the prohibition question. We insist upon temperance, the prohibitionist upon abstinence. In order to weaken our case, he appropriates the word "temperance," and by constant misuse of it has succeeded in giving to it, in the minds of many people, a secondary meaning almost the same as abstinence.

This may seem a little matter to write about. But it is not. It is a matter of decided importance. For in "temperance" lies the chief point of the whole drink question. The difference between virtue and vice, between food and poison, between common sense and unreason, lies in the word "temperance." We should not yield to the anti-drink propaganda the exclusive right to the word "temperance" because it is constantly abused by them. Having your consent to a statement about "temperance," they will, by a common logical trick, carry your consent to apply to the secondary use of the word, which makes it equivalent to abstinence. Temperance means temperate use; it means neither abuse nor disuse. To use "temperance" as synonymous with "abstinence" is a perversion of language and covers up dangerous fallacies. Few people will oppose temperance in the proper sense of the term. It is, in fact, the most important of all the virtues, the governor of all the others. But the prohibitionist takes what is said in favor of temperance and applies it to abstinence by using the word temperance in its secondary, false meaning. In that way he is constantly misleading people.

After the Cosmopolitan Magazine offered a prize for the best essay distinguishing between temperance and prohibition, and the noted men who composed the committee had awarded the prize to a manuscript, without knowing the identity of its author, it was found that the victor was a woman and a mother, Mrs. A. F. Hendricks of Philadelphia. She said, among other things:

"I have brought up my boys, remembering constantly that I must leave them, and that any exercise of my will power could only be temporary. I have had in mind, as I believe all mothers and makers of laws should have in mind, that success and good living must come from within. Outside influences may encourage and develop temperance and strength of will; they can not force those qualities upon mankind, or upon the individual.

"Ignorance of life or a childish promise made to a mother is a poor weapon when the mother is gone. Knowledge, temperance, self-control, based upon good example and thorough understanding of the world—these produce the strong, balanced man.

"Hysterical exaggeration, coercion in the place of argument, mysterious dread that arouses curiosity—such are the beginnings of many a drunkard's career.

"Temperance and not prohibition would solve the drink question. No paternal severity will keep a boy temperate, when his father is dead, and no straight-jacket legislation will keep the individual temperate against the individual's will."

Temperance is a constructive force. Prohibition is destructive. Temperance builds character—perhaps it is not too much to say temperance IS character. Prohibition substitutes the will of the government for the will of the individual, destroying the power of self-direction and self-control, hence dissolving the basis of character. It would make parasites of all men, living on the strength of others and losing their individuality.

In opposing prohibition, let us insist that the term "temperance" belongs to us, to those who believe in the freedom of the individual to decide for himself whether he will indulge temperately in alcoholic beverages or not, and let us make it clear that temperance, so far from meaning the same as abstinence, is the direct opposite of that idea, that a temperate person can not entertain the idea of prohibition because it is of the essence of intemperance.—Labor Advocate, Quincy, Ill., Jan. 8, 1915.

CHAT OF THE CRAFTS

INVITING HIMSELF TO TOWN.

"There's rotting, stinking, corroding, corrupt, hell-ritten, God-defying, devil-ritten New York," is the way Billy Sunday refers to Manhattan town and invites the wobbly pulpit pounders to send him an invitation to "come on in" and slush around in the pool some. Evidently Billy has heard encouraging news from "Dri-Bill" Anderson, superintendent of the New York State Anti-Saloon League, and proposes to "cut in" on some of "Dri Bills" easy pickings. The former "ball tosser" better work up a new act before trying to fill the benches in opposition to the attractions of the Great White Way. There are innumerable old-time character actors pounding the pavements these days and they might call Billy's act "old stuff," much of which these old-timers used in the days when Tony Pastor, Harrigan and Hart, Barry and Fay, Bobby Newcomb, Niles Evans, Bryant and Hoey, made the public sit up and take notice. Some day someone will write Billy Sunday's epitaph; they might search a long while before finding one which was used on a western gun hero and would fit Billy Sunday like a glove:

"Here lies Bill Blank,
He done his damnedest,
Angels could do no more."

REPAIRS IN IOWA.

E. Mallory and Brother Rube are doing some tin work on James Tierney.—Mercyville (Iowa) Banner.

SAFE FROM INVASION.

"All the excitement about a possible invasion of New York City by a foreign foe makes me smile," says Adolph Frankl of Local 219. "Do you suppose that the European generals, or whoever it may be which directs or decides on invading other territory than their own, haven't heard of the "gun men" in this great metropolis; and do you imagine any of them foolish enough to invite an attack from such a deadly force. Here's a match, light up and forget it."

Local 219 is Brother Frankl's special concern these days; trade conditions are none too brisk, which means that Secretary Frankl is putting in long hours trying to keep all his boys busy until the frigid period has passed.

THE INVITATION HABIT.

How do you know whether that non-union craftsman is opposed to your organization? Have you ever approached him and put the question as to whether he would consider becoming a member? If you haven't and you don't know anyone who has, don't you believe it would be an excellent idea to discover the true facts by having a confab with him. Don't expect non-members to push their way into your local union. Get the invitation habit and invite them to become a member of the Big Family.

DEAR SIR—The following is an original rhyme and as it is associated with our craft, I thought it would be appropriate if entered in the MIXER AND SERVER, under the heading of Chat of the Craft.

"THE OLD PAPER DICKY."

We will drink a toast to the old paper dicky,
That covered our hearts for so many a year,
Be it Dutch, be it French or the heart of a Mickey,
In the memory to all it will ever be dear.
For we have put them on together when the wine flowed high,
We have put them on together when the beer run dry,
We have put them on together in a thousand
kinds of weather,
But I hope we will not need them in the sweet
bye and bye.

Oh, the man behind the dicky, he has grievances galore,
Little troubles, mighty sticky, that will leave him nevermore.
But for all his trifling troubles he is still a lucky
Jim,
For of all the wine that bubbles, there's a bubble left for him.

Just another little toast to the old paper dicky,
Another little spot on its shiny white shirtside,
For we have put them on together when the goose hung high,
We have put them on together with a song or sigh,
We have put them on together in a thousand
kinds of weather,
But I hope we will not need them in the sweet
bye and bye.

Fraternally yours,

ARTHUR LOEB,
Local 106.

SUFFRAGE DEFEATED.

Tuesday night, January 12, 1915, is the date which women suffrage advocates are likely to remember for some time to come. The House of Representatives of Washington, D. C., rejected the Mondell proposal to submit a constitutional amendment providing that right of suffrage should not be abridged "because of sex" by a vote of 174 for to 204 against.

The address of Congressman Stanley E. Bowdle was conceded to be the strongest made in opposition to the measure. Those of our members who care to follow the full proceedings will no doubt write their representatives at Washington and request a copy of the Congressional Record containing the debate and vote. In passing it may be added that the disappointment of the Anti-Saloonists was treble that of the on-the-level suffrage advocates.

Smiling, fat and "sassy" Edward Maharg, ex-secretary of Local 175, of Buffalo, N. Y., accompanied by two of Buffalo's substantial citizens, Hon. A. C. Bidwell and Doctor A. E. Campbell, paid headquarters a brief visit about the middle of January. Needless for us to say that we were pleased to grab Ed by the hand and to welcome his friends "to our city" which, as we recall it, was indulging in her usual winter stunt of imitating "Dear Old London," by putting on exhibition a fine sample of dense fog. Brother Maharg found us deeply imbedded in trying to keep the printer-man off our neck and permit the last forms of the Mixer and Server to go to press. Under the circumstances we were unable to show any courtesies, for which we hope to be forgiven. Brother Maharg looked like ready money and seemed to be vulgarly healthy, both of which the Old Scout has earned, for they don't make any better boys in the Empire State.

Billy Sunday, the so-called baseball evangelist, is coppering Luke McLuke's stuff from the Cincinnati Enquirer and using it as his original ideas. In one of his recent sermons (?) he slipped several of Luke's witty sayings over and didn't even presume to give credit. This reminds us of another would-be soul-saver, who, when called on the carpet for using other people's thoughts without credit, replied: "Why, my dear, dear brother, you evidently did not observe that just before I quoted the passage which you refer to, I lifted my left hand with two fingers perpendicular, and when I finished quoting I raised my right hand and showed two fingers perpendicularly, thus indicating to my hearers quotation marks before and after quotations. If Billy Sunday were required to pull off a similar stunt to show when he was quoting the ideas or witty sayings of others, the only original stuff left in his discourse would consist of "Brethern, Dig up your Ducats," or references to the need of getting plenty of the mazuma. As a nickel-picker Billy outclasses any of the pulpitiere, but as a preacher of the gospel, he simply ain't. Philadelphia and her people have our sympathy in the affliction which they are confronted with; it will cost them something to hear Sunday on any day.

Senator Sheppard, of Texas, in trying to carry out the wishes of the Anti-Saloon League and make the District of Columbia DRY, added what is known to the law makers as a "rider" to one of the appropriation bills, and for his activity was given a nice little verbal trimming by Senator Kern, of Indiana, who intimated that Sheppard, had he wanted a square fight would have introduced a bill. No matter where you put an anti-saloon fanatic, he will show specks in his make-up, and evidently the Indiana Senator is wise to that fact. Senator Kern has one excellent habit, he won't begin anything unless he finishes it. Which reminds us, if you haven't sent out that petition we sent you it may not be too late to help out.

POSIES OR CHUCK.

In a recent issue of a New York daily paper there was printed an account of a meeting at the Church of the Ascension, Fifth avenue and Tenth street, the principal speaker being a minister who, in the course of his address: "Unemployment—What the Church is Doing," averred that "The Only Cure for Unemployment is Employment," and that the church was seeking methods whereby it could aid the seekers for situations. At the conclusion of the meeting each person attending was given a white rose, though the significance of such distribution is not recited, but it is a cinch bet, that if there were any unemployed in attendance, and it is presumed that there were, they would willingly have swapped their white rose for a bowl of good ox-tail soup and a hunk of bread. Possession of a white rose may alleviate hunger, it may create sufficient heat to make the down and outer feel indifferent to the absence of an overcoat, it may, when shown to the lodging house-keeper or landlord, cause them to forget that they want the price for the use of their property; flashing it on the grocer or eat-shop keeper may cause them to smile and invite one to "help yourself," but we doubt whether the ticket choppers on the elevated or the subway would stand for it, and in fact have a sneaking suspicion that it wouldn't pass any of those mentioned as a substitute for the humble silver dollar.

If we were hungry and had to choose between "posies and chuck," the former would be left at the post, and as a final thought on this bit of news we are willing to bet eighteen inches of liverwurst that the saloons serving the biggest beer and finest lunch closest to Fifth avenue and Tenth street had a more congenial crowd than the contributors of white flowers.

The New Republic, one of the numerous publications gotten out by the (American Issue Publishing Company) Anti-Saloon League, took the trouble to print the itemized statement made by the allied organizations which opposed State-wide Prohibition in Oregon. The total spent amounted to $62,204.10, which, considering the situation, was not excessive; but we note with some regret that the New Republic failed to print the "financial sheet" incurred by the Anti-Saloon League and other so-called church organizations.

For every dollar the WETS spent in that contest it cost the DRY'S TWO, and they will no doubt hide that fact by assuming that the law does not require them to present a statement. Fairness and the Antis are opposites, they fight with questionable weapons.

FIFTH LARGEST INDUSTRY.

Five Hundred Million Dollars Invested in the Movie Business.

The development of the movie during the past eight years is a phenomenon which should impel ancient Aladdin—if he knows about it—to turn over in his grave. It is without parallel or comparison. It would challenge the elasticity of the imagination were there not the facts to chain us to actuality. In 1914, up to the beginning of December, American manufacturers have turned out no less than 10,000 separate reels of negative film, from each of which reels 35 "positive" copies, on an average, are made. The standard reel is 1,000 feet long, which makes 360,000,000 feet of film all told, including both the originals and copies! About 68,000 miles of motion pictures—enough to go round the globe a little less than three times. In one year less a month!

The cost of producing the ordinary sort of originals is at least $2 a foot. This means $20,000,000 spent in making the negative reels alone. The 350,000,000 of copies cost four cents a foot, which totals $17,000,000 for these. Altogether

$37,000,000 spent in the manufacture of films in eleven months. Some figures! Yes, and they are not all. For this estimate does not take into account the special feature projects recently become an important factor in the film industry, on a single one of which may be spent, as in the case of a much advertised seven-reel drama now playing, as high as $300,000.

It is estimated that there are today between 17,000 and 18,000 motion picture theatres in the United States, to which more than 10,000,000 people go daily. A commission appointed by the mayor of Cleveland in 1913 reported that one sixth of the population of that city went to movie shows at least once a day. During the summer months of 1914 the National Board of Censorship estimated that in New York City between 850,000 and 900,000 people—one seventh of the total population—attended the motion picture theatres daily. Admission receipts total in 1914 (to December 1) approximately $318,000,000 for the movie theaters of the country.

Over $500,000,000 of actual capital has been invested in the business of making and exhibiting films in the United States. Two hundred and fifty thousand employees find in it a means of livelihood. Including all its ramifications and affiliations, the industry is called the fifth largest in the land, and the total value of the property and good will of it all is practically inestimable.—Harper's Weekly.

After fully absorbing the foregoing information, it may not be out of place to record the fact, the Anti-Saloon League is helping the "movie" show shops to garner quite a few extra dollars by furnishing them "reels" free of cost. These "reels" depict so-called incidents wherein the saloon and catering industry is given tremendous knocks by intimating that catering establishments are generally used as rendezvous for tough characters and law-breakers generally. In a number of instances "movie" house managers have been discouraged from this sort of thing. Don't simply stay away, see the manager and tell him that when he wants your patronage he will cease showing anti-saloon inspired "reels."

PARTING.

Sodger lad, O sodger lad,

The dawn will see ye marchin'
The nicht draks on—its dark is out
Wi' searchlichts, shiftin', archin'.

Sodger lad, O sodger lad,

Dye mind our summer meetin'?
And noo, ye'll gang. The heather's dead—
I canna keep frae greetin'.

Sodger lad, my sodger lad—

Dye mind, my time is nearin'?
Alone—alone—wi'out yer hand!
How shall I keep frae fearin'?

Sodger lad, O sodger lad,

Far, far awa' ye're goin'—
I'll not dare count the leagues an' days—
Gude God! The cocks are crowin'!

Sodger lad, my iuve, my dear,

Awake! The morn is grayin'!
E'en tho' my heart drags, sick wi' dread,
I wouldna have ye stayin'.

"IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY."
Up to mighty London came an Irishman one day;
As the streets paved with gold, sure everyone was gay,
Singing songs of Piccadilly, Strand and Leicester Square,
Till Paddy got excited, then he shouted to them there.

Chorus.

It's a long way to Tipperary, it's a long way to go:
It's a long way to Tipperary, to the sweetest girl
I know!
Goodbye Picadilly, farewell, Leicester Square.
It's a long, long way to Tipperary, but my heart's right there.

Paddy wrote a letter to his Irish Molly O', Saying, "Should you not receive it, write and let me know!"
"If I make mistakes in 'spelling,' Molly dear," said he,
Remember it's the pen that's bad, don't lay the blame on me."

Chorus.

Molly wrote a neat reply to Irish Paddy O'.
Saying, "Mike Maloney wants to marry me, and so
Leave the Strand and Picadilly, or you'll be to blame,
For Love has fairly drove me silly—hoping you're the same!"

Chorus.

There is no breach of neutrality in printing the above, for according to reliable news gatherers, the song is quite as popular and sung as frequently by the Germans and their co-scrapers as it is by the Allies.

THE LOWEST MUSICAL NOTE.

A 128-foot stop has been installed in an organ at Lowell, Mass., which produces a note an octave lower than has ever been known before, being indicated musically as CCCCCC. A 16-foot pipe, in its lowest note, vibrates 16 times a second, which is near the point below which vibrations cease to produce a continuous sound. In the production of its lowest sound a 128-foot pipe vibrates only four times. A group of pipes giving undertones has been arranged to sound together so as to produce a synthetic note equivalent to that which would be produced by a 128-foot pipe without actually using such a pipe. This low pitched note is described as a "mighty atmospheric throb of most awesome majesty."—The Pathfinder.

Our musical education has been sadly neglected, but those six C's look rather significant. About the one and only place where we expect to hear that note struck, hit, made or produced, is in the sanctum of the Culinary Craft immediately after they discover that some darned fussy individual has washed the coating of sugar from that Secession Resolution. If they don't produce a "mighty atmospheric throb" of most awesome melancholy it will be because someone has put a dent in the pipes which convey the wind.

One month gone of the year 1915 and the question comes to mind: what speed are we going to make for the remaining eleven months? Just one little effort on your part and we can come under the wire with something in the shape of an increased membership that will make the hacks and wheezes of the anti-trade unionists, anti-saloonists and anti-humanitarians go way back and locate a seat in the also-ran class. Just think of it, if you and every member of our cracking good International Union were to take the time and exercise patience and perseverance enough you could convert at least one non-union worker of our allied crafts and secure their application to become members. Take it from us, boys and girls, you would only have to repeat that bit of a stunt a few times, when you would have the whole country from one end to the other cleaned up and be able to boast of being the greatest trade union on the map anywhere. It's nice to think of it, even if you won't budge to help get there.

BREAKAGE.

She was but seventeen and very sweet,

Her corn-fed costume was quite shocking;
And when she slipped upon the icy street

She tore a great big hole in her silk umbrella.

She was sweet sixteen, and you know that means
The happiest time that life can send her;
But when she stepped high to the car

She busted the strap of her imagination.

THE MAKIN'S.

Many of our members who are denied their usual opportunity to soak up nicotine via pipe, cigar or cigarette can well sympathize with the soldiers of the armies of Europe, who are prevented from getting their regular smoke, not by reason of any regulation, but because tobacco seems to be about the rarest thing along the firing lines. Officers in command of men know that if their soldiers are well supplied with tobacco they will put up a stronger brand of scrapping, and they have been known in this war to issue orders which made shipments of tobacco take precedence over food supplies.

A writer, quoting an officer, said: "I think tobacco the greatest asset on active service. If the men can only get a 'jag' or a pipe they are content. They pay no heed to discomfort in the trenches or on the march in the worst weather. Even if they are without their rations they won't complain if the 'jags' don't fail. Some have been reduced to smoking their allowance of tea. Others have smoked brown paper or leaves of trees. What shall we send our soldiers—something they'd appreciate. Nearly all the letters from the trenches answered 'smokes' and plenty of them." Another writer recited an event where soldiers actually took chances of being shot full of holes in order to get a paper smoke; they left their trenches and sneaked under cover of darkness to get to a nearby place where they believed they could get "just a few draws." To the cigarette smoker there is nothing which we know of that comes so near being a calamity to him than being cut off from his "coffin nails," and that is measurably true of any man who loves his pipe or cigar. Next time you "light up" and after the first good "draw," let your mind rest on the poor devils in the trenches over in Europe without the "makin's," and then you will understand what Sherman said about war; and you will also the better appreciate living in a part of the world where the Dove of Peace has not been knocked on the "top knot" and is able to do its usual task of carrying an olive branch.

TO TAKE PERFECT BREATH.

Stand erect by an open window or out of doors. Pucker up the lips as though starting to whistle and slowly blow out the breath and empty the lungs of air. Then, closing the mouth, breathe through the nose, inhaling slowly and steadily, filling the entire lung cavity, which is done by bringing into play the diaphragm, which, descending, exerts a gentle pressure on the abdomen. In the final movement the lower part of the abdomen will be drawn in, which movement gives the lungs a support and also helps to fill the highest points of the lungs. Retain the breath for a few seconds. Then once again pucker up the lips as if to whistle and through the small opening slowly and gently exhale the breath.

SURPRISING SIGNS.

To be a real, regular actor person, a hobby is indispensable. Richie Ling, playing the lawyer in "A Pair of Sixes," at the Lyric, has improved on the ordinary hobby. He has a notebook full of wordings from unique placards and signs. A few results of this scientific research are:

In the Boston public library hangs this sign: "Only Low Conversation Permitted Here."

Over a fish monger's shop in New Haven is: "Phillips and Green, Lobsters."

A Chicago restaurant is proud of: "Small Steaks, 15c; extra small steaks, 25."

Near Radcliffe college—a girls' institution—Ling solemnly swears this sign hangs: "Our swimming tank has a capacity of 2,000 gals."

A Chicago corset shop announces: "Our corsets will fit your waist and bust."

A Cleveland calcimine artist says: "White-washing Done Here In All Colors."

During a recent Dickens celebration in New York, a bargain book store sign read: "Dickens Works Here All This Week for $3.98."

A Long Island hotel proclaims: "This Hotel Is Patronized by Refined People. Also Caters to Auto Parties." —Times-Star.

SMOKE UP.

A casual perusal of the last number of The Culinary Craft, the "voice of secession," should convince almost any reader that the supply of Scopolamin in and about the rendezvous of the Sacred Septette was greatly augmented; in fact, one might say an over-supply of that "dope" which, it is alleged, puts one in dreamland, permitting major operations and leaves the patient without other pains than those connected with the pocket book. We wonder how many members of the local union from which the Sacred Septette receive their powers, have had the "twilight sleep" stuff slipped over on them?

SET YOUR BIG BEN EARLY.

Don't be at all surprised to see several Decoy Resolutions offered for perusal in these pages in the very near future, in fact they are due to put in an appearance about the time that this number of the MIXER AND SERVER is in your hands for perusal, February 25th, 1915, which is the date when forms for the March number of the MIXER AND SERVER closes. The "Wooden Ducks" must be in by that date, otherwise they will have no chance of engaging your attention, and that is what they are constructed for: to make you discuss them and forget the real trouble maker, the proposal to smash up your splendid International Union.

The secessionists think that they are a "foxy" bunch; they imagine that you have never seen a "Decoy Duck," and that you will fall for their stunt and while you are watching the "floater" they will be hammering the rough spots out of their program and perfect their arrangements for convention floor tactics. The Ballyhoo artists are not all wintering in one place, not this year, at least not according to the latest form sheet.

BACK TO THE SOIL.

Crude, yet fairly consistent agitation toward inducing crowded dwellers in the big cities to migrate to the country and become tillers of the soil seems destined to receive the required impetus to anticipate a fair measure of success. The recently formed National Forward-to-the-Land League appears to have discovered the method which is expected will prove fruitful. The league's platform is simple, yet thorough and reads:

"To give the man without a cent a chance to earn the first payment on his farm; to give the men who has no knowledge of farming a scientific training; to help men to help themselves." If the league could only command an equal amount collected by so-called anti-saloon reformers annually, they would quickly accomplish a great miracle and a lasting benefit to this country.

JOHN BUNNY JOINS LABOR ORGANIZATION.

John Bunny, known wherever there are "movies," was made an honorary member of the Detroit, Mich., Motion Picture Operators' Union as a recent meeting. Bunny was presented with a solid gold life membership card. In responding to the speech of presentation, Brother Bunny praised the work of organized labor and expressed his gratification for the opportunity afforded to be affiliated with the work.—Decatur Labor World.

The Trades Unionist of Washington, D. C., paid us quite a compliment in its New Year's number by a splendid half-tone reproduction of our New Year's Card. We feel very grateful to Editor Colpoys for this manifestation of friendship toward our organization, and feel that our boys on the Potomac will make good for us in the one way a labor editor desires. Stick to their union and practice trade unionism all the time. The Trades Unionist is a vigorous opponent of sumptuary legislation. Editor Colpoys is at his best when puncturing the "holier than thou" bunch.

LETTING GO OF THE TILLER.

The January, 1915, number of the Journeyman Barber contains the announcement of the retirement of Editor W. E. Klapetzky after twenty-one years in the service of his International Union. We recall years ago when "Bill" Klapetzky assumed the position of secretary-treasurer of the Journeyman Barbers' International Union of America. He took over an organization that was pretty near shot to pieces, but Bill was no molycoddle and knew how to hustle, and did put in some hard, strenuous labor. It must be satisfying to him to know that he retires when his organization has attained its greatest numerical and financial strength. This stepping aside does not mean Bill's retirement from active participation in the labor movement, simply doffing the robes of office. Bill will never quit being a trades unionist, he ain't built that way. We wish you bountiful health in your hours of leisure, you've earned a rest.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

She (pouting)—Before we were married you often used to catch me in your arms.

He—Yes, and now I catch you in my pockets.
—Exchange.

THOUGHTFUL CONSIDERATION.

Real, genuine fraternalism bestows on the less fortunate thoughtful consideration in the form of aid which does not resemble charity, but which is truly greater. "Let me have your membership book, old pal, I will take it up to our financial secretary and have him stamp it up for a couple of months. I can spare the price, you can't. You can do the same for me sometime next summer and we will be even up." Take a look around and see if you can't find a brother member who has space for a few due stamps and no small change to get them. Probably you can recall the time when the price of a due stamp looked as big as a house afire, and how grateful you would have been if one of the boys had acted in the manner described in the foregoing. Times are dull, trade is far from being good; you got a job and pretty sure of holding it down until the May flowers come again. Develop that bump of generosity, it won't hurt you and it will help your fellow member to get over a part of his worries; and while you think of it, you help your local union by keeping a good scout in good standing.

A CULINARY SUGGESTION FOR HOME.

Corned beef and cabbage, spareribs and sauerkraut when cooking on top of a range, advertise the fact all through the house. They can be cooked by putting them in kettle, pot or pan, covering with water. Put vessel in oven and close the door. They will cook just as thoroughly in the oven as on top of the range, and have the added advantage of being practically odorless while cooking. All meats have moisture, so there is no more damage done to the home range than in ordinary roasting. Refer this to the women folks at home. Let them give it a trial and be convinced. The difference in time favors a good oven.

SHOCKING.

His conduct is distressing;
He went into the kitchen, and
He watched the salad dressing.

This naughty Ignatz has no sense
Of modesty, in sooth,

I hasten to declare,
He followed Mother Hubbard, and
He saw the cupboard bare.

"MOVIE" SHOWS ABUSE THEIR PATRONS

Not so very long ago, while the guest of one of our members, we were taken to a show shop. Between vaudeville stunts, several screen pictures were flashed, among them was an alleged incident where the father of the girl was induced to try rolling a cigarette by the suitor for her hand; any one with half an eye could discover the reason for the picture was to advertise the scabbiest of scab tobaccos, for the picture of "the bag with a tag," magnified many fold, was advertising of the rawest kind. The patrons of that and other establishments which pretend to amuse the public at so much per, are unquestionably inflicting on their supporters a species of abuse which should be "nipped in the bud" and that can be accomplished by proper protest. For several years the "movie" game has held aloof from the inducements of free reels, but they are getting less and less dignified and more prone to make as much coin as their selfishness increases. At first they "tried out" a few reels of the "Ten Nights in a Bar-room" stamp, and as the public seemed to stand for it, they increased their hold, and lately they are running rather frequently anti-saloon stuff and advertising junk such as briefly described in the opening paragraph.

On the level, incidents which depict the saloon and catering establishment as it really exists are all right, none of us but what advocate real temperance and are willing to admit that occasionally "bad actors" make our workshops a congregating place, but we resent the imputation that the men and women of the catering industry are the companions and associates of crooks and law breakers. Legitimate film corporations are not guilty of this crime against the intelligence of the public, nor are the seductive offers of scab products and anti-saloon received with approval, but there are film companies who lack enough gumption and originality to produce a picture without part of its "location" showing a "gin mill" constructed after the ideas of a Hotentot or dime novel author.

The "movie" industry is a big proposition; it has come to stay; it is an educator, and as such it is showing to its innocent public or patrons a libel on the catering and beverage industry which should be "boohooed" every time such pictures are shown. Don't think that the management loves such severe treatment; they don't and you can make them switch mighty quick if you make up your mind to do a little leading. It might sound silly to express disapproval of pictures; if that is true, then it is quite as foolish to laugh or approve by any other method what pleases. If it is considered good form to applaud, then it should be quite as good form to object to or disapprove what displeases us.

ENTITLED TO THE PRIZE.

According to the Birmingham Age-Herald, twenty-two cities claim to have "the finest union station in the world," which prompts R. P. McPhee of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, to say that "Springfield, however, lays undisputed claim to having the worst."

If the "Ging-Ging Goophus" man ever visits Cincinnati he will positively change his mind; the doubtful honor of having the "punkiest" union station can't be wrested from the banks of the Ohio and laid down on the banks of the Connecticut river.

Brother Fred A. Somers, president of Local 603, Sacramento, Cal., made us a brief call just before closing forms for this number of the MIXER AND SERVER, and left with us the cheering greetings of himself and the membership of that fast growing local union. Local 603 with President Somers, Vice-President E. N. Fletcher, Secretary Jack Reid and Treasurer John Steen, seeing that the wealth of the local is properly cared for, supplemented by the hearty activity of such members as G. C. Jones, John Reeder, Albert Steen, F. G. Moore, J. V. Hughes, Gil Thompson, W. Burke, Ray Johnson, E. F. Raffetto, W. A. Goodwin, Cy Warren, H. Silverhorn, Henry Newman and a host of others whose names would almost fill a page, is making the kind of headway which means "always on the job for the union" and for the general advancement of the cause. It was not so many years ago that Sacramento couldn't boast of a bar-boys active local, but the present organization has shown what steady persistency can accomplish, in fact its progress is quite equal to that of many locals which have been in existence twice as long as Local 603.

Brother Somers' visit includes a number of eastern cities; after seeing friends and relatives he will return to the boys of 603, make no mistake on that, for he idolizes them and believes in his union. Come again, Fred.

Brother Henry A. Draese, who has been secretary of Local 527 of Dubuque, Iowa for ten years, tendered his resignation and has engaged in the bakery business, which he believes will bring him quite as many friends as he won while serving wet goods and hustling for his local union. There is little doubt but what the members of Local 527 will be found saying a good word for Draese's bread and doing a boosting stunt which will make their former secretary smile with satisfaction. Henry says that "you can get a 'bun' at his store, but of course, not the kind which excessive indulgence in wet goods produces. Fact is that patrons can get dozens of buns from Henry, and the oftener they come and purchase, the sweeter will be his smile. Brother Draese merits the good will of his former colleagues and we believe if the matter rests with them, he will be getting the right kind of dough in quantities to satisfy.

Local 300, Toronto, Canada, inaugurated a series of letters to members on the lines employed by Local 207 of Pittsburg, Pa., and has made these letters quite as interesting as the smoky city boys has made theirs, which is saying something. Secretary W. W. Hinton, a sure-enough live wire and a tireless worker, is the editor of these letters and they show exceptional perception and ability. Local 300, due to the aggressive and persistency of Secretary Hinton, is making headway which would no doubt be doubled under different conditions than those which have prevailed in Canada since the "trouble" in Europe. Despite unsettled conditions local 300 has succeeded in keeping the membership of that local keyed up to the highest notch, and but recently secured an agreement with the largest caterer in Canada; they are going right ahead and seem determined to make their city a good place for culinary workers to live in.

A MENTAL TREAT FOR YOU.

In this number of the Mixer and Server you will find as fine a collection of splendid contributions as have ever graced its pages, in fact, there are several articles submitted by our members which are decidedly interesting and instructive. If you have carried the impression that those who submit contributions follow ancient styles and ideas, you will be agreeably disappointed by a perusal of several articles which could be mentioned. Fact is, that our boys and girls who contribute to our pages are developing into writers of consequence and handle their subjects with workmanship ability pleasing to observe. Read 'em all, is our recommendation; it will be time well spent.

Not a long-haired "sissy" by a long shot, Jas. W. Faulkner, one of the Cincinnati Enquirer's political writers, in a several column article which was printed on Sunday, January 3, 1915, injects the following newsy and exceedingly pertinent-to-us paragraph:

Doffing the spotless robe of pure journalism, polishing up his spectacles and receiving a hypodermic injection of anti-partisan serum, Commodore G. W. C. Perry, of Chillicothe, came over this week on the traction car and projicked around while the Republican caucuses, free and untrammeled, were having their collective minds made up for them by certain lofty-purposed patriots. Returning and resuming his editorial frame of mind, he emitted the subjoined paragraph, which fully substantiates the declaration that the Commodore's power of penetration is not failing:

"The biggest leader in politics today in Ohio is none other than the Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, Ohio's manager of the Anti-Saloon League, for it was he who contributed more to the organization of both the Senate and House of Representatives of Ohio's General Assembly than any other one man.

"It was most interesting to note that Wheeler and P. W. Durr, of Cincinnati, were working for the same candidate for Speaker of the House."

To the best of our knowledge this is the first time which has come to our notice that Wayne B. Wheeler was given credit by any political writer of being "master" of the situation. While the liberal voters of Ohio may think they won November 3rd last, they may have another think before the present legislature is finished with its labors.

YOUR INVESTMENT IN YOUR UNION.

Take a few moments, sharpen your pencil, get a pad of paper and begin by setting down the figures representing the amounts which you paid for initiation, follow that up with the amounts which you have paid to your local union as monthly dues. After that has been added up, start another set of figures showing the amount of money you obtained as wages, the number of hours per day and the days which constituted your working week, say for three months previous to becoming a member of your local union. You could make the calculation for the year before you became a member, though that would entail a trifle more labor. Still another set of figures are necessary. Your wages per week now, the number of hours per day and the number of days required to make up your present working week. With the foregoing accomplished it should be an easy matter to make comparisons which will show whether the union and its influences has actually been financially beneficial. Of course your investment in your local naturally means that you are one of the "proprietors" of our International Union, but aside from that possession or property right you should know whether your local union is or has accomplished definite results which warrant continuing active support.

WHERE THEY SHINE.

Secretary Daniels is the first director of the navy, so far as we recall, that ever accused the "Jolly Jack Tars" of singing. Probably he intended to compliment them when he urged them to confine themselves to the "Star Spangled Banner" and similar patriotic airs. It don't require two octave voices to get by with a "Come All Ye's", which is usually the limit except when on shore leave, and then its "Katie, Bar the Door."

THE NEXT NATIONAL ISSUE.

If one were to consign all the political platform constructors to a special limbo, the lid would be hardly clamped on before a spell-binder would be found who'd declare with emphasis, which left no room for doubt, that the tariff would be the issue next election. You can't challenge the elasticity of such imagination, the best you can do is to forget it.

The Anti-Saloonist press bureau is exceedingly busy these days in offering thinly cothed suggestions relative to the probable planks in party platforms. "Of course the tariff is a big, thriving unsolved problem, but"—. And then they insinuatingly call attention to "recent victories" on the west coast and intimate that the party which puts in a plank for nation-wide prohibition, would receive great support from "The Church in Action." The Drys are busy, they never rest, why should we wait until the eleventh hour?

No matter how much or little you may be interested in the progress of the organized labor movement of America, you must concede that to a greater extent than what has transpired, so far as we have authentic record of, the future of all classes of labor depends on the co-operation of organized labor from the purchasing standpoint.

Take for example the products of union cigarmakers. Union cigarmakers may produce hundreds of thousands of cigars, attach their Blue Union Label on the boxes containing these cigars, and their employer may be able to secure a market for the referred to union-made cigars. The retailer places such cigars on display alongside of the products made by non-union and cheap paid workers, and from that viewpoint they get an even start; if the purchaser of smokes simply asks for a cigar and fails to designate any special brand, its dollars to cents that the retailer will push over the non-union product, for there is a trifle more profit in the handling. The result would be that hundreds of non-union cigars would be sold to one of the union label bearing kind. The dealer cares nothing about the cigarmaker, he is interested in profits and quick sellers and consequently the union-made cigars get shop worn so to speak for lack of activity and thoughtfulness on the part of union men. Union products will not sell themselves, despite conclusions held to the contrary; union men smokers must ask for them, and union men handling cigars should endeavor to sell as many union labeled cigars as possible and thus in a measure overcome the attitude of dealers who don't care anything about what they sell, except that it bring in profits.

LUKE MCLUKE SAYS

There are 3,424 languages and dialects in the world and yet a man can't think of a word to say when his wife enters his office suddenly and finds him holding hands with a strange blonde.

All women have hearts, but only about half of them have intellects.

It isn't good health that causes a girl to laugh all the time. It is usually good teeth.

The old-fashioned woman who used to serve breakfast in the kitchen now has a married daughter who puts a screen in front of the gas range and eats in the "breakfast room."

There was a time in this country when it was improper to display the ankles, and a girl's lace trimmed pantaloettes came down to her shoe tops. But it is different these days.

Father always gets the worst of it. In summer Daughter's men friends crowd him off the front porch and in winter they hang around the inside of the house and prevent him from going around in his undershirt and feeling comfortable.

A woman is afraid of a mouse. But she'd just like to see a man who could bluff her.

This is a pretty good old world considering the fact that the Fool Killer loaf on the job most of the time.

Some of the clinging costumes seem to cling because they fear a girl wouldn't miss them if they happened to let go.

Parrots are not the only animals that talk all the time without knowing what they are talking about.

The best thing that can be said for Winter is that it covers a multitude of dirty-looking elbows.

We may be finnicky. But we believe that a girl whose props are shaped like a pair of ice tongs is wasting good money when she takes Tango lessons.

One reason why a woman loses her Sweet Disposition after she gets married is because a Sweet Disposition doesn't help much when you are driving a mule.

When Father forgets to take his key and gets home about 2 a. m. he has to ring the bell for an hour and a half before he wakes Mother and gets her to open the door. And next morning Mother will bawl Father out and tell him that she never slept a wink all night waiting for him to come home.

A man may admit that he doesn't excel in some things. But he will let you know that he is a good judge of Human Nature.

Most men are near-sighted when in the neighborhood of a "No Trespassing" sign or a wedding ring on a woman's finger.

We believe in advertising. But that is no reason why an undertaker should talk shop when he is visiting a sick friend.

The Hero always gets the girl in the stage melodrama. But any married woman can tell you that in the Real Life melodrama the Villain usually gets the girl.

Things could be worse. Not all of the boys are combing their hair back so they will resemble sea-lions.

The Maxim silencer for guns seems to have been a bloomer. But the Married Men's Protective Association will make it worth Maxim's while if he will revamp the silencer so it can be used by a woman.

Father is so tired when he gets home that Mother has to go down in the cellar and heave coal in the furnace while Father goes out and heaves a 15-pound ball down a bowling alley.

I may be wrong. But I'll bet that the fellows who have stock in the Suspension Bridge that runs between here and Kentucky were hoping that Ohio would go Dry.

When you are feasting your eyes on a pretty girl it is hard to believe that her batting average in the Snoring League is about .500.

A married woman's idea of a good job would be one in which her husband got $500 per week and got his afternoons off so he could take care of the children and got his nights off so she could keep him at home and know where he was.

Before they are married she is so Dainty that she pecks at ice cream and cake like a humming bird. But, after they are married, what she can do to a hunk of rye bread smeared with Limburger cheese and covered with raw onions is a Crime.

A wise wife doesn't attempt to Reform her husband. If she will feed him well and treat him well and trust to luck, she will be happy.

Before you laugh at the way other people walk just get in front of a big mirror and walk toward it and laugh at yourself.

A "Soul Mate" is a woman you can go to for consolation when your wife is mad at you.

Sometimes you hate people and don't know why you hate them. Some of the people you hate are people you have never even seen, but you hate them just the same.

When two men have a quarrel, each of them will go around and tell people how much he has done for the other fellow, and that if it hadn't been for him, the other fellow would be picking rags for a living.

A boy will slam the door and make all the noise he can pounding on the steps when his feelings have been ruffled. And a man is only a grown boy.

Some of these days a girl is going to get married and the papers will forget to say that the bride is "beautiful and accomplished."

You may have noticed that the man who takes the wrong umbrella by mistake never makes the mistake of taking a worse umbrella than his own.

When a woman is so shy that she acts as if she had never spoken to a man in her life you can almost bet that she is a widow.

If a man's bank account is all right he thinks the Government is.

She used to marry Him for Better or Worse. Now She marries Him for More or Less.

The old-fashioned man who used to use his money to feather his nest now has a son who uses his money to color his nose.

When a man's neighbors are better off than he is he knows that Opportunity made a mistake in the number of the house.

Fairy tales used to begin: "Once Upon A Time." But nowadays they begin: "O, I'm So Glad You Called, Mrs. Gabb," or, "I Had To Work Late At The Office."

The man who starts out with the idea that his friends are going to prepare an opening for him usually winds up in a hole.

What has become of the old-fashioned boy who used to chew tobacco in school and used his high-top boots as cuspids?

When a woman gets a new set of furs the fact that the temperature is 90 in the shade won't prevent her from wearing them—Cin. Enquirer.

CORRESPONDENCE

This Journal will not be Held Responsible for Views Expressed by Correspondents.

CLEVELAND, O.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—This is "Automobile Show week," and I am glad to state that most of our unemployed waiters are getting a share of the extra work. One of the places, through the efforts of our business agent, Bro. Ed. Whissemore, engaged eight waiters for the entire week. The other places did proportionately as well. Saturday night Brother Whissemore had placed nearly every unemployed man on an extra, so that with the extra work during the balance of the week the members will have recuperated their bank-rolls.

Bros. Harry Overmyer, business agent; Harry Parker, president, and George Flynn, trustee, of Local 216, Toledo, paid us a flying visit a few days ago. Local 216, is having its own troubles with a place named "The Kaiserhof," still I can see only victory for them if the proper methods are carried out.

Our old friend and brother, Fred B. Hobby, general organizer of the International, has been with us for the past few days. Although Brother Hobby is feeling a little indisposed on account of a slight cold, he is the same Fred as of old, always working for the interests of our crafts and willing to help anyone individually. Brother Hobby is going back to Detroit in a day or two to try and organize the culinary workers of that city. Success be with you, Brother Hobby.

Bro. Josh Brady, general organizer, and myself, have tried for two months to pound into the waiters' heads the benefit derived from organization. Last winter and spring the waiters in Detroit were receiving from $35 to $40 per month. From time to time this has been cut down, until at the present time they receive $7 a week steady watch, and $3.50 a week night watch. Still these poor suckers stand for the reduction. Besides, they are only allowed a measly sandwich at one of the places, as this place does not feed its employees. The men also work seven days a week. Can you imagine a bunch of would-be, intelligent waiters standing for this abuse? The trouble is that they are afraid of losing their jobs should they be seen trying to form an organization for their personal benefit. Several of these same men came to me last summer when I was headwaiter at the Kaiserhof in Toledo and had the gall to apply for a job. Of course they were willing to pay the initiation fee to join the local, providing that I gave them work. I advised them to go back to where they came from, for I could see that they did not give a continental for unionism, but were willing to pay for a position where they had to have a card.

On January 28 the Cooks' and Waiters' Club will hold their annual ball at Moose hall. It is sure to be a success, if past annual affairs are a criterion. Business Agent Ed. McEachern, of the cooks, is a very active worker, and much of the success will be due to his untiring efforts in promoting this annual ball.

Bro. Thomas S. Farrell, business agent of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, is gaining much prominence through the Cleveland papers for his activities in promulgating ways and means for relieving the situation of the unemployed of this city. He is a member of several committees, among whom are some very prominent business men of Cleveland.

We had a goodly number at our last meeting, and there were some lively discussions, which shows that our members do not lack interest in the "good and welfare" of the organization.

We had the misfortune to lose one of our brothers, January 18, death claiming Bro. Emil Brugger. Funeral services were held Thursday, January 21. Fraternally, E. J. CARTER, Press Sec. Local 106.

AKRON, O.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 551 wishes to convey the information that we started out the new year in the hope that 1915 would be quite as successful in every respect as its predecessor. If we are fortunate and enjoy as good results from the present year as the one just passed, we will have excellent reasons to be thankful. We have had very few members out of work, only a limited amount of sickness, and but one or two deaths. We have our cards in all the downtown establishments, with but one or two exceptions, and have had no trouble with any of our proprietors. All members are getting the scale and working union hours, and appear to be enjoying the best of conditions.

Our club rooms are splendidly appointed, where the members may find ample to entertain them. We have very strict rules for the conducting of our club rooms, and our membership respect those rules to the letter.

The foregoing, while not elaborately set forth, depicts the conditions surrounding our affairs, which is very encouraging, indeed. While it is true that the industrial condition could be greatly improved, yet we appear to be enjoying a fair share of patronage, and that is something to be thankful for. Meetings are attended regularly, and a great deal of interest displayed by our membership.

Hoping that other locals, not only in this State, but in adjoining States—in fact throughout the country—are as fortunate as Akron Local 551, I am, with greetings of said local to all affiliated members of the International Union,

Yours fraternally,

HARRY COFFIN,
President Local 551.

ALBANY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We are still with you in your apparent desires to be obtained for the International in the year 1915, and are sorry to complain that, with the season of Yuletide on and the thought of the good things it should bring with it, the members of Local 228 were and are up against a pretty tough proposition, brought about because some members of our International seem to scorn the true spirit of union principles—"one for all and all for one"—in that our International laws are being infringed by members of a sister Local who have been running into the jurisdiction of Local 228 until it became necessary to draw the line and make example of one by invoking constitutional Section 13, which we tried to avoid using, while remonstrating with Thomas Barrett of Local 207, for continuing in employment, when he told us where we got off and what our organization amounted to, and the rest of the stock in trade billingsgate that men of that stripe generally use. We were then forced to demand from his employer (Mr. Eaton) that he return to us our union bar sign. His answer was we could have our label and he would keep Barrett and another man employed by him, who is not a member of our union. We therefore put his place (German Hall) on the "Don't Patronize" list, which was approved by the Central Federation of Labor of Albany, and we believe the gentleman now knows that the fight is on. And to be consistent we were obliged to vacate our meeting rooms in the German Hall building, which we did by resolution at our last meeting in that place, where we have been located for several years. On December 13th we notified the German Hall Association that we had vacated their premises and were no longer their tenants.

Well, we were then compelled to find a hall, and our old friend Joe Myers, 41 South Pearl street, said: "Yes, meet here as long as you like and make it as pleasant as you possibly can with such conveniences as you can find." So we gathered there on Sunday, December 27, 1914, with quite a large number in attendance. President Kearney opened the meeting and quite a lot of business was transacted; one new application was presented and referred to committee, and the following officers were elected to steer the ship, Local 228, for the year 1915: President, Richard Nolan; first vice-president, Michael P. Kearney; second vice-president, James E. Glancey; financial secretary, W. H. Walsh; recording secretary, Matthew F. Dugan; treasurer, Henry Hoffman; inspector, Richard T. Walsh; inner guard, James E. Taylor; outer guard, Joseph Patterson; auditor, James E. Glancey; board of trustees, Max Schwartz, Fred Bender, Chas. Schultz.

The committee appointed to obtain meeting hall reported that they had secured nice rooms in Macabees Temple. Therefore, Local 228, Albany, N. Y., meets second and fourth Sundays each month at 91 North Pearl street.

W. H. WALSH,
Financial Secretary Local 228.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As it has been a long time since anything was heard from Local 320 through the MIXER AND SERVER, I would like to say that on the night of January 3, 1915, that Local 320 of Schenectady, held its annual election and elected the following officers: President, Wallace Frachette; first vice-president, George Kerl; second vice-president, Frank Kernan; financial and recording secretary, F. G. Madill; treasurer, Joseph H. Nolan; inspector, William Wernecke; inside guard, Daniel O'Rourke; outside guard, Grant Neely; trustees, Messrs Henley, Cowie, Neely, McCullagh and Devine; delegates to Trades Assembly, Messrs. Henley, Nolan, Brennan and Madill; delegate to Labor Temple Association, F. G. Madill.

There is an old saying that a new broom sweeps clean. Well, I would like to say that will be the endeavor used by the officers of Local 320 for the year of 1915.

Through the hard work of President Frachette and myself we are going to have better conditions in the Electric City than we have ever had in years gone by, and it should be remembered that Schenectady lights and hauls the world.

Fraternally yours,

FRED G. MADILL,
Financial and Recording Secretary, Local 320.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Pursuant to instructions of the general meeting, held December 16th, herewith find copy of protest on the part of this local, on the vote cast by the delegates of our International at the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in the city of Philadelphia, on the eight-hour legislation.

The general meeting passed a motion at the same time requesting that this protest be published in the MIXER AND SERVER.

Hoping that the protest will appear in the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER and anticipating further correspondence on this matter, we beg to remain, with the usual greetings.

L. A. FRANCOEUR,
Secretary-Treasurer Local 30.

To Affiliated Locals Greeting:

Your attention is directed to the action of the delegates representing our International Union on the eight-hour day legislation at the recent A. F. of L. Convention in Philadelphia.

The question was one of the most vital to the interests of labor that ever came before the convention of the A. F. of L. and we regret to note that these, our delegates whom we sent, wilfully misrepresented us and the well-known sentiments of labor on this question. The State Federation of Labor, the San Francisco Labor Council, and nearly all labor organizations in this and other states have gone on record favoring the eight-hour day. Our own locals in California and Washington who had the opportunity to vote on this question, supported it unanimously at the recent state elections in these two states.

We deem it the duty of every true trades unionist to voice their disapproval and protest against the action of these delegates who voted at the A. F. of L. Convention in Philadelphia against the eight-hour day legislation.

We request that your local draw up suitable resolutions of protest and forward same to the general office at Cincinnati at your earliest convenience, thus emphasizing the fact that the rank and file are watching the action of our representatives.

WAITERS' UNION, LOCAL No. 30.

L. A. FRANCOEUR, Secretary.
HUGO ERNST, President.

ROUNDUP, MONTANA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Our boys in this section of the country are having a real hard fight to hang on to and maintain their jobs; the church and Anti-Saloon people are organized and trying their level best to add this big and glorious state to the DRY column; in fact, they are appealing to the law-makers now in session over at Helena to listen to their petitions and do as they request. There is little doubt but what even before this letter is given space in the Mixer and Server there will be several proposals presented which have for their purpose the elimination of the saloon or making such restrictions of the traffic in beverages as will make it hard to retain any great measure of profit, and we all know that when our employer is cut down on the profit line, he is compelled to make up in some other way, and the usual method is getting along without help. The State Federation of Labor meets in Helena during this month and our city will send its full quota of delegates. With the aid of a number of our willing workers the following paragraphs have been constructed. It is hoped that they will be as pleasing to the readers as those who built 'em.

Brother Meyers, the mascot of the bunch, who, by the way, is our worthy president (weight 320 pounds), is a very genial soul and somewhat of a mixer, and very fond of fresh eggs—for proof, ask Cummins—they only cost $2 each.

Said Jim to Jack: "You blathering little shrimp, I tell you I can kill that duck." Said Jim's wife later, "Why dearies, where have you been and who hit you in the dark?" And thereby hangs a tale. The duck he died and left his blood all over Jim, his face and hair was full, while on his legs and feet he left what he had eaten the day before.

Jim is on the day shift at the Roundup Hotel, and if any of you strike town very dry, just call and say ducks to him and he will supply you with one of Meyers' new drinks, called "Dry-land Farmers Egg Flip."

Last week one of our pals deserted our ranks and joined the "benedicts." Henry says this state has gone for women suffrage, and when it comes to vote next general election there is one woman who will not vote with the drys.

When going through Roundup, do not fail to visit the Exchange and try one of their Round-up cocktails. Spurlock says he is the inventor, but Henry says he did it the night he got married.

The Eagle saloon is near the Citizen's Bank and the bartender has wings, and can give you a drink that will make you fly, climb a tree, or sing a song, with Happy in the lead.

Jim O'Neal is at the Depot saloon just back of the Central depot, and is always glad to see the boys who carry a card. Now, Jim is a good fellow, but denies being a Chink, altho we have proof that he was born in Pekin (Maryland).

The Roundup local as a whole are a loyal bunch and are making arrangements for the fight of their life—that of preventing the state of Montana from going dry. And we entertain only the best wishes for the success of their undertaking.

Just to show you that our boys have the right kind of feeling for the fellow that may have fallen down but who may redeem himself if given a chance, the following from the Roundup Daily Record, describes a little event of recent happening:

The local bartenders' union sent to the prisoners at the jail all of the articles necessary for a well rounded out Christmas dinner. The spread included turkey, cranberries, sweet potatoes, oysters, pies, cakes, candy, fruit, nuts, pickles, cigars and tobacco. Sufficient of every thing was sent to give the unfortunate inmates of the jail, three of whom were under sentence to the penitentiary, two full meals. That the donation showed thoughtful charity and that the spirit in which the donation was made was appreciated to the full by the recipients, goes without saying. One of the inmates sent the following communication to The Record with the request that it be published: "The inmates of the Musselshell County jail wish to extend their thanks to the good-hearted members of the bartenders' union. There seems to be considerable difference between the so-called God-fearing people of Roundup and the members of the bartenders' union. Christ said, 'When I was in prison, they visited me; when I was in thirst, they gave me drink; when I was in hunger, they gave me food.' The bartenders showed their kindness on the birthday of Jesus Christ, our Savior, by supplying us with our Xmas dinner. Thanking you one and all, and wishing you a happy new year.—Sam P. Walker."

With the best of good wishes to all of our members everywhere and urging the members of our unions in this state to get busy and keep on the job so that the Antis may not sneak one over on us and force us to move on to other fields and pastures, more or less new.

W. H. MORGAN.

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The city of Chicago is now in the grip of a deadly lake winter. As usual, there is not enough work to go around; work is always scarce and the men to do it more than sufficient. Therefore, winter is not a time of great joy to the waiters. Up to the present time though we have done fairly well, our officers managing to distribute the work so as to make the least hardship for the members.

The city council proposes to pass an ordinance prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors after 1 a. m. at dances. We sent a strong letter to the seventy aldermen of Chicago asking them to use their vote and influence to defeat this measure: it no doubt had some effect as the ordinance has been defeated.

In a previous issue of the Mixer and Server appears a statement of one of the officers of Local 865, which seems to imply that the Schoenhoffen Brewery is on bad terms with us. This is not the case; we have always been on the most friendly terms with them and they have always met us half way.

We are still fighting the injunction issued by Judge Jesse Baldwin, which was the most unjust and sweeping of any ever issued to coerce labor. Last week a similar injunction was asked for against the janitors and milk drivers, and they will no doubt find some judge servile enough to issue it, so it is easily seen that it behoves labor to put its best foot forward to compel its dissolution.

The Chicago Federation of Labor has levied an assessment of 5 cents per capita on each member and will carry the fight to a finish. John Fitzpatrick made a strong plea for the financial and moral support of all unions and scored them in no measured terms, saying that this fight had been left to two or three little unions to carry on and that it would react on every union in Illinois if left on the books. John always was a friend of the culinary craft, and can talk some when he is mad—and he sure was mad about that damnable injunction.

The fight against the Restaurant Keepers' Association still rages and will continue to do so until it is settled to our satisfaction. Several of the proprietors have closed up or gone into bankruptcy, and let us hope that this will be the fate of all unfair employers.

With best greetings for the new year to yourself and all members from Local 35.

Yours fraternally,

FRANK FRENCH,
Press Secretary.

DENVER, COL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—For some time you have not heard from Local 14, owing to the result of the last election. Not having thoroughly gotten over the shock, I had not the ambition to write my report, but hope you will allow me space in the February issue.

We are already realizing the terrible effects of prohibition. Several restaurants and cafes have closed their doors, and many saloons. No more gambling, no more free lunch in saloons, and no more entertainers in cafes. In fact, Denver, once known as the best and liveliest little city in the country, is now as quiet as a cemetery. Many places of amusement and entertainment where gayety and laughter once reigned supreme, will soon have the "for rent" sign on their doors, instead of the word "welcome." We all know prohibition is the downfall of any State, and it seems a pity Colorado had to meet with such a fate, but the "wets" put up one hard, strenuous fight in Denver, but the odds were too strong against us. It should be the ambition of every true citizen to improve conditions, but if the "drys" think they have, by prohibition, improved conditions in this city, they are badly mistaken, for conditions right now are deplorable, and what will it be a few months hence? Men and women of every occupation are out of employment, every establishment where labor is employed is daily laying off help, and everything is at a standstill. This is certainly a good town to stay away from.

Many of our boys are out of work, with nothing in sight. The girls have all the houses, and at present writing, I am glad to say, most of them are working, and those that are not will be this week anyway, for it is "Stock Show week," and extra help will be necessary. All except your "humble servant," as I am confined to my bed doctoring a broken ankle, caused by a fall on a slippery sidewalk. It will be some time before I can serve "ham and."

Brother Thomas Wilson is in the hospital. So far as I know there are no more sick members, but an awfully sick bunch at the association headquarters. Since the State is going dry, this "dual organization" can not possibly exist in a dry State. They do good to "get by" at all. But one thing is certain, "wet" or "dry," Local 14 will still continue. We own our own property, and will occupy it when the association is wiped out of existence.

Some time ago Brother Wade, of Local 20, made mention in the MIXER AND SERVER that if we had some St. Louis waiters here, they would, as it were, melt all the snow in Colorado. I claim we have some members in Local 14 that are just as capable, but the climate effects us, and we are not quite as "windy" as our Missouri brothers, but we get there just the same.

With best wishes for a happy and prosperous year to all members of the International, I am

Fraternally yours,

MAE McCORD,

Vice-Pres. and Press Sec. Local 14.

BILLINGS, MONT.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following parody on the Irish marching song may appeal to some of the boys in Washington who, perhaps, are thinking of moving south. I am glad we don't have to move from Montana as yet:

It's a long ways to California,
It's a long ways to go;
It's a long ways to San Francisco,
The wettest town I know.
Good-bye, Tom and Jerry,
Good-bye, rock and rye,
It's a long, long ways to San Francisco
Since Washington went dry.

Yours fraternally,

CLAUDE HUNTER,
Local 859.

VANCOUVER, B. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Although the results of our December election are reaching the MIXER AND SERVER in the month of February, and must read a little like ancient history, I am constrained to submit them for the perusal of my readers in the hope that, should they serve no other useful purpose, they will make as good a "starter" for this letter as anything else that I can think of. The officers for the current term are as follows: Charles Davis, president; John Cumming, vice-president; Andy Graham, secretary-treasurer and business agent (how Andy can tote this title around without crutches is a mystery); T. G. Crombie, recording secretary; Mark Foster, chaplain; E. H. Howard, inspector; John Cumming (chairman), G. W. Johnston (secretary), E. H. Howard, Ed. Cosgrove, Mark Foster, executive board; Charles Davis, John Cumming, Andy Graham, local joint board; Andy Graham, T. J. Crombie, M. A. Martyn, Ed. Cosgrove, John Cumming, delegates to Trades and Labor Council.

Labor conditions in general, and as far as the culinary crafts are concerned in particular, out in this corner of the Pacific Coast, are in a deplorable condition. Building operations are nearly at a standstill, and when the building trades are quiet the catering industry is quieter. Unfortunately for our business, outside of the building trades, there is practically no pay-roll in this city. The recruiting of troops in Vancouver for active service at the front is another factor which emphasizes the acuteness of our position here, most of the men enlisting being single young fellows who eat in restaurants and who spend their money around town generally. In fact, the reply of an esteemed fellow craftsman of mine the other day when he was asked as to his prospects, that "he was rapidly rising from affluence to poverty," just about sums the matter up. Under the circumstances, I think it would be well for those members of the International who are afflicted with the wanderlust and who may be heading for Vancouver, B. C., to take "Punch's" advice to those about to marry: "Don't." When times are good we are a pretty sociable bunch around here, and even now we always go down to the depot to welcome any brother who arrives with a big wad of money and a good reputation, but when fellow members of the H. & R. E. I. A. blow into this peaceful village on Way-Freight No. 23, with nothing in the world but a bad cough and a hope in a hereafter, it neither improves the position of the culinary workers who already are here, nor does it help to encourage the glad-hand stunt on our part.

Local 28, at least that part of Local 28 which takes the trouble to attend to the business of the union, are at present busy on the formation of a new set of by-laws, and we expect to finish our labors in the near future, when the product of our mighty intellects will be forwarded to the "powers that be" for their approval.

In conclusion, I would like to state, particularly for the benefit of any doubting Thomas who may read this, that Local 28 is still doing business at the same old stand. Furthermore, that it intends to continue doing business at the same old stand, or some other old stand, and that, despite the war and the Chinese problem, which, like the poor, we have always with us, and the rheumatism and several other serious handicaps and disadvantages under which we labor, this, the premier culinary local in Canada, will always be found in the front on the firing line just as long as there is an International flag to fight under, and when there is no longer an international, we'll hoist our own flag. Sounds like a Fourth of July oration, don't it? Dear, dear, tut, tut!

With greetings to the membership, I am

Fraternally yours,

JOHN CUMMING,
Vice-Pres. Local 28.

AUGUSTA, GA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The only way of introducing Bartenders' Local 870 is to write a few lines to the MIXER AND SERVER.

Our local was organized in May, 1913 with only 18 members, but now we have 40 enrolled. Most all the bars in the city are union bars. We have had to fight to keep our union together for there are so many knockers; but every knock is a boost.

We had a contest to see who was the most popular bartender. Brothers Frank Allen and Charley Spradley had a tight race; Brother Spradley won by eight votes. The local gave a ball the closing night of the contest, December 31, 1914. President Whiteley present Brother Spradley with a gold locket with the B. I. L. monogram. The contest was a success, and was for the sick and death benefits.

The new officers were installed for the year 1915, on the first Sunday in January as follows: President, D. A. Whiteley; vice-president, W. M. Garner; recording secretary, J. W. Brooks; financial secretary, Chas. Sims; treasurer, W. E. Adams; inspector, Paul Narvell; inside guard, James Dugan; outside guard, J. A. Norris; chaplain, Eddie O. Tollman.

All of our members have proven themselves loyal to the local.

With best wishes to all members of the International, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
J. W. BROOKS,
Recording Secretary, Local 870.

NEW YORK, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 1 held its annual election on January 13, 1915. The following have been elected and installed: President, Sam Furkel; vice-president, Emil Miller; treasurer, H. Reiner; chaplain, Jos. Fischgrund; secretary and business agent, H. Kleinman; controller, Jacob Silberstein; delegate to Bronx council, C. Perence; delegates to the local joint executive board, Sam Furkel, Sam Goldstein, W. Lehman; delegate to the Central Federated Union, B. Korn; delegate to the United Hebrew Trades, Max Furkel; auditors, John Finkelstein, Max Miller, C. Wieser; trustees, L. Scheffler, Morris Furkel and Benny Metz; sergeant-at-arms, A. Auchiesieger; convention delegates, Harry Kleinman, William Lehman.

Yours fraternally,

HARRY KLEINMAN.
Secretary Local 1.
(Fight City Hall.)

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following officers of Local 402 were elected for the ensuing term: Al Wilt, president; J. E. Watson, vice-president; Claude McClellan, financial secretary; Fred Moore, recording secretary and press agent; Mrs. N. H. Smith, Fred Moore, John O'Brien, trustees; C. R. Knowles, Anthony Pierson, J. F. Kirby, Al Wilt, J. E. Watson, executive board; H. E. Edwards, W. G. Stewart, J. F. Kirby, local joint executive board; Claude McClellan, Margaret Lochbaum, C. J. Atkins, John O'Brien, Fred Moore, L. M. Brainie, delegates to Central Labor Council; C. R. Knowles, inspector; R. Daly, inside guard.

Our Thanksgiving ball was the event of the season in labor circles. A prettier scene it would be hard to imagine. The California climate is essentially the "ne plus ultra" for complexions, and rosy cheeks, combined with dainty toilets, suffice to make any ball-room attractive. We are proud of our lassies, of ourselves, and of our ball.

Our press agent is a very busy business man now-a-days. We run nearly a column a week in our Labor Leader, and nothing can equal the kindness and consideration with which the editor accepts our contributions. Not being members of the "fourth estate" ourselves, we realize our deficiencies and accord the editor that sympathy for profanity he may indulge in in wrestling with our copy. One of our members contributes a weekly article, and another, whose name torments would not drag from me, is guilty of verse every week. We often get labor papers from afar, and can not but be pained at the paucity of news of our International locals, and the press agents of our various locals ought really to get a move on. It pays to advertise, and by keeping the local constantly before the labor-reading public, more good is done than letting your local hide itself behind a hayrick. The latest joke, a humorous reference to the habits or hobbies of the more prominent members, or an interesting reference to some bygone episode, as well as an occasional recipe from a cook or bartender make interesting reading, and it is wonderful what a lot you can write if you only try.

Local 402 is in very much the same condition mentioned in my last communication. San Diego (as Bro. Van Bebber once remarked) is essentially "the next month town." For nearly two years things are always going to be better next month, and that next month never seems to materialize. Boys, keep away from San Diego. The place is overrun with waiters, and they are arriving at the rate of two score a day, only to realize a disappointed expectation and the keen regret of over-confidence.

Bro. Frank Sesma, our well-known and ever popular sixth vice-president, has been with us nearly two months, bent on obtaining a hundred per cent organization. Frank, however, is a diplomat, and knows the value of silence, but we have faith in him, and should he not succeed no one else can. We have adopted "Watch Us Succeed" as our slogan, and though the path to success is not strewn with roses, we could not for a moment entertain the idea that we will not ultimately achieve that "devoutly-to-be-wished-for consummation" which we are bold enough to consider ours by right, combined with the duty of bequeathing to those who follow us a better legacy of unionism than we inherited.

Fraternally yours,
J. BECKER.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 196 held its annual election December 24, and the following officers were elected for the year 1915: President, Brother Fred Fulcher; first vice-president, Brother Chas. Beyers; second vice-president, Brother Chas. Robson; recording secretary, Brother Ed. Allen; business agent and financial secretary, Brother Michael Healey; treasurer, Brother Thos. Tarrant; inspector, Brother Frank Dahmen; sergeant-at-arms, Brother Fred Clark; trustees, Brothers Salters, Deng and Lauer; delegates to the Local Joint Executive Board, Brothers Tarrant, Allen and Wallace; delegates to Trades and Labor Council, Brothers Carlton and Fulcher; press secretary, Brother Wm. Smith.

Our General President, Brother Flore, honored us with his presence at one of our October meetings. He made a lengthy and telling address. He made a hit every minute; in fact, some home runs. He put one over the plate when he took a rap at the backsliders who felt put out.

Our sorrel-topped friend, Brother Pat McGowan, business agent of Local 175, our sister local in this city, injected himself into some of our meetings and shot the ginger around. By the way, Local 175 deserves a vote of thanks from Local 196 for the helping hand they extended when Local 196 and its club were forced upon the street last September by a fire that gutted our headquarters. An old proverb "A friend in need is a friend indeed," was Local 175. Our new headquarters, located at 611 Main street, comprises two floors, one for the club and one for the union. The press agent of Local 175 gave us the necessary boost when he said our rooms were among the finest in the state.

One of our oldest members, Brother Alex. Whyte, passed away October 28.

Brother Fulcher, who claims to be a charter member, is back in the chair again. He held it several years ago.

Brother Art. Rooney, who has been unsteadily employed for years, is now steadily employed at Weyands. The triple alliance, Brothers Beyers, Spangler and Ryan, are trying to dislocate him.

Some of our members are trying their hand in business for themselves. The latest addition to this set are Brothers Weaver and Snyder, who took over the Bismarck.

War talk and will Niagara Falls freeze over this winter are the main topics in Buffalo at present.

The new and old Labor Council which have amalgamated, foresee improvements in labor conditions in this city.

Thanking you for publishing this letter, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

W.M. SMITH,
Press Sec'y Local 196.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to let yourself and members of the International know that Local 815 is still in existence and progressing. But not as rapidly as we want to. We still have a large membership, but have quite a number of men out of work, as things seem to be very quiet at present. But we hope for better prospects as soon as the traffic starts to pass through Salt Lake on their way to the fair. No doubt we will have a few members of the International passing through here on their way to the convention, and I would like to ask all delegates passing through "Zion City" to get a stop-off here in order to show them the wonderful sights of this most remarkable city. It will be interesting to those who have never been here before. We also wish to show those who have been here how Local 815 has progressed under the leadership of Business Agent Charles McKee. Brother McKee has been elected president of the new Union Label League and vice-president of the Salt Lake Federation of Labor, so yourself and members can see that Local 815 is being recognized by all labor organizations of this section. But they have not been giving us their ample support in regard to fighting the injunction case that has been preferred against us. If we can hold out until our trial comes off (which we expect to win), we sure will make this local one of the strongest in this inter-mountain country and some outside of it.

Our regular election of officers was held December 29, and the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing term: J. S. Dixon, president; F. Standerker, vice-president; Chas. McKee, business agent and financial secretary; Patrick T. Owens, recording secretary; T. E. Kelly, inspector; Charles Hurst, treasurer; Roy Collins, sentinel; John Mullin, Fred Roundy, Joe Ward, Wm. Lynch, James Fuge, trustees; Charles, McKee, Phil Bowen, J. S. Dixon, J. W. Allen, Harvey Curtis, delegates to Central Labor body; John Mullin, Phil Bowen, J. S. Dixon. Joint Executive Board. It is the impression of all members that we have elected a live squad of officers, and when called upon we expect and know that they will give us the best results in regard to maintaining this as a substantial local. At the present time we have a list of about thirty-seven houses displaying the card, and we feel as though we deserve credit, and much of it. We also give Bro. Charles McKee the most highly esteemed credit, for previous to his coming here we had in the neighborhood of but seven houses with cards in them.

We expected to have a rush on during the holidays, we were very much disappointed, especially in sending out extra men. As you know, we have quite a number of men idle at the present time. But that is not saying that the worthy members far away from home and friends missed their Christmas spread. I believe the following item, taken from our local labor paper, The Inter-Mountain Worker, will explain and illustrate what we did for the unemployed of Local 815:

COOKS AND WAITERS HAVE GREAT CHRISTMAS SPREAD.

"The Cooks, Waiters and Waitresses' Union, Local 815, gave one of the most elaborate spreads in the main hall at their headquarters on State street, Christmas Day, that has ever been given in Salt Lake by a labor organization. The banquet was prepared particularly for the benefit of the unemployed members of the union and those who at present have no homes in which to spend Christmas. Tables were set in the hall usually used for dancing and social purposes, and a meal consisting of turkey, cranberry sauce, plum pudding, and all the usual Christmas dainties was served to about seventy persons. The hall was appropriately decorated for a Christmas festivity."

So things were not so blue for them after all.

We are still picketing two unfair houses, the Grill Cafe and Morgan's Cafe, but owing to the cold weather and lack of funds we can not keep them out on the line any length of time. We just go long enough to let them know that our boys are still out for better conditions no matter what may come up and how much hardship they have to put up with. Very sorry to say that some of our ex-members are scabbing on some of their old comrades who at one time worked side by side with them. I wish all secretaries throughout the country to take notice of the following names of scabs: Charles Hubbard, Nate Young, Bert McNutt, Martin Schuring and Heinie Dittman. There are a few ex-shoeshiners whose names can not be found in the English vocabulary, being foreigners not yet naturalized, who are working in both houses. We know that every member of the culinary craft sincerely hopes, prays and wishes the same fate for these ex-members that Local 815 does, namely, that it will be but a very short time before we see the crews of both of these unfair houses, the Grill Cafe and Morgan's Cafe, walking the streets sparring for coffee and, just the same as some of our most loyal members are doing at the present time. Let us hope that it will be short.

Wishing yourself and sister locals a Happy and Prosperous New Year, believe me to be

Yours fraternally,

PATRICK T. OWENS,
Rec. and Press Sec. Local 815.

ENSLEY, ALA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 248 begins the new year with the following splendid set of officers, elected Sunday, Dec. 27, 1914: John Horan, president; Noble Kountzen, vice-president; W. F. Robinson, financial secretary; R. W. Lochrie, recording secretary; Henry Link, business agent; Henry Frey, inspector; Horace Keenan, inside guard; Felix Rando, sergeant-at-arms; J. W. Warble, Phil Eharler, Scotty Bryant, trustees; Charles Kuhn, press agent. The future looks bright for Local 248 with a roster of officers that have been tried and found true blue in every instance. In scanning the roster I find great things in store for the local, as the names suggest something doing for the year 1915.

At the sound of the horn (Horan) Local 248 will arise, and in shrill voices, keener an (Keenan) a razor, we will Warble (J. G.) a song of returning prosperity. A song from hearts that are Noble and Constant (Noble Kountzen), a song of times when no man will be found guilty of robbing sons (Robinson) to get the coin. With the return of good times we can say we ran the dough (Rando) into the tills like water. No one will be forced to lock rye (Lochrie) in iron safes to prevent the thirsty mob from purloining same. Scotty, with ever watchful eye and appetite, will suggest a feed and a Coney Island Link (Henry) for business will be brought forth, and over a fire as warm as B. I. L. of A.'s love we will fry (Frey) same, and in pomp it will be served by the coon (Kuhn) in press shape.

As this is my first attempt as press agent, I hope this letter will fall short of the waste-basket. Promising to try and do better in the future, I remain, wishing all a Happy New Year,

Yours fraternally,
CHARLES KUHN.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The regular meeting nights of Local 402 falling on Christmas and New Years days, the installation of our newly elected officers was deferred until the 8th of January.

Once more I take permission to warn members against coming to San Diego or even to the coast. This is a small town and there are certainly not more than three hundred employed in the catering line and there are at least five hundred cooks and waiters in town looking for employment, so it can readily be seen how bad things are. All members coming in on spec are doomed to disappointment and will rue it. Conditions are just as bad on the whole coast from Nome to the Mexican border, and I do not expect to see things improve. Washington, Oregon and Arizona having voted dry members of our crafts from these states are flocking into California at an alarming rate and the end is not yet.

Our plans for a one hundred per cent organization are now well under way and we are putting our life into the campaign. We have given our plans so much thought and guarded against every probability that we can well hope to attain that success to which we feel that we are entitled. It has always been a mystery to me how a card man will patronize non-union eating houses. With business on the bum here union restaurants expect support from union men and if we would accord them that support there would not be room for the open shop and the non-union bosses would have to close up in a week for lack of support. These conditions are a crying shame and an unhealthy sign for those who want a perfect organization.

With best wishes for the new year to you personally and to unionism at large, believe me

Fraternally yours,
J. BECKER.

HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—There was a brilliant soiree, beautiful music, an excellent floor, handsome gowns, charming women and gallant men, at this most wonderful and fascinating entertainment given at Putnam Phalanx Hall, February 4, by Local 304, and from the beginning of the evening our members were constantly alert for the comfort and welfare of the guests, with greetings and cheerful smiles to make them feel at home and at ease. It was a day of gayety imported from fairyland.

The music and dances were very notable for the variety of steps shown, the dancing skill and grace of many guests, the fox-trot, the one-step, the hesitation had all clever and accomplished exponents.

Mr. Picciolo rendered a cornet solo selection that was much applauded. Miss Jennie McIntosh, a typical bonnie-lassie, attracted a good deal of interest bedecked in the National costume with lace and silk, rendered the famous Scottish sword dance marvelously that set every pulse a tingling and your feet a tripping.

Beautiful prizes were awarded to the ladies during intermission. The hall was profusely decorated with tropical plants. The merry dancers wore caps of various colors enhancing the more the brilliancy of each guest suggesting a Carnival of Venice.

The merry whirl of society was kept up to late hours; it was a red letter day for those who conceived this elaborate 14th anniversary ball.

Our beautiful souvenir program has met with favor everywhere; the subscribers were many, making this valuable book a reminder for years to come in perusing this edition de luxe.

Local 304 has proved once more faithful in her tradition to entertain her many friends and admirers.

Greeting from Hartford, Conn.

Fraternally,

ALBERT FORNI,
Secretary Local 304.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The annual installation of officers was held January 8, 1915, at our rooms, 14 E. Eagle street. We were installed by our General President, Edward Flore, ably assisted by Brother Fred Fulcher, President of Local 196. After the meeting refreshments were served by Bros. Edward Ehrman and Joseph Ball. Musical selections were rendered by Brother Tom Peckinham and others.

Brother H. L. Sayers was elected trustee in place of Brother P. A. Arthur, who has gone to Rochester.

Brothers Geo. (Red) Davis and Chas. Kleberg have passed away; they were loyal members and their many friends will miss them.

Brother E. C. Maharg has lost his mother, and Brother Joe Clark has lost his father. They have the sympathy of all the members of Local 175.

Brother Wm. W. Engel is in business with F. Glasher at 125 Sycamore street—The Pine Buffet.

The delegates to the Central Labor Council are P. J. McGowan, Edw. Ehrman and A. W. Killinger; to Local Joint Executive Board, Frank Brown, Bert Merlink and A. W. Killinger.

Brother Chas. Glasher is now a married man. Good luck, old boy.

Brother Bert Merlink is at Flore's Buffet; Brother J. T. Eagen is at Caughlin's Hotel, Walden avenue; Brother J. Murtha is at Callahan's Buffet, Seneca street; Brother McGreevey is out and around again.

Yours fraternally,

FRANK BROWN,
Press Agent and President Local 175.

KETCHICAN, ALASKA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—For the past few months several members of our local have been insisting on me sending a few lines to our official Journal. While acceding to their request it is partly under duress, or what might be more aptly termed duty. I am not given to letter writing. I don't savvy its moods and tenses, hence leave it to the other fellow.

Many of our members in Pittsburg, Pa., and other towns will vouch for the above as I owe several of them news items. If they should happen to glance over these few lines I hope they will excuse me and "remember it is the pen that is bad, don't lay the blame on me."

Let me state at the outset that the First City in Alaska—Ketchikan—has never experienced such slow times as she is passing through at the present time. This information came to me from a pioneer who was here before Ketchikan ever was. It is even apparent to casual observers. This depression affects all kinds of business; the saloon business more so than others. The consequence is that a number of proprietors are compelled to go behind the timber themselves to make ends meet.

We have twenty-five members on our roster, only ten of whom are working at the trade. Some are unemployed, others working at whatever they can get. This is one of the reasons why I've been asked to write these lines. It is written to warn our unfortunate brothers in Washington and Oregon, who have been voted out of earning a living at their trade. Glaring headlines are appearing daily in the newspapers and glowing accounts written on the great possibilities here in Alaska on account of the new railroad and the opening of the coal fields. Don't be cajoled into spending your hard-earned cash on this trip unless you can well afford it.

To those who have money to spare, a trip to Alaska will be immensely enjoyed, amply repaid and never forgotten. Its very wildness makes it extremely beautiful. The following lines from "The Spell of the Youkon," are not exaggerated:

"I've stood in some mighty-mouthed hollow
That's plumb full of hush to the brim,
I've watched the big, husky sun wallow
In crimson and gold and grow dim,
Till the moon set the pearly peaks gleaming
And the stars tumbled out neck and crop.
And I've thought that I surely was dreaming
With the peace o' the world piled on top."

"The summer—no sweeter was ever
The sunbeam woods all a thrill,
The grayling aleap in the river,
The bighorn asleep on the hill.
The strong life that never knows harness
The wilds where the caribou calls;
The freshness, the freedom, the farness,
Oh, God, how I wish for them all."

This is a great land to see, but the chechaco coming here with little or no money will have rough sledding and will soon find out that he is siwashed by the sourdoughs and pioneers who blazed the way and have withstood the trials and hardships of many seasons, consequently are hardened and trained to the trail. They will be found mushing steadily along when the chechaco tired and footsore, will be forced through inexperience and lack of practice, to fall by the wayside. Of course if he is strong and healthy and makes himself a skookum fellow by potlatching part of his grub to any unfortunate sourdough or tillikum in need, he will get inside and be welcomed by all in the camp. Cotter of Seward writes, advisingly :

"If you can hit the trail in zero weather,
And laugh at frozen hand or foot or face.
If you can eat your dogs and yet keep moving,
And beat the rest and hold the stampeder pace.
If you can stake and dig alone unaided
And hold your ground, if needs be with a gun
And find the gold and have some lawyer steal it
And lose, and start again and call it fun.

"If you can go a year on mouldy bacon
And fight the scurvy off with bayo beans
If you can 'jump' your socks and do your washing
And smile the while you patch your threadbare jeans

If you can laugh when sordid hunger mocks you
And smile when passing strangers eat your grub
If you can boost when everybody knocks you
And know him wrong who holds you but a dub.

"If you can kill the pain when 'outside' calls you
And choke back thoughts of friends you still hold dear

If you can kill the dreams when night befalls you
And wake, and strike again, when eyes and brain are clear

If you can wait and stick it out a-smiling
When longing letters come to you from home
And then don't find the taste of Hootch beguiling
You'll like this land from Ketchikan to Nome."

"Pat" O'Cotter put as much truth as poetry in these lines. Did they have to eat their dogs? Yes. I heard an old-timer say: "You may talk about your bear meat, your porcupine and your wild-cat mulligan, but if I'm real hungry give me a good chunk of well-done roast wolf." They simply had to do this or die. This reminds me of the story of the hunter after the rabbit. He told of having the rabbit cornered and when it saw a tree close by and ran up to the topmost limb, a listener said: "Why you simpleton, a rabbit cannot climb a tree." He answered, "I know it can't, but this one—why this one just had to."

Such was the case with the early settlers when they might get four or five steamers to come within hailing distance in twelve months, they just had to eat what they could get.

This letter, as far as I have gone, would indicate an inclination to pessimism. On the contrary I'm anything but a pessimist. I believe this great big land is only awakening. In this region —this immediate vicinity—there is lots of valuable minerals awaiting capital to develop them. This is curbed to a certain extent by the European war, but it will come as sure as day follows night. Tons of copper are awaiting those, who, by improved machinery, will unearth and put in on a paying basis. There is a fortune in it. This also holds good with gold and silver, though not to the same extent here. From inside information I look for Ketchikan to be the mecca of an old-time stampede in the near future.

I take great interest in your articles in the MIXER AND SERVER anent Segregation and the Scribes of Frisco. I'm not a politician in unionism—just one of the rank and file—who wishes to give every one a square deal and I can't for the life of me see how segregation is going to give a square deal to any one. It disrupts our organization as a whole, places us in an unfair position before the public, on our inability to foster and protect our pledge, and finally excludes the Segregationists from the protecting arms of the American Federation of Labor. I am glad to see so many cooks' and waiters' locals opposed to such a double-dyed nefarious scheme. I feel confident the majority of bartenders' locals will be found fighting for the right. Unity is the word, united we stand, divided we fall.

I am enclosing a menu card of the first annual banquet tendered Local 867 by Ketchikan Liquor Dealers' Association. I hope you will find space for it in the same issue this appears in. While the menu is lengthy and has a dish for every licensed house in town (except the Seattle Bar, which saw fit to give up its union card, thereby cancelling all affiliation with organized labor, sorry to break up my sentence on this as we will attend to it later) it was necessary to be in attendance to get the full significance—to feel and know the warmth of the welcome. It spoke volumes in itself of the regards in which our organization is held by the proprietors. It was a gala feast and a gala time. It would require an able writer to do part justice in describing it. Our President, Oscar Thomas, sat to the right of the head of the table while yours truly was seated to the left. Probably to prevent trouble President Austin of the Liquor Dealers' Association, as was his right, sat between us. He told jokes so fast I got an appetite and instead of listening to his tongue I went after that Ox Tongue, caled after his bar, a La Log Cabin. Both were good. It required a great effort, however, to restrain the tears when I got some of his pickled onions. When Vice-President George Wilkes, proprietor of the Poodle Dog, made a flowery speech of welcome, I went after his dish, the German Cadevelcalod—whatever that is—but took too much mustard and had to go for the handkerchief. Good thing George was at the lower end of the hall, he might have thought he didn't make a hit if he had seen those tears—but he did. He was all to the mustard. Messrs. Morgan and Martin, of the Cabinet and Sideboard, kept up a fusilade of witicism from start to finish. Mike, that is Mr. Martin, of the Sideboard, presented every one with a face mirror so he could see "hissel as ithers see him." Mike was called on for a German song, but excused himself by paying a wink to the Twang a Doodle Due. They sang "Wacht am Rhine" in such a way that Mike had to treat the very next day. Messrs Hans Apsch, Al. Smith and Hugh Barclay danced a Russian Bear dance that reminded me of the Highland Fling, while Messrs. Clancy, Gommere, Platter and Wishard quartetted a conglomerated ode. The proprietors of The Revilla and Stedman were too busy counting their money to attend, but sent their managers in the august persons of Glen Bartlett and Herb Kingston, who took down the house by rendering: "I Wish I 'Ad That Piccadilly H'accent."

Our boys did well. President Thomas and myself speaking and most all the others singing, telling stories, or doing a stunt of some kind.

The Ketchikan Band, under the able leadership of Professor Rockefeller, rendered popular airs which were well received as evidenced by the many encores. All told it was a time thoroughly enjoyed and long to be remembered.

Our members certainly do appreciate such manifestations of good fellowship from our proprietors and desire to thank them through the MIXER AND SERVER (which all of them read), for their excellent banquet and entertainment. I did not intend, when starting, to write so much but it isn't often you hear from me so I thought best to take up at least a quarter page in the MIXER AND SERVER.

The following are our officers elected for 1915: Andy Anderson, president; Fred Berry, vice-president; Michael Doyle, secretary-treasurer; George Radenbaugh, chaplain; Patrick J. Burke, inspector; Samuel Maxwell, guard; Oscar S. Thomas, F. S. Bradbury, Erle Byron, trustees.

Hoping you will find space for this and the menu in next issue and tendering best wishes, I am

Fraternally yours,

MICHAEL DOYLE,
Secretary-Treasurer Local 867.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—For the first time in the history of its organization, the Waiters' Union, Local 405, has a few words for the MIXER AND SERVER, the reason being that we at last have what may truly be called a home of our own. It is located at 625 Pine street, and presents a very cozy appearance, being very neatly, though simply furnished.

Our home was dedicated Thursday evening, January 7, 1915, with a banquet, which was attended by almost every proprietor of the better class restaurants in this city. Among the honorary guests present were: J. Bernstein, our first president, and now the proprietor of his own restaurant; W. Malamut, another former officer of the local union who has a place of his own; H. Fisher, M. Malamut, B. Bernstein, M. Leblang, H. Kendis, and A. Moichel, together with a number of visitors from Local 279, and Miss G. Fitzgerald of Local 644.

We held an election and the following were elected officers: A. Moskovitz, president; L. Jacoby, vice-president; L. Hershman, secretary; M. Goldsmith, recording secretary; J. Krantz, business agent; S. Heller, chaplain, and D. Krantz, inside guard.

We are doing very well now and with a full realization that we must all work hard to keep things going, we hope to have a great future before us, and you may expect a regular report of our progress. Fraternally yours,

A. MOSKOVITZ, President.

BALTIMORE, MD.

SIR AND BROTHER—"It's a Long Way to Tipperary," that's the name of the song hit. It's a long time since an article appeared in the MIXER AND SERVER from Baltimore. Just to let the boys affiliated with the International know that we are again going to try and wake up some of the old time enthusiasm by appearing with an article in your columns.

A whole lot of things have transpired in Local 532 since last writing. Some have come and some have gone beyond to the great unknown world—of peace—let us hope. Good work has been in progress among the members for some time. They seem to be getting that hustling "Watch Us Grow" spirit injected into them, and numerous new and old members are coming back into the fold.

We held our annual election on Sunday, December 20, and the meeting room was taxed for space. The election resulted in the following officers being chosen for the ensuing year: President, John F. Flanagan; vice-president, Thomas Nolan; chaplain, Edward Rayne; financial secretary and treasurer, J. Russell Chenoweth; recording secretary, Irwin S. Pentz; assistant recording secretary, Bernard Stern; inspector, Walter Witzgall; inside guard, William H. Roman. After the election a splendid buffet luncheon was served. This Sunday, January 10, the installation of officers as elected will take place in Room No. 5 of the Labor Lyceum, at which a large attendance is expected. Brother Jere F. McCarthy, International Organizer, will install the officers, after which speeches by members of the different trades organizations and members of the local will be made, and then again to the buffet luncheon, and not forgetting the bar supervision by one "Wild Bill Roman." Afterward the presentation of a handsome diamond locket to Brother Russell Chenoweth, for his untiring efforts as business agent, and as secretary and treasurer of the local. If the local could have made it a better diamond, it would not be too much to hand this member for the great work he has done, and we know there is more good work to follow. The presentation was made by President Flanagan in behalf of the local.

The local will also hold its annual oyster roast on Sunday, February 21, 1915. These roasts have been a great success to the local, financially and otherwise. We are sorry, Mr. Editor, you cannot be with us for some of our old time Maryland cooking and those fine Chesapeake Bay oysters.

Wishing you and the International a happy and prosperous new year, I am,

Yours fraternally,

BERNARD STERN,
Local 532.

EDMONTON, ALTA., CAN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am instructed to ask you to publish the following article in the MIXER AND SERVER:

Owing to trouble Local 55 had with Hurry's Cafe, it was found necessary to declare a strike at the cafe and call the help out, and I am sorry to say, all refused to come out. Charges were immediately brought against the members of Local 55 working in the house, and a special committee appointed, according to Sections 169 and 170. They were fined the following amounts and expelled from said local until such time as the fines were paid: W. E. Burrel, Larson Brickly and Joe Gregory, $25; Pauline Blaskan and Jask Visn, $15. The following were also fined for entering the employ of Hurry's Cafe after the place had been declared unfair to Local 55: Murray J. Carpenter, L. Lockheart, Jas McLean and Fred Ritley, $25.

Thanking you in advance for publication of the aforesaid article, I am,

Yours fraternally,
W. J. BROWNLEE, Sec'y.
J. LAWSON, Pres.

ALTOONA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As you have not heard from Local 449 for some time, I thought I would contribute an article for our valuable journal, and let the brothers known that Local 449 is still very much alive.

At our last regular meeting of December 20 the following officers were elected: Jno. Ganzenhuber, president; John Sullivan, vice-president; W. H. McKee, recording secretary and treasurer; Craig S. Rhodes, financial secretary and business agent; Jno. McEvilley, chaplain; Jos. Kettrow, inspector; Walter C. Behm, inside guard.

Local 449 is getting along very nicely. We have had the Flying Squadron visit us, and at present we have the Evangelist, Dr. Stough, with us in our city. He promises to make things lively for us, but as to this, we can tell more about it later on.

There is something I would like to bring to the notice of the general membership concerning Section 84 of our International Constitution. There is no provision made for the holder of a withdrawal card if his local goes out of existence. I had an occasion to write our General President concerning a withdrawal card, and he replied that if the local that issued said card quit clean and this member's withdrawal card was legitimately issued, he can deposit it with the General Office. Now, the question that arises is: Is the holder of a legitimate card (probably 100 miles away from the local that issued it) responsible for the actions of that local? In my mind that is something for our coming convention to work on.

With best wishes for yourself and the International, I remain, Yours fraternally,
CRAIG S. RHODES,
Fin. Sec'y Local 449.

P. S.—Would like to hear from the general membership on this subject.—C. S. R.

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SISTERS AND BROTHERS—In order to give the general membership a better understanding of what it means to bring the hotel and restaurant workers and bartenders under the banner of trades unionism in the Windy City I desire to go into a little history less than one year old.

John C. Vogelsang is the president and general manager of the Saloon and Restaurant Keepers' Association. This association is composed of all the principal bars in the downtown district. Millions of dollars of wealth is invested, and thousands of workers are earning their livelihood in these places.

At the present time Judge Jesse A. Baldwin is hearing the association's injunction against the waiters, waitresses and cooks.

George Knab, owner of nine lunch rooms has sold out to a wholesale grocery concern.

The petitions as sent out by our general office were taken to the Bismarck saloon and restaurant, but the manager and owner, Mr. Ethel, refused to give permission to our committee to have his employes sign them. In fact, he refused the committee the permission to interview the employes, claiming that it was against the by-laws of the Chicago Saloon and Restaurant Keepers' Association to permit any trades unionist to enter into a conversation with their non-union employes.

A great majority of the employes of the Bismarck, like other places, are not citizens of this country, and have no intention of becoming such.

The committee consisted by Brother Frakes, of the waiters; Brother Kilgus, of the bartenders, and myself.

After being turned down by the Bismarck manager, one of the Ethel brothers, who are the American importers of beer, wines, whiskies and other high-class liquors, the committee called on John C. Vogelsang, the president of the Saloon and Restaurant Keepers' Association.

The same permission was asked of Mr. Vogelsang, and his stubborn reply was: "Between the two evils, prohibitionism and trades unionism, I choose the dry in preference to trades unions, for I would rather see the whole country go dry than to permit trades union agitation among my employes," and further saying that he did not care whether his employes were citizens or not so long as they did the work required of them.

Mr. Vogelsang pays his waiters $7 per week, and as the union scale is $10, he says the union men are unreasonable. His kitchen is in one of Chicago's dirtiest basements, and were it not for the fact that he is able to make our joke of a Health Department shut their eyes, such a basement would not even be allowed to be used as a hog pen in this civilized country, as no hog could live long in a basement without air. And yet our Health Department is permitting human beings to work seven days a week, twelve to fourteen hours per day, in this same basement.

The breweries of Chicago have shown during the year that they choose to stand with the Saloon and Restaurant Keepers' Association and John C. Vogelsang in preference to the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The retail Liquor Dealers' Association, under the signature of its president, Fred Rohdie, recently sent out half a million of letters printed in a scab print shop, another sign of how these liquor dealers stack up on the question of trades unionism. Mr. Rohdie is the owner of a saloon on LaSalle street, and refuses to employ a union bartender.

The wet and dry question is now before the legislature, and for three weeks both sides have struggled to get the upper hand by getting control of the Speaker, showing that both will use the steam-roller whenever necessary in order to maintain their control.

Fourteen States have gone dry, and 52 counties out of 102 in Illinois, with a total of 1,400 saloons. The wets can never hope to remain in control with men like Vogelsang, Lee, O'Neil, Browne, Waage, Zermack, Rohdie, Eithel, or any of their type, as the leading lights in the wet fight against the dries. It will be to our interest to clean our doorsteps of this kind of mud, and to do it now, as it may be too late if we wait.

It is high time that the various organizations of the brewery workers, cigarmakers, ice drivers, beer drivers, musicians, plumbers, firemen, engineers, whiskey makers, wine growers, cooks, waiters and bartenders were getting together on this Vogelsang and wet and dry question, and for better wages and shorter hours. Let us have our own men in the legislature instead of standing in the galleries and watching the votes.

If the workers were organized as they should be; if a living wage was paid to cooks, waiters and bartenders, and all had "one day's rest in seven;" if the "hog" saloon was eliminated and only clean and sanitary places permitted; if the workers would take part in our government and refuse to permit the cheapest kind of Europeans, who intend to go back some day, to run these places; if these and other evils were eliminated, there would be no wet and dry issue.

It would be better for us to clean our own house than to let the Anti-Saloon League and the preachers do it for us, for if we let them do it we will not have any house when they get through cleaning it.

If all the employes in the hotels, saloons and restaurants in Chicago affiliated with our International Union, and other wet organizations work in conjunction with us, the work of education, elevation and consolidation carried on by us would eliminate 90 per cent of all the evils complained of by our opponents.

The majority of the people who vote dry do not desire to see the country dry, but vote that way in order to force the wets to adopt a higher standard. It is said that some of the wets can not be made to understand this until after they have had a chance to get sober for a year or two. The real reform of the saloon must come from within instead of from without our ranks. You will find that wherever a State has been voted dry and has gone wet again, that they have always opened up on a higher scale, so why not do it now and not be forced to close up to learn this lesson.

Chicago will be forced to face this issue either this spring or next. I advise the wets to get together with the trade unions and let the workers who do the voting have something to say about this. As Vogelsang has proven himself a failure, the issue is before us. Let us solve it now.

FRED EBELING,
Press and Fin. Sec. Local 868.

NEWARK, N. J.

Considering the fact that the members at large will be interested in knowing the rates and routes for our San Francisco convention in June, 1915, and being in touch with a friend of mine who is a railroad man, it occurs to me that a little article on rates and routes would be timely and of interest to the delegates who are going to the convention:

The Lackawanna Railroad will have on sale daily, starting March 1st, a special round-trip ticket to the coast at rate of $94.50, and this ticket carries a return limit of ninety days from date of sale. The ticket is first-class in every respect and may be sold via diverse routes so that our members may go one way through St. Louis, Kansas City, or New Orleans, and return via Chicago or vice versa. On payment of $17.50 additional, or at a total cost of $111.80, members can travel one way via Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, and other North Pacific coast points. The above fares, however, do not include Pullman service, rates for which are as follows: Lower berth in standard sleeper, New York to Chicago, $5; upper berth, $4; lower standard berth, Chicago to the coast, $13, or $10.40 for an upper berth. If our delegates desire to economize, they can travel in tourist sleeping cars west of Chicago and St. Louis at approximately fifty per cent of the rates I have quoted for standard sleeping car service.

In my opinion a distinct advantage in using the Lackawanna railroad would be that our members would have the privilege of stopping over at Niagara Falls, that tickets are honored on boat lines, between Buffalo and Cleveland, or Buffalo and Detroit, and very liberal stop-over privileges are permitted at any point west of Chicago. From personal knowledge of the territory traversed, I would certainly recommend that the delegates route one way via Denver, Colorado Springs, and Salt Lake City. This route is one of the most interesting in the country from a scenic standpoint.

On our last trip to the Denver convention, delegates from this territory traveled via the Lackawanna railroad, and they were unanimous with their complimentary remarks of the service furnished for the entire trip.

If any of our people desire more complete details or any information along railroad lines, and will communicate with me at the undersigned address, I shall be very glad to see that they are furnished with the proper advice.

Yours very truly,

MICHAEL LAND,
428 Plane Street, Newark, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 170 is doing well at present, and are taking in some new hustlers. We have a few out of work at present, but not enough to say we are having such hard times.

An entertainment in the form of a minstrel show was put on in our hall three weeks ago, proving a successful venture, and we wish to thank the Moose Lodge for helping us out on this occasion. Frank Lyle, the city's best cartoonist took part, also Jack Burke, Mr. Vivias, and many more Moose comedians, who took the audience with their witty sayings and songs. Bro. Bob Werner and Brother McBaron were on this committee, and deserve praise for their efforts.

Louis Keppler, who runs one of the most popular cafes in the city, has now a union card in his place, and as Louie was elected sheriff in the "days of '49," we wish him success in his new undertaking.

We installed the following new officers of Local 170 last Sunday: H. W. Newcomb, secretary and treasurer; Bob Werner, chaplain; Brice Bowersock, inspector; Doc Durr, inside guard; Rob Russell, vice-president; C. Maxwell, president. All the new officers took a resolve to make 1915 one of the best years in unionism.

There are just a few bartenders holding out here, and I think that before many days they will come across, as they speak favorably of our local.

On or about February 10 the bartenders' dance will be the attraction, and we invite all members to attend from different locals throughout the country. We expect to make this dance a success, as we have a number of members sick at the present time.

Jake Boxwell at present is busy selling toilet soap and magazines in these dull times. It is remarkable the ambition this brother has. He went to Indianapolis to sell key-rings. He was relieved of his stock by some husky fellow, and came back here selling Eagle souvenirs when he got well.

Wishing success to the International in these times of trial, we send our greetings.

CHARLES MAXWELL,
President Local 170.

TORONTO, CANADA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The writer was appointed to the position of press secretary by our worthy president, Bro. T. Harding, at the last meeting of Waiters' and Cooks' Local 300, and as it is quite a long time since we had a report in the MIXER AND SERVER, I take this opportunity of sending you a few lines as to our progress.

I am glad to report that Local 300 is in much better shape than it has been for some months, thanks chiefly to the efforts of our live business agent, Bro. W. W. Hinton, who, notwithstanding that he could have earned much more money in his occupation as a waiter, gave up his position to help us put our local on a sound business footing, and it is the opinion of all our members that he has achieved wonderful results.

We moved into our new quarters two weeks ago, and I think that we now have club rooms that compare with those in the larger cities over the line.

Much credit is also due to the officers and members of the local who have backed up the efforts of our business agent to put this local in the strong financial position which it now occupies.

Local 300 congratulates Bro. E. Humphreys on his appointment as local special organizer, believing he is one of the best men in Toronto for that position, and I know he will receive great assistance from Brother Hinton and all the officers and members in his efforts to build up our union and make it one of the strongest in Canada.

On Thursday, January 15, we had the great pleasure of welcoming General President Edward Flore to our midst. The members of Local 300 are in hopes that we may receive another visit in the near future, when we expect to be able to "show him something." We were helped very much by the advice of President Flore, and, as he said, we realize the possibilities of making Toronto one of the most strongly organized cities in Canada.

We have been working on the organization of the waitresses in this city for some time, and now that Brother Humphreys will be able to put all his time into this work, we are hopeful of being able to announce some definite result in the near future.

Recently we started a campaign in the cheaper lunch counters and cafes, and are trying to create a demand for our union house card and the "green button." In this we are having a good deal of success, and have recently signed up the largest lunch counter in Toronto, the Metropolitan Lunch. Our huge advertising sign, "Demand the Button," is attracting a great deal of attention and is contributing in no small measure to our success.

In conclusion, let me say that you will hear from us more frequently in the near future, and I might add, Keep Your Eye on Toronto.

Yours fraternally,

JOE DARLOW,
Press Sec. Local 300.

NORFOLK, VA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Having recently recovered from the fatal blow dealt our craft on September 22, 1914, by the Anti-Saloon League, when they voted our State dry by 35,000, I will contribute a brief item for our valuable journal.

Local 696 has moved into its new quarters in I. O. O. F. Hall on Church street, which is a much nicer place than our former one. We are doing business just the same as if there had been no wet and dry election. Our members are of the true blue type, and not one has shown any signs of a quitter; in fact, we are getting new members at every meeting, and everybody seems just as happy as ever.

On Sunday, January 10, 1915, we installed our newly-elected officers for the ensuing term, as follows: President, W. L. O'Brien (fourth term); vice-president, A. P. Walker (second term); recording secretary, W. P. Hitchings; financial secretary, R. P. Hollowell (third term); assistant financial secretary, C. G. Brockenbrough (second term); press secretary, R. P. Hollowell; treasurer, B. F. Crandall (fourth term); inspector, John Whitehurst (second term); chaplain, C. E. Worrell (second term); business agent, B. F. Crandall (second term); guard, B. D. Bourdon (third term); trustees, J. L. Bosco, E. B. Kelly and A. P. Sammon.

After the installation we adjourned to the banquet hall, where the committee had prepared a very nice spread for us and every member thoroughly enjoyed himself, especially Brother Crandall and myself, as we occupied the seats nearest the punch bowl, and believe me, it was some punch, for it had one of those lingering effects for several days. Brother O'Brien, for the first time in his life was on the water wagon, and of course we missed him around the bowl, but he drank a cup of coffee for every glass of punch we drank; so he says.

With the season's greetings from members of Local 696 to all members of the International, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

R. P. HALLOWELL,

Press Sec'y Local 696.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been some little time since local 76 has been heard from in the official journal. We have elected a new recording secretary and I am going to see if he will not give us something in the journal at least once or twice a year.

At the election of officers, held December 20, the following were elected for the ensuing year: President, P. M. Gardiner; vice-president, M. Gilbert; financial secretary-treasurer and business agent, C. Yates; recording secretary, Edw. Costello; inspector, John O'Neil; inside guard, Wm. Garlock.

On January 3 the officers were installed. We were very much disappointed in not having President Flore with us. We pulled two or three strings to try to get him, but previous engagements would not allow him to come. Ask Rochester what he missed. We invited several locals in our immediate vicinity to be with us, and the Rochester local responded with bells on. Those who came were Brothers Deniger, Kovel斯基, Wyman, Sargent, Hennessy (not three-star, but Roch says yes) and last but not least, Fritzie, and Local 76 hopes that the boys enjoyed themselves, but I want to say to Rochester I should think they would get a business agent who was not tongue tied.

Fraternally yours,

C. YATES.

Fin. Sec'y Local 76.

JEANNETTE, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Our annual election was held on Sunday, December 20, 1914, and the following officers were elected for 1915: President, Frank P. Breining; vice-president, Thom L. Davis; recording and financial secretary, John F. Meyer; treasurer, John R. Davis; chaplain, Larry Quitter; inspector, Fritz Johnson, business agent, John Morris; inside guard, J. L. Davis; outside guard, Frank Matko; trustees, Geo. Weisbecker, Ben Warren, Wm. Wilson, Jake Cotters, John F. Meyer. On Sunday, January 3 the above officers were installed and our ex-President, John Whirlow, was presented with a fine locket, donated to him by the members of our local, for the faithful manner in which he filled the chair as president. We also had two initiations; James Miller and Wm. Gutchell were made members of Local 854 and will do all they can to help keep our local in the good shape in which it is at the present time.

Quite a few of our members are out of work at this time and we are looking for things to pick up and put us all back to work again. Some of our brothers who have been on the sick list are back to work again. Brothers Harry Carey, Joseph Musick, the captain of the 1,100 pound Beauty Basket Ball team, which is certainly making a big hit in Westmorland County. Brother Frank O'Hare is on the sick list and has not worked for a long time. Brother John Eddison is spending the winter at the Moose Heart Home, near Chicago, Ill., and says he is working there. All our members wish him well.

We also had the pleasure of having our brother and ex-president of our local, Dave Walters, spend a short visit with us, before returning to Cape May, N. J., where he is conducting a bar and doing well.

After the meeting a fine lunch of all the good stuff to eat was served by our steward, W. S. Waits, assisted by Andy Huber, Wm. Wilson, John F. Meyer, and all the brothers enjoyed a fine evening.

This is about all the news until my next letter.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN F. MEYER,

Secretary Local 854.

ALBANY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few words from Albany, N. Y. On Sunday afternoon, January 10, 1915, the following newly elected officers were installed for the coming year, at our new meeting rooms (Macabee Temple), 91 North Pearl street, and which are considered the finest meeting rooms in the city of Albany: President, Richard Nolan; first vice-president, Michael P. Kearney; second vice-president, James E. Clancy; recording secretary, Matthew F. Dugan; financial secretary, Wm. H. Walsh; treasurer, Henry Hoffman; inspector, Richard Walsh; inside guard, James Taylor; outside guard, Joseph Patterson; chaplain, auditor, James E. Clancy; Board of Trustees, Max Schwartz, Fred Bender, Charles Schultz. After the installation the members journeyed to the restaurant of Mr. Joseph Rau, Sr., who happens to be the papa of our little, fat, red faced, always smiling Brother Joseph Rau, Jr., who by the way, is some entertainer. Brother Rau assisted his papa in serving the boys a genuine old fashioned German supper, and it certainly was some feed—everybody had plenty to eat and drink and then some. He filled the bill to the queen's taste (hats off to our old war horse, Mike).

President Nolan and Second Vice-President Clancy captured the two first prizes in the story telling contest (some stories). Brother Paddy (Gloom) Clancy and Billy Walsh were declared the best beer drinkers. Brothers Joe Patterson, Jim Taylor, Chas. Schultz and Jim Coyle rendered some very new and up-to-date songs and jokes, while Newton Cline and Chas. Hoehn gave a three-round exhibition of boxing, Jas. Campbell acting as referee. Before adjourning the affair was voted the best ever held by Local 228. The Committee of Arrangements consisted of Brothers Matthew F. Dugan, James E. Clancy and Henry Hoffman.

Our motto is "Watch Us Grow."

Fraternally yours,

MATTHEW F. DUGAN,
Rec. Sec'y Local 228.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Bartenders' Local 420 decided at its last meeting, by unanimous vote, to send four delegates to the Eighteenth General Convention of the International Union in San Francisco, Cal., June 14, 1915. This is the full quota of delegates that Local 420 is entitled to, and entitles the local to twelve votes on roll-call. The election of delegates will be held under special order of business at 3:00 p. m. at the regular meeting of the local on February 7. Several candidates are already in the field, and a lively contest is expected.

Business Representative Voorhees has been a very busy man during the last month, and has accomplished much good for the organization. He has signed up some of the houses, and has prospects of signing up some more of the places who, up to this date, have insisted on "operating the open shop."

With the exception of one hotel, we have our members employed in all the leading hotels, although for certain reasons we are unable to sign an agreement with them.

During the twelve months preceding December, 1914, Local 420 gained in membership the number of 119, and had at the December report 715 members in good standing. Besides this number there are always about 75 to 100 members on the "variation list," which is composed of such members as always get in arrears, staying suspended for short periods and then get reinstated, but who never get so far as to be in beneficiary standing, not realizing that they are the ones to suffer and not the organization, as they have to pay their reinstates when caught on the job, which is always a little more extra than if they were paying regular dues. Ignorance, negligence, indifference, "soreheads" and non-union principles are generally the reasons which keep a good many of this kind of members on this list. They are, as a rule, members because they have to be, and such in name only, and "that's all." With this list of the floating element added to the list of members in good standing, Local 420 would have a membership of 812.

During the above mentioned period Local 420 initiated 123 members, reinstated 283, admitted by traveling card 73, by withdrawal card 26; 255 members were suspended for non-payment of dues, 64 left with traveling cards, 55 with withdrawal cards, 2 members were expelled from the local, and 10 members in good standing died during that time.

The local paid to its members in sick benefits the sum of $2,034, and paid out of the local treasury $250 in death benefits.

The per capita tax paid into the treasury of the International Union amounted to $1,587.10.

Although the local organization is in better condition numerically, financially and otherwise, than ever before, we have a good many members out of employment, and as so many localities are going dry, members of those locals will naturally drift into the cities, and I would advise members to stay away from Kansas City, as there is not employment for those here.

Local 420 is getting up a souvenir history volume of the organization, and indications point that when the volume is published and distributed among the members and their employers, it will be kept as a memento, as it will contain some interesting reading and information for the benefit of the members of our craft. President Hiles and the undersigned have the publication in charge.

In the report of Organizer McGinley last month I noticed that he mentioned something about the banquet of Local 420, December 20, and asks the members to look for the fac-simile of the picture taken of the banquet. I will state that the reason why no mention was made of it in the last issue of the MIXER AND SERVER by our local was because I was waiting for the cut to be made, and as the picture was not as good as expected, a satisfactory reproduction could not be made so that it would look presentable. I regret it very much, but, nevertheless, the celebration was a great success. The 400 members and invited friends enjoyed themselves immensely. The roast turkey, roast pigs, cranberry sauce, and all the other "goodies" and "trimmings," went like "hot cakes," and the "amber fluid" flowed freely. Bro. C. B. Nelson acted as toastmaster in a way that became him very nicely. John T. Smith, of the State Federation, and J. P. McGinley, made some of their characteristic talks, and Brother McGinley was presented with a handsome gold watch as a token for his faithful work against the enactment of the County Unit bill. The arrangement of the banquet was under the direct supervision and in full charge of President Hiles and Business Representative Voorhees, with all respect due Business Agent Balling, of Cooks' Local 266, who greatly assisted the committee.

The legislature is now in session at Jefferson City, and a good many bills are being introduced detrimental to our crafts, such as an 8 o'clock closing law, another for 10 o'clock closing, another prohibiting saloons from being conducted within five blocks from any church, school or educational institution. This would practically drive every saloon out of existence if enacted and enforced. A bill providing for ward option has also been introduced, and no doubt some of them will pass, as the legislature is practically "dry."

We are in hopes that all of these bills will be defeated, but should any or all of them pass, we would not be very much surprised.

I wish to again advise the members of other localities to stay away from Kansas City, as business is awfully dull, and if any of these drastic measures are passed, it will be worse than ever.

With usual greetings, I am

Fraternally yours,

JAMES H. ANDERSON,
Rec. and Press Sec. Local 420.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Consider Springfield on the map as one of the live wire locals of the State of Ohio. While we have not been organized long—in fact, less than a year—no first-class bartender can secure work in this "burg" unless he carries a card. We have made headway because we have a bunch of live ones in the organization who are always on the job.

When our first meeting was called to form an organization only a few came. We were not discouraged. Through the assistance of officers and members of the Trades and Labor Assembly the good work was kept up, and it was only a short time until we had them going. Now we are one of the largest unions in the city, our membership being 125 or better, which is doing quite well we think. Every first-class saloon in the city has the bar card prominently displayed, and in the places where the laws do not permit of bar cards—run by partners—they are friendly to our cause. In fact, there are only a few saloons in the city—not more than three or four—that do not employ members of our union.

At the recent election of officers the members chose practically the same ones who have had the affairs of the organization in charge since its beginning. They are: Arthur Gillette, president; Joseph Singer, vice-president; Charles Moore, secretary-treasurer; William Moore, recording secretary; Gus Munz, chaplain; Gus Eiser, inspector; Gus Munz, Arthur Gillette and Joseph Singer, trustees; Howard Weir, William Weinbrecht, Joseph O'Brien, Edward Graham, "Andy" Weigand and John Green, delegates to Trades and Labor Assembly. These officers are always on the job looking after the interests of Local 499, and before another year rolls around we expect to be able to report a solid 100 per cent union.

An active interest is manifested by the members in the trade union affairs of the city. We give a deaf ear to no local asking assistance, and in several instances we have been of material benefit in adjusting differences. In the recent State-wide prohibition fight the bartenders did their share. They not only contributed to the fund, but were on the firing line at the polls on election day.

Springfield, several years ago, had the reputation of being the largest dry town in point of population in the State of Ohio. It was made so by the unjust Rose County Option law. Three years' experience under this law proved to the citizens of Springfield that the dry fanatics were not a safe bunch to tie to. We believe they have learned their lesson, and as a burnt child dreads the fire we trust that Springfield will never again have to degenerate into a city infested with speak-easies, boot-leggers and blind tigers. Those were some days that we trust no one ever wants to see return.

The bartenders meet on the second and fourth Sunday afternoons of each month in the Labor Temple, a home owned by the trades unionists of Springfield, and which, by the way, we believe to be the first of its kind in Ohio. We do not let the social time interfere with our business, but immediately following the transaction of our business the boys gather in the rathskeller of the temple, where a good time is enjoyed, particularly in the line of "eats." Several of the meals we have served are in a class by themselves.

The bartenders in this city are also always in the front when anything is sprung that will help the cause. This year the Woman's Union Label League—and these women are classy—decided to feed the poor children of Springfield on Christmas Day. They solicited their funds solely from the labor unions, and the bartenders were there with the big "kick in," along with the other unions. The women raised a nice sum, and they fed more than 1,400 little ones, besides sending out more than 100 baskets. Their act was the talk of the town.

In President Arthur Gillette and Secretary-Treasurer Charles Moore we have two faithful and efficient officers. Neither ever miss a meeting, and they are always planning ways and means to strengthen the local. Both of these men are deserving of a large measure of credit for our success. In saying this we do not want to slight or overlook the other good workers who have always been willing to do committee work or anything else to advance the interests of the local.

W. S. MOORE,
Rec. Sec. Local 499.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—No doubt an article from Local 458 will be in order, as some time has elapsed since we have taken advantage of the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER.

Local 458 is a very busy one and has been especially so the last year. The membership has increased 100 per cent, owing to the efficient work of Business Agent L. Sinton, assisted by Brother Benier, who was active at all times, and the work of the membership at large who gave at all times their support to the officers on the job.

At the last election the following members were elected for the ensuing year: President, Adolph Berger; vice-president, George Reynolds; recording secretary, Chas. Gearou; financial secretary and business agent, Leslie Sinton; treasurer, Jere M. Sullivan; inspector, Frank Perry; inside guard, James Benier; press secretary, Wm. Bruschweiler; trustees, Walter Day, Wm. Briggs, Victor Nelson; chaplain, Daniel Smith; physician, Dr. Taft.

On January 8 the above officers were installed at an open meeting, where all cooks and their families attended, also their friends.

Dancing and entertainment took up the balance of the evening, a magnificent buffet lunch was served, and about four hundred persons were present.

Conditions of the culinary workers in this district are bad, about fifteen per cent of the organization are idle at this time. There are large numbers of cooks migrating to this city from Canada, owing to the poor conditions in that country.

A bill has been presented to the State Legislature calling for the licensing of cooks of this State. This is a joint action on the part of Local 458 of Minneapolis; Local 600 of Duluth, and Local 408 of St. Paul. A resolution to this effect was passed on favorably by the State Federation of Labor at its last convention. There is also another bill now in the legislature calling for "one day's rest in seven," for all employees in this State. This bill was presented to the State Federation of Labor by the Cooks' Unions of the State, and received the sanction of the State Federation of Labor.

A bill asking for better control of employment agencies has been presented at the instigation of the Cooks' Unions of Minnesota, so you see we have not been asleep on legislative matters concerning our people. At present, in the city of Minneapolis, the health department is showing an active interest in the sanitation and inspection of kitchens. At the request of the Health Commissioner, a member of Local 458 was endorsed by the union to act as an inspector of kitchens, and we expect to improve the unsanitary conditions that now prevail. In order to be an efficient kitchen inspector, they rightfully realize that they must secure the services of a practical culinary worker. Local 458 has put in vogue the idea of craft locals in nearby cities as far as possible to visit one another at their regular meetings, as we find in our case it is very beneficial. At the regular meetings of Local 408 of St. Paul there will always be found a delegation from Local 458, likewise with Local 408, when Local 458 meets. This has a tendency to create better fellowship and an opportunity to talk over matters that are of vital importance to the cooks of the Twin Cities.

Delegates to the San Francisco convention have not been selected as yet, but you can feel assured that when the time rolls around the Northwestern Cooks' Association will have a live delegation present. I think it is up to every local of the International Union to see that they have delegates present at this coming convention, as no doubt there will be some important matters to be settled.

The Northwestern Culinary Journal, a monthly magazine, edited by Local 458, has become very popular. This magazine is now five months old, and every edition is an improvement over the last one. The January issue was of twenty pages of good reading matter, instructive in both cooking and unionism. The magazine has a good circulation, being subscribed for in a number of States where there are culinary organizations. Subscription price is fifty cents a year. Sample copies can be had on request by addressing Brother A. M. Laing, editor of Northwestern Culinary Art Journal, 104 Washington Avenue, south, Minneapolis, Minn.

We trust locals will give special attention to the "Notice" we have in this edition of the MIXER AND SERVER (official pages).

With best wishes to the membership, I remain,
Yours fraternally,

W.M. BRUSCHWEILER,
Press Sec'y Local 458.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At the last meeting of Local 166 Past President Kramer installed the following officers for the year 1915: M. T. Kerwin, president; Charles Maier, vice-president; Louis W. Fodt, recording secretary; James E. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer; James Murphy, inspector; James McGrath, inside guard; John Leonard, Joseph Heim, Walter McCabe, trustees; P. H. O'Rourke, chaplain; Louis W. Fodt, press agent.

President Kerwin, who is entering on his second term as president of Local 166, was also elected president of the Central Labor Union of our city, and is also at present senior alderman of New Britain, having been elected as councilman of his ward in 1910 and 1911, and as alderman in 1912, and continuously ever since, also serving on the important Committees of Finance and Railroads.

Secretary-treasurer James E. O'Brien, who was again elected to the important office without opposition and starts on his fifteenth consecutive term, is a very enthusiastic member of the local, and ex-president of the Central Labor Union of New Britain, in which capacity he served for three years.

After the meeting a very enjoyable social was given, and a very fine variety of good entertainers, along with good eating, pleased the members in attendance very much.

It was unanimously voted at the meeting to have the recording secretary notify the General Secretary-Treasurer that Local 166 favored a plan whereby all members affiliated with the American Federation of Labor would be assessed a small amount to help the United Hatsters of North America to pay the fine which has been placed against them by the United States courts.

The following members were elected delegates to the New England Branch convention at New Bedford, Jan. 17, 18, 19, 1915: M. T. Kerwin, James E. O'Brien and Patrick Corbett.

With best wishes from Local 166 to the officers and members of our great International, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

Louis W. Fodt,

Rec. Sec. and Press Agt. Local 166.

STREATOR, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On January 3, 1915 the new board of officers were installed by Brother J. W. Kelly, chaplain. The officers for the present term are: President, Harry Ritenhour; vice-president, Dave Cossal; financial secretary, John James; recording secretary, William Benz; inspector, Thomas Halfpenny; business agent, Alex. Gray, and three trustees, Peter Ryan, John W. Kelly and Thomas Carroll.

I am glad to say that Local 218 is in good working order, and all saloons that are fit to display a union label, are doing so. Our sick and death benefit association is on a good and sound basis, and has accomplished a great amount of good during the past year.

Preparations are being made for our fifth annual ball to be given in Armory Hall, February 22, Washington's birthday, which will, no doubt, be a grand success as usual, because Local 218 holds the best reputation for conducting the most successful ball given by organized labor in the city of Streator.

I am sorry to say that the State of Illinois is drying up very fast, but I am glad to say that Streator does not vote on the local option question this coming spring. We are starting the new year with better resolutions, and intend to do more active work along the line, which will assuredly bring better results and success.

With best regards to the entire International membership and officers, I am,

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM BENZ,
Rec. Sec'y Local 218.

A Roster of Live, Progressive Local Unions

That is what is represented in the foregoing tabulation. It means that in each instance where a local union appears that there is a live, up-to-date and progressive trade union composed of workers at the Catering Industry. It means in each town and city an aggregation of Live Wires who are conceded to be aggressively intelligent---who know what they want and have organized into local unions to secure some measure of the wants which they want, and won't be satisfied until they get. It means that the men and women of the Catering Industry believe in organized effort, that they make a distinction between "sympathy for" and "active participation in"---that the former are the Flat Wheels of the Catering Industry and the latter are the Live Wires; that the former are doing the wishing while the latter are busily engaged in "Getting Results."

Be a Live Wire—Don't be a Flat Wheel

GRUNTERS

America probably leads the world in varieties of organizations, some of which are purely local while others cover the entire continent; in a sense and to a greater degree than is generally known, America has the organization habit so well developed that few indeed are without the pale of an organization of some kind or character. In one of the most widely circulated Year Books or Almanacs which makes an annual appearance there are approximately one hundred pages devoted to brief description of organizations, their purpose and other information of an interesting character, and these run the gamut from A to Z; in fact, having exhausted the alphabet some have gone to numerals in order to secure a title satisfying to their membership. A roster of labor organizations also appears in the referred to Year Book or Almanac, that is to say National and International bodies, and they occupy several pages not included in the above approximate total. In the list of Fraternal organizations we find that the total membership for the United States and Canada is given at 15,674,220, approximately as many persons as are supposed to be engaged in the European war; that point is made to impress the reader with the immensity of numbers. Labor Organizations in America will probably add to that great number, but members of labor unions are quite frequently members of fraternal organizations; but it is probably no exaggeration to say that eighty per cent of the population are affiliated with an organization of one kind or another.

Take that close on to sixteen millions of fraternal membership and consider what it means from an organization point of view. The records of fraternal organizations go to show that their members fluctuate to an extent, but not quite so much as is the case with labor organizations. There appears to be some sort of a kink in men generally, which somehow prompts them to stick to their fraternal organization when it comes to a pinch as to which of the two, labor or fraternal they will give up. Just why this is true no savant that we have heard of has so far made explanation; neither have those who are not classed as wise men, savants, offered reasons for the possession of the "kink" referred to. Another most remarkable thing in connection with fraternal organizations is the seeming unquestioned loyalty of their membership; one has to travel long distances to find members of fraternal organizations abusing and questioning the policies of their Grand High Priests, Sovereign Grand Commanders, Grand Master, Chief Templar, Most Worthy Patriarch, Supreme Regent, Supreme Chancellor, Head Consul, Supreme Chief Ranger, Grand Exalted Ruler or Grand President. You seldom, if ever, find members of fraternal organizations criticising the work of their Grand Supreme Councils on the corners or anywhere else. They seem to keep whatever troubles they may have "right at home" in their lodge rooms; the public knows nothing of any dissension, if any exists.

But how different with labor organizations, men become attached to their craft unions and hardly before they have paid a month's dues, they begin to "Want to Know" why this, that or some other thing has not been done and what the thunder becomes of ALL THEIR MONEY; inside of two months they are at liberty to and use their license unhesitatingly to call the General President, General Secretary-Treasurer and General Vice-Presidents and all who may come under the title of administration, a lot of cheap pikers and grafters who belong in the penitentiary; and while thus engaged are usually the recipients of the applause and encouragement of their fellow GRUNTERS, the same fellows exactly who take almost identical obligation in their fraternal organizations, who know that if they made a "cheep" as loud as a two-day-old chick, they would get a wash-boiler hung to them and be kicked into the street. If you are one of the GRUNTERS—take something for it, let your manhood have a chance.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in Hotels, Clubs, Cafes, Buffets, or Bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employes generally.

Innumerable predictions have been offered by writers, statesmen and military experts, as to the period of time it will require to exhaust the resources of the warring nations of Europe. Some assume that the least turn in the situation may result in a terrific final battle and immediately following efforts of the non-combatant nations will increase and insist on peace proposals being considered. Others take the position that the efforts being made to recruit additional forces, to secure munitions of war, and to provide finances, indicate that the war will not terminate inside of two or three years. At this writing extraordinary effort is being made to surround the warring countries with a line of floating fortresses, so as to bring about practical starvation, or at least to get as close to that end as their marine strength will produce.

To the non-military mind it would seem, and we judge from lectures and writings of men who have been in the field as trained observers for American periodicals and newspapers, no man born of woman, would be able to stick it out on the firing line for many more months after passing through the terrible experience of the last few months. It is almost beyond the comprehension of ordinary mortals to understand how an immense army of men are able to withstand the frightful experiences of living in trenches and yet retain courage enough to continue susceptible to orders. Can you imagine the terror of continuously being under fire, of having to withstand the terrible ravages of wind, sleet, rain, snow and bitter cold? How many of us can remain out of doors, even with extra warm coverings for one day and a night without feeling the effects of it for weeks afterwards, and yet the men of the armies of Europe have been out for months in the bitterest part of winter, no chance to take off their garments and slip between clean sheets or have an occasional bath, no friendly fire to toast their feet in front of, no shave, no accommodations such as most men have been accustomed to, even in the poorest of homes. With a gun as a waking and sleeping companion, eternally waiting and watching, no knowing the moment when shot or shell will come and put them out of misery, or mayhap maim or injure them, making them unfortunate cripples for the remainder of their lives and dependent on the alms of quite as poor devils as themselves. The havoc of war needs no press agent stuff to drive home its horrors, snow and sleet need no pen and pencil pictures to emphasize their painful presence, winter is winter in the countries at war quite as much as it is in the coldest parts of America; "Mulligan Stew" is not a whit more wholesome and appetizing in the trenches or in the hills of Europe than it is anywhere on the North American continent, as an every day diet it is as welcome as the smallpox; men in the trenches do not enjoy a change of bill of fare, fact is they are frequently forced to go without food, not even the despised "Mulligan Stew" reaches them. With all of this and much more which could be crudely described is it flaunting humble opinion to give expression to the conviction that the soldiers who have passed or will be able to say that they have withstood the terrific ravages of this winter on the firing lines in Europe will be as anxious and willing to keep going at that pace for one, two or three years longer? We sincerely doubt it and in giving expression to that doubt we intimate probable finish before the present year has passed into history. You may differ with that view, that is your privilege, but there is another phase of matters in connection with the war which should be given thoughtful consideration. If one-half of the stories which have been circulated and printed by the press of this and other countries are true, there are hundreds of towns and cities razed to the ground, families scattered to all points of the compass and whatever possessions they may have had before the conflict destroyed or obliterated. Immense sections which formerly offered a living and sustenance to thousands, devastated and uninhabitable; to even bring about partial reconstruction will require years and years of toil; farms where formerly were grown produce enough to satisfy the meagre wants of their owners will hardly be in shape for agricultural purposes, it will take time to remove traces left by the war and as far as immediate results are concerned they must be closely wedded to want of the pinching kind. With the outlook for labor such as lack of finances and indefiniteness entail, what is more probable than serious reflection on the part of the mustered out soldiers. Won't they look at matters with less patriotism than before they suffered the tortures referred to in a previous paragraph? Is it barely probable that after sizing things up and knowing as they must that the burdens which they bore during the war are but the beginning of their task—won't they consider the fact that in order to pay the awful cost of war, they and others who remain must give unheard of financial tribute to their governments. Will they be willing to accept the yoke which means a life of drudgery for them and those dependent on them, or will they swallow the alluring and enticing steamship advertising and come to America, the alleged land of the free and the home of the millionaire. America, to the average European, is a land of sunshine, honey and money, thanks to the tourists who have invaded Europe and scattered their dollars broadcast; and there is little doubt but what at the conclusion of hostilities an invasion of America will take place which will make former immigration figures look puny by comparison.

We of the catering trades may imagine that such immigration will not affect us; we may conclude that men and women unable to speak English will have little chance to become competitors, but a little careful thought and examination of the subject will quickly disclose facts which cannot very well be overlooked. Direct influence may not be apparent, but indirectly a flood of people from Europe means probably more to our allied crafts, more genuine competition than has heretofore existed. It would take pages to even enumerate what we have a right to expect in the matter of immigration, and additional pages to recite what we must do in order to avoid becoming victims of this expected invasion. Having failed to impress our law-makers with the necessity of more stringent exclusion laws, the only thing left for us to depend on is our organizations; and on them we must devote time, energy and patience, to make them better and to induce our non-union fellow craftsmen and craftswomen to become attached to and take an active part in our affiliated local unions. With as near thorough organization as we can bring about we will be better able to determine the rights of those who seek to engage in the industry. We are not opposed to accepting skill and capability, but we are opposed to an invasion of our trades by those who have neither skill or citizenship to boast of. The catering industry of America depends too much on the whims and caprice of the law-makers. As well as being attacked by fanatics, workers at the industry minus the right to vote and thus protect the industry, are a menace to its continuation, and consequently jeopardizes our opportunities for a future livelihood.

This is one of the biggest and most pressing problems of our time. We may not grasp its full significance here and now, but unless we give heed the time is coming, probably sooner than any of the predictions so generously sprinkled in the forepart of this article indicate; and when it does confront us we must be prepared or suffer the consequences.

The old saw that "self-preservation is the first law of nature" is offered as a closing word; if we decline to protect ourselves we cannot expect others to assume the task and finish it properly.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Any person who makes the least pretension to knowing whereof he speaks, recognizes the fact that the membership of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America are engaged in preparing and serving food and drink to such patron or patrons as may come to the establishments where our members are employed, and they cannot help appreciate the further fact that, with mighty few exceptions, every man and woman engaged in the catering industry sells direct or indirectly intoxicating beverages. Some of the culinary workers may be the exceptions noted, but even in the so-called temperance cafes, restaurants or dining rooms, it frequently happens that ale, wine and liquor is used in the preparation of food, so that the statement relative to exceptions holds good to an extent surprising to the uninitiated.

With that view of the allied trades in mind, we propose to offer what we believe is just and merited criticism of any institution which assumes the right to question our moral sphere and unqualifiedly condemns us without the inalienable right of being heard by our peers before judgment is rendered. The institution which employs hundreds of thousands of men and women to preach the gospel of Christianity should be the last to be found guilty of misrepresentation; that it is guilty no one with any sense of fairness or justice will attempt to deny, for hardly an hour or a day passes but one can pick up the newspapers, magazines, trade and church papers and find article after article which give expression and opinion of so-called ministers of the gospel, and invariably they consist in denunciation of the persons directly or indirectly engaged in the vending of beer, wines and liquors. There is seldom any qualifying term or saving phrase, all are indicted and forthwith condemned by the near preachers, and if their wishes were carried out none of us would escape the fiery pits of hell. That may seem like a very intemperate utterance, and yet you, who peruse the publications referred to, must admit that in comparison to some of the statements made by near preachers, we are decidedly modest, in fact, the personification of that word.

The attitude of these near-preachers toward the catering industry employe and employer is one of the peculiar puzzles of present-day problems. Somewhere in the good book there is a quotation which in substance reads, "Bear ye one another's burthen," which in our crude way we interpret to mean that all men and women are members of the human family and that it is the bounden duty of the strong to aid the weak, to assist them to overcome whatever obstacles may lie in their paths, to in fact be truly helpful and considerate. If our humble definition is reasonably accurate and we think it is, the attitude of these near-preachers who unqualifiedly condemn all persons who may vend beer, wine or liquors, is that of unjust judges and not brothers or sisters of that great big family which is admonished to "bear ye one another's burthen."

Assuming, for the sake of clean-cut discussion of the subject that some of our members were what we usually term "bad actors," boys and girls who were going along the paths of unrighteousness and doing those things which decent men and women regard as breaches of social laws, is it complimentary to the alleged men of the cloth, these near-preachers, to make no visible effort to head such poor, unfortunates off and endeavor, by manly persuasion, to convert them to live clean, wholesome lives? Many an unfortunate has been induced to give up lives of immoral tendencies by the sweet cheering word of a clean fellow member of the human family. Innumerable incidents can be recited to prove that statement, and yet these near-preachers instead of bearding the devil in his vicious work, appear to be content to utter unmanly and vicious accusation and condemnation, reaching the unwarranted conclusion that every one connected with the catering industry is a "bad egg" simply because an occasional individual connected with the catering trades has been found lacking in his obligation to society.

Evidently these near-preachers—sky-pilots we prefer to call them—for until they show a disposition to imitate the meek Nazarene, anything but minister of the Gospel is theirs by right, and that honorable title can be won and worn only by worthy men and women. As we started to say, evidently these sky-pilots have taken their theology in meager doses, they have overlooked that part of the good book which reads, "Judge not lest ye be judged;" in fact, there are many wise admonitions in the Bible which these sky-pilot fakers either never read or lack intelligence enough to understand.

Christianity and its disciples has come to a pretty pass when its near-preachers can find nothing in His Word but uncomfotting accusation and unwarranted denunciation.

Possibly we were in error, but for years and years we carried the idea that men of the cloth were evolved from clean thinking, honorable persons who had the image of Him in their hearts and believed that their mission in life was to preach His Word, to carry succor to the afflicted, to help the discouraged and to lead the youth into paths of virtue and truth; we had supposed that from preachers of the Gospel we would secure a greater measure of square dealing than from individuals who had not been privileged to attend the seminaries and theological colleges; we thought, and with some measure of reason, that the admonition, "Go ye into the highways and byways and spread the Gospel of the Brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God," meant something besides a useless platitude. We had been of the opinion that inasmuch as the preacher was the walking delegate of the church, which taught us that God was a just judge, that those who lived by the Gospel would imitate God in his justness and righteousness; that when we said "forgive us our trespasses as we forgive the trespasses of others," it meant each and every one of the human family, that there were no exceptions, not even near-preachers.

When Christ said "Forgive them, my Father, for they know not what they do," he left to mankind the spirit of tolerance, love and forgiveness; he did not rise in the market-place and denounce those who spat in his face; he pitied and forgave them, and oh, how far removed are they whom we call near-preachers from that spirit of compassion and love.

These false-alarm pulpit pounders would convey by their actions that Adam would not have sinned in the Garden of Eden if there had been enough sky-pilots around to organize an Anti-Saloon League. The Garden of Eden would have merited their close attention, for there, so we are taught, was everything to sustain life and make one happy, and that, as intimated, would have meant attention of the Antis had they been on earth at that time. They see no smile worth while that is not given to their kind, and Eden would have had a sign hung on it which read, "Closed by legislation; singing, smiling or laughing is strictly prohibited on or in the vicinity of these grounds."

That paragraph may sound extravagant, but is it more so than what the actions of the near-preachers would lead one to infer; they believe in legislating wings on the multitude, little thinking that if such could be accomplished they would lose their occupation and would be forced to do a man's work among men. But what we are concerned in is their persistent and unwholesome attitude toward the men and women of our allied crafts and their efforts to place us in a class among the wilful and vicious law breakers of the land; their every effort in that direction is accepted by the unthinking who, as yet have not discovered that many of these alleged men of the cloth are false prophets and are really in supplanting attitude before the modern Golden Calf.

They have forgotten the Commandment, "Thou shalt not bear false witness toward thy neighbor," for many of them take the assertions of the Anti-Saloon League mountebanks as equivalent to His Word; they neither delve or dig for facts, and their condemnations are based on false premise.

Man was placed on this earth to enjoy the fruits of his labor, to work out his own salvation, to so act toward his brother that he could in truth say, "I am my brother's keeper"; he who injures him does an injury to me.

In His Book there is nothing which commands men to go through life crucifying the flesh for six days and devoting the Sabbath to lamentations; there is real joy and sunshine in being a loyal, laughing Christian; there is none in following the lead of four flushing sky-pilots who interpret His Word through a dollar mark and gauge brotherhood of man and Fatherhood of God by a measure which never did ring true to other than fanatics, for it was a short measure at the outset and grows less and less by improper use.

"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done," to the real Christian means much more than the pin-headed sky-pilots ever conceived. His Son came to earth and illustrated moral cleanliness and right living. Had Christ taught his followers that the handling of wines and beverages was wrong the present alleged followers in His steps would have foundation for their assault on a legalized industry, but immature minds, such as the average sky-pilot possesses, is never satisfied unless it tries to add something to a finished product.

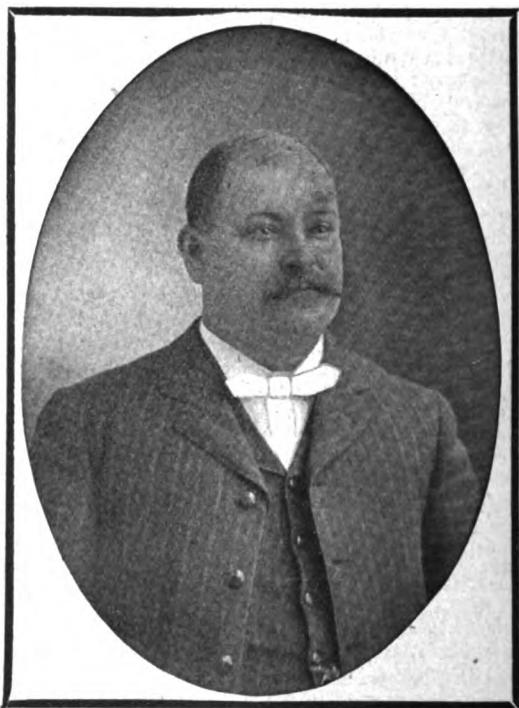

The men and women of our organization hold no medals for being either better or worse than the average male or female workers in any trade or calling; they go about their labor with a cheerfulness and pleasure which evidently annoys the puny-hearted near-preachers. That they may not attend Sabbath service is not to be wondered at; they must possess intelligence to continue as either bartenders, cooks, waiters or waitresses, and if we know our little book, and we think we do, the possession of intelligence marks the finish of faking ministers, for they thrive on the ignorance of their foolish followers.

Our members are not law-breakers, nor are they inclined in that direction; they secure employment with the distinct understanding of being able to render efficient and acceptable service; they are susceptible to orders from their employers, who in the main are decidedly more honorable than to convict and condemn their employes without a hearing; in that respect they differ from the condemning near-preachers. Proportionately, there are just as many scalawags wearing the uniform of preachers as there are among the wearers of catering industry uniforms. Man to man and woman to woman, with the preachers and their followers, we believe we can hold our own. Because we are employed to serve food and drink does not necessarily mean that we are either drunkards or gluttons; there is probably just as much clean living and clean thinking among the members of our International Union as any ministerial association boast of; there are quite as many loyal husbands, faithful sons and loving daughters among our boys and girls as can be found among the near-preachers and their supporters; there are just as many proportionately who lead real Christian lives among our members as those who condemn us and our trades. Our men are just as manly and our women just as womanly as any of the members of the faking preachers congregations. The cheery laugh of baby, the loving kiss of wife, and the sweet hug of dear old mother or father, awakens in the breast of our boys and girls quite as honest responses as ever came from the successors of Adam or Eve.

Once in a great while a minister of the Gospel wakes up and truly investigates the conditions which surround the catering industry, and just then he is forced to acknowledge that the church and its apologies for representatives have been working on the wrong tack, that instead of trying to teach true temperance and clean living, they have been satisfied to let erring souls to plod on whatever path seems easiest, the only solace which they offered was negative in value, for condemning a man before giving him either trial or chance to defend himself, smatters much of what is supposed to have transpired in the Dark Ages. But so few of the men of the cloth have had the gumption to dig underneath, that the four-flushing horde have practically monopolized the field and thus it happens that institutions such as the Anti-Saloon League thrives and grows fat on the offerings of dupes who know no better than what they have been taught to accept without dissent, never to investigate and know from contact what is what.

WILLIAM F. ROBINSON

Former Vice-President of Our International Union.

"Pale death approaches with an equal step, and knocks indiscriminately at the door of the cottage, and the portals of the palace."—HORACE.

Once more we are called upon to record the passing to the great beyond of one of our old, staunch and true labor warriors. Former Vice-president William F. Robinson died after a brief illness Sunday night, February 7, 1915, at his home in Birmingham, Ala., and was buried Tuesday, February 9, 1915, in that city. Late Brother Robinson had occupied the position of secretary of his Local Union 248 almost from its inception, and with the exception of a few months when he was absent from that city, remained the active secretary of Local 248 until his death. Brother Robinson succeeded Vice-president Al Baumberger when he resigned in September, 1906, and continued as a member of the General Executive Board from that time until July 1, 1911, when he retired, having declined to permit his name to be presented for re-election at the Boston convention May, 1911.

As a member of the General Executive Board late Brother Robinson gave time, patience and labor to the disposition of the innumerable problems which he and his colleagues were called on to dispose of; he brought to the board a judicial temperament finely wedded with excellent perseverance and weighed matters with a kindness which showed faith in his fellow-man.

He believed in our International Union, and that belief prompted him to put forth exceptional effort in behalf of the men and women workers of the catering industry.

Brother Robinson was one of those men whom the title lovable-character fitted well—his many deeds of kindness will long be remembered by those who, through misfortune's needs, sought "Bill" for succor; he was generous to the limit, to him all workers were members of the great human family, and none sought his advice or aid without securing what they sought.

In and out of season he worked for the common uplift of the toiler; he was tireless in his endeavors in opposing un-American policies and fanaticism, and lived such a clean, honorable life that his opponents were forced to respect him and fear his strength. He was a strong advocate for his people and proved a giant in times of stress. With a willingness seldom equalled he shouldered burdens, which he carried safely and successfully, and the members of his local, as well as our International Union, are proud of the record which he made.

To his wife, family, relatives and friends, we offer the sympathy and hand of his sisters and brothers of the organization, our International Union, who knew him to love and respect him. We join with all who mourn his going and say that we believe that the world is better for having had our "Bill" Robinson live therein. J. L. S.

LABOR WAR NOT WANTED.

And now the men who brought upon the people of Stockton an industrial war which for six months checked the development of the city and cost employers and employes thousands of dollars are seeking to lay the same burden on the people of Sacramento.

It would seem that the record these industrial Hessians made in Stockton would satisfy them. Peace has just been established there, apparently to the great satisfaction of employers as well as employes. All the costs of the conflict after months of war have not yet been paid.

Profound peace reigns in Sacramento and yet these breeders of dissension are striving to bring about a conflict. They would force on this city a struggle which would cost the merchants and workers thousands of dollars at a time when business conditions are just recovering from the check caused by the war and the tight money market.

Although these promoters of war make the claim that they desire only to bring the employers and employes into harmonious relations, the real explanation of their activity is found in their desire to make money.

Jobless newspaper men are employed to spread war under the guise of peace. Their only interest is to get the money. Of course these men are simply hired by others. They are only the mouth-pieces of men behind the scenes. But they have a large share in inspiring their employers with a desire for war.

It does not seem possible that the employers will permit themselves to be talked into a labor war, particularly when the men chiefly engaged in the talking are purely selfish in their purposes.

They will not pay the costs of the struggle if they succeed in forcing one. On the contrary, they will draw good salaries for assisting in the conduct of the war. The burden will fall on the business men and working men of Sacramento.

The promoters of the struggle will reap the profit.

The foregoing editorial is from the Sacramento (Cal.) Union, December 28, 1914, which, despite its name is not a labor paper. Our members in Sacramento are on the job and will exert every effort to checkmate the trouble aggregation.—Editor MIXER AND SERVER.

WHY ARE GIRLS SO UNGRATEFUL?

Women, it has often been demonstrated, are the unselfish sex. They will sacrifice themselves and all they hold dearest for the sake of making other people happy. They will refuse to count the cost if it is the gain of any one they love. They will give up life and all that makes life worth living with a cheerful smile at the behest of those they want to please.

They are magnificent in this virtue. There is positively no limit to the unselfishness of which a good woman is capable; but even the best of women are not noted for their gratitude.

It is a curious fact, and perhaps it in some measure accounts for it, that people who are generous in bestowing are generally ungrateful. They are so used to self-sacrifice that they don't appreciate sacrifices at their full value when other people make them. They take as a matter of course what selfish people would regard with awe and wonder.

They take a proposal in a dozen different ways. They may shy at it, avoid it, try to escape it. They may refuse it with contempt, with indifference, with indignation; but how often do they feel an emotion of gratitude in connection with it? Nay, even when they accept they are not grateful. Pleased they may be—elated, gratified, filled with rapture; but the emotion of gratitude is the very last one that presents itself to their minds.

What woman was ever grateful to the man who works for her? He may toil and slave, and expend the sweat of his brow to an unlimited extent, and she will never think she has reason to thank him for it. He may work for years to have means to support her; and once those means are secured he may work no less hard to keep the household. She only thinks he is doing a foolish thing in devoting so much time to his business, and she grudges the hours he spends over it, and regards it with hatred as her rival.

No, gratitude is not a feminine virtue. The obligation of a favor received sits lightly on a woman's mind. Instead of being anxious to repay it, she is like the gentleman who thought that one good turn deserves another: and because his neighbor had lent him $2 last week he was entitled to borrow $5 from him today.—Exchange.

OFFICIAL CALL FOR THE EIGHTEENTH GENERAL CONVENTION.

To all Affiliated Locals of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America,
Greeting:

The Eighteenth General Convention of the above-named International Union will convene Monday morning, June 14, 1915, in the city of San Francisco, California, U. S. A.

The opening session will be called to order at 10 o'clock Monday morning, June 14, 1915; at the New Civic Center Auditorium.

All delegates-elect are urged to be on time and thus avoid being reported absent from the initial session. The rules of our conventions in the past required delegates to deposit attendance cards; a similar rule will no doubt operate at the coming convention.

It has been customary to announce that the coming convention will be the most important in the history of our organization. There is little need to emphasize that the Eighteenth General Convention will undoubtedly be as important, if not more so, than any of its recent predecessors. One needs but recall events of quite recent occurrence, especially in the political field, to warrant concluding that the coming gathering will be confronted with problems such as no other conference of representatives from our local unions have been asked to solve. The continued discrimination shown by fanatical advocates of sumptuary legislation, their ceaseless endeavors to curtail the field in which we may find employment at our chosen vocations, added to the depression in industries generally which have caused unprecedented crowding of the unemployed labor market of America, present difficulties of sufficient weight to compel serious deliberation on the part of the men and women who will congregate at our convention, representing an immense army of our allied crafts.

Our International Union, since its last session, has succeeded in converting a fairly good number of non-union workers into trade union adherents who have in turn endeavored to convert others to the cause in which we have enlisted, and while our advance forward was not quite as rapid as all of us would have been pleased to see, we have little foundation upon which to erect reasonable dissatisfaction or to complain of insufficient accretions to our ranks.

Under the laws of our International Union our general conventions are law-making congresses; that fact should be borne in mind when our locals are called on to select from their number the men or women whom they wish to take part in such important gatherings as their legal representatives, for it rests on the character, ability and knowledge of your representatives as to whether good or inferior legislation shall be the outcome of their deliberations.

The delegates to the coming convention should be the most capable which our unions have in their midst. Unions which foist on conventions incompetent representatives admit lack of intelligence and show an unwarranted disregard for the future welfare of our International Union.

An idea of what the coming convention may be called on to handle can probably be gleaned from the proposals submitted and printed for the first time in this number of the MIXER AND SERVER; there may be other proposals offered to the convention. Under our laws, amendments may be offered and considered by consent of a two-thirds vote of the delegates of said convention.

Laws which have done service in the past may be adequate for continued use, there may be changes necessary to strength present provisions, or to modify such legislation as has proved cumbersome or ineffective.

Plans and policies for the incoming term will be subjects of import; ways and means to carry out both must be cared for, and these subjects will necessitate wise judgment on the part of your legal representatives in order that the aims and objects of our movement may be achieved.

Your General Executive Board following in the footsteps of their predecessors, tender, on behalf of our International Union, a fraternal and cordial invitation to all affiliated local unions to elect and send representatives to the Eighteenth General Convention. We hold the view that unceasing attendance on the part of members is necessary for the best interests of local unions, and by a similar token we believe that our locals are in duty bound to attend our general conventions through legally elected delegates from such local unions. Our general conventions echo the sentiment of only such sections of the country as are fully represented by delegates; that fact has been borne emphatically home on several occasions, hence if your local union expects its interests to be cared for by others, it will probably experience as much disappointment as the absentee from local unions, only multiplied considerably. We have no desire to make our membership feel that partiality is shown to attending unions, but we would be unfair to ourselves and the men and women who placed us in position if we were to try to convey the impression that absenteeism is conducive to the benefit of general legislation. In line with our predecessors, we sincerely urge every local union attached to our International Union to put forth every ounce of energy and effort to the end of sending delegates to this coming convention, the larger the attendance, the more locals represented on the floor of the convention, the more widespread will be the application of our ideas of majority rule.

Our conventions meet every two years. Annual meetings were dispensed with in order to enable struggling locals to lay aside sufficient funds to defray the expense of representation. We have reasons to hope, in fact, expect, that the attendance at this convention will outstrip all previous gatherings. With every affiliated local represented by delegates on the floor of this convention it will mean legislation, plans and policy for the coming term, originated and concurred in by majority rule and the utter rout of the charge made against a few previous gatherings of minority legislation for the majority.

We have been assured repeatedly that our local unions in San Francisco have been engaged in perfecting arrangements and planning entertainment for the benefit of those who attend; there is little doubt but what accommodations will match, if not be superior to what we have enjoyed at other convention cities, and we look forward to meeting the best brain and ability which our affiliated locals can boast of possessing.

Particulars with reference to hotel accommodations and rates will be printed in the MIXER AND SERVER in ample time to make suitable reservations. We have been assured by the transportation companies that railway rates and accommodations, stop-off privileges, etc., will be superior to what has ever been offered; that this is to be expected goes without saying; the big expositions in the convention city as well as at San Diego, Cal., will call into employment transportation equipment such as will delight travelers.

To enable our members to quickly grasp the laws on representation and voting strength at our conventions, the following International Union laws are reproduced:

CONVENTION.

Sec. 120. The convention shall be held the second Monday in June, 1913, and biennially thereafter. The convention shall be held in the city designated by the preceding convention.

(a) All proposed amendments to the International Constitution, excepting as provided in Section 174, shall be printed in the official journal of the International Union at least three months previous to the date of a convention; no other amendments will be considered by a convention unless by sanction of a two-thirds vote of the delegates of said convention.

Sec. 121. Every delegate to the convention must be in possession of certified credentials. He must be a member of the International Union for at least twelve consecutive months; excepted from this rule shall be such delegates whose locals have not been in existence for such a length of time.

13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29

Sec. 122. No local union shall be permitted representation in a convention unless it has been chartered at least 45 days and has paid at least one month per capita.

Sec. 123. The expenses of delegates to the convention must be borne by the locals. The expenses of the General President and the Secretary-Treasurer shall be borne by the International Union.

Sec. 124. The representatives of the locals of the convention shall be as follows: Locals of fifty members or less shall be entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for each succeeding fifty members or majority fraction thereof, until a membership of one hundred and fifty has been attained; for each additional five hundred members, or majority fraction thereof, one additional delegate.

Sec. 125. The vote in convention shall be one vote for each fifty members in good standing or majority fraction thereof; provided, no delegate shall cast more than three votes.

Sec. 126. Each local shall notify the General Secretary-Treasurer, at least three weeks before the convention is held, of the names of its delegates, giving address and trade.

Sec. 127. The credentials to the convention must be upon the blanks furnished by the General Secretary-Treasurer, and only such delegates be admitted to the convention as are in possession of credentials to which the seal of the local and the signatures of its chairman and secretary are affixed.

Sec. 128. One-third of the delegates present in the convention shall constitute a quorum.

Sec. 129. The General President and General Secretary-Treasurer shall not accept credentials from any local union as delegate to general convention; they shall represent the International Union at conventions.

Sec. 130. The officers elected at each convention shall assume and perform the duties of their respective offices in accordance with Section 99.

Sec. 131. No proxies shall be allowed in the convention.

Sec. 132. The General Secretary-Treasurer shall prepare for the use of the convention a printed poll-list containing the number of votes the delegates from the local unions are entitled to, based upon the average paid-up membership for the year preceding the convention and ending with the last day of April in the year in which the convention is to be held.

Sec. 133. The convention shall elect representatives to the American Federation of Labor; said representatives to be subject to instructions of the General Executive Board. They shall receive remuneration at the rate of eight ($8.00) dollars per day.

Sec. 134. No delegates shall be seated in a convention from any local unless all per capita tax and other indebtedness which may be owing to the International Union, shall be paid.

Sec. 135. Every city desiring to secure the convention of this International Union shall give notice of this fact not later than two months before the time set for the convention, through the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER. The name of no other city shall be presented, except by a majority vote of the convention.

Careful reading of the foregoing sections is suggested so that no misunderstanding may arise.

Our laws (Section 126) provide for official notification to headquarters of the name, address and trade of delegates elect; the purpose of that law is to permit the general office to transmit the information as to number of delegates expected, to the convention city arrangements committee, to compile convention roll-call, order badges, and innumerable details which can not be closed until information is received from our locals.

While THREE WEEKS may seem a sufficient period of time, we urge our locals to return their duplicate credentials to the general office as quickly as conditions will permit: failure to return duplicate credential may necessitate leaving your delegate's name off the roll-call; this roll-call must be printed earlier than usual on account of the distance between headquarters and the convention city. The hearty co-operation of our local unions will greatly facilitate matters and permit of complete arrangements in advance of convention date.

The following tabulation will enable any local union to calculate the number of delegates it is entitled to and its voting strength on the floor of the coming convention.

In making compilation, calculators should remember that the vote is based on the AVERAGE PAID-UP MEMBERSHIP for the year preceding the convention and ending with the last day of April, 1915: in other words, the membership of May, 1914, to April, 1915, inclusive.

CREDENTIALS FOR THE EIGHTEENTH GENERAL CONVENTION OF THE HOTEL AND RESTAURANT EMPLOYEES' INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE AND BARTENDERS' INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA HAVE BEEN FORWARDED TO ALL LOCALS AFFILIATED. IF YOUR SECRETARY FAILED TO SECURE SAME, THE GENERAL OFFICE SHOULD BE ADVISED SO THAT ANOTHER SET MAY BE SENT. LOCAL UNIONS WHICH PROPOSE TO SEND MORE THAN ONE DELEGATE SHOULD MAKE APPLICATION FOR ADDITIONAL CREDENTIALS AT ONCE.

Reiterating our cordial and fraternal invitation to every affiliated local union to elect and send their full quota of delegates to the Eighteenth General Convention, we need the services of the most capable, brainy and willing workers which your union boasts of having; by sending such you will enhance the value of your own union as well as aid in making our International Union the success which we are all aiming at and anxious to secure. With the general and genuine co-operation of your representatives we hope to make the Eighteenth General Convention an unqualified success, a convention which will leave its mark sufficiently high as to merit taking it as a model for succeeding gatherings under the auspices of our International Union. The date is June 14th, this year, 1915, and the place San Francisco, California, U. S. A. Come to SAN FRANCISCO and help in the good work briefly outlined in this call.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
President.

CONVENTION ARRANGEMENTS

The following information is communicated to us by Brother Dan P. Regan, secretary of the Convention Arrangements Committee for the Eighteenth General Convention at San Francisco, Cal., U. S. A., June 14, 1915:

The New Civic Center Auditorium, one of the best buildings for convention purposes, has been selected by the 1915 Convention Committee as the hall in which our International will hold the Eighteenth General Convention.

The 1915 Convention Committee has selected the Hotel Sutter as the headquarters hotel. This is one of the best appointed and best equipped hotels in the city. Popular prices will prevail.

Delegates coming to the Eighteenth General Convention should communicate with Dan P. Regan, secretary of the Convention League, and make arrangements for hotel reservations. The number of reservations secured at the Hotel Sutter are not sufficient to accommodate all of the delegates and their friends who will accompany them, and as June is the big month here in regard to conventions, it is well that delegates should take the precaution of securing rooms in advance.

Bro. Dan P. Regan's address is 115 Valencia street, San Francisco, Cal.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION

In compliance with the laws of our International Union, the following proposals offered by the unions whose names are attached, are submitted for the first printing, they will be printed in the April and May numbers, thus carrying into effect the provisions of our laws.

The object sought to be attained by our laws, is to present all suggested changes or additions and enable the general membership to peruse and consider, and if they so desire offer for publication argument for or against any or all proposals. Members who desire to discuss any of the proposals are requested to take pains in composing matter for publication, write plainly and avoid crowding too much matter on a single sheet of paper. Contributors are requested to confine their discussion to the merits or demerits of the subject under discussion. Write on one side of the paper only and if your contribution covers more than one page number the pages consecutively; type-written copy is preferable as it materially lessens chance for errors.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 15, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 593 submits the following amendments for the consideration of the next general convention.

Fraternally submitted.

Digital
THOS. P. Woods,
Secretary Local 593.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

To strike out Section 18 and insert a new Section to read as follows:

Section 18. A member suspended for non-payment of dues may be re-admitted to any local of his craft upon the payment of the reinstatement fee of the local under whose jurisdiction he may be working.

Provided that all fines or assessments have been paid to the local by which he was suspended.

The local that suspends him to be notified at the time when application was made for re-admission.

Amend Section 22, Paragraph "A." By striking out the words (suspended or) after the word (member) and the words (suspended or) after the word (was).

Amended paragraph to read as follows:

Section 22, Paragraph "A." Any member expelled from any local is ineligible to membership in any other local of this International, except by consent of the local by which he was expelled.

Amend Section 23. By striking out the words (suspended or) after the word (admitting).

Amended section to read as follows:

Section 23. The names of all suspended or expelled members, must be reported to the General Secretary, locals admitting expelled members must on being notified thereof, suspend such members until full investigation has been made or stand suspended by the International Union.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 20, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, International Secretary-Treasurer, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In submitting a proposition to strike out Section 18 of the International Constitution, and also to change Sections 22 and 23, I have in mind the necessity of having all three Sections read alike, so as to conform to each other.

I would like also to give my views of these necessary changes in order that the general membership may thoroughly understand what the intent of these proposals really are.

For example, if a member of Local 593 for instance, working in Minneapolis was suspended for non-payment of dues, left that city, and went to Chicago and found work or saw the chance of getting a job, went to Local 35, paid the reinstatement fee of Local 35, he would have the same privileges as if the reinstatement fee were sent to Local 593.

This rule would work both ways but the home local would have the advantage, as under the present by-laws a member works the balance of the month before the home local derives any benefit, and in some cases these benefits have been won only after a long hard fight.

It should be an understood thing that under the present by-laws, any local has the privilege to have their reinstatement fee conform to these new proposals, or, if necessary, have a special fee for members coming into the local under this head, provided that it is in accord with Section 62 of the International by-laws.

I have found after thirteen years' experiment that secretaries as a rule find it easier and more convenient to collect a reinstatement fee for the home local than to collect and send it to another local, also that the majority of suspended members take the same point of view, particularly in regard to men employed in first class hotels in cities where they are not thoroughly organized.

The change in these sections would be equally beneficial to all, as I think it would add an incentive to locals to get out and rustle up all old members, thereby deriving the benefit instead of sending it to another local. As it is necessary to write for a reinstatement price on all suspended members from other locals, time is lost, but all these objections would be overcome if these proposals meet with the approval of the next general convention.

Here I pause to ask why a local should have a larger reinstatement fee for persons outside their jurisdiction? Probably because it is thought to be much easier for another secretary to collect it.

Trusting that the new propositions will meet the approval of the members, I beg to remain,

Fraternally yours,

THOS. P. Woods,
Secretary Local 593.

CLEVELAND, O., February 5, 1915.

Be it resolved by this convention of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A. that we add to our International constitution a new section, to be known as Section 14 and to read as follows:

"Members of this International having been in continuous good standing for at least twenty-five years shall thereafter be exempt from further payment of dues and assessments without losing any right or privilege of active membership, even though they should adopt a vocation not covered by the charter of this International."

Respectfully submitted by Local 106,

THOMAS S. FARRELL,
President.
JOHN BOOKJANS,
Secretary.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 11, 1915.

Jere L. Sullivan, Gen'l Secretary:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Please find enclosed resolutions adopted by this local at our last regular meeting held on February 10, 1915, said resolutions to be published in the MIXER AND SERVER, according to the International Constitution.

Fraternally yours,

COOKS' HELPERS' UNION, LOCAL 110,
ALFRED PRICE, President.
JAMES LEWIS, Secretary.

Resolution No.....

Local 110 of San Francisco, Cal., believing Section 88 of the International constitution to be discriminating in its character and a menace to the good and welfare of a local that may have a few members less than a sister local where a controversy between said locals is to be acted upon by the local joint executive board to which both locals are affiliated. Therefore, Local 110 offers a resolution (to be considered by the 1915 convention of the I. U.) to amend Section 88 of the International constitution, to read as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each delegate. No delegate can cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances.

"There shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint board.

DENVER, COLO., February 23, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, General Secretary:

Enclosed find amendment to Section 64 of the International by-laws and constitution. This is one amendment that I think should be adopted for the protection of local unions, as the general office will know if a local has its officers bonded. I think it will stop the absconding of officers handling funds. If there is anything that will make this amendment stronger kindly let me know and I will submit it to the convention.

Hoping this is satisfactory, with best wishes, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

F. WESSEL,

Secretary Local 8.

The following amendment to Section 64 is offered for the consideration of the convention to be held June 14th at San Francisco:

"Section 64 amended to read as follows: It shall be mandatory on the part of all affiliated locals to bond their treasurers and other officers who handle funds. Bonds to be procured by the local through the International secretary-treasurer. A penalty of Ten ($10) Dollars shall be imposed on local unions failing to apply to the International secretary-treasurer for bonds before installing officers handling funds."

Submitted by

F. WESSEL,
Secretary Local 8.

OAKLAND, CAL., February 6, 1915.

There is hereby added to the constitution a new section to be numbered Section 178 and to read as follows:

Section 178. The rights and powers not delegated to the International Union by this constitution, nor prohibited by it to the locals or the members of the International Union are reserved to the locals and to the members respectively.

Section 144 of the constitution is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 144. A copy of the official Journal shall be sent to each member of the International Union, and the secretary of each local shall be required to send the names and addresses of all the members of his local to the general secretary-treasurer every six months so that every member shall receive a copy of the Journal whenever issued, but this provision shall not be construed to authorize the secretary-treasurer to refuse or neglect to forward a copy of the Journal to every member at the expiration of said period of six months upon the failure of the secretary of the local to furnish the names and addresses herein required; provided, however, that the secretary-treasurer shall have authority at any time to cease forwarding a copy of the Journal to a member after receiving notice from the Postal Department that mail cannot for any reason be delivered to such address. A bound volume of the MIXER AND SERVER shall be sent to each local annually; it shall be mandatory for locals to purchase same.

JOHN KENNEDY, Secretary,
Local 525.

OAKLAND, CAL., February 8, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Find enclosed amendments to constitution, proposed by Local 31, of Oakland, California.

C. P. HIBBAND, President.
W. A. HOSKINS, Secretary.

Section 176 of the constitution is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 176. All laws, rules and regulations, or parts thereof, in conflict with this constitution shall be null and void in so far as they conflict.

C. P. HIBBAND, President.
W. A. HOSKINS, Secretary.

There is hereby added to the constitution a new section to be numbered Section 177 and to read as follows:

Section 177. Nothing contained in this constitution shall be held to limit the authority of the International Union and the members thereof with the sanction of the American Federation of Labor to change or alter the name, jurisdiction, form or manner of organization and affiliation of the constituted crafts, locals and members of the International Union.

C. P. HIBBAND, President.
W. A. HOSKINS, Secretary.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 19, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, Sec'y-Treas., Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Enclosed please find five amendments to the International constitution, submitted by delegates-elect Canny and Battles, which have been approved by the local, for publication in the official Journal.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
COOKS' UNION, LOCAL 44,
JOHN HAWKINS, President
ALFRED E. STIMER, Sec'y-Treas.

Resolved to amend Section 43 of the constitution relating to jurisdiction over lunch, oyster and steam-tablemen to read:

Section 43. Cooks' locals, or mixed locals where cooks have no separate local, shall have jurisdiction over lunchmen, oystermen and steam-tablemen, regardless of whether such work is in a kitchen or dining room.

H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A.
Approved by Cooks' Union, Local 44.

JOHN HAWKINS, President
ALFRED E. STIMER, Sec'y-Treas.

Resolved to amend Section 83 of the constitution relating to proprietors, to read as follows:

Section 83. Whenever a member of the International Union becomes a proprietor he may retain membership in a local, provided that he does not attach himself to any organization known as a proprietors' organization. The payment of dues to locals by proprietors shall be left to the discretion of the locals. Any member of a local whose name is attached to any license where the sale of liquor transpires is a proprietor. Proprietors working at the trade shall be entitled to all the rights of the local union of which they are members, except that they shall not be eligible to election either as delegates to the conventions or to any office within the gift of a local union. Proprietors not working at the trade shall have neither voice nor vote, nor hold office of any kind.

Fraternally submitted,

MICHAEL H. CANNY,

Delegate-elect to the 18th Int. Convention of the
H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A.

Approved by Cooks' Union, Local 44.

JOHN HAWKINS, President

ALFRED E. STIMER, Sec'y-Treas.

A resolution to abolish withdrawal cards.

Whereas, the system of withdrawal cards is being constantly violated and constitutes a ready means for the evasion of our laws; and,

Whereas, those who do not work at the business may readily become reinstated upon becoming subject to the jurisdiction of the International Union, and there is no particular hardship in enforcing such a system of reinstatement to take the place of withdrawal cards;

Therefore be it resolved, That Sections 77, 78, 81, 82 and 84 be and are hereby repealed.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 17, 1915.

A subsidiary amendment to the International constitution relative to (Section 15) covering the United States and its possessions where charters are issued:

"All persons making application in this International of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of America in this United States or its possessions, who have not already obtained their First Citizen Papers, upon being initiated into a local in this U. S. or its possessions, shall pay One ($1.00) Dollar in excess of local's initiation fee, said One ($1.00) Dollar to be retained by said local where member was initiated; if said One ($1.00) Dollar is not sufficient for cost of securing First Citizen Paper for said newly initiated member, then said member will be assessed twenty-five (25c) cents per month in excess of all dues and assessments that may be levied on or by said local where member was initiated in U. S. or its possessions till the amount has been acquired for the cost of procuring First Citizen Papers. Such money collected will be permissible to transfer from one local to another when shown to be for said purpose. Upon initiation into a local no member will be compelled to renounce his Alliance to his Flag or Country, yet his pronounced refusal to obtain his First Citizen Papers deprives him of being eligible to hold any office in this International or its affiliated locals within U. S. or its possessions; he shall also forfeit such money at the expiration of one year except he can show that he has not made his livelihood in the U. S. or its possessions since the time of his initiation into a local in U. S. or any of its possessions. No member's money to be forfeited by monthly suspension from any local in U. S. or its possessions for the period of one year. Six month's grace will be granted to members initiated into a local in U. S. or its possessions upon proof that they have not made their livelihood in the U. S. or its possessions, and no further extension of time will be allowed and said member's money is considered forfeited. The secretary of a local in his monthly report shall acquaint the General Office of newly initiated members whose money is deposited in a local for the procuring of First Citizen Papers. All such money forfeited to be forwarded to the General Executive Board of this International and to be apportioned as following: One per cent of forfeited money to defray the general expenses of this International; five per cent to be deposited in the death benefit fund of this International; eighty-five per cent to be set aside as a fund to be known as a Culinary Union's Home Fund, for the purpose of buying land and thereon build a home for aged and infirm members of culinary crafts who have been in good standing in this International of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of America for eighteen consecutive years. Said land, when being purchased, to be voted on by a referendum of the locals of this International" (In conformity with Section 120, International).

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I beg to enclose a constitutional amendment, proposed by Local 30, which was unanimously adopted in the regular meeting of this local on February 10, 1915.

Kindly publish same in the MIXER AND SERVER as per requirement and oblige,

Fraternally yours,

HUGO ERNST,
Secretary-Treasurer Local 30.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROPOSED BY LOCAL NO. 30.

A resolution to amend the constitution by amending Section 76 thereof, relating to manner of crediting dues of traveling members.

Resolved. That Section 76 of the Constitution be amended to read as follows:

"Section 76. When a traveling member deposits his card before the seventh day of any month, the dues of such member for said month shall belong to the local accepting the card, and such dues if already paid and other dues if paid in advance, shall be remitted to said local upon demand therefor being made under seal to the local which is in possession of such dues."

HUGO ERNST,

Secretary-Treasurer Local 30.

A. C. ROSE President.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., February 12, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Inclosed find two proposed changes to our International Constitution in the form of resolutions to be presented at the Eighteenth General Convention:

To the Eighteenth General Convention, Greeting:

Whereas, Section 24 of the International Constitution has never been enforced, and,

Whereas, it has been the means of causing quite a few of the locals to have a very hard time in enforcing same. Therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Eighteenth General Convention in session at San Francisco, Cal., June 14 to 19, 1915, that Section 24 of the International Constitution be stricken from said constitution.

Proposed by W. M. Spear, Local 27.

To the Eighteenth General Convention, Greeting:

Whereas Section 88 of our International Constitution, which reads as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each member that per capita tax is paid on; said vote to be cast in equal proportions by its delegates. No delegate can cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances. There shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint executive board."

Whereas, the above section has caused so much wrangle and dispute in the various cities among our crafts, therefore be it

Resolved, that said Section 88 be changed to read as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each delegate present; no delegate shall cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances; there shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint executive board."

Proposed by W. M. Spear, Local 27.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of William Doherty, chef, who left Boston, Mass. about fourteen years ago, went to Baltimore, Md., presumably to work at the trade in one of the hotels of that city. Native of Ireland; married to Mary Quinlan, four children surviving; family still residing in Boston. Information with reference to the foregoing will be gratefully received by the family. Address Mr. John W. Conley, eighth vice-president, 183 Court street, Boston, Mass.

NEWARK, N. J., February 18, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Kindly insert the following in the MIXER AND SERVER:

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of C. A. Schroeder, a cook, will confer a favor by notifying Cooks' Local 294, of Newark, N. J.

Fraternally yours,

H. MAERTENS,
 Special Organizer Cooks' Local 294.

SCRANTON, PA., Jan. 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The accompanying communication is submitted for publication. There is little need for me to make comment, unless it might be to say that wherever the MIXER AND SERVER reaches the letter may help others to look before leaping.

P. J. CANAVAN, Sec. Local 134.

To the Officers and Members of the Scranton Central Labor Union:

GENTLEMEN—Some time ago I wrote an article which appeared in the Bookbinders' Magazine, official organ of the Bookbinders, in which I made slurring remarks about the delegates to the Central Labor Union and the members of the Brewery Workers' Union, to wit: "Why are we compelled to stand shoulder to shoulder with moral degenerates from the Brewery Workers and Bartenders' Union, to affiliate with them and call them brothers?" Further I said: "Let us make it possible for a decent man to walk in a Labor Day parade without being obliged to trail along behind a brewery wagon like a quarry slave scourged to his dungeon, or walk in the same line with a lot of MORAL DEGENERATES who are too lazy and unprincipled to engage in an honorable occupation."

All this and more I said, which reflected seriously upon the manhood of those men, and I now confess, after having had time to investigate more thoroughly, that I had no grounds for making such charges; that I never learned of any of the men whom I so basely accused being guilty of any act which would in any manner make them unfit to parade or walk with decent men. I therefore apologize for what I said and the groundless accusations which I made. I further realize that as a consistent union man and one who should, above all others, have acted fairly, that I failed to do so, and that I am deserving of the censure which such unfair, unwarranted and unjust action deserves.

I have no specific instance to cite which would in any manner justify me in making such charges or dumping such odium as I dumped upon those men. I never knew them to do a wrong act, and I have never learned of any of them doing anything which a decent man would hesitate to do. Therefore, I offended grievously against the men, but more particularly against the labor movement, when I said, without possessing the slightest evidence, that under its protecting folds it harbored degenerates, knowingly or otherwise.

I also realize, and the realization came to me after I made the charges, that I did not act either justly or fairly with the men against whom I tried to point the finger of scorn. The article in question was uncalled for, there was no ground or foundation for it and I should never have written it.

I sincerely hope the officers and delegates will accept this apology which may help to right the great wrong I did the men whom I so basely accused.

(Signed) W. J. ARMSTRONG.

WILLIAM F. ROBINSON—AN APPRECIATION.

By WILL L. BORK, of Local 312, Chattanooga, Tenn.

On Sunday, February 7th, a message flashed over the wires to us from a neighboring city, stating that our life-long friend and co-worker, William F. Robinson, of Birmingham, Ala., was dead.

The waters of the laurel fringed mountain creek of another life has reached the sea. A shadow deep and dark surrounds us on receipt of this saddest of all sad messages, and silently with tear-dimmed eyes and deep emotion we mourn the loss of our faithful, loyal friend. This broad, liberal, tolerant man; this loving father, devoted husband and friend to man, has discharged life's duties and answered the call from the mysterious beyond. Just as the sun's rays crossed the lofty mountain crags he loved so well, the angel of death kissed his eyelids to sleep.

The dead needs no stately marble shaft to perpetuate his memory, for towering above all such "vanities of the dead" is the living testimonial of his bereaved friends and grateful co-workers. They knew and loved this kindly, sympathetic man. His gold was in the sunset, his hopes were in the skies.

In his private life he was above reproach; he lived for man and womankind. It was his belief that in "casting bread upon the waters it would be returned to him many days hence." He was a devout trades unionist, and few men served that cause more diligently or accomplished so much in their locality for the upbuilding of their fellowman. He was no partisan; his heart was large enough for organized and unorganized alike; he believed that the logical for the organized was among the unorganized; he loved all mankind and his life was full of kindly deeds, and few men gave so much of their time to aid and cheer their fellows who were stumbling, overburdened along life's highway; he loved to render assistance and to extend the helping hand, and untold numbers bear testimony in their hearts to the ministrations of this kindly man. He did not belong to the tribe of the self-righteous; he did not sit on the scorners' bench, nor hurl the cynic's ban, but lived in a house by the side of the road and was a friend to man. He searched for the hidden virtues of his fellowman and sang their praises; his creed was love for his fellowman and justice to all irrespective to creed, color or previous conditions; he hated shams, detested superstition, and with the finger of scorn pointed out mocked modesty and hypocrisy. He spent his life helping others to secure conditions for the betterment of themselves and their families, and shared their sorrows and their joys. He was a man of character—I mean by that, stability, fixedness of purpose. Trades unionism was his ideal and in that he rose above the petty trickery so common among those who sacrifice the good of all concerned for their own selfish ambitions. He was a builder of men and institutions, and during his long career as a unionist his personal ambitions never prompted him to draw one nail nor strike one note of discord that would have a tendency to weaken the superstructure of our great international organization. He was honored with office in our international as a representative of the middle southland, and done his best to serve us, and in course of time asked to be relieved, giving as his reasons that others were available who he believed could serve us better. This kindly man and friend was possessed with those elements of human life that measure our purpose and characters, our aims and our destinies; the warp and woof of our being that gives stamina and stability to life and lift to that high plane of moral, social and intellectual excellency so necessary to the common good of all. Such a man was the dead. He was not an orator, and only under the most pressing circumstances did he speak on the floor at our conventions. He did not wish to appear that which he was not; however, he was a student of human nature, a judge of men and a recognized organizer of his fellows. He was of rustic, pioneer stock, and blazed the way through unknown industrial forests to lead, but never followed; he was at all times kind and thoughtful; to win the confidence of his fellows his weapon was sympathy and love. No taint or touch of malice was in his blood. To him his fellowman was not wholly bad; within the heart of each he searched for virtues and sang their praise.

Men are fond in the abstract of the high, the lofty, the ideal; yet, when it comes down to the measurement of mankind's worth it is only human to measure with the tape-line of results. Measured by this standard the dead "filled his saddle." Peace to the dust of this honest, loyal, kindly man, and may his memory entwine about us of the Southland as the creeping vine clings to the crags of the towering mountain peaks, where he first saw the light of day.

CHEER UP.

If you have an old lead dime,
Pass it on.
Do not fuss and waste good time;
Pass it on.
You may feel real mean, it's true,
But in just a week or two
It will come right back to you.
Pass it on.

—Cincinnati Enquirer.

If you have a good umbrell',
Pass it on.
'Tisn't yours, you know full well;
Pass it on.
If you know just where you got it,
From your recollection blot it;
Some wet day the owner'll spot it,
Pass it on.

BUFFALO, N. Y., February 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February:

On February 9th, I started for St. Louis. Met Vice-President Foster at Decatur and went over several matters touching on the situation in the State of Illinois. Arrived in St. Louis on the 10th and was met at the station by Brothers Lyons, Wieseman and Miller, of Local 51; Scully, of Local 20; Huddleston, of Local 203, and Sister Walsh, of Local 249. After exchanging greetings, I was hustled into a buzz wagon and under the directions of Homer Ziegler, we headed for the farm. However, the pace set was too hot and the machine gave out and while waiting for another machine, Brother Lyons made a raid on a delicatessen store and blew himself to a brick of cheese, but Brother Miller said he had to foot the bill. We finally reached the farm and an elegant dinner was served and after partaking of a little other refreshments we returned to the city and attended a meeting of Local 249, which was presided over by Sister Minnie Boundary. I had also planned to attend the meeting of Local 20, but on account of the train that I arrived on being two hours late, their meeting had adjourned.

On the 11th, in company with Brother Lyons, I visited East St. Louis and had the pleasure of listening to Brother Hunter Keith give an interesting review of the deadlock on the speakership at Springfield, the "Wets" and "Drys" fighting for supremacy, the "Wets" finally succeeding in electing their candidate. In the afternoon, along with Brother Keith, we journeyed to Belleville, and had a very interesting visit with the officers of Local 117; refreshments were also served. In the evening we returned to East St. Louis and accepted the hospitality of Brother Keith.

On the 12th, I visited the headquarters of Locals 20, 51, 203 and 249.

On the 13th, to Jefferson City, where I was met by Brothers Lindley, Blume, Morgan, Donnell and Huegel. Called on several of the members and took up the question of pending legislation at the Capital. Anyone visiting Jefferson City, should make inquiries of Secretary Blume anent Washington Park; nuf sed.

On the 14th to Kansas City. Was met by Brother Anderson and after taking care of the inner man, went to the headquarters of Local 420, and had the pleasure of addressing a special meeting of that local. After the meeting adjourned, accompanied by Brothers Anderson, Hiles and others, we attended a meeting of Industrial Council, where the courtesy of the floor was extended to me. It was pleasing to note so many of our members present at the said Council meeting. It shows that they are interested in their work and are taking no chances on letting the "Drys" slip something over on them.

On the 15th, I visited St. Joseph. Was met by Brothers Widman, Miles, Theisen, Francis, Swarhouse and Hastings. What that bunch did to me is a caution. I believe that we visited every barboy in the town and finished up with a meeting in the evening and some more visits. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

On the 16th, I returned to Kansas City. Attended a meeting of Local 19, presided over by Brother John Ringler. The meeting was very well attended and our boys were very much interested in the review that I gave them of the conditions that are surrounding our International Union at the present time.

Attended a meeting of Local 266, presided over by Brother Franklin. Brothers Franklin, Hiles, Anderson, Ringler and several other members addressed the meeting, as well as yours truly, and it was pleasing to see the harmony that is existing between our various organizations in that city, each being concerned about the welfare of his sister local and willing to render any aid that will bring about success. The cooks, waiters, waitresses and bartenders are all doing fine work and we can look forward to seeing Kansas City one of the best organized cities under our jurisdiction before many moons go by.

Held a conference with some of the officers of Local 503 and went over several problems that are confronting their organization at this time. Sister Sarah Green is making a hard fight against a certain restaurant on Twelfth street, and I feel satisfied that they will have the place lined up before this report reaches our members. They went into court and had an injunction restraining them from picketing, modified, so that they could proceed to picket against this establishment in a peaceful manner and believe me, those girls know how to picket and they cannot help but succeed.

From Kansas City I was to go to Omaha and try and get the bartenders back in line, but received word that my presence in Des Moines was desired immediately and I proceeded direct to that city.

Upon arriving in Des Moines, I was met by Brothers Forseman and Lucas and the conditions that I found in that city were surely deplorable. All the saloons in the town closed and one hundred and eighty-six members out of employment and no likelihood of them ever opening up again, at least not for some time. It was surely discouraging to see the members applying for traveling or withdrawal cards, most of them intending to leave the city, but knew not where they were apt to land. A number of them disposing of their household belongings for little or nothing, in order to get them off of their hands, the thought struck me, that if some of our barboys that are favoring the segregating of our International Union, could witness a scene of this kind, whether they would not be satisfied in their own mind, that the segregating of the bartenders is coming last enough by the process of the civil laws, without them endeavoring to urge it on by other means.

The city of Des Moines was lost to us and our efforts were directed in trying to save the State; there was a bill before the House of Representatives for the repeal of the "Mulct Law." The repeal of this law placed the State back in the "State-wide Prohibition Column," the repeal having already passed the Senate. The following representatives of our local unions in the State of Iowa were in attendance at a conference held in the Labor Temple on the 17th, in the city of Des Moines: Local 527, Dubuque, Brothers Draese, Calahan and Dally; Local 535, Keokuk, Brothers Blaisdell and Riley; Local 518, Fort Dodge, Brother Calahan; Local 382, Boone, Brother Rose; Local 357, Sioux City, Brother Gibson. It was the sense of the conference that they ask for a hearing before the committee on "Suppression of Intemperance," and if the bill passed the House, to apply to the Governor for a hearing. An appeal was then made to the House and by a vote of 42 to 33 a public hearing before the House was granted. All of the above named representatives addressed the House, along with the President of the Iowa State Federation of Labor and yours truly, but the House the following morning passed the repeal bill by an overwhelming majority. We appealed to the Governor for a hearing and it was granted and the same appeal was made to him, all of the above named representatives, along with yours truly, addressing his Excellency, all to no avail, as he later signed the bill, which places Iowa in the "Dry" column on January 1, 1916.

While in the city of Des Moines, I was the guest of Local 247 at a dinner, at which the following members were in attendance: Brothers Benson, Lucas, Forseman, Sweeney, Pletscher, Murphy, Hupp, Linnane and Freeborn, and which was very much enjoyed. I also had the esteemed honor of accepting the hospitality of Vice-President and Mrs. McCurdy, and words fail me in trying to express my appreciation of that kindness.

On the 19th, to Minneapolis, and I was met by Vice-President Hoffman and President De Lapp of Local 152, and Secretary Woods of Local 593. Attended a meeting of Local 458. The meeting was addressed by Vice-President Hoffman, Secretary Sinton, yours truly, and others. The members were very much interested in the various addresses. Local 458 has been making excellent progress and they are not going to rest until they have a one hundred per cent organization and what is more, they have the material to do it with.

To St. Paul, in company with Vice-President Hoffman and Secretary Sinton, we visited the headquarters of Local 408 and held a conference with some of its officers and members, also the headquarters of Local 287 and met several of their officers and members, and after a little talk and some refreshments, we were hustled into a gasoline car and under the directions of Brothers Johnson, Stone and McGlogan, we went out scouting for the Blue Button boys, and we met several of them and finished up at the thirst parlors of Brother Biersdorf. Did we enjoy our visit? Every minute of it and what more, those boys in St. Paul know how to do things and they are making good. You can always find Brother Hentges on the job.

On the 21st, attended a meeting of Local 152. The attendance was good and the members are very much interested in the various campaigns going on through the country, on the "Wet" and "Dry" question and they are alert to the conditions confronting them in their own State, where the legislature has passed the "County Option Law" and they are doing everything in their power to prevent it from receiving the approval of the Governor. Local 152 has a good, progressive bunch of boys and when they start out to do anything, they usually succeed. Local 593 is making fine headway. The business of the organization is being very ably carried on by Secretary Woods. I was very sorry to learn of the illness of Sister Parks Riordan. I sincerely trust that she will rapidly recover her usual good health.

To Rock Island, where I was met by Brothers Wynn and Ivins, I was hustled into a buzz wagon and away to a hotel and after partaking of a little food, we were joined by brother Lage and set out for Davenport, which is in the jurisdiction of Local 850. On our return a visit to the Rock Island Arsenal was enjoyed and then we proceeded to pay our respects to the boys in Rock Island. In the afternoon I had the pleasure of addressing a special meeting. Up to this time Commissioner Ivins, Secretary Wynn and Treasurer Lage had kept me so busy that I had not had an opportunity to get introduced to my room at the hotel and as a delegation from Local 639 had arrived to escort me over to Moline, I begged to be excused for a few minutes in order to polish up a bit and in a short while thereafter I found myself speeding on to the city of Moline, under the escort of Brothers Rangstrom, Postom and Young. In the evening I addressed a meeting of Local 639, which was presided over by President Watts.

Thence to Chicago, where I was met by Vice-President Maloney and a delegation representing Locals 35, 456, 507, 649, and 865. Was the guest of Vice-President Maloney and Brothers Ebeling and Frakes, at dinner and in the evening I had the pleasure of accepting the hospitality of Locals 456, 507 and 649. The balance of my time in the city was taken up in trying to adjust various matters of interest to our membership in that city. I was very sorry that I had to disappoint the Cooks' local, having promised Brother Ebeling that I would address the meeting, but circumstances made it impossible for me to get there.

Decision No. 575.

January 28, 1915.

MR. E. L. HILES, Secretary-Treasurer L. J. E. B., 1815 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 22nd, asking for a decision on the following:

"On January 9, 1914, a restaurant was placed upon the unfair list by the L. J. E. B. On December 29, 1914, it was decided by the L. J. E. B. to call out all the members working in the said house. Members of Locals 19 and 503 came out, but Local 266, at their regular meeting the following night voted not to call their members out, claiming that the L. J. E. B. had no right to order a strike or to call any of their members out without the consent of their local and without providing for strike benefits. The L. J. E. B. contended that they had jurisdiction over all strikes where more than one local was involved and at a meeting held January 7, 1915, they requested Local 266 to call out their members and at a special meeting of Local 266 the request was complied with and the members ordered out. However there appears some doubt as to the authority of the L. J. E. B. in matters of this character and they desire a decision on the following:

"How far does the powers of the L. J. E. B. extend in a case of this kind?

"Who has autonomy where more than one craft is involved in a strike or lockout?

"Has any local the right to refuse to call their members out where the L. J. E. B. has directed them to do so?"

Section 157. "To the end that strikes may be less frequent and more effective, this Union will render financial support only to such strikes as have received the sanction of the General Executive Board before being ordered. This section shall not be construed to deprive any local union of the right to strike whenever they feel their interests can only be served by such course; provided that any local union ordering such strike does so entirely upon its own resources and risk, and has no claim upon the General Union for financial aid or upon other branches for financial or sympathetic strike support; and further provided, that no member of this union be permitted to accept employment in the department where such a strike exists."

Article 5, of the by-laws governing L. J. E. B.'s is as follows: "The granting of 'Bar Cards' and 'House Cards' rests exclusively with the Board where members of more than one craft are employed, and no local shall have the right to declare a strike against any place where such cards are displayed, except by consent of the Board."

Article 7 reads as follows: "Boycotts and strikes which may be ordered by the Board shall be handled by a strike board, consisting of the Treasurer of the Board and the Business Agents of the locals, under the direction of the board."

From the reading of the above, it is plainly shown that where more than one branch of the craft is employed, that neither branch has a right to declare a strike without the consent of the L. J. E. B., and if they do so without the consent of the General Executive Board, they are not entitled to any financial or sympathetic support.

Section 158 gives the General Executive Board the right to assume full jurisdiction over any strike or lockout that has received its sanction, and while Article V of the by-laws of the L. J.

E. B. does not set forth that right as clearly as does Section 158, yet it says that no local shall have the right to declare a strike against any place where more than one branch of the craft are employed, and the only inference that can be drawn from that is, that when the consent of the L. J. E. B. is asked to call a strike where there are two or more branches of the craft employed and that consent is granted by the said board, that action practically carries with it the right of the board to assume jurisdiction over that strike and in assuming jurisdiction, they are vested with the same powers that the General Executive Board or its authorized representative would be vested with, in the event that they assumed jurisdiction and which power and authority would authorize them to order out all branches of our craft that were employed in any establishment where a strike had been declared in accordance with our laws. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 576.

February 1, 1915.

MR. L. HEISHMAN, Secretary, Local 405, 625 Pine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 29th ult., wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"The local passed a resolution directing that each member purchase $1.00 worth of tickets, the proceeds to be added to the local treasury. Some members refused to purchase them and a resolution was passed directing that a settlement for the said tickets must first be made before any further dues will be accepted from a member; the question is now raised that the action of the local not being part of the by-laws, cannot be enforced. Can the local union insist upon the payment of this $1.00 before accepting any further dues from a member and was their action legal?"

Decision No. 521 states that a local has a right to refuse to accept dues from a member until a fine assessed against him has been paid and the same rule is applicable to the above. A local has a right to take certain actions by resolution adopted and enforce that mandate, without it necessarily being part of their local by-laws. Anent the resolution referred to above, wherein a resolution was adopted directing that each member take $1.00 worth of tickets and a subsequent resolution directing the same must be paid before any dues would be accepted from any member owing the same; the action of the local was legal and the same can be enforced. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 577.

February 8, 1915.

MR. A. A. HUOT, Secretary, Local 118, 148 Belcher Street, Chicopee Falls, Mass.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your protest against the membership of Brother S. Genza, who was initiated to membership in Local 120, June 8, 1914. Your protest is based on the ground that Brother Genza was, up to a short while prior to his applying for membership in Local 120, a resident of Chicopee, which is in the jurisdiction of Local 116 and that he left your city with the evident intention of joining a local in some other city, in order to avoid the qualification requirement and high initiation fee of Local 116.

The Secretary of Local 120 in a statement submitted, says that he was after Brother Genza's application for about eight months before he finally got it and that he was initiated to membership, June 8, 1914.

Brother Genza submits the following over his signature:

"I left Chicopee, Mass., for Utica, N. Y., on January 3, 1914."

If Brother Genza did not leave Chicopee until January 3, 1914, he could not have been in Utica, N. Y., more than about five months before becoming a member of Local 120, I have no knowledge how long he was in the city before receiving employment at the trade, I tried to get that information off of the Secretary of Local 120, but he failed to reply.

As this protest is filed under Section 11 of the constitution and as this office has held in prior cases, that a six months' residence is required in the case of a candidate seeking membership coming from the jurisdiction of another local union before he can be admitted without the consent of the local from whose jurisdiction he came and as the statement submitted by Brother Genza shows that he did not leave Chicopee until January 3, 1914, or five months and five days prior to him securing membership in Local 120, and as he was accepted into membership by Local 120 without the consent of Local 116, and as provided by Section 11, I do therefore sustain the protest of Local 116 and do hereby cancel the membership of Stanley Genza in this International Union. Local 116 is directed to return his traveling card to Local 120 and they are (Local 120) directed to make a note of the cancellation of his membership on their next monthly report to the International Union. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

WHEN THE FROST IS ON THE PUNKIN.
 When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's
 in the shock
 And you hear the kyoock and gobble of the struttin' turkey-cock.
 And the clackin' of the guineys, and the cluckin'
 of the hens,
 And the rooster's hallylooyer as he tiptoes on the fence;
 O, it's then the times a feller is a-feelin' at his best,
 With the risin' sun to greet him from a night of peaceful rest,
 As he leaves the house, bareheaded, and goes out to feed the stock,
 When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's
 in the shock.
 There's somethin' kinda' harty-like about the atmosphere,
 When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here—
 Of course we miss the flowers, and the blossoms on the trees,
 And the murble of the hummin' birds and buzzin'
 of the bees;
 But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze
 Of a crisp and sunny morning of the airy summer days
 Is a pictur' that no painter has the colorin' to mock—
 When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's
 in the shock.

The husky, rusty rustle of the tassels of the corn,
 And the rasin' of the tangled leaves, as golden as the morn;
 The stubble in the furries—kindo' lonesome-like,
 but still
 A-preachin' sermons to us of the barns they growed to fill;
 The strawstack in the medder, and the reaper in the shed;
 The hosses in their stalls below—the clover overhead!—
 O, it sets my heart a-clickin' like the tickin' of a clock,
 When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's
 in the shock!

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

It would help some if we had more soft spots in our hearts and fewer soft spots in our heads.

This is a Free Country. That's why every man believes that he has a right to force other men to listen to his opinions.

Every woman hopes some day to be able to wear a $50 hat. And every man knows that there ain't no such animal as a $50 hat.

When they are engaged he will read her love letters over and over and think them perfect. But about a year after they are married he begins to criticize the spelling and the grammar she uses in her letters and begins to wonder if she ever went to school.

Once in a while when you get a whiff of a man's breath you wonder why it doesn't catch on fire when he lights a cigar.

If every man could be his own judge we would all be wearing Hero Medals.

After they have been married about ten weeks and he starts to go out after supper and doesn't offer to take her along, the Honeymoon begins yelling for oxygen and prepares to croak.

We all know that when the Other Fellow is talking he makes a lot of noise without saying anything.

If women did get the vote Father would have to eat down town about three months in the year while Mother was out campaigning for one of her friends.

No man who ever tried to hook his wife's dress up the back can go around bragging that he never made a mistake.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

JOINING THE "GET THERE" CROWD.

The "ginger" and "swing" shown in reports received at headquarters up to a few days before closing forms for this number of THE MIXER AND SERVER seem to point to greatly increased additions to the steadily growing "Get There" crowd. This is fine, "fellers" and girls, just keep that swing and there won't be any organization on the map which will be able to beat you numerically.

Determination to be a member of the greatest and best International Union on earth is positively putting us way up where the band plays.

MAKING GOOD ON HIS ONLY CHANCE.

When Fred Somers was visiting headquarters recently he pulled this one off on one of his members, whose name we withhold. Fred met the youngest of this member one day carrying a great big umbrella and accosted him with a cheery howdy and interrogated him, "Why do you carry that great big umbrella, it is not raining. In fact, the sun is not shining brightly." "Uh huh, that's so, the sun ain't shining and taint raining, but when it rains pa wants the umbrella, and when the sun shines brightly ma wants it, and this is the only kinda weather I can git to use it, and I'm doing it, that's all."

AS SHE DESCRIBED IT.

Alice, an enthusiastic motorist, was speaking to her friend, Maude, in relation to the slowness of a certain you man at proposing. "Charley seems to start easy," she remarked, "and he speeds up well, but just at the critical moment he always skids."—Judge.

If you are going to run for delegate to the coming convention better use up some of your spare moments in studying the laws of the International Union. Can't tell, some other member may ask you what you think of Section 65, or any other section, and you would feel rather cheap, now wouldn't you, if you had to stop and read it to find out what he was talking about? Of course no one expects that you shall memorize every word of our book of laws, but you should have a pretty good working knowledge of them before you aspire to become a member of the gathering whose purpose is to make laws.

A CLEAR VIEW.

Under the caption of "Agitators vs. The People," the Baltimore Trades-Unionist says: "The public is gradually but slowly coming to realize the truth of the statement that the liquor contest is not one between the moral forces of the nation and the manufacturers and distributors of liquors, but is one between the great majority of the American people, who desire to use the beverages of their choice in peace, quiet and moderation, and a few agitators who seek to deny them the right to do this."

WILL THEY EVER GET WISE?

Probably those employers whose investment in the catering industry amounts in the aggregate to many millions of dollars will ultimately wake up to the fact that organization really does accomplish things. For instance, the United States Government recently increased its demands on the beverages of alcoholic components, and just previous to doing so set aside $40,000 at the solicitation of the Anti-Saloon League to entertain the delegates to the International Non-Alcoholic Congress. In other words, exacting from the makers and vendors of alcoholic beverages money to enable prohibitionists to make further headway towards eliminating the catering industry. If the hotel, restaurant and saloon of America had been as well organized as the Anti-Saloon aggregation, their protest against this unwarranted waste of government money might have been effective. The longer our employers remain asleep the more it is going to cost them and their employees.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

HAZELTON, PA., Feb. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER— The following is my report for the month of February:

Attended the hearing on local option at Trenton, N. J., on February 2. Hon. Thomas B. McOran, former speaker of the house and a resident of Passaic County, spoke in opposition to the local option bill—his speech aroused wild enthusiasm. He argued that the bill in its present form is most unfair. By the provisions of the measure the drinking of liquor in the homes is not prohibited and according to the speaker the measure would take what the local optionists believe to be a "hell-destroying institution" and take it away from a public place and place it in the homes of the rich and fairly well-to-do. Mr. McOran insisted that this bill would bring the liquor question into politics. He said that a man can not be made better by law, but his manhood must be appealed to. He compared the industries of the State of New Jersey with those of dry states and gave as a reason for the wonderful progress of industry here the fact that there was no prohibition.

Colonel E. C. Stahl, representing the German-American Alliance, very forcibly opposed the passage of the Gaunt bill, claiming that it would be a crime to those people who would reserve the right to take a drink when they wished to. He related the ineffectiveness of prohibition and mentioned particularly the city of Bridgeton, N. J., which is a prohibition town, but which is well supplied with about twenty-five so-called clubs.

Ex-Governor Griggs spoke in opposition, and said that he believed that the good people of his state who appeared for the bill thought that the drinking of intoxicating liquors was a sin and the sin could be legislated out by the legislature. He said there was a vast difference between the use and abuse. The question was how to legislate so as to diminish the abuse, but the passage of the local option bill was not the right method. He argued that the state could safeguard the drinking of liquor with barbed-wire entanglements and the people will still get liquor.

The Rev. Edward A. Masson, of Newark, opposed the bill. He is an Episcopalian minister. The proponents of the bill, especially those of who wear the cloth, looked askance at our friend Masson as he pleaded for the defeat of the anti-liquor proposition. He quoted statistics to prove his argument. He said that prohibition Maine, with sixty years of dryness behind it, was the forty-sixth on the list in the records of divorces—that is, there were only two states worse. New Jersey, the liberal, leads the nation in the matter of purity of home life, as shown by the divorce statistics.

Henry Hilfers, and Brother Wm. F. Kavanaugh, representing the New Jersey State Federation of Labor, spoke in opposition along similar lines as the former speakers.

Ex-Senator William E. Bebbardt, at present supreme court clerk, made the rebuttal for the local optionists.

February 4th, after spending several days trying to revive Waiters' Union 233 of Trenton, and learning that Charles Pomeroy the secretary of that alliance, had used the funds to go into the restaurant business on North Broad street, I picked up their charter and forwarded a report fully covering the matter to the general office. Had the pleasure of meeting President Mulryne and Secretary Glenn of Local 124, and can report that there exists in that city a relationship with the employing forces that I am proud to report.

February 6th arrived at Atlantic City and immediately took up matters with the executive officers of Local 491 for the betterment of their local union. Their meeting on the following day was well attended. During the two weeks' stay I appeared before the printers, pressmen, electricians, painters, bricklayers and masons, carpenters, plumbers, bakers, and paperhanglers' unions in behalf of Local Union 491, drawing their attention to the laxity on the part of the Atlantic County Liquor Dealers' Protective League towards organized labor. I am of the impression they received more correspondence in those two weeks than they have in the past six months.

February 8th, with Business Agent Cole and Secretary Specht of Local 491, better known to the residents of Atlantic city as "How are the chances," took a trip to Pleasantville, a suburb, to attend the common council in the granting of a liquor license to the saloonless town. In less than two minutes after said license was granted to Stetser Brothers, we popped the question as how he stood on the employing of union bartenders, waiters and cooks. Will say the New Rodney Hotel will do business with our allied crafts before the certificate is placed in a frame.

February 12th, Lincoln's birthday, had a committee of Local 491 to circularize every place at Atlantic City, giving each proprietor a circular letter, and another worded differently to each bartender, waiter and cook, with an application blank accompanying. I might say that these went to the white and colored workers, and if this fails to bring about a strong culinary workers' union here before long, I certainly will be very much disappointed. That evening made a trip to Pleasantville. Upon returning I met Organizer Glover of the United Hatters of North America, and Organizer Kerker of the Bakers and Confectionery Workers' Unions. Might add that Organizer Glover in his visits to the various unions of Atlantic City spoke very favorably and in the interests of our allied crafts, which was greatly appreciated, not only by the writer but also by the executive members of Local Union 491.

February 16th, visited the Dunlop Hotel on the boardwalk, and a number of minor places that employ white help, for the purpose of lining up a union of cooks and waiters. They are earning the large salary of $15 monthly, which is $10 less than the colored worker receives. Later on in the day made a trip to Ocean City in the interest of Local 491.

February 17th, with brothers Cole and Specht of Local 491, attended the Liquor Dealers' meeting. When we presented our credentials and made known our mission, quite a number of their members did not feel as though their employes ought to be admitted to address them on any subject. However, we gained admission and addressed them.

February 20th, with instructions, left Atlantic City, N. J., for Hazelton, Pa., in the interests of Local Union 610. Attended meeting the following day. Meeting was miserably attended. Can report by next Sunday, with the support of Brothers Miller, Fisher, Slattery, Schaefer, Yennis, Needham, Emmons, Greisting, Deliva, Murray and Hensel, that Local 610 will be running in good shape again. Local Union 610 will draw up an agreement in the near future.

February 24th, went to Freeland, Pa., during the afternoon, for the purpose of looking over that town whereby the interests of Local 610 will hereafter be benefited. "Hit the Trail Hough" and his followers have certainly hurt Hazelton and the neighboring towns. Yes, he carried out thousands of dollars with his evangelistic rot, and the sooner our members of Local 610 realize the necessity of attending their meetings—that is the union meetings—more regularly, the better off they will be.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Fraternally yours,
WILLIAM B. JOYCE,
International Organizer

OELWEIN, IOWA, Feb. 23, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The closing week of the Labor Forward movement in Dubuque was the best we have had, not only in point of numbers in attendance, but the interest shown by the non-union men. Every local in the city has increased their membership. Local 527 can now boast of a 100 per cent local. I was unable to get the culinary workers to organize and I was somewhat disappointed in this for I was led to believe that they were sick and tired of working any old number of hours and under any old conditions, and for any old wage. But after trying, time after time, I was compelled to give up. Now this is no fault of the trade unionists of Dubuque, for they gave me all the assistance possible. I have left some application blanks with the officers of the Trades' Congress and they are going to take the matter up at a latter date. I want to mention here, that the culinary workers of Dubuque are the poorest paid and the poorest fed of any city that I have ever visited. On the 7th left for Oelwein, where I think our people got the worst deal that was ever handed to a set of men who are trying to make a livelihood and live up to the law.

Now, to start with, if the Mulct law is enforced to the letter it would not permit a bartender to live. In the first place they invoke the enjoining act. They enjoined seven of our boys from working, through no fault of theirs. A minor dropped into the places and, while the bartenders did not serve them any drinks, their presence in the saloons did the work, and if they are found guilty that stops them from working as bartender for five years in Iowa. And here is another case. One proprietor was put out of business for engaging two bartenders who are not voters in the state.

This would be a splendid place for one of our brothers to drop in with a traveling card. And here is another hot one: The law says that you can not sell to any one who has ever taken any liquor cure, and two more of our boys were put on the enjoined list for selling to two men who took the Keeley Cure twenty years ago. And still another one, and this is a "beaut": All the saloons have what they call a saloon police, and his duty is to stand at the door and stop all minors and "cure" people from coming into the place. Well—they have a mail carrier in Oelwein that is under 21 years of age, and, of course, they can not let him in, so they are compelled to go to the post-office for their mail.

There are quite a number of other angles to this freak of a law—but what's the use in wasting printers' ink.

Well, the state has repealed this rotten law and it is now up to the governor, and those that know him best say that he will surely sign and make Iowa a dry state. This, notwithstanding that the Republican as well as the Democratic state platform goes on record as being opposed to repeal of the Mulct law; and the governor, senate and lower house went before the voters on this platform and were elected with the understanding that they would not repeal the Mulct law. But there is as much honor among these people as there is among a set of cut-throats. But one should not be surprised at this, for any one that ever had any dealings with the Anti-Saloon League or any of their following, know just what to expect from them. The senate passed the repeal bill on Lincoln's birthday and the drys said to the lower house, it would be a grand thing to pass it in the house on Washington's birthday—it would be the essence of patriotism. Can you picture George or Abe going back on their word of honor? I think not. I believe that those Antis never heard the cherry-tree story, and if they did they would say: "George was wrong when he says 'I can not tell a lie!'" They are such infernal liars themselves that they can't give any one credit to, be on the square.

The board of supervisors met on the 17th and the Drys came before them and tried to have the petition knocked out. And when their lawyer (Antis) tried to have the petition knocked out they called his bluff and said they would try to run the business of the board according to the law and they had heard about enough from him. They gave the Drys ten days to canvass the petition and get their withdrawals. This is quite a change from the last board who gave the Drys everything that they asked for. In fact, it was the board of supervisors who practically closed the saloons in Waterloo.

At this writing it looks as if the saloons would open up and run until January 1, 1916. But the Drys are working hard and this is some of the dope they are handing out: The state will be dry anyway the first of the year, and you might as well put it dry now. And then, there is another reason you should take your name off the petition; we want Waterloo to boom this spring, and if we can keep the saloons out why we will be able to get the better class of workmen to come in and the manufacturers will start to make things hum. And a lot more of that sort of junk. Then when that won't turn the trick they use coercion—we have proven this. There is a young man working in one of the manufacturing plants here who had the choice of withdrawing his name from the petition or losing his position. He chose the latter, and at the present time the business men of this city have taken up his case and if it can be proved that he did lose his position through refusing to withdraw his name from the wet petition, they are in hopes they can put this manufacturer in a place where he will be looking out instead of looking in. That is, of course, if we can get a judge that is square and not acting under orders from the Anti-Saloon League or any of their hangers-on. I would not put it by this infamous organization to bribe any one. Even if Christ came to earth, I believe they would work on him.

There is a feeling here that I have never seen before in any city. When the business men of a town get up in arms and declare themselves, then things look brighter, and that is what the Business Men's Association has done in this city. And I would advise some of our legislators who went back on their word and the platform of their party, when they return to the city, to come in on a night train and go home via the alley route, for if they don't they will be compelled to do considerable explaining.

My expense account for the month of February is as follows:

Feb. 7—Dubuque to Oelwein.....	$1 92
" 9—Oelwein to Waterloo.....	98
Two round trips to Denver (Iowa)....	1 08

MONROE, LOUISIANA, Feb. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February, extending from January 25th to this date.

My last report left me in Little Rock, where at that time I informed you we was up against a tough proposition with the Arkansas Legislature, as they were doing everything in their power to put Arkansas dry with a state-wide prohibition bill, which I am sorry to say was passed by both houses and signed by the governor, and takes effect on January 1, 1916. We had one of the dirtiest packages handed us in this Arkansas Legislature ever handed to any set of people on earth. In my last letter I stated that we were all right if we could only hold what we had, but if we failed we were gone. We simply failed to hold what we thought we had, therefore we lost and the State of Arkansas will go dry January 1, 1916.

I attended a regular meeting of Local 594 on February 14th, with nearly all members present, and we had a very enthusiastic meeting, taking up several things important to the local and disposing of them satisfactorily to all concerned. Local 594 is in splendid condition and all are enjoying good conditions. Brother George P. Balmat is still holding the office of secretary, which he has held since the local was first organized. I found the boys very much disheartened over the state-wide prohibition bill passed a few days previous to the meeting.

After the legislature had passed the state-wide prohibition bill and the governor had signed the same, the prohibitionists were not satisfied with the law going into effect January 1, 1916, and a bill was drawn and was ready to be introduced making it unlawful to operate saloons within ten miles of a certain church in every city in the state where license had been granted, this law to take effect immediately after passage. They are not satisfied for us to go on the tramp January 1, 1916, but wanted to put us out at once.

The first bill called for state-wide prohibition to take effect June 1st of this year, but the senate amended the bill to read January 1, 1916, and the house accepted the amendment and the governor signed it just as soon as it could be carried from the lower house to his office. The governor, in his first message to the legislature, asked that body to submit the liquor question to the people at the 1916 general election, but after he had been in close communion with Ex-Governor Patterson of Tennessee, and the Rev. Sam Small of Georgia, he had a change of heart and sent a special message asking for state-wide prohibition whether it suited the people or not. It seemed that all the prohibs of the nation gathered in Little Rock and remained there until they got about what they wanted. It will not do for me to write all the facts in this letter explaining just what took place during the pending of this state-wide bill, and who was the cause of prohibition in Arkansas. Should I write my sentiments and have it come before the public, I would be hung by the prohibitionists, as they don't care what they do, say or swear. If my thoughts were known I would go to the penitentiary for a thousand years.

On February 19th, I made a trip to the eastern part of the state, at the request of some of the people who are interested in our welfare. I visited several places, returning to Little Rock on the evening of the 21st, in time to attend a meeting of Local 313, where we had a full house and much business came before the local at this meeting, which was disposed of in tip-top shape. This being the first meeting held by Local 313 after the opening of the saloons in Little Rock, there was a good attendance and everybody had something to say. Local 313 voted to send a delegate to our convention in San Francisco in June, and from the number of nominations for the place they are going to have a lively time on the day the delegate is elected, which will be the third Sunday in March. It's a safe bet Local 313 will have a live wire on the ground at Frisco in June. While Arkansas will go dry (maybe) January 1st, our two locals in Little Rock and Argenta will live on. The boys have no idea of surrendering their charters, as they expect to be doing business again in 1917 at the longest, and possibly before that time.

The mayors of the cities which have saloons in Arkansas are now urging the legislature to pass a bill placing an occupation tax on the citizens of their respective cities, and also on real and personal property to meet the deficit which will occur when the license money is taken away from them. I would be perfectly willing for this increase in taxes if it would apply to the hypocrites who are in favor of and who worked so hard to make the state dry, and leave the liberal people out, but the increase will not hurt long, as the property will decrease in value so fast and the people will leave for other and better cities and the people left behind will need no taxes nor anything else. Show me a dry town and I will show you a bat roost always.

On February 22d, I left Little Rock for Monroe, La., where I found a live young local. I was very much surprised when I arrived at the home of Local 760 to find such an enthusiastic bunch as I found in the members of this local. They have all the saloons in Monroe lined up excepting three, and nearly all restaurants are working union waiters, with the addition of one of the large hotels, the Bohemia, lined up. Brother Roper, president, and Charles Guerriero, secretary of Local 760, are the right ones in the right place—just made to order is all I can say, without making my letter too long for publication; and they are not alone in boosting for the local, as all members of Local 760 are real, live boosters and I found no one laying down on the job, but on the other hand every member has an application blank in his pocket for fear he might run onto some non-member and would not have the proper blank to take his application.

While this part of the country has had very little prohibition to contend with, up to the present time, they are now going to get a genuine taste of the real thing. There is to be an election in this city next week and I see the lines are tightly drawn even in this city, from a prohibition standpoint. The dry element have their candidate for mayor, and believe me they are rallying to his support, while our people are divided as to who to vote for. I have only been in the city of Monroe three days, but I can see clearly the hand of the prohibitionists. The State of Louisiana will be the next victim, mark my words.

SEATTLE, WASH., Feb. 24, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February.

February 1, to Tacoma, working there until the 3d. Found Business Agents Hammer, of Local 61, and McFarland, of Local 707, with plenty of work on hand. Assisted as much as possible, with a promise to return on the 4th. To Seattle for a conference with Brother Hesketh relative to anti-labor bills which were before the State legislature at Olympia, also bills relative to special election on liquor license.

February 4, to Olympia. Found our friends in the two branches of the legislature (we have actually got a couple who are real friends) busy watching the moves made by the enemy. Senator "Johnny" Campbell and State Federation of Labor Representative Harley Hughes are always on deck for a fight against laws detrimental to the welfare of the workers.

On the 5th, to Tacoma. Business Agent McFarland, of Local 707, has been a very busy man lately keeping the boys of that local lined up, thereby preventing a cut in wages for those that are employed. With McFarland and Secretary Hammer, of the culinary local, I made a round of the houses, and aside from lining up several delinquents, gave out special notices of the meeting of the bartenders on the 7th. As a result the boys had a fairly good attendance, and considerable business of importance was transacted. Due to the fact that their treasury was practically depleted, the local found it necessary to curtail some of the expenses of the local. Every once in a while we find some one who will cheerfully sacrifice time and money when occasions of this character arise. Secretary McFarland proved the man in this case. Mac volunteered a cut in his salary of about 60 per cent, and promised the boys that he would endeavor in the future to do as well for the local as he had in the past. Glad to report that the Central Labor Council has moved its headquarters into the quarters of the Cooks' and Waiters' Union, thereby making a considerable saving for Local 61 in its expense account.

After talking matters of business over with Vice-President Hesketh I left for Centralia. Found this place particularly bad, due to a great extent to the fact that two of its principal banks had failed and most of its lumber mills were shut down. Went over matters of business with Secretary Conrad and President McElroy, of Local 836. Being informed of the sickness of a former member of Local 704, of Raymond, I hunted the brother up, and am sorry to report that I found Bro. Ora Berger very low with the terrible white plague. To make matters worse, he was located in a tent without a floor on a low swampy piece of ground, and without funds. His parents resided in a house about fifty yards from the tent, and evidently were resigned to his fate. I took the matter up with the Centralia boys, who responded generously, and promised to bring the case to the attention of the Raymond local, where Brother Berger was a member in good standing. This I did, and found that the Raymond boys had been very liberal, and would assist further.

February 10, to Raymond. Conditions there are as discouraging in a financial way as at Centralia. Both of our locals were hanging on with the expectation that conditions of trade would improve soon. The culinary boys were having some trouble with a cook who has usually been in the habit of playing Frisco and Seattle. This man, even in view of the fact that his wages in the house were at least three dollars a week higher than they would be if there wasn't any local in the town, didn't want to pay any more dues, because he didn't believe in unions in small cities. Then he "flashed" a copy of The Culinary Craft, stating that the culinary unions were soon going to be busted up anyway. There is a lot of that kind floating around working on a suspended card, and in every way possible belittling the labor organizations which are doing all possible to better the conditions of their employment. The excuses that fellow dug up would fill two editions of the MIXER AND SERVER and The Culinary Craft combined.

February 11, to Hoquiam and Aberdeen. Both of these cities are in a better condition in the way of business than many other small cities of the State. In Hoquiam some of the proprietors were cutting expenses by having relatives and bar porters take the places of bartenders. With President Houser, visited the proprietors and insisted that our boys be given the work, showing the work done by the local at the recent election, and in response we were assured that the change would be made. The cooks and waiters of Hoquiam miss their secretary, Mrs. Janet G. Bailey, who is taking a vacation. Meantime President Anna Truedue is looking after affairs. In Aberdeen the boys are plugging along, although conditions for the culinary workers are not any too good, due to conditions of trade, which is now showing a slight improvement. Just to make me feel homesick, Bro. "Tim" Murphy invited me to partake of a "home-cooked" feed at his home. Believe me, the "better half" of that Murphy combination can sure put out some spread. The best of all was a standing invitation to "come again." Your on, folks.

February 14, to Seattle. Attended a meeting of Local 651, which was fairly well attended, the members taking considerable interest in the movement which is being put forward to present to the people of the State some form of legislation which would offset the prohibition measure passed last November. Sorry to report that Business Agent Jack Welch was hit by a "jitney bus" and seriously injured. Bro. Harry Raynor is taking Brother Welch's place during his absence.

February 19, attended a meeting of Cooks' Local 33. Some effort is to be made to line up the hotels which now employ Orientals. The local has a "Publicity Committee," composed of Brothers Fleming and Miller, who are sending out literature to the country hotels of the State with the information that the local is able to furnish competent help at all times.

Attended a meeting in Labor Temple on February 21, the purpose of which was to further the candidacy of Harry Bolton, business agent of the Bakers' Union, who is a candidate for the office of councilman. Brother Bolton ran second highest at the primaries, and if organized labor does its duty he will be elected on March 2.

On February 22 attended a meeting of the State and Local Provision Trades Council. Considerable business was transacted. Brother Hesketh, of Local 33; Brother Levi, of Local 239, and Brother Hoffmeirer, of Local 651, were selected to go to Olympia to look after our interest before the legislature.

The following is my expense account for the month:

BOSTON, MASS., Feb. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month.

January 25 held an open meeting of the waitresses of Springfield, Mass., at which time plans were laid out for the reorganization of former Local 416. To Boston to continue work in that city. Attended a meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board. Important matters in the interests of our crafts in the city of Boston were acted upon. Attended a meeting of the waitresses of Boston, and hope to get those working at that branch of the trade interested in a short time. As per instructions from the general office, proceeded to Brockton in the interests of the culinary workers of that city. Attended a meeting of the local, and regret to say that the meeting was not well attended. International Vice-President Conley was in attendance, and gave some good advice to the members of the local. It was agreed that a special called meeting be held February 6, and that Vice-President Conley and the undersigned would attend and see if it was possible to get the members interested in their organization and give the proper support to the officers.

To Springfield to attend a special meeting of former Local 416, at which time the former local was reorganized and the same submitted to the general office. I anticipate that Local 416 will be back once more on the firing line, and that we will have a good live local. Bro.

David Casey, who is handling matters in the interests of the waitresses, made an encouraging report.

To Boston to be in attendance at a special meeting of the waitresses of that city. The meeting was fairly well attended, and much interest shown by those in attendance. A large number of those present signed the charter list, and same was forwarded to the general office.

As previously arranged, proceeded to Brockton to take up work in the interest of Local 161. Went over the local situation with the officers, and, with the assistance of Secretary Glasier, visited several of the establishments where grievances were existing and non-union men and women were employed. I am pleased to report that we were successful in our efforts in straightening out matters to the satisfaction of all concerned. In company with International Vice-President Conley attended a special meeting of Local 161. Sorry to say that we were confronted with that same old trouble, members not interested enough to devote at least one hour to transact the business of the organization. The members of Local 161 have none to blame but themselves for the present conditions that confront them, and can not put the responsibility on the labor movement when they are not willing to display the working button of their craft, which is quite noticeable in a city like Brockton. I trust Local 161 will carry out the advice given them by Brother Conley and the undersigned, for then there will be no question but that there will be a big improvement in a short time.

To New Bedford in the interests of the culinary workers of that city. After interviewing the men and women working at the craft, I was successful in securing quite a number of signatures to the charter list and forwarded same to the general office, and I hope to be in possession of the charter in a short time. I want to thank Secretary Sullivan of the bartenders for the able assistance rendered me while in his city.

Returned to Boston to continue work in the interests of the new Waitresses' Local 112. Attended a meeting of Local 77, also the Boston Central Labor Union.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Jan. 26—To Boston	$2 25
Feb. 2—To Brockton and return.....	90
7—To Springfield	2 25
9—To Boston	2 25
15—To Brockton	45

HELENA, MONT., Feb. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is submitted as my report for the month of February.

February 1 the convention of the Montana State Federation of Labor convened in the city of Helena for the purpose of considering legislation desired by the organized workers of the State. The convention lasted one week, and was announced as one of the best conventions held in the past twenty years. The bartenders, cooks, waiters and waitresses were represented by fourteen delegates, and all received important committee assignments. The measures advocated by our representatives and endorsed by the convention were an amendment to the nine-hour law for women, which, if passed by the present legislature, before whom the bill is pending, will give to the women of Montana an eight-hour work day; a resolution which was later drafted in the form of a bill and introduced in the Senate by Senator MacKenzie, of Havre, Mont., to prohibit the employment of white women with, by or for males of the Chinese or Japanese races (this bill, if enacted into law, will go a long way towards decreasing the popularity of the Chinese restaurants in the State). A bill placing the State Federation of Labor on record as opposed to prohibition was concurred in by the convention after a lengthy debate. Our delegates took an active part in the passage of all legislation of a constructive character.

After the adjournment of the convention I paid a visit to Billings, Mont., and interviewed the officers of the bartenders union and discussed with them several matters of importance pending. I was sorry to learn, on my arrival, that Brother Lockwood, their secretary, was in the hospital at Rochester, Minn., undergoing an operation. I also interviewed many of the cooks and waiters of the city and arranged to return during the month of March, at which time they will organize and send to the office for a charter.

From Billings I returned to Great Falls, where the situation which I reported last month is still unchanged.

I was again called to Helena by the officers of the Montana State Federation of Labor to assist them in the defeat of several bills affecting our allied crafts. The legislature at this time has passed a State-wide prohibition bill, which will be voted upon by the people in the year 1916. This bill, if passed upon favorably by the people, will become effective Dec. 31, 1918. They have also passed a bill providing that saloons shall not open for business until 8:00 a. m. and close at 12:00 midnight. This bill becomes effective upon being signed by the governor, which will be done before the session of the legislature adjourns. Another bill now pending with possibility of passage, is one to prohibit the sale of liquor between the hours of midnight Saturday and 8:00 a. m. Monday. We have been ably assisted in our endeavors to defeat legislation inimical to our interests by the officers of the Montana State Federation of Labor, and by Bro. M. M. Donoghue in particular. They have been equally active in assisting us in the passage of the eight-hour day for women, and the bill to prohibit employment of white women by Chinese or Japanese.

The following is my expense account for the month of February:

Jan. 27—Helena to Great Falls.....	$ 3 40
Feb. 1—Great Falls to Helena.....	3 40

Feb. 10—Helena to Billings.....	$9 15

DETROIT, MICH., Feb. 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for January and February.

I left Detroit for the city of Cleveland, O., January 14, as per instructions. The day following my arrival in that city I was compelled to go under a doctor's care and was confined to my room for the better part of three weeks. I desire to thank our brothers in Cleveland for the favors extended to me during my illness. While I did not have an opportunity to attend any meetings, owing to my illness, I had the pleasure of meeting a great number of the old guards, as well as the new active workers in our movement, and I can assure our readers that our allied crafts in Cleveland are not going backward, but, on the contrary, are keeping pace with the advancement of the city. The activities displayed by them in the past has placed them in the front rank of organized labor in the State of Ohio. I could elaborate "if I so desired," but will not. Suffice to say that our allied crafts in Cleveland, O., have active workers upon the boards of the State Federation and Cleveland Federation at all times. At this writing I can point with pride to the fact that Bro. Thomas S. Farrell, whom you all know by reputation if not in person, has the distinction of representing the Cleveland Federation of Labor as their business representative, and I might mention that our locals from that city had the distinction of having three delegates upon the floor of the American Federation of Labor Convention at Philadelphia representing our International Union, the Ohio State Federation of Labor and the Cleveland Federation of Labor, Brothers Farrell, McEachern and Goldsmith, waiter, cook and bartender. I have taken this space at this time because I believe that all of our locals would do well to emulate the example set forth by the Cleveland locals in the past and present, which has always stood for solidarity of our allied crafts and the present form of our International Union for the advancement of all.

February 8, to Toledo, arriving there about 6:00 p. m. After partaking of a lunch at the Kaiserhoff, I proceeded to the magnificent club room of Local 216. Almost immediately upon my arrival there appeared a committee from Local 335, headed by Sister Nida R. Pangle, the hustling business representative of that local. They informed me that their meeting would be held that evening at 8 o'clock. The meeting was well attended, although the night was somewhat stormy. The business was conducted with neatness and dispatch. Three candidates were initiated. I am of the opinion that Local 335 has decided to remain a factor in the labor movement of Toledo. Keep it up, girls, don't follow in the footsteps of the local that went defunct after our convention in your city in 1907. Later in the evening I returned to the club rooms of Local 216, where I spent a pleasant hour meeting old friends and new acquaintances. Among them were Bro. Harry Overmeyer, business agent of Local 216; Brother Parker, and my old friend Brother Flynn, with whom I have had many a debate in the past. I will not try to enumerate all of them. I can say, however, that there seems to be a different feeling existing in that city than we found in 1907. At that time, while all branches were organized, we found one of our locals upon the floor of the convention instructed for segregation. Today the blue button and the green button boys are in one local, No. 216, fighting harder than before, and practically controlling the situation, as was demonstrated in the Kaiserhoff trouble. From what I saw while in that city I am convinced that Locals 335 and 216 are working in strict harmony.

February 10 I returned to Detroit, Mich., to give the culinary workers another opportunity to line up with the trades union movement. I was ably assisted by Bro. Wm. C. O'Rourke, business manager of Bartenders' Local 562; Brother Baker, organizer of the Retail Clerks; Brother Gorman, of the Upholsterers, and the local Organization Committee of the Detroit Federation of Labor. Meetings were held upon the following dates: February, 18 and 21, in the afternoon, and February 25 at midnight. I must report, however, that we were not successful in establishing a local. We felt that the interest shown, however, would warrant a further effort upon our part, and called another meeting for the afternoon of Monday, March 1. Bartenders' Local 562 is progressing slowly, but nevertheless, surely. They have pledged their support in our efforts to form a culinary local, and I believe that they are doing the best that they can to carry out their pledge. They are pretty busy now, however, before the primaries, trying to assist in the nomination of the proper men for the offices.

My expense account is as follows:

Jan. 14—Detroit to Cleveland.....	$4 50
Telephone and car fare.....	2 25

P. S.—In looking over my report I find that in mentioning the names of the members that I had the pleasure of meeting in Toledo I neglected to mention the name of W. Arthur Booth, who is one of the oldest and hardest workers of our International Union. He still carries that perpetual smile and feels fine.

F. B. H.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month follows.

The situation here has been fraught with the gravest of perils that could befall our organization. Scheming Anti-Saloon Leaguers, with their many friends in Congress, have worked night and day to bring to full fruition their long cherished idea of a dryless Capital, especially for the purpose of pointing a moral and adorning a tale. If they ever succeed in sizzling this city bone dry, how they will gloat and chuckle, from every cross road, from every point of vantage within the confines of this, the great "land of the free." Peons of fanatical praise, embellished with Puritanism, hypocrisy and cant, will smite the circumambient air as it was never smote before, and then the arguments that will follow—methinks, I hear the thunders of applause that echo from afar when their cadaverous looking disciples upend themselves to extol upon what the mighty minds of the nation's Capital, the brains of our country, in the greatest parliament of the world, HATH DONE to the fair city of "Magnificent Distances." Well, the evil day has not as yet fallen upon us; the tankard and the tile, the cup and the smile, are still in evidence, and we'll be merry while we may.

Now that Congress is soon to adjourn, and as there is important legislation to be looked after and finished before adjournment, we have no further fears or apprehensions that "our mornin's mornin'" will be curtailed.

During the present session there were several bills pending pertaining to prohibition in the District of Columbia, and if they could have been brought forward out of committee to the floor, might have proved disastrous for us. Now, however, in the dying days of the session, it seems almost impossible for their appearance in any form whatever. There was, nevertheless, strenuous attempts to land us on the dry side.

The action of Senator Sheppard, of Texas, in tacking on a "rider" of prohibition on the District appropriation bill, caused alarm, and the alarm was justified, for it came dangerously close to going through. Having failed along this line, and feeling that there was a possibility of getting a direct vote on a prohibition measure, he introduced a special bill of his own. He felt sure that the committee of the Senate on District of Columbia, who were favorable, would act quickly and report it back to the Senate in a few days, and then perhaps the Senate and the House would soon do the rest, but, thanks to the Shipping bill, that measure came up in the Senate and the prolonged debates and then the filibuster over the bill consumed so much valuable time that the Senate henceforth will have to move with more than its accustomed speed to enact legislation for governmental needs and necessities, consequently sidetracking prohibition questions and many other measures of more or less importance.

The Central Labor Union, of which I am a member, representing Local 428 while I am here, has been our steadfast friend. The resolution passed sometime ago by that body, demanding a vote or referendum by the citizens of the District of Columbia on all prohibition measures before being enacted into laws by Congress, has had some effect, with many other things that are making the people of our city dissatisfied with the present form of government, many congressmen and senators are favorably disposed to grant us municipal autonomy, and the very latest word is here presented from the Washington Press under date of February 26:

"At a banquet last night tendered to Representative Barthold, of St. Louis, who is retiring from Congress, Speaker Clark, of the House of Representatives, in discussing the system of government in vogue in the District of Columbia, said in part: "Not a single man in the House or Senate is fit to be a member of the Washington Council; they do not know local conditions. What I would like to see is some system inaugurated and perpetuated which would prevent this everlasting squabble over District taxes. I would like to let the people of Washington fix their own taxes, pay their own taxes, AND ATTEND TO THEIR OWN BUSINESS."

God bless you, Mr. Speaker, that is the proper utterance—attend to our own business, not to have a Senator Works from California, nor a Senator Jones from the State of Washington, nor a Senator Sheppard from Texas, to fasten upon us here a prohibition measure without our censure or action.

I have given considerable attention to organizing the culinary crafts, but so far I have not met with flattering success. The bunch that came down here several years ago from New York—the I. W. W.'s—has so queered our fellow workers that organization as yet seems almost a dead issue, still there are some signs on the horizon, and time and patience may yet produce results.

In spite of the putting out of commission of two hundred saloons here, Bartenders' Local 428 is making steady progress. New applicants are coming in every meeting. The official make-up of the local is excellent. The new president, Bro. John Conroy, makes a fine presiding officer, and is earnest and honest in his efforts for the best good of the organization. Vice-President Curtin is another hustler for the local, and I have noticed that he is always there with some witty remark that brings the glad smile to serious lips. Secretary Frank J. O'Donnell is a worthy successor of yours truly in the office he occupies; in fact, I think he is putting it all over me, as evident by the paintaking manner he takes in all matters pertaining to his office and official duties. The secretary-treasurer, John F. Clarkson, who was the first president of the local, and an active member from the beginning, is filling the bill in his new position to the entire satisfaction of the members. He is one of the enthusiastic and hard workers of the organization, and I have full confidence that the future will prove his true worth to Local 428. The other officers who are hustling and striving for the general good are: P. J. Curtain, chaplain; P. McDonald, inspector; J. O'Neil, inside guard, and Michael Flynn, outside guard. The organization is in good financial condition, pays six dollars a week sick benefits, one hundred dollars death benefit, and has a goodly membership. Best of all, it has a large attendance at each and every meeting.

With best wishes, I remain

Fraternally yours,

JERE F. McCARTHY,
International Organizer.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February.

In my last report I announced that Local 59 would give a smoker, to follow an open meeting, on January 29. Well, we had both meeting and smoker, and both were a success. Bro. Josh Brady and myself gave the cooks a talk that woke them up. Bro. J. Foley made the opening address, after which a letter from City Attorney Dan Hoan was read, in which he expressed his regret at not being able to be present. Following the speeches a fine entertainment, flanked with plenty of Dutch lunch "and Schlitz," kept the assemblage on the go till 2:30 a.m.

On February 2 held a meeting at which 18 cooks were present. I decided to postpone signing up to the 12th, at which date I held another meeting.

On the 3d attended a meeting of Local 64, at which 7 candidates were initiated. It was also voted to defray half the expenses, giving 50-50 with Local 59, for the big smoker to be given at the institution of the cooks' union. Too much praise can not be given to both locals for their unrestricted support and endeavor in giving the cooks a start. They shall not forget.

On the 5th attended the meeting of Local 59. On the 9th had cards and circulars printed for a meeting on the 12th. On that date I attended the afternoon meeting of Local 59, and in the evening the cooks' meeting. Bro. Josh Brady and I again explained to them the reasons why they should organize, and the result was that 32 signed and paid $3 apiece. The next day I sent for the charter which arrived on the 16th. The new locals name is Milwaukee Cooks' Local 872. We decided to hold the institution of the new local on the 19th, so I had the printer busy again. In the meantime I collected 8 reinstatements from former brothers now working in this city, who will swell the ranks of Local 872. On the 17th attended meeting of Local 64, and on the 19th, the institution of the new cooks union. I had invited Brothers Ebeling and Staggenberg of Local 865, Chicago, and received a telegram that they would arrive in the evening. Brothers Brady, Robson and myself went to the depot to welcome them. I think both these brothers will ever remember that evening. I assigned the following as officers (per honorem) for the proceedings: Brothers Chas. Sorweid, president of Local 64, chairman; J. Staggenberg, president Local 865, Chicago, vice-president; J. Foley, president Local 59, chaplain; R. Robson, secretary Local 64, inspector, and Fred Ebeling, Local 865, Chicago, as secretary. Brother Josh Brady was master of ceremonies and we went through the work without a hitch. Doors were opened and Brother Sorweid gave the boys the "welcome to our midst" in a rousing manner. Temporary officers were elected until all can be initiated, as half of them work at night. Next week a general meeting will be held when officers will be elected for the entire term. Brother Sorweid then introduced Mr. Dan Hoan, city attorney of Milwaukee, a former cook, who in a lengthy speech explained his experiences in the kitchen, its unsanitary conditions, and promised the cooks of Milwaukee, his unrestricted support. He was followed by Mr. Kleist, attorney at law, candidate for circuit court judge. Mr. Kleist, in an eloquent speech, expressed the hope that the cooks will soon get what they ought to have, but said they would never get it until they were organized. He was followed by Brother Staggenberg, president of Local 865, of Chicago, who went over in details the situation of our crafts in Chicago. Brother Staggenberg, is an able exponent and has the fighting grit in him, which is a necessary accessory in the Windy City. Brother Fred Ebeling followed him, and in an able way, congraduated the cooks of this city for their wisdom in organizing, expressing the hope that the cooks of Chicago will follow suit. A rousing speech was made by Mr. Henderson, of Detroit, international organizer of the machinists, and also by Mr. J. Devering, international organizer of the teamsters of Chicago. This closed the speech making and the entertainment started. I should mention that Mr. Rigo's band, the world-famous violinist, entertained us in a masterly way—nothing too good for the cooks, eh? Chairs were at a premium, as fully over 300 persons were present. Dutch lunch and Schlitz were a plenty. Local 872 has now 39 members signed up, and a bank account of $75.

On the 22d, I went with Brothers Brady, Sorweid and Robson to Kenosha to attend the Labor Forward Movement meetings. Brother Josh Brady was the principal speaker, and acquitted himself splendidly. I arranged with Brothers Ebeling and Staggenberg for a mass meeting in Chicago to be held in the near future.

Waiters' Local 59 is making great headway and promises a fine future for the boys.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Feb. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February.

Since my last report we have increased the picket line, and we now have two places on the unfair list. The best of it is that the pickets are now unmolested, and the work or organizing the restaurants will not be as hard as in the past. Mr. Restaurant Keeper has changed his attitude and is more willing to listen, but he would be more willing to reason with us if our own members who are here from other locals had deposited their traveling cards in Local 402, instead of keeping them way down in their jeans, and at the same time standing all kinds of abuses from the boss and working for much less money than the scale of the local. Not satisfied with keeping their cards, they become very prominent members of this or that "club," where the proprietor knows he can get cheap labor, and as long as Mr. Waiter and Mr. Cook continue such tactics, just so long it will be almost impossible to convince the proprietors to give our members decent conditions and better wages.

The labor movement of this city has given our locals their hearty support, and with their assistance and good work of our members it will not be long before we will have all those who work at our craft inside the ranks of our locals.

January 26 attended the meeting of the Labor

Council. One of the principal matters to be disposed was the election of officers. Bro. C. E. Kiser, secretary and business agent of Bartenders' Local 768, after serving as president of the Labor Council for the last two years, gracefully retired, to give way to ambitious workers in the ranks of labor. Bro. Jacob Beckel, of the Brewery Workers, was the choice of the majority for president. I. H. Markwith was almost unanimously re-elected, and Bro. Claude McClelland, secretary of Cooks' and Waiters' Local 402, was elected trustee.

January 27 to Los Angeles, where I attended a meeting of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council. It being election night, the hall was packed. The main contest was for the office of president, between the incumbent and Bro. A. B. Hassell, business agent of Bartenders' Local 284, but with the undivided support of our members and staunch friends, genial Brother Hassell was elected president of the Labor Council. Al was entitled to it, having been vice-president of the council for two years past, and always ready and willing to assist all locals in their fight for better conditions, our friend, L. W. Butler, of the Teamsters, was elected for the hundredth term as secretary of the council. More power to both of them.

February 7 a real ball game took place between the Brewery Workers and bartenders of Local 768. What the blue button boys did to the foam producers is better told by the press agent, who was no other than Albert Howard, formerly of Cleveland, but now a native of the Golden West. The following is copied from one of the morning papers:

"For a long time there has been considerable discussion between the members of the Brewery Workers and the Bartenders' Union regarding their ability as ball players. The discussion and doubt was terminated yesterday when the white-aproned crowd walloped the sud-makers by a score of 12 to 10, before a large and very enthusiastic crowd at Una Park. The poor Brewery Workers are so down-hearted that they have asked for a return game, but we have told them to go and practice for a while and build up a reputation by defeating some other teams and then perhaps we would take the matter under consideration."

February 14 went to Los Angeles and attended a special meeting of Bartenders' Local 284, held for the purpose of devising ways and means and to discuss the Wine Growers' Bill No. 874, introduced in the Assembly of this State. The said bill provides, among other obnoxious features, the licensing of bartenders. The meeting was attended by a large majority of the membership. Bro. Henry H. Lyon, a member for many years of Local 284, now State Senator, dealt with the bill in its entirety, and especially with that part which would materially affect our membership if the bill became a law of this State. Assemblyman Phillips also pledged his support against the bill. After a lengthy discussion of the demerits of the bill and the adoption of a campaign against it, the announcement by the good-natured and pleasant president of Local 284, Bro. Wm. J. Getsinger, that refreshments would be served was cheerfully received by the invited guests and members. There was a plentiful and varied assortment of meats, salads, relishes, and all the necessary trimmings, with plenty of the amber fluid, cigars and cigarettes, along with good music, both instrumental and vocal.

Bro. F. Ellerkamp, who is the proprietor of "Frank's Place" and a jolly good fellow, rendered "Sympathy" and "A Fool there Was." Bro. F. H. Rickett sang "Memories of the Past." L. D. Biddle, father of Local 284, with his usual smile and energy, sang "Johnny Schmocke" and other comic songs. A. J. Mooney, editor of Union Labor; L. W. Butler, secretary of the Central Labor Council; E. B. Palmer, secretary of Waiters Local 17; M. Micaroli, treasurer of Local 284; J. E. Evans, A. B. Hassell and yours truly all spoke on subjects beneficial to our craft and the labor movement in general.

The committee who arranged all the details of the feast was composed of Bros. Frank Keeler, Wm. Behrns, "Doc" Collini, Ed. ("Casey") Malter and A. B. Hassell, deserve special mention for their untiring efforts.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Feb. 28, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the past month is as follows:

On January 29th the members of Waiters' Local 59 acted as host at an open meeting and smoker, to which all of the hotel and restaurant employes had been invited, and despite the fact that the weather was extremely cold and other counter attractions, there was a pretty good crowd present, among whom were 16 chefs and cooks, prospective members of the new cooks' organization, which Brother Martel has been working on for the past three weeks. Brother James Foley acted as chairman, and after calling the meeting to order, he stated the object of the open meeting; after the crowd had listened to the offering of the different speakers provided for this occasion, all proceeded to do justice to the many good things provided by the members of Local 59. After the midnight hour had passed, entertainers from the many cabarets presented themselves and entertained the crowd until the wee small hours had arrived, and everyone left well satisfied and all joined hands in saying that the members of Local 59 were splendid entertainers. Several applications were made for membership in the different organizations of our allied crafts.

On February 2d, I went to Watertown, Wis., for the purpose of putting Local 694 on the map again, and after visiting the several places in that city where the boys were employed, we held a meeting in the C. L. U. Hall, and the boys were all willing and anxious to renew business again. Brother Art Gehrke was chosen as president; Billy Beesner as recording secretary, and little Al Cavanagh as secretary-treasurer. With these boys on the job the outlook for Local 694 is a bright one.

I attended the meeting of Local 64 on Feb. 3d and we initiated seven new members, and several new applications were received. Brother Robson and I continued our visits to the various organizations in the city pleading for their moral support. In making the rounds we found the meetings very poorly attended; in many instances there were just enough present to constitute a quorum—the lack of interest in the various organizations being plainly apparent. If I were to make an attempt to offer in detail the experiences that Bobby and I had in making the rounds of the various places of business, I would fill the MIXER AND SERVER from cover to cover.

February 5th I attended the meeting of Local 59, and at this meeting the boys let the bars down by lowering their initiation and reinstatement fee in order that they might get in a number of new members as well as a number of backsliders. We initiated two at this meeting.

The week following the above I devoted a portion of my time in assisting the committee on by-laws to draft a new set for Local 59. At the meeting of Local 59 on the 12th we took in one new member and had three reinstatements.

On the 17th I made a trip to Oshkosh to assist in the adjustment of a little trouble in that local union. After my arrival there I found that our meeting had been called for the 18th instead of the 17th, so I took a run up to Appleton to assist the boys of Local 324 in adjusting a little difference that was cropping out in this local. I found the genial "Butch" Hauser on the job, ably assisted by that trio of live wires, namely Brothers Jule Smith, Matt Doerfler, and Jack Bennett, and when we got our heads together the little trouble was amicably adjusted. Local 324 is in splendid shape in every way, and the above-named members are on the job all the time.

I returned to Oshkosh on the 18th and attended the meeting of Local 349; the little differences were easily adjusted. President Henry Beth is a good, old head and his two right-hand men, Brothers Koplitz and Albrecht, are always on the job. Local 349 is in good shape. Ex-President Benny Steuck is always on the job and usually found on all committees where there is work to be done.

I returned to Milwaukee on the 19th and assisted Brother Martel in establishing the new cooks' local, No. 872. We initiated 17 members at the first meeting out of the 32 that had signed up I will not make any enlarged reference to this meeting as Brother Martel will give it in detail in his report.

February 22d I attended the meeting of Local 523 of Kenosha, and after the meeting we went to the Carpenters' Hall, where I was slated to address a mass meeting, which was one of a series of open meetings held under the auspices of the Kenosha Trades Council. This Labor Forward meeting being held for the purpose of increasing the interest in the movement in that city.

On the evening of the 23d Bro. Geo. Perkins, general president of the C. M. I. U. was to have spoken at the opera house, but on account of illness was unable to be present. But fortune favored us, however, as we had a very able speaker in our midst, Bro. James Henderson of the I. A. M., and as Bro. Willard Best had been substituted for Brother Perkins, the crowd was well satisfied. Before the curtain dropped I was called on and talked on our "Purchase Power." It is hoped that after this trades union revival, which lasted four days, that it will be the means of arousing some of the union men in Kenosha from their winter sleep.

Our new Local 872 will hold their second meeting on February 27, and we expect to initiate another large class. Permanent officers for the ensuing year will be elected at this meeting.

My expenses for the past month follows:

SANTA ROSA, CAL., February 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I beg to submit the following report for the past month:

Attended the regular meeting of Local 403 on January 27th. A complete report was submitted with reference to audit of accounts of absconding Secretary J. C. Doyle. About sixty members were present, all expressing a ready willingness to do everything possible to accomplish the financial re-habilitation of the organization. After a lengthy discussion, an emergency was declared to exist necessitating a suspension of rules. The local then proceeded to abolish the combined office of secretary and business agent, creating in place the three distinct offices of secretary, treasurer and business agent, thereby reducing the monthly budget almost one hundred dollars. Bro. L. L. Chase was elected secretary, and Bro. L. Stemmer treasurer by unanimous vote. For the office of business agent a spirited contest ensued between Bros. Fred Funk and Michael Powers, the former winning by a narrow margin.

The L. J. E. B. (re-organized), held first regular meeting January 29th. Matters of importance relative to policy of the culinary workers in dealing with the so-called "Open Shop" houses was handled in a manner that speaks well for the efficiency of the new board. Permission was refused members to work in either the Stockton Hotel or in Madden's Cafe. The board again reiterating its declaration of "unfair" as to these two firms. The new officers of the L. J. E. B. are W. F. O'Donnell, president, and Gomer Roberts, secretary.

Upon adjournment of L. J. E. B. attended meeting of Executive Board of Local 403. In addition to full board, found Bro. J. B. Dale, general organizer of the A. F. of L., and Bro. T. J. Vitaich, business agent of the Federated Trades Council also present. This meeting was called to consider a protest questioning the legality of Bro. L. L. Chase's election to the office of secretary. Upon motion the legality of the election was upheld. President Perrin alone dissenting.

In view of the importance that must be attached to the question of proper surety bonds for officers handling finances, the following explanatory note is here inserted in order to warn others of the necessity of investigating the character of all surety bonds. Section 64, of the International Constitution distinctly specifies officers shall secure bonds through a "reputable bonding company." If this provision had been adhered to in this instance a large loss would have been avoided.

Ex-Secretary Doyle's surety bond, as originally drawn, specified the four following names as securities: Hews, Wall, Carroll and Goldsworthy, with a joint liability of $1,500.00. Goldsworthy and Carroll signed the document in the usual manner before a notary, with the understanding Doyle would secure the signatures of Hews and Wall and thereby complete the execution of contract. This Doyle failed to do, and, after erasing the names of Hews and Wall by pen stroke, he turned the document over to the President of the local who, presuming everything correct, placed it in safe keeping. Attorneys consulted declared without hesitation that failure to complete execution of contract rendered the instrument null and void; adding the opinion that whilst Carroll and Goldsworthy could not be held responsible at law, they were morally bound to the extent of one-quarter each of the total defalcation. Assuming these two prominent business men, in order to avoid the unenviable reputation of Welching, do make good as morally obligated: The local will still suffer a considerable loss, the result of misplaced confidence, lax supervision and gross negligence.

After assisting Brother Redenbaugh, business agent of Local 572, adjust some trouble with the Acme Restaurant and the Commercial Oyster House, I left for Sacramento on January 30.

L. S. Calkins (late of Stockton), business manager of the M. M. & E. Assn., is now maintaining elaborate headquarters in the Travelers' Hotel in Sacramento and his pernicious activity is becoming apparent from day to day. Where any friction appears between employer and employee, Calkins is on the job, urging the employer to stand fast, magnifying the trouble, and using every argument to secure a new member for his union-busting aggregation. He is not always successful, however, as on several occasions he was forcibly ejected by his prospective candidate. Incidental to his appearance, some unnecessary discord has arisen within the ranks of organized labor, and I would not be surprised if Sacramento developed another union traitor of the type of the notorious Richard Godsil of Stockton. Some very ugly insinuations are in circulation regarding a member of one of the oldest organizations in the city and a quiet investigation may result in uncovering a rascal of the lowest order. Our locals are keenly alive to the situation. Brother Drake with his usual efficiency, has outlined a plan of campaign for the protection of the culinary workers, and is well prepared to face any contingency that may arise. Incidentally his well known aggressiveness resulted in his forcible ejection from the Travelers' Hotel. Brother Drake is rather modest in referring to this exploit; eye witnesses, however, claim it took five men to do the job.

The M. M. & E. Assn. of Marysville and Yuba City, declared for the "Open Shop" February 4. No immediate trouble is anticipated as no union contracts expire until 1916. These declarations are merely skirmish alarms; but there is a strong probability of a battle royal in San Francisco after the closing of the fair.

At the request of Brother A. E. Steimer, vice-president of the California State Federation of Labor, I left Sacramento for Santa Rosa to again endeavor to organize our crafts in this small Italian community. Santa Rosa having been selected for the seat of the next convention of the Federation. This is the center of the largest wine growing industry in the State. The county contains over thirty wineries and includes what is said to be the largest wine-making plant in the world: the Italian Swiss Colony, Inc. Regretted to observe the bitter animosity prevailing between the retail liquor and the wine interests, due to the activity of the latter in initiating legislative measures for the regulation of saloons. Threats and counter threats are freely used to the great satisfaction of the prohibitionists. A deplorable state of affairs sure to result disastrously to all concerned.

Left Santa Rosa for San Francisco on February 18, in order to participate at the opening of the fair. The greatest ever. Judging from secretaries' reports, over one thousand of our people secured employment as a result of the opening, materially reducing the unemployed congestion within our ranks.

Returned to Santa Rosa on February 22. At this time of writing have met with little success here.

THE VICTOR.

The live man victorious
Rode spurring from the fight;
In a glad voice and glorious
He sang his delight,
And dead men three, foot-loose and free,
Came after in the night.

And one laid hand on his bridle rein—
Swift as the steed he sped.
“Oh, ride you fast, yet at the last,
Hate faster rides,” he said.
“My sons shall know their father’s foe
One day when blades are red.”

And one laid hand on his stirrup bar
Like touch o’ driven mist.
“For joy you slew ere joy I knew,
For one girl’s mouth unkissed,
At your board’s head, at mass, at bed,
My pale ghost shall persist.”

And one laid hands on his own two hands,
“O brother o’ mine,” quoth he,
“What can I give to you who live
Like gift you gave to me?
Since from grief and strike and ache o’ life
Your sword stroke made me free.”

The live man victorious
Rode spurring from the fight;
In a glad voice and glorious
He sang of his delight,
And dead men three, foot-loose and free,
Came after in the night.

DINNER COSTS LESS IN BERLIN THAN IN LONDON OR NEW YORK.

Food Plentiful in the German Capital, and for Sale at Half the Price Charged in London—Blockade Has Brought No Famine in Germany as Yet.

By HERBERT COREY

(Copyright, 1915, by Herbert Corey—Courtesy of The Associated Newspapers.)

London, January 2.—Berlin isn't feeling the pinch of hunger, if one may judge by her restaurant prices. Neither is London. By the same test New York is on the verge of starvation.

A dinner which in Berlin costs $2.80 costs $4.97 in London and $7.30 in New York. One tips at the same rate—a 10 per cent rate—in the three cities, always adding a few pennies when necessary to make the sum come out even. So that in Berlin the waiter received 30 cents for his portion of the entertainment. In London he would be given 53 cents, and in New York, 75 cents. The total cost would therefore be:

New York, $8.05; London, $5.50; Berlin, $3.10.

There is a restaurant in each of the three cities which may fairly be compared with the other two. They serve the same sort of people with the same sort of food. In Berlin the restaurant is located just off the Friedstrasse; in London it is on Regent street, in rear of Piccadilly Circus, and in New York on a side street near lower Broadway. In Berlin more food is given you for your money. In London it is more courteously served. In New York it is more daintily prepared. This is the actual bill of fare for two persons in which the comparison is made.

Hors d'Oeuvres a Meal in Berlin.

It is quite possible to stop after the hors d'oeuvres in Berlin if one has the courage. In London and New York one is served with a sufficient amount of small, spicy appetizers. They don't do it that way in Germany. There the theory is that one gets up an appetite by taking a short run over the gastronomic course. The platter of hors d'oeuvres included half of a baby lobster, claw and all; a bowl of chicken salad and another of potato ditto, two sets of joints of roast chicken, and innumerable dabs of spiced and pickled and smoked fish and ham on bits of toast, and small saucers of queer vegetables.

London and Berlin are alike in their devotion to pea soup. New York's restaurant declares for the bean variety. The minor items of the dinner show for themselves. Neither my companion nor myself had sufficient German to combat the eloquence of the waiter. Events proved that we must have assented to his prescription of a squab chicken en casserole each. They would have tempted the palate of an invalid, and they cost 40 cents each. In New York, when you can get them, such birds run about $1.25. It is only on such luxuries that the London restaurateur concedes that war is going on. One pays three-and-three each for them against the half a crown of peace times.

Coffee in Berlin is a gastronomical mistake, in London it is a luxury, and in New York a commonplace. Hence, the varying prices. In London and New York it is good. In Berlin it is muddy and bitter. The waiter in Berlin does not expect you to order coffee. When you take your seat at his table he puts a couple of papier mache mats in front of you. Then he asks:

"Light or dark?"

The fact that the Berlin coffee is only five cents a cup does not reconcile you to it. The cigar that in New York cost a dime brings six-pence in London. You can't get it in Berlin. So far as my experience goes, when one pays more than five cents for a cigar in Berlin one is throwing away money. Above that price they all taste alike. Incidentally it is said there is a growing shortage of cigars in Germany. It is very certain that there are few customers in the cigar stores.

There is probably a freight and tariff reason why the seidel of Munich beer which costs twenty cents in New York is retailed at a nickel in Berlin. In peace times one can get it for sixpence in London. Just now it is not for sale at any price. The Londoners have abjured the German and all his beers. The Gambrinus restaurant—one of the famous after-dark resorts of London—is now known as Oddindino's Imperial. There are cruel rumors that its cellars still hold barrels of German beer, but one can find no confirmation on the walls. Placards offer only Holland beer—light and dark.

Some Things the German Lacks.

In spite of the—to New York eyes—unreasonable cheapness of the Berlin bill of fare, certain economies are practiced. You may have white bread if you demand it, but it is not served until then. If you will put up with "war bread"—which is a whole wheat bread or a rye and wheat bread or a potato and flour bread, according to the restaurant—you will be given the chance to do so. It is conceded that the pedigree of the average cup of coffee is uncertain. There is an abundance of butter, which is well charged for in London. It is sometimes difficult to get a morning egg. Germany has been importing some millions of eggs annually from Russia. That source of supply is now closed of course.

Hotel prices are about on a parity in the three cities. So are the prices in the hotel restaurants. Berlin has managed to get something of a supply of the famous French cheeses in spite of the war. But in the matter of fruit she has failed completely. She has always relied on France, and although she has been able to get a little fruit through, it is very little indeed. Americans who have always been accustomed to fruit at breakfast find themselves easily cured of the habit, confronted by 50-cent pears and 40-cent apples.

London lacks fruit, for that matter. Not that there is not enough fruit, but the quality is rather poor and the prices are high. There were constant reports of apples rotting on the ground in English orchards, and berries going to waste, and other fruits offered in the public markets for prices which did not pay for the gathering. But these facts—if they are facts, did not affect either street stand or restaurant prices.

In the restaurants one pays from sixpence to a shilling for a good pear or apple. Only the small and acid Jamaica orange could be had at the time this was written. Thanks to the war, almost no American fruit was in the market. It was not that the steamers were interfered with, but that the importers did not feel themselves justified in loading up with costly perishables. A small pineapple costs three shillings on the street stands. It is rarely to be found on a restaurant menu.

A raw apple costs a dime in the New York restaurant, on whose prices comparison has been made. Baked, it comes to fifteen cents, with cream.

For the consolation of New Yorkers this may be added:

There are 228 items listed on the New York bill. On the London bill there were 110, and on the Berlin bill 215.

SWEET CHARITY.

Some little amount of talk in various quarters about the spirit of charity brings up involuntary thoughts regarding the queer tendencies of human nature, and invites anew to a study of man and his ways. Take the Belgians, for instance, a people more sinned against than sinning, whether the blame may be put. The great American heart has gone out to them in their distress, with just a bit of trumpet blare. But not a word as to the suffering in the next block or the next county.

Which recalls an address of an extemporaneous character, and consequently from the heart, made by Sim Leatherman in the old meetin' house on Lapparel Ridge, something like forty years ago. Unless Sim was mistaken, or human nature has since changed, it might have its application in this day of concerted effort and get-together methods.

The occasion was rather informal in character, although not divested of the accustomed Wednesday night prayer meeting solemnity. The Ladies' Aid had completed arrangements for the oyster supper to be given in the town hall on the following Monday. Things were moving along comfortably when a mild bombshell was thrown into the midst by the announcement that the annual contribution for the enlightenment of the heathen was shockingly small. Whereupon Brother Leatherman arose, not with the air of dignity that marked the fallen Lucifer, since he was not built along majestic lines. Yet there was dignity, mingled with humility, while a plaintive air of appeal lent a measure of force to his arguments which no dogmatic manner could ever have conveyed.

"Bretherin," he began, "far be it from me to check the outpourin' of mercy and money if you all air a gravitat'in' thataway. But as none of ye seem to be snatched I would like to add what ba'm I kin to our conscience, at the same time throwin' in a touch of aloes and other such bitternesses as may break the languid symptoms which betoken no good to our souls."

"I've no doubt the pore benighted heathen is a sufferin' for creature comforts, as well as spiritual. Yet, as near as I can recollect, the pictures in the geogr'phy of scenes on the Gilhooly River showed the natives with but a small allowance of calico and no socks a tall. Which reminds me ag'in that on my way to this here meetin', a beatin' of my hands ag'in my breast to keep 'em warm inside my big woolen mittens, I seen Dave Parker's boy withouten any socks and scarcely any shoes. He's the boy some of the noblest sisters in this meetin' won't allow their boys to play with. Which may be right, and ag'in it mighthn't. Howsomever, that boy probably has fellin's, same as the little Chinese we've been a sorely neglectin', and, if he has, the wind and the frost on this lovely Janoory evening which we are a havin' in our midst must have been a sarchin' 'em out! At least it looked thataway to me, as it also set me to thinkin'."

"Pears like, somehow, we can always see sufferin' a long ways off much better than when it's nigh. Also, that we can do so much good anywhere or any time than where we are at this present speakin', so to put it. Ain't there no way for us to git right on these p'ints?"

"Last Sunday we was a communin' together over the Scripter about the pore widow that put her only two mites into the treasury. Some thought one thing and some thought another. But I just kep' a thinkin', God knows she couldn't help bein' a widow, but why didn't one of them Pharisees, or even one of the common republicans, that was always hangin' around in them days, go down in his jeans and shell out a few? And then I got that 'shamed, for I'd passed old Mis' Pollock the day before, and she was a pickin' up dead limbs from the fence corners. and me a drivin' past with a load of the finest chestnut oak and split ash in the land!"

"The more I think of it the more it seems like the right kind of charity is the kind that just sort o' percolates out and keeps on a goin' through what it meets without bein' fired up in the air, and then rickoshayin' offen the high places. A feller told me once about light, how, if you lit a candle and placed it ten yards off, it shone so much, then if you brought it five yards closer it shone, not twice, but four times as strong. Mebbe it's thataway with charity, and we've been a sheddin' of our sunshine in a way that means a heap of waste."

"Now, if these feeble suggestions are a hurtin' any of ye, just charge it up to my own feelin's. The reflections I have been a dwellin' on made me feel much the same way. And if you are a takin' 'em too mild, I'm a fearin' they'll do you no good. I mind how the persidin' elder told us of the good woman who had a husban' and seven children, but her only cross was she couldn't do nothin' for the Lord. 'A husban' and seven children, sister,' sezze, 'and you want to do somethin' for the Lord? Well, you've certainly got a chanct!'

"So it looks to me as though weuns, too, have got a chanct, and that it ain't so far off. The good book says: 'This is religion pure and undefiled, to visit the fatherless and widders in their affliction, and keep yourselves unspotted from the worl'. And I kind a think a little extra exertion will help remove some of them spots we do get occasional, casuel like, as it were, while moseyin' through this wilderness scene."

"What I says I says for all, myself first, and includin', seein' that I am a pore, weak sinner, and asks the prayers of you all that I may ever stick out faithful!"

Whereupon Brother Sim sat down, much embarrassed and red in the face, with the light of the Spirit still glowing faintly in his eyes.—Cincinnati Enquirer, January 10, 1915.

WANTED, A STABILIZER.

One of the oldest maneuvers known to tacticians was employed by the MIXER AND SERVER in order to prove beyond reasonable doubt that certain persons who have been endeavoring for quite a period of time to emphasize their fitness to assume leadership did not possess the necessary qualities, nor were they even within reasonable approach of ever becoming masters of themselves, an essential, so we are advised, to successful leadership.

Beginning with the initial number of The Culinary Craft under the presumed ownership of Local 30 of San Francisco, Cal., there appeared a list of names of members who were given the title of "The Press Committee"; counting them we found they were SEVEN, and we further discovered that they were out aggressively for dividing our International Union. As a salutation to their readers, they made bold to affirm that division was needed—they called it segregation—but their definitions are not binding as yet.

Their initial production pointed their gun in one direction and they filled the bore chock full of reasons why their program should be heeded.

The second issue continued in the steps of its predecessor; the seven scribes in charge of the ammunition succeeded in keeping their gun true to its original target; they waited anxiously to see or hear something from what they called the "Domain of the Czar," but the "little fellow" at Cincinnati said nothing, nor did he write anything for publication; he had absorbed some of that homely philosophy which he had heard on the farm, the kind which is boiled down in the old saying "Give a calf enough rope and it will hang its fool self." Another month passed into the discard or history, whichever way you care to size it up, and the "big gun" located at Seventh street, San Francisco, showed unmistakable signs of wobbling, in fact, it had veered around to such an extent that one of the shots hit another target plainly marked "Courage to defy and break trade union laws." That in truth was a paradoxical position for an aggregation which prided itself on being leaders of an alleged new thought which was presumably based on management by majority vote. But preaching one thing and practicing another has been the rock upon which many a general went to defeat. It was not to be expected that inconsistency could be shelved suddenly, the gun pointers had hardly gotten used to their new titles and a little shakiness was bound to show; they probably imagined that their boast would merit approbation among those who had similar desires, but lacked sufficient courage to wilfully violate the laws made by the general membership of our International Union.

They unconsciously warned the culinary workers in advance what they could expect in the event that they were successful, for unless adopted law suited them they would employ similar methods and offer as an excuse that "they knew what was best for them" and disobey the laws with less thought of results than had been shown before. In that same number one of the editors gives expression to the following: "The reason that we are down where we are, where we ought not to be, is simply our lack of cohesiveness, organization, and most of all solidarity." If you will compare that terse statement with the resolution which that and the two previous as well as succeeding issues of The Culinary Craft printed, you will observe how, even seven men may differ as to definitions. It was in that same number that chagrin was shown, because the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER failed to make mention of the existence of The Culinary Craft. We knew that the rope supply was ample, for the final passage of the referred-to item concluded with: "We shall and will be heard from." When that utterance was printed we knew that the plan adopted was bearing fruit; if the secessionists would only talk enough and print enough they would finally prove beyond reasonable doubt how truly intemperate they were and how utterly futile it would be to lay on their shoulders further responsibilities. When the April number came to hand the "gun" began to roar indiscriminately. "Let the membership rule" was one of the platitudes offered, and another consisted of these weighty words: "Give your assent to segregation by your voice, influence and vote, and segregation will be won for the benefit of all affiliated members who believe in majority rule and the right of the majority to determine matters of policy and general conduct of the affairs of the International Union."

"We shall and will be heard from" evidently took hold; they were being heard from all right, in fact the foregoing following their printed acknowledgement that they "had the courage to stand for what was best for them," despite the fact that our laws had been adopted by the general vote of our membership, showed quite plainly what they defined as "majority rule" and what had been their "policy and general conduct" toward rules adopted by our general membership. They might have gone a step farther and asserted with conviction—we are a law unto ourselves. which they have tried to be.

In that same number they constructed several straw men and knocked the stuffing out of them, giving further emphasis to their use of intemperate utterances, but in later issues these intemperate asseverations become wildly hilarious and run the gamut for unbridled license.

In the May issue of The Culinary Craft some one must have extracted the ball-bearings and substituted gravel, for the "gun" begins to grind out such involved brain drips that one wonders who was at the helm.

"New Unionism" is the seeming theme and here is how it is defined by the editorial pilots of The Culinary Craft: "For the purpose of this article it is not necessary to go into details about the origin and development of this "new unionism." It is sufficient to state the fact that it exists. Nobody, no matter how slightly he or she might be acquainted with the labor movement, can possibly deny this existence of a new tendency in trade unionism. It is known in England as well as in Latin countries as Syndicalism, in Germany as Localism, in this country as the I. W. W. And it manifested itself even in Ireland, where it became known as Larkinism, after one of its leaders." Further along in that editorial (?) masterpiece we find another passage which reads:

"Now we who advocate 'segregation' are industrialists to the core, and because we are such, we are for segregation in this instance, for we know that the indiscriminate heaping of various crafts into one organization, with strongly centralized authority, does not mean industrialism." Could you, my gentle or otherwise reader, take pen or pencil in hand and beat that? "We are industrialists to the core, and because we are such, we are for segregation." In a previous passage attention was directed to the wobbling of the "gun" and how seven men may differ as to definitions, but these few samples are as nothing compared to the following dug out of that same editorial bouquet: "Furthermore, we think it is only a question of time when all of us, bartenders, brewery workers, butchers, grocers, cooks and waiters, and all other workers engaged in public and semi-public service will combine into one great federation (with strict craft autonomy, however) which is destined to play a role only second in importance to that of the transportation workers in the fight for the final emancipation of labor."

Then to clinch the rivet the "gun" lands this parting shot:

"Holding these views, we cannot help but regard segregation as a step in the right direction, although it might appear different and absolutely in harmony with the spirit and tendency of the new unionism."

Without going further back than the May, 1914, number of The Culinary Craft, from which the quotations were taken, will the reader indulge the undersigned to the extent of answering to themselves this one question: What brand of trade unionism is this alleged "new unionism" which so fearlessly advocates tearing things up in order to construct something truly indefinite. In one passage these "wisdom slingers" tell us that they admit that they think that "it is only a question of time when all of us will be combined into one great federation." In another passage they affirm with turgid vehemence that they "are industrialists to the core," and still with the echo of that statement in mind they persist that they are the ones to define what industrialism means—at least to them—and they want all others to swallow that definition and trust them to make good.

While they "think that it is only a question of time when all of us will be combined into one great federation," they are unwilling to wait for that time to arrive, they have a "cure-all" stowed away in their box of tricks and they will never be satisfied until they have given it a trial spin on the trade union track, and their greatest wish is for you and your fellow members to grant them that sought for privilege—and incidentally to "get to the pie-counter"—to which they pay their respects in later issues of their monthly publication.

After treading gingerly through the editorial mazes during the months of January, February, March, April and May, 1914, they discovered that their "gun" was not creating sufficient havoc to satisfy their craving; no one had paid any attention to them or their gun, disappointment was heavy on their brows, in fact their whole being was saturated with it, but they followed the example of the little boy going through the woods, they whistled shrilly to keep up their courage. June, the month of Brides and Roses, delivered the next infant from their sanctum, and again the "gun" wobbled, striking several targets, one of which had this rather suggestive conclusion: "We have 'em on the run." In that issue they shifted their attack somewhat and began to call the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER on the carpet where they proposed to give him what was coming to him—in their estimation—which was not any too complimentary to said editor.

The June number also printed an admission that Solidarity had taken exceptions, had found fault with the editorial pilots of The Culinary Craft for their "exposition of Industrialism." Concluding their reply to Solidarity they regretfully announce: "But we must have segregation first, even if 'Solidarity' doesn't approve of it." Need we advise our readers what "Solidarity" represents and for whom it speaks—suffice to say it does not advocate the platform and principles of the American Federation of Labor.

"Ye Gods and little fishes," we have been printing enough dope to wake up the dead, but so far the MIXER AND SERVER has paid positively no attention to the innumerable "shots" directed toward it and its editor; here we are getting ready to go to press with our July number and not a word has been printed in the MIXER AND SERVER, evidently we are going to be ignored to a finish. Something similar must have passed through the "clear-headed industrialists" when they picked up a real trade union magazine, the MIXER AND SERVER, and noted absence of "come-back" on account of their campaign. In their July number they became worried, and delivered an admission, which to say the least, must have been gall and wormwood to their few followers. "It is now six months since Local 30 has acquired 'The Culinary Craft,' with the idea to disseminate information in regards to 'segregation.' Friends, as well as enemies, will want to know what we have accomplished. This we here propose to tell in short. A sub-committee (the Law and Legislative) of the committee which is arranging for the general convention of the H. & R. E. I. A. B. I. L. of A., which is to be held in San Francisco in June, 1915, has sent out, in conjunction with 'The Culinary Craft', a circular letter to a great many locals trying to ascertain the sentiments as well as the arguments used pro and contra segregation." After six long months of effort they succeeded in sending out a circular letter and getting, so they alleged, replies which they assorted and classified, and they called that accomplishment, no doubt their friends are still wondering whether they have pulled any stronger oar since that admission was printed, their self-styled enemies don't have to guess—they know.

The old maneuver referred to in the opening of this article contemplated six long months of patient waiting, it meant giving them all the rope which they required and keeping silent while they were tying the knots, it meant seeming acquiescence in their advocacy by that very silence, it brought to us many inquiries as to what we intended to do, some of those writing us expressing convictions that we didn't appreciate the injury which was being done the organization by the advocates of secession, but we waited all the more patiently, for we knew that the secessionists campaign would grow more and more intemperate until it culminated in a mental carousal—a literary drunk which would disgust those who had pinned their faith to the cause which they had espoused. That we were absolutely correct in our conclusions the columns of The Culinary Craft illustrate amply; invective run riot, insinuations gone mad and a campaign carried on which has unqualifiedly indicated for what purpose it was started. During the year which they have cavorted over white paper and with printers' ink they have massacred the reputation of more than one man, they have dug and defiled the graves of a few, and have given a crude example of crucifying those who made their organization.

Long before the six months allotted to them to show their hand had expired they had succeeded in proving lack of self-mastery, they had divulged their contempt for the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor and put up as their guide and preceptor the official mouth-piece of the one organization in America which boasts of having "raised more trifles and troubles" than all the other workers' organizations from the inception of "craft guilds" to the date on which California rejected Proposal No. 2, November 3, 1914. They have grown more and more abusive, arrogance has supplanted timidity and in truth they have carried to excess their boast: "We shall and will be heard."

They have been heard, in fact our membership are hearing from them daily and monthly, and that membership is now quite anxious for the good day to roll around so that they may take a hand in the matter and see just who is who. We predict when that time comes that the men and women representing the locals of our International Union will be found lined up solidly for American Trades Unionism as taught by the American Federation of Labor in preference to Syndicalism, Localism, Larkinism, I. W. W.-ism, or any other ism which hides under the subtle title of New Unionism.

CONFUSED MATHEMATICS.

How very much peeved the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, must have been when they perused that record printed on the cover of the December, 1914, MIXER AND SERVER, is fully illustrated by the intemperateness of their language in trying to discredit the achievements of our International Union. When seven men can not discover anything in that record but dissatisfaction it would seem to indicate that their mental equipment was clogged up and needed vigorous purging, or mayhap a good strong injection of trade unionism would serve the same purpose, but the latter would probably fail owing to insufficient foundation to land and work upon.

That reference to the "Sand Lot Wisenheimers" must have soaked in deep, for they began to "scratch" and succeeded in developing a pretty fair sample of "sour grapes"—so sour that they pucker one's lips to even think of them. They set their mental incubator at work to originate phrases which would express their combined disgust and dissatisfaction, and here is what they hatched: "Twice a fool makes no less a fool the real fool." Before going any further, try and get that great chunk of "sand lot" wisdom (?) salted before it evaporates, for it is seldom indeed that such Solomonic epigrams are hurled into the printed page. Here is another evidence of the "hatch:" "2 x Fool—MIXER AND SERVER," and then the original stuff petered out so far as captions were concerned, but in the peculiar mélange which followed we find "Double-Headed Hydrant," "The Mixer and Deserter," the latter a ludicrous attempt at punning, yet significant to those who read between the lines. Deserters and Secession were probably in mind, accusing them of possessing such, though to be quite frank, the article in question would indicate otherwise.

In the judgment of the Seven Sacred Scribes it was the work of a mentally irresponsible fellow to have succeeded where their single-hore kind failed when they had the affairs of organization in hand; that for anyone to dare make public the incompetence of their single-hore kind is equivalent to admitting that such daring implies foolishness, bats in the belfry, rattle brain, and all that sort of thing.

It causes considerable annoyance among the Sacred Septette to print facts about the advancement of our International Union while they have naught to offer but "Come into my parlor said the spider to the fly" stuff. It creates disquiet among the Sacred Septette to see printed in such large type the fact that our International Union has weathered the gales of opposition for twenty-four years and is today a live, thriving Allied Craft organization with a real future before it. It causes jealous pangs to shoot through the Sacred Septette to note that, notwithstanding the ceaseless efforts of themselves and others, our Allied Craft International Union is meeting its obligations and actually going ahead with the work which its vast membership planned to accomplish. They would much prefer that we refrained from printing such information as they classify "2 x Fool" information, which shows the difference between the progress of their favorite culinary international union with its dismal record of utter failure. If the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER is getting "lame in the brain," it might not be amiss to say that the Sacred Septette can rest easy and not worry; lack of possession makes them immune from a similar attack.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

DEALING FROM THE BOTTOM.

It is rather sad to note the measures employed by the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, to avoid compliance with the laws of our International Union.

Section 144 is still a part of the laws of our International Union, but despite that fact and the announcements made in the MIXER AND SERVER

THE MIXER AND SERVER

SERVER, no mail list has been submitted by Local 30, of San Francisco. Does it occur to the members who have been offered The Culinary Craft for perusal that the local which is making so much noise and talking so much about law and progress, is offering an example of what it will do in the event that power is given into its hands?

The Sacred Seven boasted several months ago that their local union deliberately violated the laws of our International Union and were glad of it. That was one admission. Here is the other: They have offered all manner of excuses for their failure to furnish headquarters with a mail list of their membership, but finally declare, in substance, that they don't want the MIXER AND SERVER. For lack of originality the Seven Sacred Scribes pass all competitors. Their persistent effort to exclude the MIXER AND SERVER, to keep it from their membership, shows that they are many removes from being game sportsmen; they are illustrating the "brick in the mitt" idea of fighters, they would "dope" an antagonist and put him "out" then claim a victory. That method may spell courage and fairness to them, but to the fellow in the bleachers it comes as close to what is called "dirty ball playing" as it is possible to make it.

The cringing fear that the MIXER AND SERVER may reach the membership of Local 30 and give them an opportunity of gaining information about our International Union is back of the failure to send a mail list to headquarters. Had the membership of that local been permitted to receive and read the MIXER AND SERVER there would have been no campaign for SECESSION.

The membership of our International Union dearly love a good, fair above board scrapper; they despise a piker, and they have no use for short card tactics, whether used in games of chance or otherwise.

They never sneak up behind a man's back and drop him; if they have a "grudge" against a fellow man they come out in the open and try to land a "curtain wallop" that will do the trick. Loaded gloves and secret doping don't sound like sportsmanship to them, and the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street are due to discover that fact before the end of week June 14, 1915. The fellow who secures a thirteen months' start before the other fellow gets into the race may think he is a SPORT, but others have a different way of looking at it.

INEXCUSABLE EXAGGERATION.

What is called a "partial list of unemployed" in this city has been compiled by a so-called Public Forum of the Church of the Ascension, and its shows 562,700 persons out of work, in twenty-one occupations.

Had all the ordinary trade and industrial activities been considered, this Public Forum would presumably have found that everybody was out of work and that we had all perished from starvation.

For example, there are only 7,000 printers in New York City; yet we are assured that 10,000 persons in the printing trades are out of work. We are asked to believe that there are 75,000 store and office workers unemployed in addition to 10,000 department-store employes, 25,000 drivers and general help in the wholesale food-supply and dry goods district and 25,000 hotel and restaurant workers. Not only is everybody out of work, but apparently we are importing unemployed to fill up the gaps.

The war has caused much industrial disturbance here and conditions are generally admitted to be worse than they were a year ago, when the State Labor Bureau reported 33,000 unemployed among the representative labor unions. What the total number of unemployed is at this time nobody knows, least of all the Public Forum of the Church of the Ascension. The situation is bad enough without such ridiculous and inexcusable exaggeration.

In Cleveland similar exaggeration is suspected, and men having the credit and welfare of that city at heart have banded the employers of labor and other public spirited citizens together to give jobs to all who are willing to work—this will answer the unemployment question better than any house-to-house canvass, even by a "Church of the Ascension" committee.

Any man who would exaggerate by word or deed unemployment conditions, thereby increasing the unhappiness of his neighbors, is an enemy of the public welfare and deserves the scorn of every decent man and woman in the land—and sooner or later surely will receive it. The richest man in this country is the most unhappy.—New York World.

UNISON PLEADED FOR BY WALSH

In Urging An Attack On "Main Offender, Low Wages"—Industrial Commission Head Deplores Division Of Organizations Working For Human Uplift.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—A plea that all the forces which are striving for the betterment of the human race join in an attack on low wages and "the resultant indecent standard of living," was voiced here today by Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Federal Industrial Relations Commission, before a meeting of the City Club of Chicago.

"Let us have a new declaration of war and a good mobilization," he said. "I hold that every organization we have for good should strike a blow at the main offender: Low wages."

The speaker deplored what he characterized as "a divided army for good which faced a solid phalanx—the allies of sin and suffering, of disease and premature death."

"When we divide our forces into three great battalions; those working for better economic conditions, those working for better social conditions, and those working for better moral conditions, we make a monumental blunder," he said. "Lines can not be drawn between the economic, social and moral life of the people. They rise or fall together and economic conditions always dominate."

"If those who are concerned with social and moral betterment would join those of us who are primarily concerned with established economic justice; if they would help to force better wages, a decent standard of living, a better environment, more leisure and less laborious situations on 90 per cent of the people, we could cut their work at least in half."

Declaring that at present we have a "veneration for wealth in this country that has made concrete wealth supra legal," Walsh said: "We have a perfect right to withhold the protection of organized society from one man who is doing many of us hurt. Great fortunes are as active a menace in themselves as they are to their possessors. They lead to greater and greater travesties on justice and a more insane vision of power. They are gold gone mad. Mad with lust of conquest. The owners of such fortunes must have, at some time or other, crossed the line of true economics, ethics, equity and criminal law. An enormous fortune is a wrong proved by itself.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ROLL-CALL VOTE OF HOUSE ON BURNETT IMMIGRATION BILL.

Those Voting "Nay" Voted in Favor of Having Two Men For Every Job.

The Vote Explained.

The 261 Representatives voting "AYE" voted to protect American workers; voted for American standards of life, and voted for industrial, political, and social welfare.

The 136 Representatives voting "NAY" voted to insure the steel and coal barons an unlimited supply of cheap labor; voted to increase illiteracy and voted to retard industrial, social, and political betterment.

A two-thirds vote was necessary to pass the immigration bill over the President's veto.

If any four of the 136 voting against labor had voted for labor, the bill would have passed.

Alabama—Aye: Abercrombie, Blackmon, Burnett, Dent, Harris, Heflin, Hobson, Underwood. Nay: Mulkey, Taylor.

Arizona—Aye: Hayden.

Arkansas—Aye: Caraway, Floyd, Goodwin, Jacoway, Oldfield, Taylor, Wingo.

California—Aye: Bell, Church, Curry, Hayes, Kettner, Kent, Knowland, Nolan, Raker, Stephens.

Kahn answered "present." He was paired against the bill with Roberts of Nevada, who was paired for the bill.

Colorado—Aye: Seldomridge, Taylor. Nay: Keating, Kindel.

Connecticut—Aye: Donovan, Kennedy, Lanagan, Mahan, Reilly.

Delaware—Aye: Brockson.

Florida—Aye: Clark, Sparkman. Not voting: *L'Engle, *Wilson.

*L'Engle and Wilson were paired for the bill, with Vare of Pennsylvania against.

Georgia—Aye: Adamson, Bell, Crisp, Edwards, Howard, Hughes, Lee, Tribble, Vinson, Walker. Nay: Bartlett, Park.

Idaho—Aye: French, Smith.

Illinois—Aye: Baltz, Buchanan, Borchers, Fitz Henry, Foster, Fowler, Hill, Hinebaugh, McKenzie, O'Hair, Rainey, Tavenner, Thomson. Nay: Britten, Copley, Gorman, Gallagher, Graham, Madden, Mann, McAndrews, Sabath, Stone, Stringer, Williams. Not Voting: Hoxworth.

SEGREGATION A MOTH-EATEN THEORY.

TO THE EDITOR—Perhaps well-meaning but misguided members of our International Union are advocating the moth-eaten theory Segregation. It is commonly known amongst well-informed trade unionists that segregation has been tried in the printing and other trades, and proved a failure. At the present time the tendency of the entire bona fide labor movement is for closer affiliations, amalgamation and federation. At the same time the active workers in the trade unions realize the necessity of giving local unions proper autonomy to allow them to develop freely.

Our members should calmly consider, before accepting segregation as a cure-all to remedy all the ills affecting the culinary workers. To be sure, there is a vast number of unorganized workers in the hotel and restaurant industry, but would our segregationist friends have us believe that by dividing our forces by the segregation route this army of employed would flock into a culinary workers' union?

Actual experience has taught us to the contrary. We have seen how thousands of workers have been organized in Chicago and other cities in a short period of time by our International and local officials. Those familiar with organization work know that it is comparatively easy to organize unions, but to hold them together has been the biggest problem the active members have had to contend with. No one can keep the workers organized except themselves. It is only in those localities where the movement has been of a gradual growth that our local unions are in a healthy condition and have shop control. It is my opinion, and I say it advisedly, that our efforts should be spent in strengthening our present position and holding what we have gained, instead of splitting our International into warring factions, the same as the Electrical Workers and other organizations have experienced.

Our International Union is not perfect by any means. There is a great deal to be done and obstacles to overcome. The biggest drawbacks to our success are the members who want to break up their own unions. M. A. SANCHES, Member Local 20, St. Louis, Mo.

COOKS' LICENSE BILL PROTECTION TO PUBLIC AND WORKERS.

The following bill has been unanimously indorsed by the Northwestern Cooks' Association, Local 458, and the Twin City Board of Business Agents:

A BILL.

REGULATING THE COOKING AND PREPARING OF FOOD IN PUBLIC EATING HOUSES AND OTHER ESTABLISHMENTS WHERE FOOD IS COOKED AND PREPARED FOR HUMAN CONSUMPTION; CREATING A BOARD OF EXAMINERS FOR COOKS, AND PROVIDING FOR THE LICENSING OF COOKS IN PUBLIC EATING PLACES AND OTHER ESTABLISHMENTS WHERE FOOD IS COOKED FOR HUMAN CONSUMPTION, AND PRESCRIBING A LICENSE FEE THEREFOR:

Be it Enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person to follow the occupation of a cook in this State, unless he shall first obtain a certificate of registration, as provided in this act; providing, however, that nothing in this act shall apply to or affect any person who is not actually engaged in such occupation, except as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. The occupation of cook is hereby defined to mean any person who is engaged in the preparation and cooking of food for human consumption in any public eating place.

A public eating place is hereby defined to mean any place where food is cooked or prepared for human consumption and served on the premises, and shall include restaurants, cafes, dining halls, lunch counters, hotels, and any other place, including boarding houses where food is cooked or prepared for human consumption on the premises and is served to more than ten (10) persons for a consideration; provided that this act shall not apply to the cooking and preparation of food in dining cars, or other vehicles, wherein food is cooked and prepared for persons going from State to State, and shall not apply to private families, except where more than ten (10) boarders are served for a consideration, nor to picnic parties, or railroad, thresher, mining lumber or other crews.

Sec. 3. A Board of Examiners to consist of three persons is hereby created to carry out the purposes and enforce the provisions of this act. Said board shall be appointed by the governor; one person from those who may be recommended by the several unions of journeymen cooks in this State which have been in actual existence at least two years prior to the making of such recommendation; one member who has been for at least three years prior to his appointment an employing cook in this State, and the third a practicing physician.

Each member of said board shall serve for a term of two years until his successor is appointed and qualified, except in the case of the first board, one of whose members shall serve for one year and the other two for two years, as specified in their appointment.

Each member of said board shall give a bond in the sum of five thousand ($5,000) dollars, with sureties to be approved by the Secretary of State, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties, and shall take the oath provided by law for public officers. Vacancies upon said board caused by death, resignation or expiration of the term of any member thereof, shall be filled by appointment from the same class of persons to which the deceased or retiring member belonged.

Sec. 4. Said board shall elect a president, secretary and treasurer, shall have its headquarters at the State capitol; shall have a common seal, and the secretary and president shall have power to administer oaths.

Sec. 5. Each member of said board shall receive a compensation of five ($5) dollars per day for actual services, and ten (10) cents per mile for each mile actually traveled in attending the meeting of the board, which compensation shall be paid out of any moneys in the hands of the treasurer of said board, provided, that the said compensation and mileage shall in no event be paid out of the State treasury.

Sec. 6. Said board shall report to the legislature of this State at each of its regular meetings a full statement of the receipts and disbursements of the board during the preceding two (2) years, a full statement of its doings and proceedings, and such recommendations as to it may seem proper looking to the better carrying out of the intents and purposes of this act.

Any moneys in the hands of the treasurer of said board at the time of making such report, in excess of two hundred and fifty ($250) dollars, shall be paid over to the State Treasurer to be kept by him for the future maintenance of the board and to be disbursed by him upon warrants signed by the president and treasurer of said board.

Sec. 7. Said board shall hold public examinations at least six times in each year in at least five different cities in this State, at such times and places as it may determine, notice of such meetings to be given by a publication thereof at least ten (10) days before such meetings, in the capitol of the State and in the county where such meeting is to be held.

Sec. 8. Every person now engaged in the occupation of cook in this State shall, within ninety (90) days after the approval of this act, file with the secretary of said board an affidavit setting forth his name, residence and the length of time during which, and the places where he has practised such occupation, and shall pay to the treasurer of said board one ($1) dollar, and a certificate of registration entitling him to practice said occupation thereupon shall be issued to him.

Sec. 9. Any person desiring to obtain a certificate of registration under this act, shall make application to said board therefor, and shall pay to the treasurer of said board an examination fee of five ($5) dollars, and shall present himself at the next regular meeting of the board for the examination of applicants, whereupon said board shall proceed to examine such person, and satisfy themselves that he is above the age of eighteen (18) years, of good moral character, free from contagious or infectious diseases, has studied the practice of cook for at least three years as an apprentice under a qualified cook, or practiced the trade in another State for at least three (3) years, and is possessed of the requisite skill in said trade, in knowledge of the preparation and cooking of foods, and the proper method of keeping and preserving the same, and has a knowledge of the nutritive value and digestibility of foods; his name shall be entered by the board in the register hereinafter provided for, and a certificate of registration shall be issued to him, authorizing him to practice said trade in this State.

All persons making application for examination under the provisions of this act, shall be allowed to practice the occupation of cook until the next regular meeting of said board.

Sec. 10. Nothing in this act shall prohibit any person from serving as an apprentice or assistant under a licensed cook authorized to practice under this act; provided, that there shall be a licensed cook in each public eating place, and there shall not be more than one assistant or apprentice cook to each licensed cook, and where more than one licensed cook is employed, there shall not be more than one apprentice cook to each licensed cook.

Sec. 11. Said board shall furnish to each person to whom a certificate of registration is issued, a card of insignia, bearing the seal of the board and the signature of its president and treasurer, certifying that the holder thereof is entitled to practice the occupation of cook in this State, and it shall be the duty of the holder of such card of insignia to post the same in a conspicuous place in the kitchen where he is employed.

Sec. 12. Said board shall keep a register in which shall be entered the names of all persons, to whom certificates are issued under this act, and said register shall be at all times open to public inspection.

Sec. 13. Said board shall have power to revoke any certificate of registration granted by it under this act for (a) conviction of crime; (b) habitual drunkenness for six (6) months immediately before a charge duly made; (c) gross incompetency, or (d) contagious or infectious disease; provided, that before any certificate shall be so revoked the holder thereof shall have notice in writing of the charge or charges against him, and shall at a day specified in said notice, at least five (5) days after the service thereof, be given a public hearing and full opportunity to produce testimony in his behalf and to confront the witnesses against him. Any person whose certificate has been so revoked may, after the expiration of ninety (90) days, apply to have the same regranted, and the same shall be regranted to him upon a satisfactory showing that the disqualification has ceased.

Sec. 14. Any person practicing the occupation of cook without having obtained a certificate of registration, as provided by this act, or willfully employing a cook who has not such a certificate, or falsely pretending to be qualified to practice under this act, or violation of any provisions of this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail, or city workhouse not more than ninety (90) days.

Sec. 15. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

THE ADVANTAGES OF HIGH DUES.

Power is necessary to influence. Power depends upon resources. This is true of the trade union as well as of every other organization. The labor organizations that have the greatest power to protect their members and the greatest influence in furthering the needs and the demands of their members are the labor organizations provided with ample, substantial financial resources.

There is only one way to accumulate organization funds—payment of adequate union dues. Organizations have found it a wise policy to increase low dues as rapidly as possible because increased financial resources at their command give them increased prestige, increased ability to secure better wages and working conditions and increased ability to provide against threatened dangers. There is no investment a wage-earner can make that will bring him greater returns than his union dues. If dues to the union are increased proportionally as the union increases wages, the power of the union to promote and safeguard the interests of its members becomes increasingly effective.

The financial organization of a trade union must be based on sound business principles. Wildcat finances in trade unions will be no more reliable than wildcat banking investments. Money will not get into the union treasury by miracle or by the wishing process. The protection of a well-filled treasury is possible only for those who are willing to pay the price in dues, management and foresight. The very existence of a sound financial organization constitutes a defense of its members. Power does not always have to be aggressively used in order to be effective—reserve power is often the most potent. Consciousness that they possess power puts moral courage and confidence into the workers, and it puts fear into the hearts of those who would wrong them. When power exists there is hesitancy to deny the possessors their rights or fair demands. The existence of the power of self-defense prevents many industrial struggles while the weak and the helpless are wronged with impunity.

As union dues are increased it is possible to extend the system of union benefits. These benefits supplement the wages earned and enable unionists to live better and more comfortably.

Labor organizations are constantly preaching the gospel of higher wages. What wages are to the individual, dues are to the organization. The ideal of the American Federation of Labor is to have each organization strong, competent to manage its affairs and to solve its own difficulties. While there is whole-souled sympathy and willingness to help fellow workers in their time of need, yet the best results for all workers can be obtained when each organization is free to protect and promote the rights and interests of its own members and to organize the yet unorganized.

But high dues should not be accompanied by high initiation fees. Indeed the initiation fee should be small, thereby inviting and making it possible for the yet unorganized to join the union and to make common cause with their fellow workers to secure the common welfare of all. High dues regularly paid will inevitably lead to greater self-reliance, mutual interdependence, unity, solidarity, fraternity and federation.—SAMUEL GOMPERS, in American Federationist.

THE POWER OF UNIONISM.

Let him who questions the value of unionism pause and consider for a moment just one thing that unionism has accomplished.

It is well known that in the early days of the present factory system the day's work extended usually to fourteen or sixteen hours.

This long day existed for all workers, the skilled and the unskilled, the children as well as the men and women.

The workers had not yet learned to organize and as individuals they were utterly helpless to effect a change in the hours of their labor or in the scale of their wages.

There were, of course, no laws to protect them, and so they were entirely at the mercy of their employers.

The normal conditions that existed in the factory system little more than half a century ago in England and elsewhere throughout the world are equaled today only in certain plague spots.

When one reads the story of the misery and oppression, the long hours and low wages of those days, one wonders how the workers managed to live at all.

How much the condition of the workers generally has been improved it is by no means easy to say, but we do know that the condition of the workers has vastly improved wherever they have learned to value unity.

In those trades where the men have known enough to fight for their rights and to stand together there has arisen what some scoffers like to call an "aristocracy of labor."

And if in certain trades there are indeed aristocrats of labor, it is simply because they have had intelligence enough to fight together, to pay dues to one organization and to battle always with unity and solidarity.

And what they have done, all other workers can do.

The "aristocrats" hold no patent on their method of action, and by acting in the same manner all other toilers can win all the "aristocrats" have won.

Now it is difficult to ascertain just how much union workers have benefited by higher wages.

In that matter there is always the question as to the increased cost of living which makes difficult any comparison of wages here and abroad or of wages now with those of forty years ago.

The best one can do is to compare wages and hours today in one trade that is organized with the wages and hours in another trade that is unorganized.

This has been well done by the Department of Labor at Washington, and the figures gathered by the department shows beyond dispute the enormous benefits that have come to labor as a result of organization.

Consider for one moment the following facts:

We all know that the workers in the iron and steel trade are poorly organized and we find that the hours of labor in this trade are eighty-four hours per week.

On the other hand, we all know that the stone and granite cutters are well organized.

When we look up the figures of their hours we find that they work forty-eight hours per week.

The bricklayers, the carpenters, the hodcarriers, the painters, the paperhangars and the plumbers are highly organized trades, and when we inquire into the hours worked by these, we find that they rarely average more than fifty hours per week.

These workers, then, are the "aristocrats" of labor simply because they are well united in their trade, are loyal to their organization, pay their dues and fight a common battle.

It would be difficult to find an argument in support of unionism so potent as this one.

To find one set of workers like the stone cutters working forty-eight hours per week and another set of workers in the iron and steel trade working eighty-four hours per week should alone be enough to convince every toiler in this wide land of the value or unionism.

But this is not all. The hot blast men, who work an average of eighty hours a week, obtain only about 16 cents per hour for their labor.

The stone cutter, who works on an average of forty-eight hours per week, receive an average of 41 cents per hour.

In other words, the stone cutters, working about half the time of the hot blast men, receive at the end of a week much larger wages.

To look at it in another way, a hot blast man during his life sells to his boss an amount of labor equal to that sold by two stone cutters during their life.

The hot blast worker gives in one life what one stone cutter would need two lives to give, and he gives the labor of two lives for less money than a stone cutter receives for the labor of his one life.

Think of this and then consider how tragic it is that one must actually persuade workingmen to believe in industrial unity.

It is almost impossible to believe that any class of the workers should be blind to the value of unionism or loath to suffer almost anything to achieve it.

And what astounding evidence of working class stupidity it would be if the workers of this country should, without a fight, allow their unions to be crushed and their right of organization taken away by the capitalist legislatures and courts.

The value of unity is so clear, the gains for those who have united are so evident, and the necessity of organization for all workers is so great, that it would seem that men, if they have intelligence to fight for anything, they would surely fight for this.—ROBERT HUNTER, in American Federationist.

ON WRITING FOR THE MIXER AND SERVER.

By JOHN BOOKJANS, of Local 106, 4706 Tillman Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

Local press secretaries may look upon it as presumptuous on my part that I should undertake to lay down rules intended to guide them in their correspondence. By way of justifying this article, however, I need point out only that it is entirely optional with one either to accept or to reject what I shall suggest. We should encourage every free and disinterested exchange of ideas calculated to further our progress. The labor movement resembles a complex machine the efficiency of which is commensurate with the proper functioning of its every part.

Education is to the labor movement what lubrication is to the machine—both make efficiency by eliminating friction. Our International will more effectually serve its purpose in proportion that we succeed in diffusing education throughout all of its organs. This education should be both general and special. It should comprise a knowledge of the conditions that gave rise to this International Union and of the forces that propel its growth. But more especially such an education should teach each officer and active member of this International or of the local unions composing it, how he may work most effectively in his own particular sphere. We must learn the value of system and method. The progress of our International, so far as the way for it has been prepared by the evolution of the catering industry—a subject beyond the scope of this article—is proportionate to a large extent to the time and attention devoted by us to finding ways and means for more effectively doing our work than has been our wont.

The requirements of a local union officer vary with the nature of his office. Here we are concerned only with the duties of the press secretary and lack of time and space place us under the necessity of confining our remarks on them to a few general hints. Possibly it has never occurred to most press secretaries that their duties call for special qualifications. Why, they may ask themselves, should one take more care in preparing a letter for publication than one addressed to an intimate chum? In reply to this query one might say that, while we should give our best thought and attention to whatever we may write, our faults, in a private letter, may at the worst be discovered by only a friend, while our blunders in a letter for publication are subjected to the scrutiny of thousands of readers, not a few of which perhaps are comparatively well informed.

Our subject is divided into two parts—subject matter and the manner of its presentation. The subject matter is that what we write on. Most press secretaries are manifestly hard pressed for something to write on. To supply this want, they resort to descanting upon the vices and virtues of local officers. Knowing that it does not always take well to talk about an officer's vices, a local press secretary more frequently indulges in extolling his virtues. This empty flattery quite often takes some such a form as "Brother Jones, our new president, is a worthy successor to Brother Davis," or "Our financial secretary is a great hustler," or, again, "Brother Dick, our newly-elected business agent, is very popular with the bosses," and so forth ad nauseum.

Such hollow praise would seem to be superfluous for the reason that if an officer's reputation can not rest on his merits, it richly deserves to fall. Your ceaseless eulogies upon local officers may cause you to be suspected of toadying for favors, if not of being a paid "claqueur." It ill befits us to do aught which smacks of cheap politics. The organized labor movement must win by democratic methods. There is a tendency on the part of press secretaries to forget that they are required to write not for one member, nor yet for a group of members or officers, but for the organization as a whole. If the officer of a local union, however, should have qualities that peculiarly fit him for his office, we had better not lose any sleep over their not becoming known without being trumpeted out in an official communication to the MIXER AND SERVER.

Except when justified by some special occasion, we can well afford to dispense with comments upon our officers' qualifications and it stands us in much better stead to confine our letters to an impersonal discussion of general interest. In this country we are little given to what in Germany is called "sachliche Diskussion"—a discussion of things and facts on their own merits and without reference to persons. If a press secretary is to do justice to his office, he must set out to acquire an intimate knowledge of the mechanism of his local union and of the problems confronting it. The conditions of the trade is always a fit subject to write on and we can never acquire sufficient accurate knowledge on how our members work and live—on how they are compensated for their labor and on the duration of their daily toil. If we are to do away with the many abuses that grow apace as trusts and corporations gain control of the catering industry, we must freely air them in such organs as the MIXER AND SERVER, even though the necessity for protecting the writer require that this be done anonymously. It does not profit us to be prejudiced against literature of exposure. In this connection it is well to call attention to the difference between mere calamity howling with a political object and a true exposition of the manifold injustice that is being foisted upon us.

I shall not attempt to enumerate any more subjects that a press secretary might write on with great profit to the reading members. He has a whole month in which to study his subject and the task is well worth his best mettle. Quality should be given preference to quantity.

After having thus briefly disposed of the subject matter that is to enter into a letter, we may turn our attention for a few minutes to the form in which it is to appear. An exhaustive treatment of this phase of the subject would be equivalent to rewriting the average work on grammar and rhetoric.

"Le style c'est l'homme," is a statement attributed to Voltaire. In English this would read, "Style is the man—or, a man's character is revealed in his style."

A thorough knowledge of English can hardly be expected from press secretaries and other members of this International contributing to the MIXER AND SERVER, yet such glaring blunders as one occasionally lights on must needs dispare us in the eyes of an educated public. To place a comma where obviously there should be a period or some other punctuation mark, to omit the pronoun "I" or "we" in such statements as "I shall let you know tomorrow, etc.": to begin a sentence with a small letter instead of a capital, habitually to interchange "shall" and "will," to say "he don't" instead of "he does not"—all these are inexcusable mistakes that never appear in a reputable business letter or in a good magazine article.

One should acquire the habit of expressing the greatest possible number of ideas in the smallest possible number of words. One should be clear—that is, one should so construct one's sentences that they admit of but one interpretation. The use of vulgar slang and of language that smacks of the gutter does not add to the beauty of one's style.

These are merely a few hints of how one might learn to write at least presentable English. One may greatly improve one's use of English by closely observing the employment of words and the formation of sentences in classical works. The formal study of grammar and rhetoric, however, can not be entirely dispensed with if one would acquire at least possible facility in the use of correct English. Books calculated to aid one in the study of English and in cultivating the habit of properly using it may be had in any library of average size. Admirably adapted for the practical study of English is a magazine published in Chicago under the title of "Correct English." No one who cherishes the ambition of becoming an effective writer should forego the pleasure of reading "The Philosophy of Style," by Herbert Spencer.

THE LESSON OF THE DAY.

"Who won?"

That is the question which was asked the Record over the phone several times last night and many times this forenoon in connection with the industrial trouble.

Both.

If one person or one side wins, the other side or some other person must have lost. As both sides in the industrial dispute in Stockton have lost and were losing—the one in employment and wages, the other in business—and as the community suffered heavily through dissension and bitterness, it follows that in a cessation of the strife both sides and likewise the community have won.

Therefore, let all of us get this one big, important thought into our minds and keep it straight:

In continuing the destructive, bitter struggle, all were losing; in peace, all win. The victory is not over the other fellow. It is over our own ugly, discordant, belligerent selves, our evil natures. We have compelled Satan to get behind us, instead of leading us on, as he was doing. Neither side has licked the other; neither party to the strife has been vanquished. And this is better so. Each side has instilled into the other a wholesome respect for its fighting qualities. If one disputant could have whipped the other to a frazzle, could have forced an abject surrender and dictated terms, that would not have foreboded peace for the future: it would simply have meant smouldering fires of hate and a consuming, intensified desire for revenge, which at any time might have burst forth into fierce flames. The only peace worth while, the only peace which gives any fair promise of endurance, is that which is secured with honor to both sides, which has been brought about by conference, by compromise, by arbitration, by give-and-take, by concession and adjustment. Such is the basis of settlement in the Stockton trouble. Why, then, waste a moment in splitting hairs, in fine distinctions, as to who has won. The Record holds that the hair-splitter, the vain-glorious, the boastful and the self-important individual is an undesirable citizen, and we feel that we are in unison with all patriotic, right-mindedness, peace-loving citizens in the expression of the strong hope and earnest desire that there be no controversy as to who has won.

And this also carries with it the proposition that for the present it were better to postpone any close analysis or minute speculation as to just what terms of settlement mean. It means everything or nothing, depending wholly and absolutely on the spirit in which it is worked out and applied. There is no hard and fast guarantee; there is nothing binding; there is no strong chain and no bonds. It is simply a calling off of the fight, both contestants being eager and anxious to quit. They might, so far as any real restraining effect in the agreement itself goes, resume fighting tomorrow. But they will not! Why? Because both sides have been taught a hard lesson, perhaps a profitable one, but certainly a lesson. Both sides have purchased experience—purchased it dearly—but if they take the experience to their hearts, if they learn the lesson, and never forget it, then will it be worth all it cost. The unions in Stockton had become too arbitrary, too dictatorial. They were feeling their oats. They were sensing deeply their power, and, as is the case with human nature the world over, the accession of power led to its arbitrary exercise, to over-reaching. Finally the employers organized. They formed a powerful association. They felt their strength and they proceeded to exert it. They felt that they had suffered through union exactions. They would crush the unions, once and for all. They controlled employment, they were leagued with money and financial institutions which had the bestowal or the withdrawal of credit. They furnished the wherewithal to make the wheels of industry go round. They would exert their will. They would brook no opposition. No expression of adverse opinion would be tolerated. Press and pulpit must be quiescent. The end justified the means.

Thoroughly organized, prepared for war, offensive as well as defensive, the clash, of course, soon came. No matter what the first point of dispute was. Just as well one thing as another.

Now, after months of warfare, disastrous to all concerned, a truce has been proclaimed, and, let no one be deceived, it is only a truce. By this we do not mean that the fight is to be resumed—far from it. But it might easily be resumed. It is this danger we would emphasize. It is incumbent on every one of us, no matter whether a contestant or a member of the great third party, the general public, to do all in our power to heal the trouble, to deal justly by all, to recognize the right of the other fellow, to endeavor to "put oneself in his place"—in short, our united endeavor should be to re-establish confidence, and following that will come the restoration of that "industrial equilibrium" about which we've heard so much.

Whatever problems may confront us, whatever exigencies may arise and whatever differences of opinion may occur over the meaning and intent of the terms of settlement, can all be adjusted, as can be any other question or friction which may develop in the future, if we only really want to do it, and try to do it in a spirit of justice and right-mindedness.

Have we learned our lesson?

Some people learn by experience—they are the wise, the tolerant, the forbearing, generous ones; some people learn by the experiences of others—they are the happy ones; some people never learn at all—they are the fools!

In which class do we Stocktonians belong?—Editorial, Stockton (Cal.) Record, December 22, 1914.

ALONG THE FIRING LINE

"OTHERS ALMOST ALL DRY."

The North American, on the 17th day of January, published a two-column article under the caption "Prohibition in Fourteen States—Others Almost All Dry."

It is because of the concluding sentence—"Others Almost All Dry"—that The Times takes pains to comment thereon.

There is nothing more misleading than the statement that because the majority of the counties of a State are "Dry" that therefore the State to about to adopt prohibition. Let us illustrate:

When the Downs high license and local option law was adopted in 1882, at the very first election 80 per cent of the counties went "Dry"—but two counties alone represented nearly half the population, to wit: Jackson, containing Kansas City, and St. Louis, containing the city of St. Louis.

When the State of Minnesota adopted high license and local option in 1886, at the succeeding election more than 75 per cent of the counties went "Dry"—but the population of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, St. Cloud, Anoka and the counties in which they are situated, practically constitute one-half the population of Minnesota.

An enumeration of all the States in the alphabet is published by The North American from which we take a single State as an illustration: "Michigan—34 Dry counties; 50 Wet."

This, on the face of it, would indicate that when Michigan gains eight more counties she will be able to control the State for the "Drys"—when as a matter of fact three counties out of the 84 represent more than one-third of the population.

The point we wish to make is that "high license and local option" is not only the only efficient way of controlling the liquor business, but that "local option" gives to every local community the right to settle the liquor question itself—and that is the quintessence of "home rule."

In the late election in Washington, in spite of the combinations that were made for political purposes, leaving the question of "Dry" or "Wet" out altogether, the West Side, with the two-thirds population went "Wet" by 15,000. And yet the State as a whole went "Dry" by about 16,000!

Here one has the illustration of a State naturally divided in agriculture on one side—timber and its interests, fisheries and maritime commerce on the other—having its much greater population controlled by the other side.

That is not "home rule." That is not the fundamental principle of a Republic which begins with the family, and grows up through the community, the city, the county—into the State—and even though a State may have a majority of its people as a whole desiring prohibition, the County of Okanogan, for example, had no right to help determine what the County of King shall do touching any local question.

"High license and local option" in ten years' time, if allowed to operate, as it has during the last twenty years, would give three-fourths of all the towns in the United States a "Dry" administration—and there wouldn't be a solitary voice raised against that action—for it would be the expression of the community, which has a right to determine its own local affairs.

On the other hand, prohibition in every State where it has been tried has proven to be an absolute failure, as everybody who is not a partisan knows.

Even the people in Washington, in the name of prohibition, will be permitted, by the present bill, when it shall become a law, to buy more liquors of every kind in a solitary year than the State ever consumed under high license and local option.—Seattle Times, Feb. 6, 1915.

THE LONGING unrewarded.

In a recent number of the Mixer and Server we printed an article about Kansas. In fact, it was an article designed to "call the hand" of William Allen White, who had enthusiastically described his State, Kansas, as having reached a "stage of social and economic adjustment much nearer the ideal status of the dreamers than the most radical visionary would have thought possible." So far as we have information William Allen White has not responded to the challenge contained in the referred to article, which, by the way, was written by former United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue Hon. Royal E. Cabell. We have promised to reproduce Mr. White's response whenever it is offered. Those of our members who have followed the articles written on Kansas and by Kansans have noted their many claims to the enjoyment of a greater measure of the good things of life than the citizens of other political units called States. The average Dry advocate takes unto himself and his followers about everything in sight, but William Allen White, while none the less anxious to store up as many good things as he can for his State, makes an admission in the following lines which may, and in fact no doubt will, interest the readers of the Mixer and Server, for after all has been written with reference to prohibition, there is an undeniable something lacking in the products of dry State genius, and Mr. White gives that something expression when he says:

"And yet this population, so abundantly blessed, has not produced one great inventor, one great statesman, one great poet, novelist, artist, philosopher or leader whose fame is really lasting and national. We have contributed nothing to the world that our sister State of Nebraska, with her saloons, can not duplicate, except happiness and prosperity. That happiness and prosperity are worth while, from the viewpoint of those striving to be happy and prosperous, no one can deny. But are they worth while when the world's progress is considered? Are they an end in themselves? When we are all happy and prosperous, will the world be finished and wrapped up ready for delivery into whatever heaven or hell to which we are bidden?"

Kansas has had her share of erratics. There has been hardly a period in her history during which she boasted of her aridness but what there has not been one or several of her residents cutting didoes which elicited the favor of funny sheet paragraphers. The laws proposed by Kansas lawmakers, if catalogued and commented upon, would make humorous reading enough for hours. The claims made by Kansas and its writers that it enjoys a big measure of "happiness and prosperity," look good on paper, but in actual every-day life they don't materialize to the extent boasted of.

Not so very long ago another one of Kansas' boosters, Dr. Sheldon, followed the usual custom of boasting. It was while he was in Cincinnati, Dec. 18, 1914, as one of the Flying Squadron, that he was called for some of his wild statements in the following manner by Morris F. Westheimer:

THE TRUTH ABOUT KANSAS.

To THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES-STAR—In the Times-Star of December 18 you printed certain statements by Dr. Sheldon, of Kansas, relative to the effects of prohibition upon that State.

It seems to me that if the Anti-Saloon League was actually convinced of the good effects of prohibition that organization would not harp upon one State alone and make this harping bristle with false statements. The story of Kansas has been told repeatedly by prohibition orators until its repetition has, in the minds of some, become confused with the truth.

"As to Kansas," Dr. Sheldon says, "it is now the second richest State in the Union—" This he can not prove. The financial statistics for 1912, Census Bureau, page 334, shows Kansas is assessed on from 90 to 100 per cent of the full, true value of the property of the State. Page 44 of Census Bureau bulletin on "Wealth, Debt and Taxation" credits Kansas with $1,468 per capita. Dr. Sheldon says his State has a per capita assessed valuation of $1,684." He gives Kansas just $216 per capita more than the Federal Government. The Census Bureau bulletin credits Nevada with $5,214 a head and lists 23 States higher than Kansas.

The statistical abstracts of the United States for 1913 places the average amount for each bank depositor in Kansas at $231.69. For Ohio the amount is $356.78.

Dr. Sheldon says Kansas "has doubled its bank deposits from 110 to 220 millions in ten years." The 1913 report of the Comptroller of Currency, page 58, shows the total bank desposits of Kansas on June 4, 1913, to amount to $179,424,502.44 and not $220,000,000. Dr. Sheldon's figure is just 41 million too high.

Dr. Sheldon says Kansas "spends only $5,000,000 a year for liquor, instead of the average of $35,000,000 for a license State, and thus saves $30,000,000." This is the most daring statement made to date by an Anti-Saloon League agitator. If Kansas is "dry," who spends that five million, and how can they spend it? The internal revenue reports have no record of consumption of beer, wine or whisky in Kansas. If Dr. Sheldon concedes five million dollars spent for these products, and if we add the amounts which result from illicit stills and other sources, Kansas may be discovered to spend as much as some other "wet" States for drinks.

As a matter of fact, there is no way of estimating the amount of liquor consumed in Kansas, as there is no official check upon the supply. It is, however, very interesting to hear a prohibition agitator credit a "dry" State with a $5,000,-000 "drink bill."

As to pauperism in Kansas, Bulletin No. 120, issued by the Census Bureau, shows the number of paupers in almshouses for 1910. The rate per 1,000 for Kansas was 43.49. Fourteen States have a lower pauper rate than has Kansas. The statement was made in the recent campaign in Ohio that "many counties in Kansas have no poor in their poor-houses." This is true, because of the simple fact that many counties in KANSAS HAVE NO POOR-HOUSES. IN KANSAS THE POOR ARE FARMED OUT TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER.

As to inmates in penitentiaries, the statistical abstracts of the United States for 1910 give the following: Per 100,000 population the persons confined in penal institutions in Kansas are 149.6, in Ohio 84.0, and in New York 137.3. Kansas has more criminals in her penitentiaries in percentage to the population than Ohio, and, what is even more astonishing, than New York.

As to divorces, the same report (1910) gives for Kansas 109 per 100,000 population and for Ohio 91 per 100,000. Where is the advantage of Kansas in this instance?

According to the statistical abstracts for 1912, the tax rate per $100 of assessed valuation in 1902 was: Kansas 4.09, and Ohio 2.38. The Bureau of Education bulletin for 1913, Ch. 4, Vol. II, places the number of students in universities, colleges and technology schools in Kansas at 11,643, and in Ohio at 22,264. Dr. Sheldon says "21,000" in Kansas, which is just 10,000 too many. Furthermore, Kansas has but 19 institutions of higher learning, whereas Ohio leads with 40.

Of the 23 capital cities in license States in the registration area, 17 had a lower death rate than Topeka (18.5 for 1912), as follows: St. Paul, 10.2; Madison, 10.7; Lansing, 11.4; Salt Lake City, 11.6; Lincoln, 12.4; New Haven, 13.3; Denver, 14.2; Helena, 14.2; Columbus, 14.3; Harrisburg, 14.3; Jefferson City, 14.9; Indianapolis, 14.9; Springfield, 15.7; Trenton, 16.7, and Sacramento, 17.6.

Of the 23 registered States, from which the mortality statistics are gathered, only two were "dry" at the time of the report. North Carolina, a "dry" State, has a death rate of 17.3 per 1,000 population. Maine, another "dry" State, has a rate of 15.3. The rate of each of these two dry States was higher than the rates of the wet States of California, 14.2; Connecticut, 14.9; Indiana, 13.0; Kentucky, 12.0; Maryland, 15.5; Massachusetts, 15.0; Michigan, 13.4; Minnesota, 9.5; Missouri, 12.6; Montana, 10.0; New Jersey, 14.1; New York, 15.0; Ohio, 13.0; Pennsylvania, 14.0; Rhode Island, 15.3; Utah, 9.9; Vermont, 15.2; Washington, 7.9; Wisconsin, 11.3. The death rate is higher in the "dry" States than in the "wet" States, despite the fact that beer, wine and whisky are sold in the latter. Kansas is not a registered State and hence can not be compared.

As to mortality statistics, Kansas is not a registration State, and no authentic statistics are available, as the United States makes no records of mortalities in Kansas. The only statistics are those made by the individual to suit the individual's need.

The statistical abstracts of the United States tell us more about Kansas and Ohio. The estimated true value of all property in Kansas is placed at $2,253,224,243, and in Ohio (the fourth richest State in the Union) it is placed at $5,946,969,466.

A special report of the Bureau of Census on "Religious Bodies," Part 1, 1906, page 58, gives the percentage of inhabitants attending church in Kansas 28.4 per cent, and Ohio 39.2 per cent.

Kansas became a prohibition State in 1882. The following increase in population of Kansas and Ohio should be noted:

	1880	1910	Increase
Kansas	996,096	1,690,949	694,853
Ohio	1,648,690	2,289,905	1,139,221

Dr. Sheldon then says that "the overwhelming majority of the people of Kansas believe the prohibition law the greatest blessing their State has ever had." As the "people of Kansas" are not here to testify in their own behalf, we can not test the correctness of the speaker's assertion. It is certain though, that the people of Ohio should feel the same way and somewhat better.

One could go on "ad infinitum" and lay bare the weakness of the alleged "Seventh Heaven" Kansas, but, in the face of the preceding statistics, Dr. Sheldon's remarks seem at least exaggerations.

Ohio, as George Ade might say, "has it all over" Kansas. It is about time that these non-resident agitators go back to Kansas and cease their vain efforts to attack the progress and social advancement of those commonwealths which are fortunate enough to be without prohibition. If Kansas is the abiding place of the millennium, why is it that Dr. Sheldon spends so much time away from home? To my mind the "Flying Squadron" is in momentary danger of losing the "F." A bit of research, honest investigation and truthful allegation may save the letter for them.

ALABAMA DRY.

Governor Henderson's Vetoes on Bills Are Voted Down.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 22.—Governor Henderson delivered an address to the Alabama Legislature today, renouncing two bills for state-wide prohibition. "I disapprove the bills," he said, "and suggest that the voters of the state gather at the polls and decide whether they want the various counties of the state wet or dry. This will lead to prohibition state-wide, more efficient than state-wide prohibition."

Alabama will become a prohibition state July 1 under two related measures which become law tonight without executive approval. Within a few hours after Governor Henderson had vetoed the bills and asked that the prohibition question be submitted to voters at a special election, both houses voted down his proposal and repassed the bills by overwhelming majorities.

BOOZE VIA PUMPKIN ROUTE.

West Virginia Just Must Have Its Liquor Supply.

Kenova, W. Va., Feb. 6.—Located in three states—West Virginia, Ohio, and Kentucky—this town is furnishing the State Prohibition Commission more trouble than any other city or town in the state.

The latest move to outwit the Yost prohibition law has been the placing of pint bottles of liquor in pumpkins, which the Kentucky farmers haul here, charging $1 for a pumpkin.

One farmer sold 2,000 pumpkins here in a single day. A canvasser has been in the city obtaining orders for pints at $1 each, and notified patrons to station themselves along Raccoon creek, about a half mile east of here, tonight, and be ready to catch pumpkins which will be rolled down from the Kentucky side.

INTEMPERATE EMPLOYERS.

To the Editor of The World—I wish The World, with its great influence, would urge moderation for both employer and employee. Just now there appears to be rising a wave of intemperance among employers.

When an employer tries to regulate the personal habits of his employee outside working hours; when he says to his employee, "You will be discharged if seen even to enter a saloon!" or when he goes to the extreme of dismissing a score of old employees for simply signing a fellow townsman's application for a saloon license (which actually was done recently by a Pennsylvania corporation), he violates the spirit of American citizenship; he assails even the Constitution of the United States by curtailing inalienable human rights therein proclaimed.

Of course there is no defense for a discharged workman who by his nightly excesses regularly impairs his efficiency for next day's work, because this is properly a matter of shop discipline. But the workman's right, after hours, to visit his club, the saloon, to expand the social side of life, is equal to that of his employer, who visits a similar though sweller resort. The attempt to abridge this right will not succeed, and incidentally may but provoke an organized revolt bad for all concerned.

JACKSON SQUARE.

New York, January 15.

WHENCE THE REVENUES?

Neighboring West Virginia has seen fit to adopt prohibition, and during the recent contest in Ohio much was said of the benefits achieved thereby. Trade was better, the people were happier and morals were elevated. But the material side of the situation is beginning to obtrude itself. The Auditor of State has called recently for either an increase in the revenue of $700,000 or a corresponding retrenchment in ordinary expenditures. Disregarding the loss of the liquor license income the General Assembly made liberal appropriations and created two new departments of state.

Now the hour has struck for the paying of the piper. In some of the cities the councils have laid a professional and occupational tax, intricate in detail and hydra-headed in scope. The state must now cast about it for new sources of impost. Quite naturally the easy suggestion is made to increase the general levy. But the State Board of Public Works has already advanced the rate from 6 cents on the $100 valuation in the fiscal year of 1913 to 10 cents in the fiscal year which began last July 1. Yet this will not take care of the deficit. The auditor, it may be said with proper deference, foolishly proposes to compel the employers of the state to provide for the maintenance of the operating department of the workmen's compensation fund, all of which now comes out of their pockets.

But, if he has gone astray on this particular subject, he is in the right path when he sounds this warning against the too great and too rapid increase of general taxes:

"We should make haste slowly and deliberately and be sure of our ability to pay as we go along. By a too great increase of taxes we will discourage not only our own people, but also the influx of outside capital, and thereby hinder the very causes we desire so much to advance."

It is with regret that the state's financial officer foresees the hampering of the advancement of the schools, the extension of the good roads system and the construction of necessary public buildings, and adds the intimation that the public treasury may have to be replenished through the issuing of bonds.

It may be argued that this is a presentation of material matters as against a great moral issue. Admitting this as true, the situation that Ohio may be called upon to meet in 1916 is not changed thereby. The Prohibitionists must not only be intensely moral, as they see it, but they must be equally practical, as everybody else sees it. In their new campaign they should be frank enough to tell the voters how they intend to make up the deficiencies in the budget that will appear if they are victorious.—Editorial, Cincinnati Enquirer, January 11, 1915.

RELUCTANT ADMISSION THAT THE TAR STATE IS A VERY WET COMMONWEALTH.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 7, 1915.—In order to aid the Anti-Saloon League of North Carolina in its effort to make this state really dry, instead of being "one of the wettest in the South," S. F. Conrad, one of Charlotte's most influential prohibitionists, has prepared and published in the News of the latter city a statement showing that Charlotte consumes over 200 gallons of whiskey a day. The executive committee of the League in order to get its new bill before the legislature, has decided to recede from its previous position and acknowledge that the present law, drastic as it is, in reality, a failure. Mr. Conrad's tables and statement will prove this to the legislators. He says:

"There are 4,800 gallons of liquor a month, 1,200 gallons a week or 200 gallons a day coming into Charlotte through the express office. These figures are taken from the records of the express company, giving the daily receipts and this too, before the Christmas rush started.

"As great as these figures are, they do not include what is shipped in by freight in barrels and boxes.

"Is anyone surprised that Charlotte must raise $10,000 for charity when $14,000 and more goes out of town each month for liquor? This is the money value of the 4,800 gallons of liquor at the present price being paid.

"While the town is asleep the clubs and the blind tigers are sending our young men to hell and taking the bread away from the wives and children!"

It was claimed by many of the well-known citizens and city officials of Charlotte that liquor had been a thing of the past in that town since the state became dry. It was said that crime had been reduced, that poverty was almost unknown, that there was little or no drinking, that not much if any liquor was shipped into the state, and that the law was working perfectly. Interviews to the above effect were circulated freely last fall during the Virginia prohibition campaign and it is admitted that they had much to do with turning the tide in favor of the "drys" in the latter state.

But throughout North Carolina there seems to be an impression that it will be better hereafter to tell the exact truth as to conditions and to go before the legislature acknowledging that the law now in effect does not prevent drinking nor any of the other evils. It is argued that unless this is done the lawmakers may refuse to pass the new legislation, and leave the state in its present annoying position. The new law will be framed so as to make it a crime for any resident of the state to have any liquor in his possession, even in his home.

IS NORWAY IN LOVE WITH PROHIBITION?

The advocates and shouters for national prohibition constantly refer to Norway as an example of a nation enacting and enforcing prohibitory laws, and gleefully proclaim that the natives are enjoying most remarkable advantages since the so-called demon rum was banished. To give the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER an idea of how matters stood some months ago, the following press dispatch appeared in the Seattle (Wash.) Times, October 28, 1914:

NORWAY LEARNS PROHIBITION LAW FAILS TO PROHIBIT.

Christiania, Wednesday, Oct. 28.—The Norwegian press is making an almost unanimous appeal to the government to rescind the prohibition ordinance which was passed in the first excitement of the war to stop the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Nominally 50 per cent of the Norwegian people is represented in the membership of "teetotal societies," and next to Finland, Norway ordinarily has the smallest per capita consumption of alcohol in the world. It is the working classes who are most largely represented in the "teetotal" membership.

The appeal for rescinding the prohibition act is based primarily on assertions that after more than two months of prohibition, prohibition has not worked. Persons who could afford it have indulged extensively in the importation of strong liquors from Denmark and Scotland. Individuals have combined to form "private stock companies" and have brought in thousands of gallons every week, each person taking a keg or two for private use.

Among the poorer classes complaint is made that the prohibition law has created worse conditions, prompting the concoction of such weird drinks as "self murder"—the name given to de-naturalized alcohol flavored with oil of peppermint—and the cheapest kinds of so-called sweet wines, made from chemical products, which never saw grapes.

The police reports in Christiana show that the average number of arrests for drunkenness has been about the same as before the ordinance was passed, and in the meantime the government loses a revenue of $260,000 a month. Outside of the "teetotal" societies the demand for rescinding the new law has gained such headway that it is said the government may meet it.

The government has already rescinded the special law forbidding distillation of alcohol from potatoes. This is ordinarily an extensive industry in Norway, but at the outbreak of the European war it was thought necessary to stop it in order to conserve the food supply. As a matter of fact it was found that the potatoes used for this distilling process could not be kept long, there not being enough frost-proof cellars for their storage. The breweries, which had also been forbidden to malt their barley, have recommended their operations.

THE PROGRESS OF WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

Suffragists have wherewith to rejoice at the beginning of the year 1915, when they consider the progress the votes-for-women movement has made in the past few years. In the United States alone an average of two states a year have enfranchised the other half of its citizenship during the last four years, making the number an even dozen.

Ninety years ago women could not vote anywhere except to a very limited extent in Sweden and a few other places in the Old World.

In 1838 Kentucky gave school suffrage to widows with children of school age. In 1850, Ontario gave it to women, both married and single. In 1861 Kansas gave it to all women. Municipal suffrage was granted to women in Finland in 1863, and in New South Wales in 1867. In 1869 England gave municipal suffrage to single women and widows, Victoria gave it to women, both married and single, and Wyoming gave full suffrage to all women. In 1871 West Australia gave municipal suffrage to women. School suffrage was granted in 1875 by Michigan and Minnesota, in 1876 by Colorado, in 1877 by New Zealand, in 1878 by New Hampshire and Oregon, in 1879 by Massachusetts, in 1880 by New York and Vermont. In 1880 South Australia gave women municipal suffrage.

In 1881 municipal suffrage was extended to the women of Scotland, and Parliamentary suffrage to single women and widows in the Isle of Man. In 1882 Iceland gave municipal suffrage to single women and widows. Nebraska gave women school suffrage in 1883. Municipal suffrage was given by Ontario and Tasmania in 1884, and by New Zealand and New Brunswick in 1886.

In 1887 municipal suffrage was granted in Kansas, Nova Scotia and Manitoba, and school suffrage in North and South Dakota, Montana, Arizona and New Jersey. In the same year Montana gave taxpaying women the right to vote upon all questions submitted to the taxpayers.

In 1888 England gave women county suffrage, and British Columbia and the Northwest Territory gave them municipal suffrage. In 1889 suffrage was given to the women of Scotland, and municipal suffrage to single women and widows in the Province of Quebec. In 1890, school suffrage was granted in Oklahoma, and in 1891 in Illinois.

In 1893, school suffrage was granted in Connecticut, and full suffrage in Colorado and New Zealand. In 1894, school suffrage was granted in Ohio, bond suffrage in Iowa, and parish and district suffrage in England to women both married and single. In 1895, full state suffrage was granted in South Australia to women both married and single. In 1896, full suffrage was granted in Utah and Idaho.

In 1898, the women of Iceland were given the right to vote for all offices except members of Parliament; Minnesota gave women the right to vote for library trustees; Delaware gave school suffrage to tax-paying women; France gave women engaged in commerce the right to vote for judges of the tribunals of commerce, and Louisiana gave tax-paying women the right to vote upon all questions submitted to the taxpayers. In 1900, Wisconsin gave women school suffrage, and West Australia granted full state suffrage to women, both married and single.

In 1901, New York gave tax-paying women in all towns and villages of the state the right to vote on questions of local taxation, and Norway gave them municipal suffrage.

In 1902, full national suffrage was granted to all women of federated Australia and full state suffrage to the women of New South Wales.

In 1903, Tasmania gave full suffrage to women, and bond suffrage was granted to the women of Kansas.

In 1905, Queensland gave women full state suffrage. In 1906, Finland gave them full national suffrage, and made them eligible to all offices, from members of Parliament down.

In 1907, Norway gave full Parliamentary suffrage to the 300,000 women who already had municipal suffrage. Denmark gave women the right to vote for members of Boards of Public Charities, and to serve on such boards, and England, with only 15 dissenting votes out of 670 members of the House of Commons, made women eligible as Mayors, Aldermen and Town and County Councillors.

In 1908, Michigan gave tax-paying women the right to vote on questions of local taxation and the granting of franchises; Denmark gave women who are taxpayers or the wives of taxpayers, a vote for all offices except members of Parliament, and Victoria gave full state suffrage to all women.

In 1909 Belgium gave women the right to vote for members of the Conseils des Prudhommes, and made them eligible; single women and widows paying taxes were given a vote in the Province of Vorarlberg (Austrian Tyrol); Ginter Park, Va., gave tax-paying women, married or single, a vote upon all municipal questions, and Iceland widened municipal suffrage to include all tax-paying women.

In 1910, Washington gave full suffrage to all women; New Mexico gave them school suffrage; Norway made municipal women suffrage universal (three fifths of the women had had it before); Bosnia gave the Parliamentary vote to women owning a certain amount of real estate; the Diet of the Crown Province of Krain (Austria) gave suffrage to the women of its capital city, Laibach; New York gave women in all the towns, villages and third-class cities a right to vote on bonding propositions; the Gaekwar of Baroda (Indi) gave the women of his dominions a vote in municipal elections; the Kingdom of Wurtemberg gave women engaged in agriculture a vote for members of the Chamber of Agriculture, and also made them eligible, and Vancouver gave municipal suffrage to married women. Single women and widows had it before.

In 1911, California gave women full suffrage. Belize, the capital of Honduras, gave them municipal suffrage.

In 1912 Kansas, Arizona and Oregon gave women full suffrage, and Kentucky gave school suffrage to all women able to read and write.

In 1913, Alaska gave women full suffrage; Illinois gave them the right to vote for Presidential Electors and for all offices not created by the state constitution, also upon all questions submitted to voters, and Norway made Parliamentary suffrage for women universal.

In 1914, Nevada, Montana and Iceland gave women full suffrage; South Africa gave them municipal suffrage.

LET THE MONKEYS DO IT.

(Monkeys could easily be trained to work, they would make efficient workers and supply a long let want.—News item.)

Things are in a frightful mess
And magnify our uselessness,
We can't tell what will happen next,
And so we can not rue it.
The only thing that now remains
To free the laborer of his chains
And do away with all our pains--
Is let the monkeys do it.

We'll learn the monkeys every trade,
We'll show him everything that's made--
The way the railroad tracks are laid (He's good at imitation).
He'll run the locomotives fine.
We'll send him out with plumb and line;
The clocks he'll regulate to time--
He'll meet the situation.

He'll never quit or go on strike,
The pay checks will be all alike,
He'll ne'er demure, he'll never pike
Or e'er be discontented.
He'll do whatever he is bid,
Nor take offense when he is chid.
And monkey-like, he'll work rapid
At all that man invented.

We'll breed these ancestors of man
And teach them everything we can.
There won't be no official ban
Or boycotts whatsoever.

He'll push a pen or pull a tooth.
And clean the streets and build a booth,
And seldom do a thing uncouth,
Or shirk his work whatever.

Accepting everything we give,
Most thankfully he will receive.
The chance we're giving him to live,
And win his approbation.

But what will happen then to man
Nobody seems to care a damn;
We'll hang together if we can
And quit the monkey nation.

We'll work him twenty hours a day,
Seven days a week at work he'll play,
Incessant toil his roundelay,

And see how cheap he'll do it.
A blanket for his humble cot.
And all the peanuts that we've got
Will reconcile him to his lot--

So let the monkeys do it.

CHAT OF THE CRAFTS

SUNDAY STOLE INGERSOLL'S ELOQUENCE, DECLARES AN AGNOSTIC NEWS-PAPER, AND SPRINGS THE "DEADLY PARALLEL."

Billy Sunday, the evangelist, is accused of stealing the thoughts, phrases, and even sentences of Robert G. Ingersoll by the "Truth Seeker," an agnostic paper published in Philadelphia. The paper quotes in parallel columns sentences by Sunday, delivered to soldiers in Beaver Falls, and sentences delivered by Ingersoll in the Academy of Music, New York, May 30, 1882. The train of thought, even in the longest sentences and paragraphs, is almost identical.

Here are a few of the corresponding sentences of both orations:

SUNDAY:

This is a day for memory and for tears. A mighty nation bends before its honored graves and pays to noble dust the tearful tribute of its love. Gratitude is the fairest flower that sheds its perfume in the human heart.—Beaver Times, May 27, 1912, page 1, column 5.

Again we tell the story of our country's life, recount the lofty deeds of vanished years, the toil and suffering, the defeats and victories of heroic men, of men who made our nation great and free.—Ibid.

On this day the great struggle between the colonists and the kings should be told. We should tell our children of the contest, first for justice, then for freedom. We should tell them of the Declaration of Independence, the chart and compass of all human rights. All men are equal and have the same right to life, liberty and to joy.—Ibid.

This declaration uncrowned kings and wrested from the hands of titled tyranny the scepter of usurped and arbitrary power. It opened all the paths to fame and put the star of hope above the poor man's babe.—Ibid.

England was then the mightiest of nations, mistress of every sea, and yet our fathers, poor and few, defied her power.—Ibid.

They had the brain and the heart, the wisdom and the courage to utter and defend these words: "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." In the defense of this self-evident truth the war of the Revolution was waged and won.—Ibid., page 8, column 5.

When shown the article in the "Truth Seeker" Billy Sunday branded it as "trumped-up lies."

The evangelist explained that he had been told he was using a part of Ingersoll's famous speech, but that he had never read a line of Ingersoll. People, he said, sent him clippings, among which was "some good stuff," which he used. Afterward he was informed it was from the Ingersoll speech.

THE "HIGHLAND" BRIGADE.

Some of the Tory papers are finding fault with the Irish because they are not joining Kitchen-er's army in large numbers, but they have only to read the list of killed and wounded in English and Scotch regiments to find an answer to their question. Among the various arrivals of wounded in Stobhill Hospital are to be found the following names in Scotch regiments:

Come listen to me you who seek for our aid,
Till I read you some names from the "Highland" Brigade,
Who went to the front all the Germans to kill,
And a batch of those wounded are now in Stobhill.

I find on the list an O'Malley and Boyle,
A Murphy, a Kelly, a Riley and Doyle;
A Casey, a Carney, a Rourke and McCann,
All strapping young Highlanders, every man.

There are Rooneyes and Dohertys there by the score,
And Gallaghers, too, you'll find in galore;
While Muldoon and O'Connors can also be had,
Troth, the ould boy himself couldn't bate such a squad.

And bedad, there you'll find Piper Riordan from Cork,
The skirl of whose pipes could be heard in New York;
And Meagher who plays the big base in grand style,
Who, I'll swear, never slept in the shire of Argyll.

There is Driscoll a bandsman, and Pipe Major
Foy,
With a Carney, McLaughlin, Maginn and Malloy;
An O'Leary and Doogan, McBride and McGill,
All hooching and dancin' about in Stobhill.

You can find, if you wish, a Delaney and Burke,
A Carroll, a Clancy, a Tolle and McQuirk;
A Foley, a Walsh, a McGuire and a Quinn,
All pledged to assemble some day in Berlin.

There was Gunner O'Donnell and Sergeant Mc-Fall,
Who can both cut the tartan of ould Donegal;
And Barney McLuskey, whose hair isn't dry;
And who says he belongs to the Island of Skye.

It would do good to your heart to see Paddy
McGee,
The calves of whose legs are thick as a tree;
And big Darby Doolan, who comes from Stra-bane,
Has his "wee deoch and dorus" whenever he can.

I don't think that Britain need care for the Huns
With such fine "Highland" soldiers to handle her guns;
And I lately was told that Von Kluck and his men
Are praying to the Lord not to meet them again.

IT ISN'T YOUR LOCAL IT'S YOU.

(With apologies to the Linn Digest.)

If you want to be in the kind of a local
Like the kind of a local you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike;
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new—
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your local—.

It isn't the local—it's you.

Real locals are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When everyone works and nobody shirks
You can raise a local from the dead;
And if while you make your personal stake
Your neighbors can make one, too,
Your local will be what you want to see—
It isn't the local—it's you.

TALL TRAVEL TALK.

Three men, a Frenchman, an Englishman and an American, were once praising their respective railroads—for an Englishman will praise his railroads abroad, though at home it's usually a different story.

The Englishman said:

"Our express trains go so fast that the telegraph poles along the lines look like a high board fence."

"Our Rapides," said the Frenchman, "go so fast that the stations along the line seem continuous, like a city street."

The American puffed at his cigar thoughtfully.

"Once on an American express," he said, "I passed a field of carrots, a field of potatoes, a field of cabbage and a cow, and the train, gents, was going so fast—so durn fast—I thought I saw an Irish stew."—CLEVELAND FEDERATIONIST.

VETERAN SECRETARY CALLED HOME.

William J. Gilthorpe, former secretary-treasurer of the International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders, died at Minder, La., Jan. 9, 1915. "Billy," as he was addressed by his innumerable friends, had been secretary-treasurer of his organization for twenty-one years, and was retired June, 1914, on a salary of $100 per month for the remainder of his life.
Billy did not live long to enjoy the generosity of his organization. He was sixty years old, and the greater part of that time had been devoted to work in behalf of his fellow craftsmen. He leaves behind a son, Henry, who resides at New Orleans, and two daughters, Mrs. Andrew Rei-land, of Kansas City, Kan., and Mrs. Knight Campbell, of New Orleans. Billy Gilthorpe will be mourned in union labor circles generally.
He lived for his fellow man. The world is better as a result of his labors. He left a splendid record to his survivors.

FRIENDS IN BOTH PLACES.

During a little conversational fanning with a visiting member recently, he expressed the view that we made a tactical error when we began to take notice of the malicious shafts which have been printed in the secession advocate, The Culinary Craft, printed at San Francisco, Cal.; he took the stand that if we had permitted them to run along as usual and without giving them any attention in the MIXER AND SERVER, their fires would have ceased to burn for the lack of fuel. Perhaps there are other members with a similar view, and yet we know from comments received from some of our members that if we had not offered opposition they would have about concluded that we didn't care a tinker's cuss word what happened. We have quite a membership in our International Union, a great big family to please, and we caught the philosophy of the little fellow who was hoeing potatoes; he was interrogated with, "Say, youngster, what do you get for hoeing potatoes?" The boy looked at his questioner for a moment and then replied "Nothing if I do and hell if I don't." So it seems that we have friends who believe we have followed the right policy, while others are inclined to the view that we should have left the Sacred Seven wade in as deep as they wanted to without paying any attention to them.

Under the "Forum" heading this month our members will find additional matter concerning the proposed secession movement; if you have a few moments to spare, take a look over what has been presented, it may cause you to do a little thinking now when the going is good for thinking stunts.

THIRTY TWO LEGISLATURES CONSIDERING TUBERCULOSIS LAWS.

New York, Feb. 25, 1915.—Bills dealing with tuberculosis are now being considered in thirty-two State legislatures, according to an announcement made today by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

In six States, Alabama, Arizona, California, Iowa, Tennessee and Washington, bills are being considered which call for the reporting and registration of all living cases of tuberculosis. Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia are working for laws which will require that consumptives who refuse to observe sanitary regulations and are a menace to others may be removed and detained in hospitals. In Alabama, Arizona, California, Illinois, Maine and Missouri, legislation permitting the establishment of county or local hospitals for tuberculosis are being discussed, and in California, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Missouri and New Hampshire State subsidies of $3 to $5 per week per patient are being asked for such institutions. A more or less complete reorganization of the State health work is sought in several States, especially Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Texas and Arizona. In Indiana and Alabama bills providing for full-time county and city health officers are being considered.

As an aid in furthering these and similar bills the National Association has issued a pamphlet entitled "Tuberculosis Legislation," which contains a digest of existing laws in this field with comments and comparisons of some of the most important ones.

MARCH 17TH.

Many of our boys and girls who will be found wearing a "bit of green" on March 17th, will probably give but little thought to the man who taught a nation to rise from superstition and heathenism. St. Patrick was a great man, and history has not overlooked giving him proper credit. "The Wearing of the Green" is a splendid tribute to a missionary and to a people who have loved and fought for liberty, who have ever been ready to respond to the call of duty no matter what the sacrifice.

MY AMBITION.

I have my own ambition. It is not
To mount on eagle wings and soar away
Beyond the palings of our common lot,
Scorning the griefs and joys of every day;
I would be human—toiling like the rest,
With tender human heart-beats in my breast.

And so beside my door I sit and sing
My simple strains—now sad, now light and gay,
Happy if this or that but wake one string,
Whose low, sweet echoes give me back the lay,
And happier still, if girded by my song,
Some strained and tempted soul stands firm and strong.

I send my thought its kindred thought to greet,
Out to the far frontier, through crowded town.
Friendship is precious, sympathy is sweet
So these be mine, I ask no laurel crown.
Such my ambition, which I here unfold;
So it be granted, mine is wealth untold.

OUR OWN BILLY SUNDAY.

Why send for Billy Sunday to tell us how ornery we are? Shut your eyes and open your ears, sinners, and Luke will tell you and save you about $40,000. We are speaking for Billy Sunday:

"Oh, you damnable, murdering, corrupt, hell-ridden hounds. You whisky-soaked bums. You booze-rotted whelps. Come on up and have your blackguardly souls examined and save your dirty hides from the stink of brimstone. Oh, you measly, warty-eared, sore-eyed, mangy curs. You devil-ridden, white-livered rats. You fat-headed, rough-necked, hog-hid porch climbers. I dare you to be saved! We will now take up the hourly collection!"—LUKE McLUKE, in Cincinnati Enquirer.

You can learn a few things and forget a whole lot more, but whatever else you do, keep in mind the one essential need of the hour—get new members in your local union, and try every method you know of to get the members in line who permitted their membership to lapse. Your opponents are never too tired to talk shop. By the same token, neither should you.

The ammunition you need right now is enough application blanks and a little bit of hustle.

OH, TELL ME NO MORE.

Oh, tell me no more of the glorious fame,
That comes to the victor in battle,
Where men for the sake of dread history's name
Meet death mid the fury and rattle;
Where lovers and sons in the carnage are strewn
O'er the field of confusion so dire —
Unmarked by a stone for remembrance hewn,
Left to rot in the hideous mire!

For such was the brave, fearless laddie o' mine,
Who loved me so dear when we parted,
Who rode to the front with a courage divine,
And left me alone, broken-hearted;
He vowed when he left me he soon would return,
With tears then our bosoms did sever,
But now all in vain for his coming I yearn,
My laddie is gone, and forever!

The battle has taken my laddie from me,
'Tis but for his love I am pining,
My heart's ardent spirit that once was so free,
By night and by day is declining;
So tell me no more of the glory and fame
Attending the wounded and dying,
My bosom but leaps at the sound of his name,
My heart for my laddie is crying!

—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Labor Journal, of Rochester, N. Y., announces suspension in its issue of Jan. 29, 1915. The Labor Journal was the oldest weekly labor paper in New York State, and during its career accomplished wonders for the labor movement. The decision of the stockholders to discontinue publication is summarized in the following final passage of their announcement:

"The stockholders of the Labor Journal feel that their paper has played a prominent part in the changing of public sentiment favorable to unions and union labor, so that it is with a feeling of pride that they now leave the field they entered at a time when all others declined."

The union label is the one and only positive sign which trades unionists have to guide them in helping to keep steadily employed their fellow trades unionists in other trades and callings. Get the union label on everything you use. Don't be satisfied with securing half-hearted results.

ISH KABIBBLE!

Yes, Ignorance is bliss. The task
Of knowing pains the wise;
And that is why we never ask
What goes into mince pies.

—Cincinnati Enquirer.

This blissful Ignorance we'll not
With any hard facts clash,
And that is why we never ask
What goes into the hash.

—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

AN OLD FRIEND GONE.

O. P. Smith, better known to thousands of trades unionists as "Pat" Smith, of Logansport, Ind., died in that city in January after a long battle with Bright's disease. "Pat" Smith counted his friends by the thousands, and many of them received the first lessons in the labor movement from him. He was a cigarmaker by trade, and like many of the men in that trade, studied ceaselessly to find a solution to the great problem confronting the workers. Very few if any trade unions in the State of Indiana but what benefited by the work which he accomplished. "Pat" Smith lived up to the admonition, "Try and make this world a better place to live in." He lived a useful and busy life, and leaves behind a record which any man could be proud of. Mrs. O. P. Smith survives her husband. She will miss her best friend, but the knowledge that he done his duty by his fellow man is a great solace and may aid her in her hours of loneliness. We tender to her our condolences and sincere sympathy. May the sweet memories of her wedded life soften the blow and encourage her to continue the work she loves to the end.

BRIERWOOD.

You have lit the night with many a song,
You have solved some problems too hard for me;
You have shortened the way when it seemed so long.
You have been as true as a friend could be.
You have helped me to know when the spring came back,
Its infinite wonder and sweet surprise;
You have helped in winters of storm and rack
To find gold stars in the still blue skies.

You have given me counsel I could not win
By bribe or purchase on this green earth;
You have thrown much light on my wayward sin,
You have brought much beauty and quiet mirth.
You have given me strength when the fight seemed hard,
You have given me joy when the way seemed dark;
You have healed me of many a wound and shard,
You have been my Ararat and my Ark.

You have brought me visions of beautiful things,
And brightened my heart with a fuller hope;
You have taught me to open and lift my wings,
You have helped me to rise when I thought to grope,
And you've never asked anything, nothing at all,
Quiet, contended—old friend, so ripe!
And I sing you a song with my whole heart's thrall,
And God be praised for my brierwood pipe!

—Baltimore Sun.

ENCOURAGING.

It is quite interesting and encouraging to note that a few hotel papers are waking up to the fact that hotel, cafe and saloon proprietors overlook a duty which they owe themselves. In the Jan. 30, 1915, number of the New York Hotel Register and Review, Editor Chas. E. Gehring wades into condiment makers and purveyors who are allegedly financing prohibition legislation, and wants to know why men whose investments in the catering industry amounts to millions should purchase goods of concerns who are "trying to confiscate your business, who are trying to ruin you." Editor Gehring has a gigantic task in front of him. He will discover sooner or later that there are other things in connection with the catering industry which needs attention. Non-voters are quite a handicap when you come to think of it.

NATURE'S RECESSIONAL.
Now along the solemn heights
Fade the autumn's altar lights;
Down the great earth's glimmering chancel
Glide the days and nights.

Little kindred of the grass,
Like a shadow in a glass,
Falls the dark and falls the stillness;
We must rise and pass.

We must rise and follow, wending
Where the nights and days have ending—
Pass in order pale and slow
Unto sleep extending.

Little brothers of the clod,
Soul of fire and seed of sod,
We must fare into the silence
At the knees of God.

Little comrades of the sky
Wing to wing we wander by,
Going, going, going,
Softly, as a sigh.

Hark—the moving shapes confer,
Globe of dew and gossamer,
Fading and ephemeral spirits
In the dusk astir.

Moth and blossom, blade and bee,
Worlds must go, as well as we,
In the long procession joining
Mount, and star, and sea.

Toward the shadowy brink we climb,
Where the round year rolls sublime,
Rolls and drops and falls forever
In the vast of time.

Like a plummet plunging deep
Past the utmost reach of sleep
Till remembrance has no longer
Care to laugh or weep.

—CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS ROBERTS.

The following trio of news items is worth your perusal:

UTAH SENATE DRY.
Salt Lake City, Feb. 11.—A State-wide prohibition bill passed the Senate tonight by a vote of 14 to 3, with one member absent. Notice of a motion to reconsider Monday was given. Anti-liquor forces claimed tonight that the measure will pass the House by a large majority.

BAY STATE MAY BE NEXT.
Boston, Feb. 16.—The proposed woman suffrage amendment to the State constitution was passed today by the House by a vote of 196 to 33. It will be acted on by the voters at the election next November, having already passed the Senate. As soon as the result in the House was announced a shower of jonquils thrown by women in the galleries fell among the legislators.

UP TO NEW JERSEY VOTERS.
Trenton, N. J., Feb. 16.—The Senate today passed the woman suffrage amendment to the State constitution 17 to 4. The House passed the resolution two weeks ago, and both Houses having acted favorably to the resolution last year the question will be presented to the voters for acceptance or rejection in September.

The following note accompanied the appended song:

"Given its premier at the meeting of the Central Labor Council Wednesday, February 3, 1915, met with instantaneous success and expect it to reach the million copy mark. Sung in many of the leading cafes and by the Seattle Labor Chorus; try it on your piano.—Ed. T. Levi."

Those who have the privilege of knowing Bro. Ed. T. Levi credit him with doing more consistent and aggressive work against the fanatical drys in the recent campaign than any cafe, hotel or saloon employe or owner.

WHEN WE GATHER AT THE RIVER.
Tune: "Where the River Shannon Flows."
(Patent applied for.)

Invented for the Bartenders and Milkmen.
By Ed. T. Levi.

When the Beer, it has quit flowing,
And the State, it has gone dry,
To the River I'll be going
For my beverage bye and bye.
Come, oh come, down to the river
Where the Prohibitionists thrive;
When we're tired of drinking water
Then in it we will dive.

Chorus.

I will meet you and will treat you
On water, bye and bye,
Down by the old Duwamish,
When the State, it has gone dry.

Come and have a drink called Water
From a good old Mineral Spring,
When the State is dry next winter
And the Prohibition ring
Have cornered up the Liquor Biz
For some other State to thrive,
We will gather at the River
And, by gosh, in it we'll DIVE!!!

WHAT EVERY LOCAL UNION SHOULD KNOW.

We union men are in the habit of telling the world what unionism means; we look with disfavor upon individuals who are not in a union, and it is right to discourage non-union habits even in ourselves. We should not throw stones at glass houses, if we live in one ourselves. It is a sorry fact that today thousands of organized workers are cultivating the non-union habit of spending their earnings in non-union stores, and mail order houses. We can not deny it.

When our local label committees call on the business man regarding the sale of label goods "the demand" of the union man is thrown in their teeth. Some union men trade with houses out of town which are bitterly opposed to organized labor, even to the extent of not allowing their employes to think of a union.

What would any union man think of himself is he knew that his trade was going to enrich John D. Rockefeller, of Colorado fame? Well, such is the case. Thousands of workers are trading with a mail order concern which he is a part of. The name is like poison to the freedom loving man, yet we go on upbuilding him and his institutions. Now let every local get busy, and see to it that their members trade at union stores or union mail order houses, and that the goods be union made. If this is done we will have more union men and women, and less poorly paid workers.—Labor News.

Just what is to be gained by remaining as "dumb as an oyster" when the subject matter of organization is broached in your presence and failing to make a noise like a man who was unashamed of his affiliation, is what comes close to getting our "nanny." Men who carry membership books in a trade union have no reason in this century to hide the fact, nor is there any sane reason why they should stand along side and hear some squirt deliver himself of a lot of "drool" against the labor movement.

The American Federation of Labor is an institution which has accomplished wonders during its existence, and it does not look exactly encouraging to see men of labor swallow the assinine statements conceived and delivered by ribbon clerks who haven't guts enough to carry garbage to hogs.

The labor movement does not need defenders so much as it needs men who will call, and call good, the two by four "sissy boys" who, when asked for union labeled goods, turn up their snoots and shoot some of their silly comments about "there is no call for union made goods." If there is anything more than another which trades unionists need to do, it is to teach some of the boneheads who fozzle the job of retail clerks that they are due to treat patrons with respect. Encourage the organization of the retail clerks of your city. In doing so you will help to get rid of those "pin money" bipeds who would be more at home crocheting lamp mats or embroidering some of that fuzzy stuff girlies wear.

ORGANIZED LABOR A FORCE, NOT A PASSING FAD.

Organized labor, that is to say, the federated trades unions, have accomplished much for the uplift of humanity. It has advanced wages and the conditions of labor. It is a force that has demanded and received what it claimed and was entitled to. It has had many battles to obtain what it has acquired, and no doubt will have many in the future to retain what it has and to continue successful in its uplift work. But it should be borne in mind that organized labor is a fighting force, not a questionable "reform," to be classed with vegetarianism, uncooked food, theosophy, folk dancing, simplified spelling, universal peace, single tax, prohibition, government ownership, free love, and a few score of other things guaranteed to make everybody well to do and to bring happiness to the race. We are not discussing the merits or demerits of any of these panaceas, but we don't want a living, active force like the trade union movement to be considered as one with any such agitation. The word "reform" has been used so indiscriminately by the faddists, that its real meaning is no longer respected by serious people. It has descended into a joke.—W.M. T. Dodds.

REFERRED TO GOLDSMITH AND KOVELESKI.

In a report recently made public by the secretary, J. W. Pincus, the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America is reaping splendid results. Is, in fact, garnering considerable coin of the realm. As is generally known, the orthodox Jews decline to eat pork in any form, and yet the report of the above organization discloses the fact that the most profitable enterprise in which the Jewish farmers engage in is raising pork.

Great big gobs of gloom surround the fanatical aggregation who have been wearing out the patience of the law makers down at Washington. They thought they had a lead pipe cinch when they listened to the "Kissing Bug" tell what he would do with his little bill. "There is another Congress coming," say the Anti-Saloonists. "Hobson and Sheppard will be back on the job and we shall try again." All of which only goes to prove that a prohibition fanatic never quits. He never knows when he is licked. Would that we could say that the catering industry interests were as aggressively persistent. Are we going to continue in the "also ran class?" Are we less consistent than our opponents, and if so, why?

COME ON, YOU PROSPERITY!

Ol' Man Prosperity is comin' up the road!
Hear his horn a-hootin'?
See his auto scootin'?
He's the critter
Ain't a quitter—
Doesn't need a goad.
Ol' Man Prosperity is comin' up the road!

Ol' Man Prosperity is sailin' up the pike!
Looks a lot like Santy
With his Christmas ante.
No embargo
On his cargo;
Take just what you like.

Ol' Man Prosperity is sailin' up the pike!

Ol' Man Prosperity is flyin' up the street!
With the skies a-bright'nin',
Gee, his style is lightnin'!
If you're holler
For a dollar
Join him in the seat.

Ol' Man Prosperity is flyin' up the street!

Ol' Man Prosperity has got the car for me,
Golden is its promise.
Hear you, doubtin' Thomas?
Make the statin'
Of its ratin'
Millions of h. p.

Ol' Man Prosperity has got the car for me!

Ol' Man Prosperity is whirlin' round the curve,
Shavin' off the corner,
Hittin' Mister Mourner.
When he knows he Sees things rosy
Watch that Ol' Man's nerve!

Ol' Man Prosperity has passed that killin' curve!
—New York World.

Procrastination reaps a heavy harvest among the men and women in the catering industry. Too many of us put off until tomorrow or next week the necessary effort which we promised ourselves to make, with the usual result that the non-union worker is left to his own devices and thoughts. Postponing that straight talk with your co-worker, the non-unionist, will simply mean that time, the most valuable asset, is wasted. Had you made good on your promise, the non-union worker would have been a member several months ago, and no doubt would be doing the very thing you should have done—urging still another non-union worker to become affiliated. Quit procrastinating; make a resolve that you will make good. Then stick until you deliver. You can if you think you can.

Local 593, Minneapolis, Minn., is employing a rather neat method of warning traveling culinary workers to give that city a rest from invasion. On the flap of the envelopes used by that local they have printed in display type the following:

JUST A REMINDER.

Stay at Home. Make Conditions Better.
Middle West is Crowded.

That is both an effective and an original method to advise tourists that if they have any idea of "scouting around" during the frigid period they can well afford to try sticking where they are and helping boost for better times. Local 593 has had its full share of obstacles during its existence, but seems to have worn down the opposition and is going forward steadily. This, too, in spite of the fact that there is a dual union in that city which heretofore arrogated to itself everything in sight. But, then, Minneapolis is not the only city in America where the International Geneva Association has adopted such an attitude. Culinary workers are getting wised up. It won't be so very, very many years when they will understand the difference between voluntary and subsidized organizations.

Quite a number of our press secretaries have seemingly overlooked the fact that we have printed for many moons an announcement to the effect that "matter intended for publication MUST reach headquarters by the 25th of the month preceding date of publication. In other words, if you want your article to appear in the April number of the Mixer and Server it Must be at headquarters on or before the 25th day of March. It occasionally happens that some of our contributors submit real good and timely letters, but which, after laying aside for a month, lose their timeliness. If you do write, send it in time for publication, and you will save us and yourself from disappointment. And that reminds us, have you perused the correspondence in this number? It is worth your while.

CROSSING THE BAR.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;

For, though from out our borune of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

SEATTLE, WASH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A line of two from Seattle to let the membership know how we are getting on.

Of course everyone knows we went "dry." But as that is popular now-a-days, many questions arise as to the effect it is going to have on the culinary workers. My opinion on the matter, based on the only dry towns I know of, is that wages in them are very low, and they are unorganized. No matter whether wet or dry, the economic condition is there still: how are we to live, well or poor. After all is said and done, living is the main event of life. To be born and die are fundamental facts, irresistible and pre-ordained, so we don't have to worry about them. But work, God's greatest blessing, is ever with us. How do we distribute this blessing; making hogs of ourselves and working ourselves to death, or dividing the time with our fellow men? While I believe it is going to have a bad effect on the culinary workers, I don't believe it is going to annihilate them. The bartenders will, of course, be put clear out of the running, but the waitresses and cooks should not be affected. The waiters, I figure will lose 20 per cent of their members, and that 20 per cent, the ones that get the best money and let go of it the hardest, for after all is said and done, it is the fellow in the poorer grade of houses that pays his dues with the least grumbling and attends the meetings with the most regularity. He being the individual who assimilates the greater amount of unionism is naturally the fellow who does the most good; is the hardest fighter in the ranks; hunts the store where they sell union made collars and clothes, refuses to smoke Bull Durham and clothe his athletic frame in convict made goods, and while generally very quiet when it comes to advice, can be depended upon to tell you something when he gets up in meeting, while the other fellow, who comes once a year, will generally spill some idea that has been discarded long ago and look askance when you disagree with him.

Just now we are in the midst of a great educational feature with the fellows in this city who, for the last several years, have taken the cream off the can—working in the large hotels and not paying any dues nor joining the organization that made it possible for them to make a living in said jobs. They are rushing along to reinstate and join now that the State is going dry. They want to get another crack at the cream. But we are of the opinion that the work belongs to the boys who have kept on paying their dues, buying homes, and behaving themselves generally. The other fellow can walk the plank. When the time comes for final action, we will try to keep the conditions we have, for which we have had to battle, especially this winter.

The liquor men in this city took up several good hours of their time per day worrying about the eight-hour law which we had on the ballot for a referendum vote, which could have been used to good advantage attending to the wet and dry question. In one house, with 18 employees, only 2 voted; in another, with 40 employees, only 3 voted. There may be time, when the State goes dry, for them to study out the question in an entirely different light.

We now compel every new member of foreign birth to take out his naturalization papers. How about the man that hires him making him finish the matter? Then when our business becomes an American business the question will be a long way toward settlement. In the meantime we, the workers, have to look at the matter from an economic viewpoint and retain the work in our State that woud go outside for manufacture and be shipped back in for consumption. Keep organizing the culinary workers and educate them and they will come out all O. K.

At the recent State Federation Convention it was decided to stand together to the last ditch. For all hands and the cooks this we will do, and in a couple of years we will know if our dream comes true.

With best wishes to the entire membership,
Fraternally,

ED. T. LEVI.
Fin. Sec. Local 239.

KEEP AWAY FROM EDMONTON, ALTA. CANADA.

Brothers, we have a strike on in Edmonton against a number of houses, and at the present time there are quite a number of our craft out of work, and, in fact, half of the time going hungry.

Local 55, even at that, is certainly proud of them, and proud of our brother tradesmen, who are giving us their support; and besides, we are gaining ground every day.

Of course, we have had a number of deserters, but they are to be found in every locality where a strike is on. There is always some who have the yellow streak in them.

The boys that are left are sticking together, hitting the ball harder every day, and we are certainly looking forward to victory, which does not seem far away.

E. E. OWEN.
Secretary Local 55.

TORRINGTON, CONN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Bartenders' Local 283 had the following officers installed in Pythian Hall, Sunday, January 3, by Past President

THE MIXER AND SERVER

Eugene Finn: John W. Quinn, president (who has already served four years in that important capacity); Daniel Fitzpatrick, vice-president; Thos. E. Foley, recording secretary and treasurer; John McLaughlin, chaplain; Dennis Carroll, inspector; Charles Reichel, inside guard; Daniel Fitzpatrick, Michael Baker, auditors.

The union voted to open the charter for a period of two months, during which time the initiation fee will be $15, instead of $25.

The March meeting of the local will be held in Winsted, and all new candidates will be initiated at that session.

We celebrated our fourteenth anniversary with an annual banquet. An excellent repast was served, President John W. Quinn being master of ceremonies. Some excellent talent was had for the entertainment, and all voted it the best time ever.

As to conditions, we have a number of shy ones, and we hope that by making the initiation fee $15 we will be able to get them in line.

Yours fraternally,

THOS. E. FOLEY,
Secretary Local 283.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Thinking about the mercury freezing in the globe, or about 12 below, way up in St. Paul, and the Ohio frozen over at the "Queen City" or Porkopolis, while passing down one of our residence streets and looking at the beautiful flowers in bloom and hearing the mocking bird singing, causes me to think of some of our wanderlust sisters and brothers who would like to hear from Local 659.

Well, Bro. David Lynch was elected president again after six months' rest, and everyone knows that when Dave is in the chair there is always something doing. The old war horse believes in doing things up brown. Brother Goldman was re-elected vice-president vice Brother Glauburg, almost unanimously. Bro. Jack Ramsey, inspector; Bro. Bert Skiles, guard.

Our former president, Thomas G. Lowe, made a very impressive speech upon retiring.

Local 659 has certainly accomplished something in the past year. We have forty-two houses signed up, with but a few brothers out of work. The conditions for our sisters is very poor, and very few are working. Yours fraternally,

CHAS. A. SIMPSON,
Sec.-Treas. Local 659.

PUEBLO, COLO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As you have not heard from Local 43 in a long time, and there is not much to tell, it will not take very much space to tell it.

Business is not good, and it has not been this winter, but most all the business men hold out hopes that it will be better in a short time, and that we will have a good season.

So far as Local 43 is concerned, we have not got any kick coming, and have not had all winter. All our members are working, and most all of them have been all winter. We have never had more than five or six idle members at one time this winter. There was a concerted action here a short time ago to put us out of business, but thanks to the loyal labor movement in the city, it lasted but one week, and we won all that we had ever had, and then some. I do not think that we will have such a move to contend with for some time to come. We have not got all that we want, nor are we sitting still and not trying to spread out, but we are looking before we leap, and for that reason we have not been stirring up anything very much this winter while there has been no business. All of our members have paid their dues for the current month, except six, and all are working. We feel that so long as all of our members are working and we are holding all that we have in the winter time, that we are doing as well as we could expect. We do not want to start anything and ask the labor movement to back up in that we can not finish. We expect to make some headway in the near future.

No doubt a great number of our craft will pass through here on their way to the fair, and we will be glad to see them and will do all that we can to help make their stay in Pueblo pleasant IF THEY HAVE GOT A PAID-UP CARD. If they have not got one I am afraid that they will meet with hard luck when they undertake to make any one listen to their hard luck story, for Pueblo is no longer the home of the scab and the stopping-off place for every bad one that is making a tour of the country. KEEP YOUR CARD PAID UP AND YOU WILL ALWAYS GET THE BEST THAT WE HAVE FOR ANYONE.

Prohibition has hit us hard. But if they will not allow us to have any bartenders, we are going to have all the culinary workers organized, and when we have that done it will not be any trouble for us to get better conditions, for the labor movement is just like all other movements. They help those that try to help themselves. Take an application blank and approach that friend of yours and convince him that it is for the betterment of all, and you will have done him a far greater favor than if you had taken him out and showed him a good time.

With best wishes to the membership, I beg to remain

Yours fraternally,

J. N. BUTLER,
Secretary Local 43.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The House of Representatives, in session assembled, this, the 23d day of January, 1915, sent a bill for engrossment, after a heated and lengthy debate, to close the saloons in the State of Missouri at 11 o'clock at night and to remain closed until 6 o'clock in the morning.

Representative Farris led the fight against the measure, and it looked for a while like the wets would win some of the drys over, but, let me tell you, there are some very radical, rank prohibitionists in the House this term, and the bill went for engrossment by a vote of 73 for and 59 against. Several amendments were presented by the drys, such as to close at 8, 9 and 10 o'clock, but they were all lost in the shuffle. An amendment by the wets to have bill brought before the people of the State of Missouri for a referendum vote was also lost by a vote of 69 to 59.

Several bills were introduced which, if passed, would practically put our organization in this State on the "hunnumber," but after a thorough investigation and close observation, I am under the impression that these bills and measures will either be sidetracked, pigeonholed, die a natural death, or be assassinated by the Senate. This seems to be the general opinion, as both Houses are so far behind with their work that it will be an impossibility to act on all of them, and as most of the bills detrimental to us are left at the bottom of the docket, all "legitimate" means are used to keep them there. It is our hope, at least, that such be the case.

Local 420, Kansas City, Mo., has elected the following delegates to the Eighteenth General Convention, San Francisco, Cal., June 14, 1915: Chas. O. Bailey, Ed. L. Hiles, O. D. Norton and your humble servant. I hope that all other locals of the International will be represented by their full quota of delegates. Bro. Rolla DeBord, who finished fifth, will be sent as alternate in the case of any delegate being unable to go.

We had the pleasure to have among us during the month our General President, Ed. Flore, and we surely appreciated it. A special meeting was held by Local 420 Sunday, February 14, and although the attendance was not as large as expected, those present enjoyed his address very much, and we trust that he will make us another visit again.

While in the capital city I have visited many of our members here, and I must give credit to Local 531, Jefferson City, for having a 100 per cent organization. There are 23 saloons, all of them employing members of Local 531, displaying the union bar label, and the bar boys wearing its officers and members. Fraternally yours,

JAS. H. ANDERSON,
Press Secretary Local 420.

NEWARK, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following few items for the MIXER AND SERVER, which I hope will be in time for the next issue:

I don't know if Cooks' Local 294 ever contributed to the MIXER AND SERVER, but I wish to contribute just a few words to let the membership know that Cooks' Local 294 are still in existence, after a hard struggle.

At our last meeting, January 17th, we had election of officers and the following were elected: A. Hagedorn, president; C. Weese, vice-president; J. Haberstroh, recording secretary and treasurer; C. Hohman, financial secretary and business agent; F. Stulz, W. Yake, and J. Burkhardt, trustees; G. Stamler, inside guard; F. Canales, inspector; F. Stulz, S. Winckeler and S. Hollanzeck, delegates to the local joint executive board.

If the members of Local 294 will only take a little more interest in their union, they could have every cook in the city a member of Local 294. There is no reason why Local 294 would not be successful.

Yours fraternally,
H. MAERTENS.
Special Organizer Local 294.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—One of the most elaborate and successful events given in this city for a number of years, was the grand masque ball at Eagles' Hall on New Year's eve, December 31, 1914, held under the auspices of the Bartenders' Union, Local 491, netting the treasury the neat sum of several hundred dollars. Over five hundred persons were in attendance, and all enjoyed the occasion immensely by dancing the old year out and the new year in.

The ball committee were composed of the following brothers: John Specht, chairman;

Harry Specht, Andrew Campbell, George Cole, John J. Keenan, Chas. Schneider, Chas. Rodgers, Frank Miller, James Boyle. Harry Specht acted as grand conductor.

Local 491 is now in a very healthy condition and we are adding new members to the ranks weekly. Meetings are held regularly every Sunday afternoon at our headquarters 1620 Atlantic avenue, where we would be glad to see any of the boys from visiting locals.

Yours fraternally,

HARRY SPECHT.

DANBURY, CONN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—No doubt you and the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER will be surprised to see a communication from Local 255, but nevertheless we are still alive and on the job.

At our regular meeting, held January 3, at B. I. L. Hall, 279 Main street, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Frank C. Scollins, Sr., president; Patrick McCue, vice-president; William Mountain, treasurer; John J. Carrick, recording secretary; Daniel A. Gorman, financial secretary; Julius Somp, inspector; Thomas McNulty, inside guard; Raymond Meltzer, outside guard; Joseph Hamilton, John Corbin, E. F. O'Brien, D. F. Callahan, executive committee; Patrick McCue, Joseph Castelli, George Green, sick committee; Daniel A. Gorman, William Mountain, John J. Carrick, investigating committee.

The officers were installed by Past President Joseph Hamilton.

The boys all extend their best wishes to Ex-President George Gebhardt, who is now proprietor of the Savoy Cafe. Mr. Gebhardt has the best wishes of Local 255. He has long been a favorite with union men in Danbury and it is sincerely hoped his success will be in proportion to his deserts.

Our local is in fine condition, and all the boys are wearing the blue button.

We regret the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the famous D. E. Loewe Co. case against 186 members of the hatters' union in our city, whose homes and life's saving have been attached for $252,000. We all know and realize what this means to organized labor.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN J. CARRICK,
Corresponding Secretary.

SEATTLE, WASH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been some time since Local 33 has been heard from. However, we are still alive and doing fine, and with spring fast approaching, we expect to get a number of our unemployed members to work, there having been quite a number out of work this past winter.

Local 33 has a publicity committee in the field, composed of Frank Miller, Frank Flemming, and the old war horse Bob Smith, and believe that in the future the committee will accomplish good results, and will soon have the sign hanging up "Everybody Working."

I wish to mention here that one Paul Kumli, with all his grievances, has been banished for life from the Union League Club, and is engaged in singing "Down Where the River Shannon Flows" by Ed. J. L. Too bad, Paul.

Yours fraternally,

W. M. H. FRAZER,
Secretary.

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SISTERS AND BROTHERS—E. W. Rieck, owner of eight lunch rooms, has resigned from the Chicago Association of Food Exchanges and has agreed to employ only members in good standing in our International Union. Every employee of Rieck's will now work six days per week and no more than ten hour per day.

The 'speaker of the house of representatives has now been elected, after a seven weeks' deadlock, and it is now agreed that the lawmakers of Illinois will pass a one day rest in seven bill. There are other measures pending, such as the anti-injunction bill, as drafted by the A. F. of L. and passed by the Massachusetts legislature; the women's eight-hour bill, and a minimum wage bills.

Our local unions—bartenders, waiters, and cooks—have joined hands with other organizations for the purpose of bringing about more solidarity. Among the organizations which have signified their intention of going into the organizing campaign with us are the cigarmakers, barbers and actors.

The nine lunch rooms formerly owned by Geo. Knab, have now a new owner, and are called "The Delco Lunch Co." The new company is discharging its non-union waitresses and putting non-union men waiters in their places, as women are only permitted to work ten hours.

It seems as if Chicago is coming to the front, as many of the old-timers have promised to get back in the harness and a good, strong cooks' local may be expected in the near future.

Fraternaly yours,

FRED EBELING,
Financial Sec'y and Business Agt., Local 865.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—With your kind permission in behalf of our local, will ask to be excused for not being heard from in the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER for some time. We have been very busy with local affairs. Up to October last year working conditions were fairly good; we controlled pretty nearly all the extra work, but we have lost a good deal of it through the dirty work of some head waiters. On the 1st of October, a certain man by the name of H. O'Hagon came to town and became head waiter at the Hotel Pfister. Shortly after his arrival the number of unemployed waiters increased rapidly, and were replaced by waiters the majority of whom came from Chicago, where O'Hagon is well known. A sorry-looking bunch—I am convinced that they came in on the bumpers. These men were put to work on all extra jobs in preference to our boys for the simple reason that they work cheaper. They received the enormous amount of $2 for full dress affairs—something never heard of in Milwaukee. We were helpless to do anything, as he could pick up 40 or 50 men on the street at any time. In conjunction with this, O'Hagon worked a certain Ray Lynch, head waiter at the Hotel Wisconsin. These two men had us going for some time, but now they have gone the same route like so many of these poor simps who call themselves head waiters and try to make a good showing by cutting down the wages, but who do not realize that they are only hurting themselves. Now they are on the streets looking for a job which is hard to get. Many of the non-union men have left the city and the working conditions are beginning to improve.

We have been doing a little campaigning since December 1st and have succeeded in getting 25 new members, which brings our membership up to 140, and with the assistance of International Organizer J. Brady who is in our city, we expect to reach the 200 mark very soon. We also have among us International Organizer A. Martel, who is doing splendid work in organizing the cooks.

On January 29th we held a smoker as an inducement for the Knights of de Cuisine, which was well attended. Brother Martel succeeded in signing up 32 applicants and he expects to have at least 50 members by February 19th, the day set for the closing of the charter. The officers will be installed and a grand rally given in our club rooms by Locals 64 and 59.

In conclusion I would like to ask all brothers not to forget these names—H. O'Hagon and Ray Lynch.

With best wishes for the prosperity of our International, I remain, Fraternally.

A. H. SIBILSKY,
Secretary and Business Agent Local 59.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to let you know that we are still alive in Jersey City. We held our annual ball on Wednesday evening, February 3d, at Greenville Schuetzen Auditorium and I must say it was a grand success. Our president, Brother Hillemann, led the march with Miss Anna Doyle, who received the first prize, which was a handsome bouquet of flowers. We had as our guests President Felten of the Central Labor Union; also Brother Barney Rowholt of Local 4 of Hoboken.

Business is very bad in Jersey City at the present time, as all cafes are closed on Sundays. If this keeps on we expect to have a number of our boys out of work.

We sent three delegates to Trenton, N. J. on February 2d to enter our protest against the local option bill presented by the New Jersey State Anti-Saloon League, which came before a senate committee for hearing. Our side of the case was ably taken care of by Ex-Governor John W. Griggs, Mr. Henry Hillfers, secretary of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor; Brother William Kavanagh of the Waiters' Local 575; General Organizer William B. Joyce, and representatives of the State Brewers' Association.

With best regards from the boys of Local 488. I remain, Yours fraternally,

JAMES TRISNAN.
Secretary.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—No doubt the members will be looking through this issue for a little information regarding the trouble in this city. Well, to come to the point, I think it is quite safe to say that it is pretty well over now, and that the settlement has not been any loss to us.

It was the old story over again—wages cut, every one sit back. "The big question" from all, members and non-members, "What is the union going to do?"

Well, in this case the union did do something, and that something has made a few of them sit up and take notice, as it is more than proved that something can be done by an organization when it is called upon to do so.

We called a special meeting of all the workers and put the question to them, fair and square. "What do you want us to do? Propose something, be willing to stand by your own proposals and see what the union is willing to do. If you intend to stand back and allow your wages to be cut in this manner and your working hours increased, then why are you paying your dues into an organization? The union can not fight this out alone; put your shoulder to the wheel and do your little part; if you don't intend to do this and are afraid to take a chance, then let us close up our little office as a union and lay down and say that we are beaten, but don't let it be said that a bunch of union men are working for far less money here than they had to before there was a union at all, especially when we know in our own minds that conditions do not warrant such treatment."

Well, the outcome of this meeting was a resolution to stand pat, and to send to headquarters a report of the conditions as they stood and an appeal for financial support, which I am pleased to say was promptly responded to, and the fight began. I will not tire you with all the details of the fight, because I think that all such fights are about alike, both sides are determined not to give in, with the old result that one must, and in this case it has been a very satisfactory settlement indeed, and now we have conditions that are as favorable as they have been any time during the past two or three years and a chance for a lot of improvement when things pick up again. As the membership is increasing in a manner that assures the officers that when the next time comes for a fight we will have the army up to full strength for the fight.

This has been a good lesson to the workers here and I feel confident that it will be no great fight to hold them together in the future.

Yours fraternaly,

A. W. SMITH,
Financial Secretary

TOLEDO, O.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Since the new year began Local 335 has had one battle, which resulted in our being the victors, as usual. The manager of the Ideal Restaurant repeatedly violated the agreement with Local 335. In fact, his violations became so frequent that we were compelled, finally, to resort to calling out the crew and picketing the establishment. The waitresses involved were loyal to their union, and in all kinds of stormy, bitter weather were always on the picket line. After a two weeks' fight, repeated conferences, etc., the manager was compelled to close his house and a "For Rent" sign was the most conspicuous thing about the building. This man could have saved himself very much, but, as all managers, was stubborn. He refused to employ a "union cook and kitchen crew," and we refused to go back with any other. Our big brothers, the bartenders of Local 216, were always with us to protect us in every way, especially through physical strength, for they are noted for being "some fighters." Without their assistance at all times our little handful of girls would have had a hard fight. So it behooves everyone to fight for each other, not against.

The more solid the family the harder will it be for our enemies to break down our walls with all their forces and ammunition. When the call comes that the battle is on again, the boys and girls of Toledo will forget their petty personal difficulties and shoulder to shoulder fight until we win. We have found out that the only way to win is to stick together and never separate.

We have very recently lost one of our most loyal members, Bro. Harry Parker. In Brother Parker we had a loyal friend, a staunch supporter, and a valiant fighter for the cause of organized labor. This little tribute the girls of Local 335 pay to him. He lived according to his ideas of life. He passed into the great beyond having done his best, as only human beings can, and may the good which he accomplished while among us always linger in our minds as we look over the mental pictures of those we counted our friends.

Fraternally yours,

NIDA R. PANGLE,
Sec. Local 335.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 241 wishes to thank all the officers and brothers of our Grand Lodge for the favors shown us the past year and their prompt replies to all our correspondence.

While business has been quiet for some months, with a wet and dry fight on hand again this spring, we are holding a hard hand to beat. We have a Billy Sunday to contend with in this fight, the tabernacle now being ready for operation.

We are well organized, not a non-union bar or bar boy in this city, are in perfect accord with the liquor dealers, and expect to win this fight for our existence, which we believe will be their last stand. There are only two saloon towns within a radius of fifty miles, but we will try to keep the flower of Egypt in our columns.

Yours fraternally,

H. M. SMITH,
Sec.-Treas. Local 241.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from Local 175 to let you know that we held our sixteenth annual ball on January 25, and that it was a grand success. Bro. Edward Ehrman deserves a great deal of credit for the way he handled our program this year. He put $1,500 on it. He was ably assisted by Bro. P. J. McGowan.

Bro. Geo. Wolf and H. Schwin are on the sick list. Brother Steck is at Swartz's buffet. Bro. F. E. Wagner is at Clinton and Bond streets.

Business in Buffalo is very bad, so would advise all brother to stay away from here. We have a great many members on the extra list, and no work.

The Dance Committee will make its final report at our next meeting.

All we hear here now is, "Who is going to the coast in June as our delegate?" Well, who is? Guess.

Your humble servant is on the sick list, but never misses a meeting.

Yours fraternally,

FRANK BROWN,
Press Agt. and Pres. Local 175.

JUNEAU, ALASKA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As it has been a long time since anything was heard from the hotel and restaurant employes of Local 871 through the MIXER AND SERVER, I thought I would write a few lines just to let the members of our big international know that we are still alive and doing just fine.

I feel it my duty in making this report to advise all brothers and co-workers in the International Union not to heed the numerous reports that are being made by newspapers pertaining to the flourishing conditions of this Alaskan territory. Through the many false reports that are being issued there are many men being ushered into this country in search of employment that is not here and never will be here.

I am very glad to report our local as being in good standing and also the Bartenders' Local 889 is equally as progressive. We expect an increase of 25 per cent in Local 871 when the spring opens.

Again warning my fellow brothers not to heed the booming forecast of this northern country and go to the expense of coming in here in search of that which we have not (employment).

With best wishes to the national office and officers, I beg to remain,

Fraternally yours,

JOHN JURIJA,
Secretary Local 871.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—No doubt the membership of the recently "went dry" states in this Western country would like to get a line on the conditions in Salt Lake, which this local is only too glad to relate. I will state in regards to the betterment of conditions that we have advanced near the 65 per cent in the last four or five months, and it seems as though we will continue to advance as long as we have the "back-bone" Chas. McKee, with us. Will state further and warn all members coming into the Lake in the near future that they must have paid-up cards as we have quite a few members out of work just at present. Already we have members coming in from Oregon, Washington, and Colorado, and they are greatly disappointed on the lack of work, which is much to our sorrow.

I am only too glad to relate before the general membership that Local 815 slipped one over on the Grill Cafe and the Morgan's Cafe, by winning the contempt of court case. I will endeavor to give you an idea of the results from a clipping of a local paper:

COOKS AND WAITERS GAIN VICTORY.

The contempt case brought by the proprietors of the Grill Cafe and Morgan's Cafe was dismissed by Judge Morse and the order restraining them from picketing was modified by allowing them to place three pickets before each house, also the Paris Cafe and Castles, two more houses that have recently had injunctions served upon upon us. The cases will come up March 3d for a final hearing. The boys have made a stubborn fight and deserve the support of every sympathizer in the city. If only those who need the support of their fellow-workers would consider why, there would be no question. In union there is strength. So you can see that a judge of the district court of Salt

Lake issues an injunction against Local 815 prohibiting picketing, boycotting or wearing badges of any descriptive manner, that his own conscience tells him that he done wrong to issue such an injunction when the proprietors of the Grill Cafe and Morgan's Cafe perjured themselves by trying to prosecute us on the contempt case which "we won."

We have progressed very rapidly, with the assistance of other union organizations, in forming a Union Label League, and I am only too proud to state that our business agent, Chas. McKee, has been duly elected and installed as president of said same organization. I think the following clippings, taken from our labor paper, the Intermountain Worker, will give the members the full details of its object:

DEMAND THE UNION LABEL.

The organization mentioned in another place in this issue, for the demanding of the union label, is going to get what they are after. There has already been established a mail order house in New York City, to supply the goods that carry the union label, and if the merchants of Salt Lake City do not have them in stock, the purchaser will promptly send his order to that mail order house. This is not a dream of the future, as the Herald-Republican would have you to believe, but is something to be put into effect at once.

The Cooks and Waiters have a committee appointed to watch all union men and report those who go to shops that are not fair to their class. If any such are found, the next thing will be up to the union to act.

Hoping and trusting that I have not taken up too much of your most valuable time and that you will find space for this small token of information, and wishing yourself and the general membership a prosperous future, I beg to remain as ever,

Yours fraternally,
PATRICK T. OWENS,
Recording and Press Secretary Local 815.

VANCOUVER, B. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As it is just possible that there may be a vacant corner left in the make-up frame when this number of the MIXER AND SERVER goes to press, I am anticipating the courtesy of your permission and will endeavor to fill that corner up.

To begin with, I might state that, from a culinary workers' point of view, economic conditions in this city shows no signs of any immediate improvement, so kindly drop us from your visiting list in the meantime is my advice to all traveling members of this organization. Local 28 is undergoing a sort of rejuvenation just now, so that any addition to the ranks of our idle members would add to the worries of our energetic business agent, Bro. A. Graham. Parenthetically I would like to record our appreciation of the able manner in which, under very trying circumstances, Brother Graham has so far discharged the onerous duties he assumed when this local intrusted him with the difficult and thankless office of business agent. Evidently Business Agent Graham realized, very early in his official career, that simply drawing down a weekly salary was not the only qualification necessary in the making of a successful business agent, and just so long as Business Agent Graham lives up to the full realization of that fact, just so long will he receive the whole-hearted support and encouragement of the Executive Board and the majority of the officers and members of this local.

Amongst the recent activities of our Executive Board was a recommendation to the local asking for the appointment of a Wage Scale Committee and urging that a business-like wage scale be adopted to replace the antiquated piece of legislation which was at that time doing duty as a wage scale. The personnel of the committee appointed, to whom we extend thanks for the time and labor they so cheerfully gave on this occasion, was as follows: President Charles Davis, chairman; Sister Blanche Cosgrove, waitress; Bro. A. A. McKay, waiter; Bro. R. Beck, waiter; Bro. Jack Forstell, cook, and Bro. John Cumming, cook. The scale will go into effect immediately after being approved at headquarters.

Urging the Provincial Government to enact legislation prohibiting the employment of white women and girls by Orientals, and also legislation making the employment of white help exclusively in all licensed hotels throughout the Province an essential requirement to the granting of a license, was the substance of a recommendation submitted by the Executive Board for the approval of the local. The resolution was then presented for adoption at the recent convention of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, held at Nanaimo, Vancouver Island, by whom it was endorsed unanimously. After the convention adjourned the executive of the British Columbia Federation of Labor waited upon the Honorable the Prime Minister, Sir Richard McBride, the Honorable the Attorney-General, and the other members of the cabinet, drawing their attention to the urgent need of legislation along the lines embodied in our resolution. The ministers received the deputation sympathetically, and gave assurance that the matter would receive the prompt and earnest consideration of the government.

At the last meeting of the Board of License Commissioners of the city of Vancouver, held February 10, a letter from the Executive Board of Local 28 was read protesting against the employment of Asiatic culinary workers and other domestic help in the licensed hotels of the city to the exclusion of many capable white men and women, and suggesting to the board that, when granting licenses in June of this year, a clause be inserted in the license making it mandatory on the part of the licensees to employ white labor throughout their premises. There were present at the meeting supporting the subject matter contained in our letter and advocating the justice of our plea, Mr. J. H. McVety, president of the Trades and Labor Council; Miss H. Gutteridge, treasurer of the same body; Bro. T. G. Crombie, of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades and Labor Council; Bro. W. G. Johnston, and myself, of the Executive Board of Local 28, and a delegation of six of the representative women of Vancouver—the leaders of the three most influential organizations of women voters in the city. It took the board just forty-five minutes to deal with our letter, the result being a motion to leave the matter over until the next meeting of the commissioners, one month hence; we, in the meantime, to submit a statement showing the number of idle culinary workers who would be available should our contention be acquiesced in, a comparatively easy task for us under present conditions.

In parenthesis, Mr. Editor, I should explain that the liquor license law in the cities of British Columbia is taken care of by a Board of License Commissioners, two of whom are elected at the January municipal elections, and two are appointed by the government, the mayor of the city acting as chairman, while in all other parts of the Province, outside of the cities, the law in this respect is administered by the Attorney-General's department of the Provincial Government, hence our dual action in this matter.

As I have already probably taken up more space than is generally allotted to correspondents, I will conclude in the time-worn way of the magazine serial stories, "To be continued in our next."

Thanking you in anticipation, and with best wishes to yourself and the general membership, I am,

Fraternally yours,
JOHN CUMMING,
Vice-Pres. Local 28.

BALTIMORE, MD.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—One of the most pleasant occasions enjoyed by members of Local 532 took place at the Labor Lyceum Hall, the meeting place of Local 532, Sunday, Feb. 14, 1915, with President John T. Flanagan in the chair, in which the general routine of business was transacted. It has been a long time since Local 532 has taken so much interest in purchasing their new home, of which Bro. Thos. Nolan is chairman of the Boosters' Committee, for which he reported progress. For the last few years Local 532 has been a great working machine, representing some of the leading bartenders of this town. The most of the new members have taken an active part in all social functions, on the Sick Committee, and most everything prevalent for the good and welfare of Local 532.

The committee on our twelfth annual oyster roast, of which President John T. Flanagan is chairman, reported that this particular roast was going to be a big success financially.

Don't forget the "Watch Us Grow Habit."

Fraternally yours,
BERNARD STERN,
Press Agent Local 532.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 150, of old Syracuse, the central city of the Empire State, is striving hard to organize the men working under our jurisdiction who are not already brother members, and we must say that we are certainly doing our share. By our reports we show one of the largest gaining percentages of any city in this State, whether large or small, and it is our aim and desire to show both old and new members the benefits of organized labor, many already having been benefited thereby.

I take great pleasure in stating that the members of Local 150 have seen fit to put President Wm. Juvenal, Treasurer Thomas Turney and myself on a salary basis, the vote being unanimous. Though it be small, it shows that our services are appreciated, and this is what gives vim, courage and life to our meetings.

Our business agent has been quite successful in organizing two houses, and has put one of our best extra positions on a straight-salary basis.

By his monthly reports he has shown that we have made a gain every month since he assumed the responsibility of secretary and business agent, and we sincerely hope his good work will continue.

Our inside guard, Bro. Thomas Casey, is still with us, and is a very active member, attending the meetings regularly.

Our International Union being the only "catering trades union" recognized by the American Federation of Labor, it therefore behooves those outside our ranks who desire to be a credit to their calling, and for the protection of themselves and their families, now and in the future, to take advantage of our small initiation fee and prepare themselves for sickness, travel, employment or death by joining now.

Fraternally yours,
JOE BAKER, Rec. Sec.,
T. DUDLEY, Bus. Agt.,
Local 150.

HARTFORD, CONN.

MR. EDITOR—Local 304's new officers have already proved their kin to the old guards of memorial time. Alert and always ready in their duties in these modern, inextricable labor controversies, they have, by their application of good judgment and fair play, made a good impression, which at the start was doubtful. Their sound deliberations have solved, to their credit, perplexed questions put to them from ensnaring opponents that would ultimately have involved Local 304 before the world of labor. Every day since January has been full of work for them. At all times, day and night, you will find them on duty, and this is the reason for the success of Local 304.

A full meeting of the board was had at the hearing of our bill, known as the "One Day's Rest in Seven" bill. Bro. Sol. Sontheimer, the incomparable; Bro. Julius Stremfau, of the State Federation; Rev. Potter, and Rev. Dunlap of this city spoke in favor of our bill before the Judiciary Committee at the State capitol. Brothers McCall, Fred Gerner and C. Partridge were also there to help.

President Dennis S. McCarthy is and always has been a luminous star for our local, never growing too old to give the best time of his life to his local.

Bro. Bert Kuhne, an advocate of neutrality among our brothers of Polish, Swedish, German, French, Italian and Russian nationalities, is a faithful unionist.

Bro. Patsy Scanlon, of the Emerald Isle, Windsor, and Local 304, are one and the same.

Brothers Kaufman, Mayoros and Lamoureaux are promising satellites who will some day shine in the firmament of the labor movement.

With best wishes from Hartford to all,
Fraternally yours,

ALBERT FORNI,
Sec. Local 304.

AUGUSTA, GA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to let you know that the boys of Local 870 are still alive and doing well. Boys, we have some time in our cozy, comfortable hall.

The Federation of Labor here is publishing a little weekly paper, and almost every union man in the city thinks there is no paper that can take the place of The Labor Review. I think they are right. It is the best thing that was ever done in this city to get the unionists to unite.

Members of the International Union traveling this way are invited to drop in and see the boys of Local 870. We have about seven members that are not employed, but hope that they will not be unemployed very long.

We had two more places last week to sign up for union bar cards.

With well wishes to all members of the International,

Yours fraternally,

J. W. BROOKS,
Rec. Sec. Local 870.

CLEVELAND, O.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The last two meetings of Local 106 were very well attended, and much activity was shown by the members in discussing the affairs of the local.

The meeting of the local on February 12 was the date set aside for the nomination of delegates to the next International Convention at San Francisco, and the manner and time of their election. Much enthusiasm was manifested by our members in selecting their favorite candidates. The following members were nominated: Brothers Whissemore, Farrell, Just, Wm. Emerson, Carter, Rezac and Svetonka. It was then decided to elect Brothers Whissemore and Farrell by acclamation, and later it was decided to elect the third delegate at this meeting. After the votes had been counted and recounted it was found that Brother Just had received the delegateship by one vote over Brother Carter.

At the meeting of February 19 the action in electing the delegates and the manner pertaining thereto was questioned. Some time was devoted to the pro and cons of the previous proceedings, and the chair, through his personal influence, had the election stand as previously voted upon. Immediately Brother Carter protested, and stated he would file an appeal to the International President through the proper channels.

There is a laxity of extra work at the present time, but our members are in no great distress, as a day's work here and there helps to keep the coal in the stove and to pay the gas bill.

Our financial secretary, Brother Bookjans, is taking in the money daily from the members who are not paid up to date, as the members themselves have come to the conclusion that it is much better to have a paid-up membership book, so that they can attend and take an active part in all of our meetings without being questioned as to their rights to the same.

We are looking forward to prosperous times in the near future, when all of our members will be employed. We can feel now that business is picking up in all lines.

Yours fraternally,
E. J. CARTER, Press Sec. Local 106.

MICHIGAN PROGRESSIVES VERY DRY.

The State convention of the Progressive party, held at Jackson, Mich., Feb. 16, 1915, adopted a resolution favoring State and National prohibition.

TIPPING UNLAWFUL IN NEBRASKA.

The Nebraska House, on Feb. 16, 1915, passed a bill making tipping unlawful by a vote of 61 to 24. On the same date, in the Missouri legislature, a bill was introduced which provides for State-wide elections on prohibition every four years.

-THEY- WHO SERVE

In every line of human endeavor we will find men and women who deny themselves many privileges and make real sacrifices to the end of promoting the well-being of themselves and their fellows.

In the Labor Movement the real torch-bearers are not the ones who waste energy and effort to convert those who have already become of the faith; they are the unselfish men and women who seek out and endeavor to induce their fellow wage-earners to become active units in the trade union movement, which, they are convinced, is the one and only sane method of obtaining redress for trade wrongs and bring about improvement in compensation and reducing the hours of toil to reasonable limits.

They are the real pioneers of progress; they serve that others may benefit; they seek no rewards except the esteem of their fellow workers; they are missionaries of true civilization, of a brotherhood which makes no exceptions, a fraternity which seeks to lighten the burdens of all who labor for wages, irrespective of previous conditions of servitude.

They who serve are nature's noblemen—they are the salt of the earth—the greatest and the lowliest receive their greeting—Brother—with love and faith in the salutation. They who serve need no medal or stone to mark or record their good deeds, they leave durable monuments greater than can be fabricated—when they depart, honorable sorrow sincerely expressed is noted on high where the Great President presides.

To be one of these is an aim and ambition worth seeking.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in Hotels, Clubs, Cafes, Buffets, or Bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

Whenever we hear a member complain about the gang in charge of and running the union, we are prompted to inquire whether or not, he is advertising the fact that he unable to impress his will and way on his fellow members, and, failing to accomplish his purpose begins to yell clique, gang, machine and bunch. Local unions conduct their affairs in accordance with the wishes of the members who interest themselves sufficiently to attend meetings. If a proposal does not meet your approval, that is no reason the other members should stop trying to make advancement, nor is it a good reason for you to cease your efforts in behalf of the union. Stop grumbling for a few months, get busy and become one of the clique which runs things. You have a greater chance inside than outside. You may convince by sticking to the job, or you may be converted to the idea which that clique employs to make headway.

In spite of a desire to believe otherwise, we are forced to conclude that in the Army of Organized Toil there are Regulars and Rookies who are guilty of malingering; they do not tote their share of the burden, neither are they found aiding the workers to build up defensive breastworks. Such enlisted men in any movement are a drag to it; they are the grunters, the long bench warriors, who win all their battles with the cavity through which they expand their "bread basket" dimensions. If it were not so the makers of unfair products would have ceased their antagonism years ago or else have been closed up by the sheriff. The trades unionists who gave expression to the conviction that they "would rather have a union of one hundred active unionists than a union of a thousand who didn't give a Tinker's damn for anything but themselves and their wants" come pretty close to saying pretty much everything that is to be said on the question of aggressive progress and the other kind of headway, negative and usually called frosts.

If an organization ever expects to amount to a hill of beans, it must have on its roster a majority of members who are able to intelligently understand the purpose of trades unionism, who are always trying to improve their conditions both as respect to their trade abilities as well as members of an organization seeking to advance and protect the industry which makes it possible for them to secure employment.

Real red blooded men resent the idea of some one else supporting their families, and real red blooded men should be the last to permit any one to say that any body of men were responsible for improving trade conditions without their aid or support.

The member of a trade union who declines to assist the officers and members to conduct the business of the union, and who accepts trade union wages and conditions, is a charity receiver and you can't make it look anything else if you try from now until a thin skin of ice covers that portion of the lower regions which garden brand of editors call hell.

Don't be a charity member; do your share of the work which your local union requires, be jealous of your independence and you can't be unless you get in and do your little stunt of hustling for the union.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

The individual who becomes a member of a local union of Bartenders, Cooks, Waiters, Waitresses or Miscellaneous employees voluntarily, who accepts the platform of our International Union and its principles, attends a number of meetings after taking the obligation, actively participates in the work for the general advancement of the trade, and finally becomes a chronic absentee, should be the last person on earth to find fault with the management of their local union or any of its executives. If you don't quite grasp the real meaning of that statement you are invited to peruse it again, for it may be possible to convince you that you are decidedly in error and in reality an antagonist of the very institution to which you contribute your monthly dues. If you become a member of your local union voluntarily, that is, were not forced in by reason of surrounding circumstances, you occupy a position such as creates certain conditions, and if you break through those surroundings, and that which is contrary to the principles and purposes of the union, you can be accused of action unbecoming a union member. A voluntary member of any one of our unions should be the last person to uncover his sledge hammer and begin knocking; especially if that member has by reason of refraining from attending meetings, placed himself in the chronic absentee class. The most that can be said for the member who has become attached to one of our unions by coercion is, that they did not choose the union, they would have willingly gone along by themselves, neither helping or being helped; at best they are minus the knowledge which they should possess, probably in time even they may assimilate the meaning of organization and become loyal and faithful members. If such persons do not show sympathy in our endeavors, if they are willing to accept the fruit of our labors and content themselves with paying their dues only, we can with fairness to them and our active membership, call them members for revenue only. We don't expect much from that class of individual, we have no good reason to expect them to feel interested in our plans or proposals; and we generally, if we possess even a small measure of wisdom, permit such certain leeway but keep them eternally under our eye to prevent them from tearing down that which our labor has built. We know them for what they really are, we classify them unconsciously and fight shy of permitting them close association, at least until by their actions they have shown symptoms of being unselfishly interested in our struggles.

But the voluntary applicant, the one who accepts our invitation and willingly becomes a member of our organization, who accepts without dissent all of our obligation heartily, occupies a position which exacts of them true effort and unselfish labor in behalf of their union. Yet we find quite a number of such members thoughtlessly saying harsh things about their union, severe things about their chosen local union officers, disparaging the effort of co-members doing committee work for the local union, in fact comporting themselves as one expects of the enemies of labor organizations.

It is to such as the writer has in his mind's eye that this portion of this heart to heart talk is directed, plain talking sometimes proves quite effective in cases where the individual approached has not lost all appreciation of his position as a worker for wages.

If you are a member of one of our local unions, and became such of your own free will and sanction, then you are due to show something resembling active concern in your local union's affairs. You should be the last person on earth to either villify or condemn your organization, an organization which you are attached to by choice and free will. Condemning your local union, its officers and members obtains nothing from those with good sense, but their utter contempt, for they reason and logically, that you are to the extent of one member, responsible for your share of whatever errors of judgment or other drawbacks the union is alleged to be guilty of.

You get back from your union exactly what you put into it, no more and no less; if you co-operate with the members of your union, pay strict attention to its affairs, attend its meetings and assist to the best of your ability, even if that ability be of a meagre sort; you have done your share towards its advancement, towards its management, and therefore entitled to your pro rata of success or failure which comes to the organization.

Your vote helped to place several of your co-laborers in local union officers' positions; if you contend differently, your method of logic disagrees with those who believe in that thing. The members elected to office are in those positions by virtue of your action or lack of action, in either case they are your officers, for our method of government is majority rule and where such methods prevail, minorities accept unquestioningly, at least they refrain from attempting to destroy because they cannot command or control. Your percentage of responsibility increases in the ratio of your intelligence, the member with knowledge who declines to utilize same for the advancement of his local union is as truly the enemy of that union as tho he were on the outside doing his level best to prevent its progress.

"Knowledge is power," members elect their co-workers whom they think possess the requisite ability and knowledge, if perchance they made a selection which runs contrary to their original conclusion, there is all the more need and reason for co-operation and additional energy on their part.

Condemning men for lack of education or ability, is both senseless and foolish; few men deliberately seek to convey that they possess all the knowledge running loose in order that they may be elected to position, those guilty of such tactics, are indeed entitled to your criticism, but criticism does not and should not extend to attempted disruption of an organization because one or more persons obtained your suffrage on false premises.

If the "know it all" individuals secure your votes and assume office only to make miserable failures, the best remedy is to grin and bear it, but keep in mind your mistake and profit thereby to the extent of knowing whom you bestow your suffrage on in the future. All organizations are afflicted with aspiring members, some with and many without qualifications; it is no crime to seek position in a local union, but it comes close to being wrong for any member to seek any position which he knows beforehand, his training and education will not permit him to conduct successfully and with credit and safety to the union. Man nor woman for that matter, were ever born with all of their faculties attuned for the great battle of life, every one of us had to learn by experience or study; hence if we elect to position in our locals those who are unfortunately without the needed ability or requirements to care for the position, we should not blame them exclusively, for we too have our share of that burden to bear; had we been more careful, as likely as not such members would not be forced into positions by our votes. We must get over the idea that when we bestow title on any of our fellows that at the same time we endow them with all the wisdom of a Solomon and the erudition of a college professor; no bigger mistake is made by our members, be they voluntary or forced members, than to assume such an erroneous attitude. The simple act of electing John Doe who possesses meager knowledge and ability, to a position of responsibility, does not necessarily mean that our ballots possessed superhuman powers and that henceforth John Doe takes rank with the great minds of our times.

All of these errors, all of these false premises cannot possibly excuse a voluntary member for the nasty habit of saying mean and contemptible things about the local union, its officers, members or policy.

As previously intimated you get exactly from your union what you put into that union; you would hardly go forth into the fields seeking to reap grain where none had been sown; and by the same token, you would be rather unwise to exact something from your associate workers at the trade, which you are unwilling to bestow yourself. To get right down to brass tacks, if you belong to a live union, keep it alive by your ceaseless work in its behalf; respect it and your fellow workers, treat them with the same consideration which you seek to secure for yourself; if you are clever, show it by exercising cleverness for the good of the union and trade; be loyal, an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of brag; noise is all well enough in its way, but action properly directed wins advancement. If you must use that hammer, blow in a nickel, get tacks or nails and pound away until your soul is satisfied, but be honest with yourself and your co-workers, do your share and you will enjoy general success.

IDAHO DRY BILL PASSED.

(Times-Star Special Dispatch.)

Boise, Idaho, February 26.—The Idaho Senate, by a vote of 23 to 6, passed the State-wide prohibition bill, to go into effect January 1, 1916. Governor Alexander says he will sign the measure.

A CONSTITUTIONAL SNAG.

Three-Fourths of the States Cannot Force Prohibition on the Rest.

There is an original idea in the Congressional Record of Dec. 29, 1914. It is in a brief prepared by O. P. Anderson, an attorney of Nashville, in which it is contended that the proposed Hobson "amendment" to the constitution (then pending), for the purpose of national regulation of the liquor traffic could not be adopted by a three-fourths majority of the States. This brief was filed by Representative Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, as a part of his argument against the proposed amendment.

A sharp distinction is drawn between an amendment and a supplement. An amendment is merely an alteration or correction of faults in something already existing. But adding entirely new matter to the original instrument is supplementing it. It must be admitted that this is the legal distinction in pleadings.

If individuals cast a certain portion of their goods into a common lot, the partnership could regulate the use of those goods as it saw fit. But it would have no voice in the management of those the individuals retained. Neither could a majority of the partnership force one or more individuals to give up more of their goods without their consent.

The brief shows that the States, in order to form a Union, surrendered some of their sovereign rights. But over those not granted to the General Government they still have absolute control. No majority of the States can take one of those sovereign and unsurrendered rights from a State. When such a right is transferred to the Federal Government, it must be by the voluntary action of all the States, as a supplement to the constitution.

The brief then shows that regulation of the liquor traffic, like marriage and divorce, is one of the sovereign rights which the States have never surrendered to the General Government. Consequently three-fourths of the States can not take the exercise of this right from the remaining one-fourth against their will. It could not even be taken from one State by all the others.

A transfer to the United States Government of the States' sovereign right to regulate the liquor traffic can not be by amendment ratified by three-fourths of the States. It must be by a supplement to the constitution acceded to by all the States in the Union.

National prohibition is still a live question. It will doubtless come up again for congressional action in the near future. Therefore, Mr. Anderson's argument deserves careful study. Analysis will not hurt the brief so much as it will some preconceived opinions on the question of constitutional amendments.—Wall Street Journal.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

"It was mighty nice of you to give up your seat to that stout old lady, Mr. Blinks. It is pleasant to see that there are still some polite men left in the world."

"Sorry, Mrs. Jabbers, but it wasn't politeness at all. The man who sat next to me was quarreling some because he said I crowded him too much, and all I did was to use that stout old lady as a sort of retort courteous." Judge.

OFFICIAL CALL FOR THE EIGHTEENTH GENERAL CONVENTION.

To all Affiliated Locals of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America,
Greeting:

The Eighteenth General Convention of the above-named International Union will convene Monday morning, June 14, 1915, in the city of San Francisco, California, U. S. A.

The opening session will be called to order at 10 o'clock Monday morning, June 14, 1915; at the New Civic Center Auditorium.

All delegates-elect are urged to be on time and thus avoid being reported absent from the initial session. The rules of our conventions in the past required delegates to deposit attendance cards; a similar rule will no doubt operate at the coming convention.

It has been customary to announce that the coming convention will be the most important in the history of our organization. There is little need to emphasize that the Eighteenth General Convention will undoubtedly be as important, if not more so, than any of its recent predecessors. One needs but recall events of quite recent occurrence, especially in the political field, to warrant concluding that the coming gathering will be confronted with problems such as no other conference of representatives from our local unions have been asked to solve. The continued discrimination shown by fanatical advocates of sumptuary legislation, their ceaseless endeavors to curtail the field in which we may find employment at our chosen vocations, added to the depression in industries generally which have caused unprecedented crowding of the unemployed labor market of America, present difficulties of sufficient weight to compel serious deliberation on the part of the men and women who will congregate at our convention, representing an immense army of our allied crafts.

Our International Union, since its last session, has succeeded in converting a fairly good number of non-union workers into trade union adherents who have in turn endeavored to convert others to the cause in which we have enlisted, and while our advance forward was not quite as rapid as all of us would have been pleased to see, we have little foundation upon which to erect reasonable dissatisfaction or to complain of insufficient accretions to our ranks.

Under the laws of our International Union our general conventions are law-making congresses;

that fact should be borne in mind when our locals are called on to select from their number the men or women whom they wish to take part in such important gatherings as their legal representatives, for it rests on the character, ability and knowledge of your representatives as to whether good or inferior legislation shall be the outcome of their deliberations.

The delegates to the coming convention should be the most capable which our unions have in their midst. Unions which foist on conventions incompetent representatives admit lack of intelligence and show an unwarranted disregard for the future welfare of our International Union.

An idea of what the coming convention may be called on to handle can probably be gleaned from the proposals submitted and printed for the second time in this number of the MIXER AND SERVER; there may be other proposals offered to the convention. Under our laws, amendments may be offered and considered by consent of a two-thirds vote of the delegates of said convention.

Laws which have done service in the past may be adequate for continued use, there may be changes necessary to strengthen present provisions, or to modify such legislation as he proved cumbersome or ineffective.

Plans and policies for the incoming term will be subjects of import; ways and means to carry out both must be cared for, and these subjects will necessitate wise judgment on the part of your legal representatives in order that the aims and objects of our movement may be achieved.

Your General Executive Board following in the footsteps of their predecessors, tender, on behalf of our International Union, a fraternal and cordial invitation to all affiliated local unions to elect and send representatives to the Eighteenth General Convention. We hold the view that unceasing attendance on the part of members is necessary for the best interests of local unions, and by a similar token we believe that our locals are in duty bound to attend our general conventions through legally elected delegates from such local unions. Our general conventions echo the sentiment of only such sections of the country as are fully represented by delegates; that fact has been borne emphatically home on several occasions, hence if your local union expects its interests to be cared for by others, it will probably experience as much disappointment as the absentee from local unions, only multiplied considerably. We have no desire to make our membership feel that partiality is shown to attending unions, but we would be unfair to ourselves and the men and women who placed us in position if we were to try to convey the impression that absenteeism is conducive to the benefit of general legislation. In line with our predecessors, we sincerely urge every local union attached to our International Union to put forth every ounce of energy and effort to the end of sending delegates to this coming convention, the larger the attendance, the more locals represented on the floor of the convention, the more widespread will be the application of our ideas of majority rule.

Our conventions meet every two years. Annual meetings were dispensed with in order to enable struggling locals to lay aside sufficient funds to defray the expense of representation. We have reasons to hope, in fact, expect, that the attendance at this convention will outstrip all previous gatherings. With every affiliated local represented by delegates on the floor of this convention it will mean legislation, plans and policy for the coming term, originated and concurred in by majority rule and the utter rout of the charge made against a few previous gatherings of minority legislation for the majority.

We have been assured repeatedly that our local unions in San Francisco have been engaged in perfecting arrangements and planning entertainment for the benefit of those who attend; there is little doubt but what accommodations will match, if not be superior to what we have enjoyed at other convention cities, and we look forward to meeting the best brain and ability which our affiliated locals can boast of possessing.

Particulars with reference to hotel accommodations and rates will be printed in the MIXER AND SERVER in ample time to make suitable reservations. We have been assured by the transportation companies that railway rates and accommodations, stop-off privileges, etc., will be superior to what has ever been offered; that this is to be expected goes without saying; the big expositions in the convention city as well as at San Diego, Cal., will call into employment transportation equipment such as will delight travelers.

To enable our members to quickly grasp the laws on representation and voting strength at our conventions, the following International Union laws are reproduced:

CONVENTION.

Sec. 120. The convention shall be held the second Monday in June, 1913, and biennially thereafter. The convention shall be held in the city designated by the preceding convention.

(a) All proposed amendments to the International Constitution, excepting as provided in Section 174, shall be printed in the official journal of the International Union at least three months previous to the date of a convention; no other amendments will be considered by a convention unless by sanction of a two-thirds vote of the delegates of said convention.

Sec. 121. Every delegate to the convention must be in possession of certified credentials. He must be a member of the International Union for at least twelve consecutive months; excepted from this rule shall be such delegates whose locals have not been in existence for such a length of time.

Sec. 122. No local union shall be permitted representation in a convention unless it has been chartered at least 45 days and has paid at least one month per capita.

Sec. 123. The expenses of delegates to the convention must be borne by the locals. The expenses of the General President and the Secretary-Treasurer shall be borne by the International Union.

Sec. 124. The representatives of the locals of the convention shall be as follows: Locals of fifty members or less shall be entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for each succeeding fifty members or majority fraction thereof, until a membership of one hundred and fifty has been attained; for each additional five hundred members, or majority fraction thereof, one additional delegate.

Sec. 125. The vote in convention shall be one vote for each fifty members in good standing or majority fraction thereof; provided, no delegate shall cast more than three votes.

Sec. 126. Each local shall notify the General Secretary-Treasurer, at least three weeks before the convention is held, of the names of its delegates, giving address and trade.

Sec. 127. The credentials to the convention must be upon the blanks furnished by the General Secretary-Treasurer, and only such delegates be admitted to the convention as are in possession of credentials to which the seal of the local and the signatures of its chairman and secretary are affixed.

Sec. 128. One-third of the delegates present in the convention shall constitute a quorum.

Sec. 129. The General President and General Secretary-Treasurer shall not accept credentials from any local union as delegate to general convention; they shall represent the International Union at conventions.

Sec. 130. The officers elected at each convention shall assume and perform the duties of their respective offices in accordance with Section 99.

Sec. 131. No proxies shall be allowed in the convention.

Sec. 132. The General Secretary-Treasurer shall prepare for the use of the convention a printed poll-list containing the number of votes the delegates from the local unions are entitled to, based upon the average paid-up membership for the year preceding the convention and ending with the last day of April in the year in which the convention is to be held.

Sec. 133. The convention shall elect representatives to the American Federation of Labor; said representatives to be subject to instructions of the General Executive Board. They shall receive remuneration at the rate of eight ($8.00) dollars per day.

Sec. 134. No delegates shall be seated in a convention from any local unless all per capita tax and other indebtedness which may be owing to the International Union, shall be paid.

Sec. 135. Every city desiring to secure the convention of this International Union shall give notice of this fact not later than two months before the time set for the convention, through the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER. The name of no other city shall be presented, except by a majority vote of the convention.

Careful reading of the foregoing sections is suggested so that no misunderstanding may arise.

Our laws (Section 126) provide for official notification to headquarters of the name, address and trade of delegates elect; the purpose of that law is to permit the general office to transmit the information as to number of delegates expected, to the convention city arrangements committee, to compile convention roll-call, order badges, and innumerable details which can not be closed until information is received from our locals.

While THREE WEEKS may seem a sufficient period of time, we urge our locals to return their duplicate credentials to the general office as quickly as conditions will permit; failure to return duplicate credential may necessitate leaving your delegate's name off the roll-call; this roll-call must be printed earlier than usual on account of the distance between headquarters and the convention city. The hearty co-operation of our local unions will greatly facilitate matters and permit of complete arrangements in advance of convention date.

The following tabulation will enable any local union to calculate the number of delegates it is entitled to and its voting strength on the floor of the coming convention.

In making compilation, calculators should remember that the vote is based on the AVERAGE PAID-UP MEMBERSHIP for the year preceding the convention and ending with the last day of April, 1915; in other words, the membership of May, 1914, to April, 1915, inclusive.

CREDENTIALS FOR THE EIGHTEENTH GENERAL CONVENTION OF THE HOTEL AND RESTAURANT EMPLOYEES' INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE AND BARTENDERS' INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA HAVE BEEN FORWARDED TO ALL LOCALS AFFILIATED. IF YOUR SECRETARY FAILED TO SECURE SAME, THE GENERAL OFFICE SHOULD BE ADVISED SO THAT ANOTHER SET MAY BE SENT. LOCAL UNIONS WHICH PROPOSE TO SEND MORE THAN ONE DELEGATE SHOULD MAKE APPLICATION FOR ADDITIONAL CREDENTIALS AT ONCE.

Reiterating our cordial and fraternal invitation to every affiliated local union to elect and send their full quota of delegates to the Eighteenth General Convention, we need the services of the most capable, brainy and willing workers which your union boasts of having; by sending such you will enhance the value of your own union as well as aid in making our International Union the success which we are all aiming at and anxious to secure. With the general and genuine co-operation of your representatives we hope to make the Eighteenth General Convention an unqualified success, a convention which will leave its mark sufficiently high as to merit taking it as a model for succeeding gatherings under the auspices of our International Union. The date is June 14th, this year, 1915, and the place San Francisco, California, U. S. A. Come to SAN FRANCISCO and help in the good work briefly outlined in this call.

CONVENTION ARRANGEMENTS

The following information is communicated to us by Brother Dan P. Regan, secretary of the Convention Arrangements Committee for the Eighteenth General Convention at San Francisco, Cal., U. S. A., June 14, 1915:

The New Civic Center Auditorium, one of the best buildings for convention purposes, has been selected by the 1915 Convention Committee as the hall in which our International will hold the Eighteenth General Convention.

The 1915 Convention Committee has selected the Hotel Sutter as the headquarters hotel. This is one of the best appointed and best equipped hotels in the city. Popular prices will prevail.

Delegates coming to the Eighteenth General Convention should communicate with Dan P. Regan, secretary of the Convention League, and make arrangements for hotel reservations. The number of reservations secured at the Hotel Sutter are not sufficient to accommodate all of the delegates and their friends who will accompany them, and as June is the big month here in regard to conventions, it is well that delegates should take the precaution of securing rooms in advance.

Bro. Dan P. Regan's address is 115 Valencia street, San Francisco, Cal.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

The following proposals were given their first printing, under the provisions of our laws, in the March, 1915, number of the MIXER AND SERVER. This is the second presentation, and they will be printed in the May, 1915, number of the MIXER AND SERVER, thus fully complying with our laws governing proposals to be submitted to our General Conventions.

As fully set forth in previous issues of our official journal, the purpose sought to be attained by printing proposed changes in our laws is to give all affiliated members ample opportunity to read carefully and digest changes proposed in our laws, and thus place local unions in a position to advise their delegates to the conventions whether they are for or against such proposed changes.

Delegates-elect are urged to peruse the proposed measures in order that they may fully understand them, and if need be, solicit from their local unions advice or instructions on any or all submitted propositions. As intimated, this is the SECOND time these proposed changes have been offered. They will be printed once more in the May, 1915, number; that being the THIRD and last time before the coming convention, which convenes in the city of San Francisco, Cal., Monday, June 14, 1915.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 15, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 593 submits the following amendments for the consideration of the next general convention.

Fraternally submitted,

THOS. P. Woods,
Secretary Local 593.

To strike out Section 18 and insert a new Section to read as follows:

Section 18. A member suspended for non-payment of dues may be re-admitted to any local of his craft upon the payment of the reinstatement fee of the local under whose jurisdiction he may be working.

Provided that all fines or assessments have been paid to the local by which he was suspended.

The local that suspends him to be notified at the time when application was made for re-admission.

Amend Section 22, Paragraph "A." By striking out the words (suspended or) after the word (member) and the words (suspended or) after the word (was).

Amended paragraph to read as follows:

Section 22, Paragraph "A." Any member expelled from any local is ineligible to membership in any other local of this International, except by consent of the local by which he was expelled.

Amend Section 23. By striking out the words (suspended or) after the word (admitting).

Amended section to read as follows:

Section 23. The names of all suspended or expelled members, must be reported to the General Secretary, locals admitting expelled members must on being notified thereof, suspend such members until full investigation has been made or stand suspended by the International Union.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 20, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, International Secretary-Treasurer, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In submitting a proposition to strike out Section 18 of the International Constitution, and also to change Sections 22 and 23, I have in mind the necessity of having all three Sections read alike, so as to conform to each other.

I would like also to give my views of these necessary changes in order that the general membership may thoroughly understand what the intent of these proposals really are.

For example, if a member of Local 593 for instance, working in Minneapolis was suspended for non-payment of dues, left that city, and went to Chicago and found work or saw the chance of getting a job, went to Local 35, paid the reinstatement fee of Local 35, he would have the same privileges as if the reinstatement fee were sent to Local 593.

This rule would work both ways but the home local would have the advantage, as under the present by-laws a member works the balance of the month before the home local derives any benefit, and in some cases these benefits have been won only after a long hard fight.

It should be an understood thing that under the present by-laws, any local has the privilege to have their reinstatement fee conform to these new proposals, or, if necessary, have a special fee for members coming into the local under this head, provided that it is in accord with Section 62 of the International by-laws.

I have found after thirteen years' experiment that secretaries as a rule find it easier and more convenient to collect a reinstatement fee for the home local than to collect and send it to another local, also that the majority of suspended members take the same point of view, particularly in regard to men employed in first class hotels in cities where they are not thoroughly organized. The change in these sections would be equally beneficial to all, as I think it would add an incentive to locals to get out and rustle up all old members, thereby deriving the benefit instead of sending it to another local. As it is necessary to write for a reinstatement price on all suspended members from other locals, time is lost, but all these objections would be overcome if these proposals meet with the approval of the next general convention.

Here I pause to ask why a local should have a larger reinstatement fee for persons outside their jurisdiction? Probably because it is thought to be much easier for another secretary to collect it.

Trusting that the new propositions will meet the approval of the members, I beg to remain,

Fraternally yours,

THOS. P. Woods,
Secretary Local 593.

CLEVELAND, O., February 5, 1915.

Be it resolved by this convention of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A. that we add to our International constitution a new section, to be known as Section 14 and to read as follows:

"Members of this International having been in continuous good standing for at least twenty-five years shall thereafter be exempt from further payment of dues and assessments without losing any right or privilege of active membership, even though they should adopt a vocation not covered by the charter of this International."

Respectfully submitted by Local 106,

THOMAS S. FARRELL,
President
JOHN BOOKJANS,
Secretary.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 11, 1915.

Jere L. Sullivan, Gen'l Secretary:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Please find enclosed resolutions adopted by this local at our last regular meeting held on February 10, 1915, said resolutions to be published in the MIXER AND SERVER, according to the International Constitution.

Fraternally yours,

COOKS' HELPERS' UNION, LOCAL 110,
ALFRED PRICE, President.
JAMES LEWIS, Secretary.

Resolution No.....

Local 110 of San Francisco, Cal., believing Section 88 of the International constitution to be discriminating in its character and a menace to the good and welfare of a local that may have a few members less than a sister local where a controversy between said locals is to be acted upon by the local joint executive board to which both locals are affiliated. Therefore, Local 110 offers a resolution (to be considered by the 1915 convention of the I. U.) to amend Section 88 of the International constitution, to read as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each delegate. No delegate can cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances.

"There shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint board.

DENVER, COLO., February 23, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, General Secretary:

Enclosed find amendment to Section 64 of the International by-laws and constitution. This is one amendment that I think should be adopted for the protection of local unions, as the general office will know if a local has its officers bonded. I think it will stop the absconding of officers handling funds. If there is anything that will make this amendment stronger kindly let me know and I will submit it to the convention.

Hoping this is satisfactory, with best wishes, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

F. WESSEL,
Secretary Local 8.

The following amendment to Section 64 is offered for the consideration of the convention to be held June 14th at San Francisco:

"Section 64 amended to read as follows: It shall be mandatory on the part of all affiliated locals to bond their treasurers and other officers who handle funds. Bonds to be procured by the local through the International secretary-treasurer. A penalty of Ten ($10) Dollars shall be imposed on local unions failing to apply to the International secretary-treasurer for bonds before installing officers handling funds."

Submitted by

F. WESSEL,
Secretary Local 8.

OAKLAND, CAL., February 6, 1915.

There is hereby added to the constitution a new section to be numbered Section 178 and to read as follows:

Section 178. The rights and powers not delegated to the International Union by this constitution, nor prohibited by it to the locals or the members of the International Union are reserved to the locals and to the members respectively.

Section 144 of the constitution is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 144. A copy of the official Journal shall be sent to each member of the International Union, and the secretary of each local shall be required to send the names and addresses of all the members of his local to the general secretary-treasurer every six months so that every member shall receive a copy of the Journal whenever issued, but this provision shall not be construed to authorize the secretary-treasurer to refuse or neglect to forward a copy of the Journal to every member at the expiration of said period of six months upon the failure of the secretary of the local to furnish the names and addresses herein required; provided, however, that the secretary-treasurer shall have authority at any time to cease forwarding a copy of the Journal to a member after receiving notice from the Postal Department that mail cannot for any reason be delivered to such address. A bound volume of the MIXER AND SERVER shall be sent to each local annually; it shall be mandatory for locals to purchase same.

JOHN KENNEDY, Secretary,
Local 525.

OAKLAND, CAL., February 8, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Find enclosed amendments to constitution, proposed by Local 31, of Oakland, California.

C. P. HIBBAND, President.
W. A. HOSKINS, Secretary.

Section 176 of the constitution is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 176. All laws, rules and regulations, or parts thereof, in conflict with this constitution shall be null and void in so far as they conflict.

C. P. HIBBAND, President.
W. A. HOSKINS, Secretary.

There is hereby added to the constitution a new section to be numbered Section 177 and to read as follows:

Section 177. Nothing contained in this constitution shall be held to limit the authority of the International Union and the members thereof with the sanction of the American Federation of Labor to change or alter the name, jurisdiction, form or manner of organization and affiliation of the constituted crafts, locals and members of the International Union.

C. P. HIBBAND, President.
W. A. HOSKINS, Secretary.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, Sec'y-Treas., Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Enclosed please find five amendments to the International constitution, submitted by delegates-elect Canny and Battles, which have been approved by the local, for publication in the official Journal.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
COOKS' UNION, LOCAL 44,
JOHN HAWKINS, President
ALFRED E. STEIMER, Sec'y-Treas.

Resolved to amend Section 43 of the constitution relating to jurisdiction over lunch, oyster and steam-tablemen to read:

Section 43. Cooks' locals, or mixed locals where cooks have no separate local, shall have jurisdiction over lunchmen, oystermen and steam-tablemen, regardless of whether such work is in a kitchen or dining room.

Approved by Cooks' Union, Local 44.

JOHN HAWKINS, President
ALFRED E. STEIMER, Sec'y-Treas.

Resolved to amend Section 83 of the constitution relating to proprietors, to read as follows:

Section 83. Whenever a member of the International Union becomes a proprietor he may retain membership in a local provided that he does not attach himself to any organization.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

as a proprietors' organization. The payment of dues to locals by proprietors shall be left to the discretion of the locals. Any member of a local whose name is attached to any license where the sale of liquor transpires is a proprietor. Proprietors working at the trade shall be entitled to all the rights of the local union of which they are members, except that they shall not be eligible to election either as delegates to the conventions or to any office within the gift of a local union. Proprietors not working at the trade shall have neither voice nor vote, nor hold office of any kind.

Fraternally submitted,

MICHAEL H. CANNY,

Delegate-elect to the 18th Int. Convention of the
H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A.

A resolution to abolish withdrawal cards.

Whereas, the system of withdrawal cards is being constantly violated and constitutes a ready means for the evasion of our laws; and,

Whereas, those who do not work at the business may readily become reinstated upon becoming subject to the jurisdiction of the International Union, and there is no particular hardship in enforcing such a system of reinstatement to take the place of withdrawal cards;

Therefore be it resolved, That Sections 77, 78, 81, 82 and 84 be and are hereby repealed.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 17, 1915.

A subsidiary amendment to the International constitution relative to (Section 15) covering the United States and its possessions where charters are issued:

"All persons making application in this International of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of America in this United States or its possessions, who have not already obtained their First Citizen Papers, upon being initiated into a local in this U. S. or its possessions, shall pay One ($1.00) Dollar in excess of local's initiation fee, said One ($1.00) Dollar to be retained by said local where member was initiated; if said One ($1.00) Dollar is not sufficient for cost of securing First Citizen Paper for said newly initiated member, then said member will be assessed twenty-five (25c) cents per month in excess of all dues and assessments that may be levied on or by said local where member was initiated in U. S. or its possessions till the amount has been acquired for the cost of procuring First Citizen Papers. Such money collected will be permissible to transfer from one local to another when shown to be for said purpose. Upon initiation into a local no member will be compelled to renounce his Allegiance to his Flag or Country, yet his pronounced refusal to obtain his First Citizen Papers deprives him of being eligible to hold any office in this International or its affiliated locals within U. S. or its possessions; he shall also forfeit such money at the expiration of one year except he can show that he has not made his livelihood in the U. S. or its possessions since the time of his initiation into a local in U. S. or any of its possessions. No member's money to be forfeited by monthly suspension from any local in U. S. or its possessions for the period of one year. Six month's grace will be granted to members initiated into a local in U. S. or its possessions upon proof that they have not made their livelihood in the U. S. or its possessions, and no further extension of time will be allowed and said member's money is considered forfeited. The secretary of a local in his monthly report shall acquaint the General Office of newly initiated members whose money is deposited in a local for the procuring of First Citizen Papers. All such money forfeited to be forwarded to the General Executive Board of this International and to be apportioned as following: Ten per cent of forfeited money to defray the general expenses of this International; five per cent to be deposited in the death benefit fund of this International; eighty-five per cent to be set aside as a fund to be known as a Culinary Union's Home Fund, for the purpose of buying land and thereon build a home for aged and infirm members of culinary crafts who have been in good standing in this International of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of America for eighteen consecutive years. Said land, when being purchased, to be voted on by a referendum of the locals of this International" (In conformity with Section 120, International).

ALFRED E. STEIMER, Sec'y-Treas.

[NOTE.—Brother Battles, author of the foregoing proposal, called our attention to two errors which crept into his proposition on its first printing: The word "Alliance" should have read ALLEGIANC, and where it read "one per cent" it should have read TEN PER CENT.—EDITOR MIXER AND SERVER.]

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 19, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I beg to enclose a constitutional amendment, proposed by Local 30, which was unanimously adopted in the regular meeting of this local on February 10, 1915. Kindly publish same in the MIXER AND SERVER as per requirement and oblige.

Fraternally yours.

HUGO ERNST,
Secretary-Treasurer Local 30.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROPOSED BY LOCAL NO. 30.

A resolution to amend the constitution by amending Section 76 thereof, relating to manner of crediting dues of traveling members.

Resolved, That Section 76 of the Constitution be amended to read as follows:

"Section 76. When a traveling member deposits his card before the seventh day of any month, the dues of such member for said month shall belong to the local accepting the card, and such dues if already paid and other dues if paid in advance, shall be remitted to said local upon demand therefor being made under seal to the local which is in possession of such dues."

HUGO ERNST,

Secretary-Treasurer Local 30.

A. C. ROSE President.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., February 12, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Inclosed find two proposed changes to our International Constitution in the form of resolutions to be presented at the Eighteenth General Convention:

To the Eighteenth General Convention, Greeting:

Whereas, Section 24 of the International Constitution has never been enforced, and,

Whereas, it has been the means of causing quite a few of the locals to have a very hard time in enforcing same. Therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Eighteenth General Convention in session at San Francisco, Cal., June 14 to 19, 1915, that Section 24 of the International Constitution be stricken from said constitution.

Proposed by W. M. Spear, Local 27.

To the Eighteenth General Convention, Greeting:

Whereas Section 88 of our International Constitution, which reads as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each member that per capita tax is paid on; said vote to be cast in equal proportions by its delegates. No delegate can cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances. There shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint executive board."

Whereas, the above section has caused so much wrangle and dispute in the various cities among our crafts, therefore be it

Resolved, that said Section 88 be changed to read as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each delegate present; no delegate shall cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances; there shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint executive board."

Proposed by W. M. Spear, Local 27.

The attention of local unions is called to the law relative to notifying the general secretary-treasurer not later than THREE weeks before the date of the coming convention, the name, address and trade of delegate elect. Local unions will materially aid headquarters by notifying us just as quickly as possible whether they intend to be represented at the coming convention or not. The surest method to accomplish that purpose, is to return the duplicate credential with the name and address of the delegate. In the event that your local is unfortunate and unable to be represented, we should be so advised. Urging general co-operation on the part of secretaries to the end of permitting final arrangements being made without unnecessary delay. The Official Roll Call of the coming convention MUST be made up before May 24, 1915.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17, 1915.

DEAR SIR—At the suggestion of the Secretary of Bartenders' Union, Local 284, of this city, I am writing you for information that the Secretary here is unable to give.

I wish to locate one Fred H. Knowlton if living, and his heirs if he is dead. He was a bartender at 315 S. Main Street in this city in 1898 and possibly a year or two later. I will say that there is about $1,100 in this city that can be recovered for the heirs of said Fred H. Knowlton—hence this inquiry.

Hoping to hear from you, I am,

Very truly,

A. J. MITCHELL,
310 Bryson Bldg.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I notice in the February number of the MIXER AND SERVER on page 47, from Bro. Claude Hunter of Local 859, a parody on the famous Irish marching song.

The following parody on the same marching song was sung by the members of the House in the State of Utah during a visit to the members of the Senate, just previous to the adjournment of that body:

It's a long ways to the country,
It's the place for them to go,
It's a long time before Wootton
And his bill will get a show.
Good-bye, prohibition,
God bless Governor Spry;
It's a long, long time before the farmers
Make Utah go dry.

Yours fraternally,

JOE LANE,
Secretary Local 721.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

On March 8th, 1915, The Cleveland Citizen, of Cleveland, Ohio, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary, and the story of its struggles is without doubt one of the most interesting bits of history connected with the American labor movement. The Cleveland Citizen has maintained a continuous existence for a quarter of a century, and has seen the labor movement of America grow from a toddling infant to a sturdy giant. When it was launched the C. L. U. of that city consisted of twenty-eight local unions, one half of which were connected with their respective International Unions; the formation of National and International Unions had not progressed very far at that time.

Today the city of Cleveland boasts of having about the most virile and progressive labor movements of any municipality of America. The Cleveland Citizen has materially aided in accomplishing that splendid condition and is entitled to full measure of credit for the result. The Cleveland Citizen has always been an aggressive antagonist of fanatical organizations which sought to inflict restrictive legislation on the people, and is at its best when walloping sumptuary legislationists. We take this opportunity of tendering to its editorial force congratulations and thanks for the good work accomplished for the men and women of the Catering Industry.

SKEPTICAL ON STORIES OF "VODKA-FREE RUSSIA."

Cincinnatian, Writing to a Publication, Says the "Reformed" Country Has Not Yet Been Put to the Trial—Argues for Regulations Instead of Prohibition.

An interesting article by J. C. Schmidlapp, well-known Cincinnatian, appears in a recent issue of The Survey. Mr. Schmidlapp takes up the cudgel against nation-wide prohibition and in behalf of the regulation of the liquor trade. "State prohibition, we know, has been a failure," he says. "The pioneer State of Maine has had prohibition for over 50 years, and yet the consumption of spirits, if measured by the number of saloons, is more than it is in the two neighboring States of Vermont and New Hampshire combined. Maine's growth has been one-eleventh of the average growth of the population of the United States since State prohibition was introduced."

Referring to recent claims made about the abolition of vodka in Russia, and its effects, Mr. Schmidlapp says: "I read with much interest the article on Russian prohibition until I came to the point where it was stated that Russia is giving up a revenue of a billion dollars a year. Just think, a tax of a billion dollars a year from one industry in a country whose total wealth is less than one-third of ours, and whose post-office receipts are less than $40,000,000 a year. Surely such a statement would not pass the English censor. We hear that with the stroke of the pen a vast drunken population has been changed to a sober, moral and industrious one in a few weeks. If Russia can do this, I cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness and embrace her. But before we kiss and embrace, let us put her on trial."—Times-Star, February 27, 1915.

"A PLACE IN THE SUN."

You have found your place, O Dreamers,

In the yellow sun at last,

Where the wind-blown grasses gather

And the final fight is past;

Where a woman weeps above you

As she envies you your fate;

Where a child sobs with his mother

As the guarding vultures wait.

You have found your place, O Dreamers,

In the golden sun you sought;

But the clouds have come between you

And the vanished dream you wrought:

Where a woman waits and watches

Through the heartache of the night,

And your gray ghost through the window

Tells the glory of the fight.

You have found your place, O Sleepers,

Where the yellow sun drifts down;

But the trench is deep with shadows

And the myrtle is your crown;

Where a woman's cry to heaven

Stills the cannon at the gate,

Where a little child is weeping

And the hungry vultures wait.

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March:

On the 9th, I left for Utica, N. Y., where I was met by Secretary Roberts of Local 120, and after calling on a few of the boys on duty, I met in conference with President Leddy, Secretary Roberts, and Brothers Sullivan and Humphreys, where matters of interest to Local 120 were discussed. After the conference I enjoyed a dinner in company with the above-named brothers.

On the 10th, to Albany to attend a hearing before the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment of the Senate and the Committee on Excise of the Assembly, on the state-wide prohibition bill that was pending before the New York State Legislature. The following members were there representing their local unions: Charles Hale, Local 2, Brooklyn; A. Toby, Local 29, Bronx, New York; Maurice DeYoung, Local 70, Brooklyn; Joseph R. Michaels and Charles Yates, Local 76, Syracuse; William H. Walsh, Matthew Dugan and Joseph H. Nolan, Local 228, Albany; F. J. Medill, Richard Leard and Daniel Rourke; Local 320, Schenectady; Eugene Race, Local 548, Hudson, and Emanuel Koveleski, Local 171, Rochester. Several local unions send resolutions protesting against the enactment of the said law. Up to this writing neither committee has made any report on the said bill and as the legislature will adjourn within the next two weeks, it is not likely that the report of the committee will be made in sufficient time to allow both branches of the legislature to act before adjournment. However, this does not mean that the danger has passed, as immediately after the adjournment of the legislature, or to be exact, April 6th, the State Constitutional Convention will convene and similar legislation will no doubt be presented to that body, hence our membership in the State of New York will have to keep on the alert and be prepared to use their influence to kill off any legislation of an inimical character that may come before the said Constitutional Convention.

Our convention is but eighty-one days away from today, March 25, so let us look and see what the American Federation of Labor has got to say in regard to a division of forces in any particular craft. The Atlanta convention of the Federation in 1911, made the following declaration:

"Whatever argument or excuse there might have been in the past for the existence of two organizations of the one craft, we now believe that such argument or excuse is absent. It is the unanimous opinion of the Committee on Adjustment, many of whose members have had to deal with disputes caused by the existence of two organizations of one craft for many years, that the time has arrived for the American Federation of Labor to openly and emphatically declare itself to the effect that, large as this country is, it is not large enough to hold two organizations of the one craft. Therefore your committee recommends that this Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor go squarely on record in favor of the above declaration, and your committee further recommends that this convention instruct the president and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to carry into effect the principles and purposes involved in this declaration—one craft, one organization."

"One craft, one organization." Can it be truthfully said that all the trades connected with the catering industry are not of one craft? The cook, waiter, waitress, bartender and miscellaneous help are all engaged in catering to the wants of the general public, hence they are but one craft, and as the American Federation of Labor has declared, and it has reaffirmed that declaration at every convention since the Atlanta convention, that "large as this country is, it is not large enough to hold two organizations of the one craft." Then how can the advocates of segregation now come forth and tell us, in defiance of that declaration, that better results can be achieved by a division of the ranks of those engaged in the catering industry? One who will give this question careful consideration can readily see the inconsistency of this propaganda.

The following is my expense account for the month:

MR. THOMAS MURPHY, Secretary, Local 675, 76
W. Second Street, Oswego, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 12th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"If a member holds a withdrawal card from a defunct local union, what would he have to do in order to reinstate himself to membership?"

A member holding a withdrawal card from a local that has turned in their charter or become suspended for non-payment of per capita tax, or for any other reason, must present his withdrawal card to the International Union, through the general office, in order to become reinstated to membership. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 579.

MR. JERRY NEVILLE, Secretary, Local 423, 122½ S. High Street, Columbus, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the appeal of Brother Charles Miranda from the action of Local 423, in expelling him from membership; it appears from all the statements submitted by Brother Miranda, that he was not given a fair opportunity to defend himself, claiming that it was impossible for him to attend the meeting at the time set and further making a general denial of any misconduct in office, or misappropriating any of the funds of the local. The committee appointed to audit the books, however, find a number of discrepancies, most of them due to a bad system of book-keeping, the actual shortage reported to this office being $7.10.

After giving this matter very careful consideration, I am of the opinion that an opportunity had ought to be given Brother Miranda to enter a defense of his actions and without taking into consideration the merits upon which his expulsion was based, as to its justification or otherwise, I am going to remand this case back to Local 423 and I do hereby direct that a committee be appointed in accordance with Sections 169 and 170, and a thorough investigation of this matter be made and report their findings to Local 423, with such recommendations as they may desire to make. Pending the carrying out of these directions, the expulsion of Charles Miranda from membership is temporarily raised. With greetings.

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 580.

MR. A. O'LEARY, Secretary, Local 280, Labor Temple, Toronto, Ont.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your protest against the membership of Brothers Thomas Flynn, Dennis Cleary and James Jobson, who were elected to membership in Local 674, Winnipeg, while under suspension by Local 280 of Toronto.

Local 674 contends that these three members became charter members of Local 674 and that they had no knowledge of their prior membership in Local 280.

There has been no denial made of the fact that these three brothers were suspended members at the time of their securing membership in Local 674, hence this office has no choice in the matter other than to sustain the protest made against their membership. I do, therefore, in compliance with the provisions of the constitution, cancel their membership in this International Union and all traveling and withdrawal cards issued to any and all of them, are hereby cancelled and Local 674 is directed to report the cancellation of their membership on their next monthly report to the general office; and it is further directed, that if Brothers Thomas Flynn, Dennis Cleary or James Jobson desire to renew their membership with this International Union, that they will have to apply to Local 280 for reinstatement. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 581.

MR. J. J. CONDON, Secretary, Local 524, Box 454, Miles City, Mont.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 27th ult., wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Is a member who became suspended and reinstated, included in section 121, which says that every delegate must be a member at least twelve consecutive months; or in other words, is a former member who reinstates, but has not been reinstated twelve consecutive months, entitled to be a delegate?"

Section 121. Every delegate to the convention must be in possession of certified credentials. He must be a member of the International Union for at least twelve consecutive months; excepted from this rule shall be such delegates whose locals have not been in existence for such a length of time.

In accordance with this section, a delegate to the International convention, must be an active member who has been in good standing with the International Union for a period of twelve consecutive months immediately preceding the convention. A member who becomes suspended from membership and is reinstated within that period, is not eligible to serve as a delegate. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 582.

MR. JOHN J. QUIRK, Secretary, Local 85, 118 Walker Street, Lowell, Mass.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 25th ult., wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"A member of Local 93, Haverhill, Mass., has been working in this city for the past three years, repeated efforts during that time have been made to get him to deposit his traveling card, but he refused to deposit the same. The house in which he is working is not signed up, so we took the matter up with Local 93 of which he was a member and requested them to enforce section 13; nothing, however, was done in the matter, and in December, 1914, I again took the matter up with Local 93 and they advised me that the member was now willing to deposit his traveling card, but refused to pay the $5 fine imposed. Can we insist upon the payment of the fine?"

Local 85, in accordance with section 13 advised Local 93 of the fact that a member of Local 93 was working in their jurisdiction and refused to transfer his membership to their local, and as the said member was working in an open house, they requested Local 93 to collect the constitutional penalty of $5 before they issue him a traveling card; all of this was in strict accord with the I. U. constitution and it was the duty of Local 93 to notify this member that a penalty of $5.00 was imposed upon him, and that in accordance with the law he was compelled to transfer his membership into Local 85; and that no further dues would be accepted from him until the fine was paid and the transfer requested. If Local 93 did not do that then they erred.

My decision, therefore, is that the said James Scannell must pay to Local 93 the penalty as directed by Local 85 for his failure to comply with section 13 of the I. U. constitution, and Local 93 should remit the said amount to Local 85. Local 93 is further directed not to accept any further dues from the said Scannell until the said fine is paid and the transfer or traveling card requested. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE, General President.

Decision No. 583.

March 8, 1915.

MR. H. MAERTENS, Secretary, Local 109, 260 Washington Street, Newark, N. J.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 23rd, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"At a special meeting can any business other than that for which the meeting was called be transacted?"

At a special meeting no other business than that set forth in the call can be transacted; if the special meeting was called for the purpose of nominating a business agent, as it appears from the notice of the call on file in this office, then no other business other than that should have taken place, or could have legally been considered.

"Should the minutes of the previous meeting be read at a special meeting?"

The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting at a special meeting is not necessary, but the minutes of the special meeting should be read at the next regular meeting.

"Our by-laws require six months' membership before a member is eligible to be elected to any office within the gift of the local; last December a member was elected as trustee who had held membership for less than two months. Was his election legal?"

In accordance with the by-laws of the local, his election was not legal. However that point should have been raised prior to his election. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 584.

March 15, 1915.

MR. THOMAS J. HARDING, President, Local 300, 69 Richmond Street, Toronto, Ont.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 11th ult., wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"The election of officers was held, the ballots were sent out and returned by mail and when received were placed in the ballot box, opened and counted in the presence of the meeting—an election committee attended to the sending out of the ballots and the counting of them. The chairman of the election committee was a candidate for office and was defeated and he now protests the election on the grounds that ballots were sent to members who were over two months in arrears for dues, but who were not suspended by this local, the local carrying them for an extra month, and in some cases two, on account of the hard times. What we desire to know is: is it necessary for a new election, or is a brother in good standing if the local sees fit to pay his per capita tax to the International? Should not the protest have been made before the ballots were counted?"

Section 60 of the I. U. constitution states that a member two calendar months in arrears stands suspended forthwith; if a local union carries a member over that period, they do so on their own responsibility; the said member being over two calendar months in arrears not being entitled to any of the rights or privileges accorded a member in good standing.

In the case cited above, the local erred in permitting a candidate for office to serve as a member of the election committee, and the member now protesting this election and who was chairman of this committee, should have objected to himself serving as a member of the committee on the grounds that he was a candidate for office. Now the International Union does not officially recognize the right of a local union to carry a member more than two calendar months. A local can, if it chooses to, when a member appears before them and states that he is unable to pay his dues, pay his dues for him with the understanding that he is to pay the said amount to the local as soon as it is possible for him to do so, thereby keeping himself in good standing with the International Union.

The manner in which the election itself was conducted being legal and in accordance with the laws and directions of the local union, and notwithstanding the fact that there may have been some members whom the local had been carrying on their books as being in good standing, who were over two calendar months in arrears, and that ballots were sent to them under the direction of the chairman of the election committee, who was defeated for office at the said election and who made no protest to the said ballots being sent to members over two calendar months in arrears until after the said ballots had been counted, and there being no question as to the honesty of the count, I am loath to believe that the said election should be declared illegal. I therefore hold that this brother, having knowledge of the facts before the ballots were counted, should have filed his protest before the ballots were counted, and having failed to do so, has no legal claim to file any protest at this time: I therefore hold that the facts stated above do not warrant nullifying the said election, hence the election is accepted as being legal, and the officers elected at the said election as being the legally elected officers to be installed for the ensuing term. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 585.

March 15, 1915.

MR. ELMER E. OWEN, Secretary, Local 55, Box 1525, Edmonton, Alta.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 2nd, wherein you request a decision on the following:

"A member was elected to act as our delegate to the International convention at San Francisco. Since his election he has transferred his membership to another local. Can he still act as our delegate if he has remained in good standing with the other local union?"

A delegate to our International conventions must be a member in good standing with the local union that he represents. If a member of a local transfers his membership from a local union after he has been elected to act as delegate, he severs his connection with that local and hence is not entitled to retain any office or delegateship within the gift of that local union, and the local union has a right to proceed, in accordance with their laws, to fill any vacancy caused through said withdrawal of membership.

Therefore, the delegate that you refer to, who has transferred his membership from Local 55, would not be entitled to represent Local 55 at the International convention at San Francisco. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 586.

March 17, 1915.

MR. C. W. MILLER, Secretary, Local 626, Box 33, Walla Walla, Wash.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the case of Robert Littleton, who has requested this office to investigate his membership and adjust the same,

I find that prior to him securing membership in Local 626, that he was a member of Local 239, Seattle, Wash., and that at the time he became a member of Local 626 he was a suspended member of Local 239; hence his membership in Local 626 was and is illegal, and in order for the said Robert Littleton to renew his membership with this International Union, he will have to apply and secure reinstatement through Local 239. If Local 626 desires to raise any objections to his reinstatement, they can file those objections with Local 239, and the said Robert Littleton would not be entitled to the use of our label until such time as his membership with the I. U. has been adjusted.

My decision, therefore, is that the membership of Robert Littleton in Local 626 is illegal, and the same is hereby cancelled; and if he desires to renew his membership with this International he will have to apply for reinstatement to Local 239 of Seattle. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 587.

March 18, 1915.

MR. JERE L. SULLIVAN, General Secretary-Treasurer, Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the claims filed by Brothers Jere J. Kane, Joseph E. Johnson and W. H. Linville, who were members of former Local 363, for sick benefits. They contend that these claims should have been paid to them by the secretary of Local 363 before he sent the money and effects of the said local to the general office, after they had voted to turn in their charter and disband. However, the secretary refused to pay the said claims, because they were not filed in accordance with the sick benefit laws.

The local voted to turn in their charter and disband on the 31st day of December and on that day one of the claimants, Joseph E. Johnson, broke his arm and that, as he will be laid up for about eight weeks, that he is entitled to eight weeks' sick benefits from the money turned into the general office. The local ceased to exist on the 1st day of January, 1915, and with it ceased to exist all its rights and privileges, as well as its local laws; hence Brother Johnson, being sick only one day during the life of the former local, is not entitled to any sick benefits, therefore his claim is denied.

In reference to the claims of Brothers Jere J. Kane and W. H. Linville: I find that Brother Kane was sick from November 8th to the 21st, thirteen days, and Brother Linville from November 4th to the 16th, thirteen days; and as the sick benefit laws of former Local 363 provided that a member should not receive any benefits for his first week of illness, and provided weekly benefits thereafter for a period of seven consecutive weeks; and as neither one of the brothers, Kane and Linville, named herein, were sick two full weeks, hence they would not be entitled to the benefits for the second week, therefore their claim is denied. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 588.

March 24, 1915.

MR. H. N. SMITH, Secretary, Local 241, Ninth and Chestnut Streets, Murphysboro, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 21st, wherein you request a decision on the following:

"At our regular meeting today a motion was made and seconded by two members who were more than two calendar months in arrears for dues, to donate $200 from the treasury to an organization calling themselves the "Business Men, Laboring Men and Property Holders' Association," and who claim to be organized for the purpose of doing business in the coming "Wet and Dry" campaign, but who hold no affiliation or receive any recognition from any other organization. We wish to know if we have a right to donate our money in that manner, and if the resolution, having been moved and seconded by two members who were over two calendar months in arrears for dues, can be considered as being legal and binding on the local union?"

Members over two calendar months in arrears stand suspended forthwith, and they are not entitled to a voice or vote in the affairs of our locals, nor are they entitled to attend the meetings; hence any resolution or motion presented by them can not legally be considered as being binding upon the local.

The local may, if it so desires, donate money to another bona fide organization, providing that the said money is to be used in the interest of their local union; but in doing so they must first keep in mind the protection of their own organization and its membership and their ability to meet their future obligations.

The matter of the appropriation of $200 on motion of a suspended member is not legal and should not be paid, and the matter should be called to the attention of the local union; and if it is their desire that this amount of money be voted from their treasury, a motion will have to be made and carried by members in good standing with the local and International Union, and the laws governing the said subject in the local by-laws complied with. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Again the bartenders and waitresses of Toledo are waging war, this time on the Hotel Men's Association. About a month ago, when the eight-hour law for women workers was proposed in the State legislature, the hotel men got busy and began circulating petitions against this proposed law, and their employes were told to sign this petition. The women were told that if this law was passed they would all be thrown out of employment. This statement, along with others, was made to the women working in hotels, and many of them signed these petitions, but a few had been up against this game before and refused to sign the petition. As a result they were told that their services were no longer required. The head waitress at the St. Clair Hotel was let go for this reason, and two other girls who had signed the petition but demanded that their names be taken off. After repeated efforts to adjust the matter in this house had failed, we were compelled to call out the crews working in this house, every member of both locals responding to the call except one bartender, Joseph McClosky, who remained in. Later, another bartender was filled with some hot air of the boss and went to work as a strike-breaker, one Fred Moore.

We were told by representatives of the Hotel Men's Association that if we fought the St. Clair, every proprietor of the Hotel and Cafe Men's Association would declare for open shop, which was done. At the present time we are carrying on this fight with all the vigor possible, two other houses having been called out and pickets are daily picketing these places. At the Hofbrau, another bartender was induced to go to work, and as a result he, James Odham and the two above-mentioned were expelled by Local 216. At the Hofbrau the proprietors used as strike breakers who were sent in to work as waitresses: one girl, a suspended member of Local 335, Kitty Mahoney, another who had made application for membership in Local 335, one Clara Hinton. Another member of Local 216 was expelled by them because he permitted his wife to work in the Hofbrau as a strike breaker—his name is Jack O'Neil.

The hotel men asked for a conference through the bricklayers and after reaching the designated place they refused to meet us, because one member of our committee did not meet with their approval. They were told that if they did not meet with the committee sent they could not meet with any.

The boys and girls of Toledo are in this fight to win and every one is standing shoulder to shoulder on the firing line, the hour is never too early or too late to find both boys and girls on the picket line.

The women workers of Ohio have been down-trodden long enough and are now in a fight for decent living conditions and shorter hours that we may enjoy a few of the good things of life, and our brother bartenders are going to help us get these conditions and the girls are going to fight to help the boys keep what they have gained. We realize that in unity there is strength. One solid unit we are and are going to remain, and we believe that every member of our great International will reap great benefits by getting together, sticking together and abolish all efforts to segregate.

With greetings and best wishes to all our brothers and sisters, we are,

Fraternally yours,
NIDA R. PAUGLE,
Secretary Local 335.

HARRY OVERMEYER
Secretary Local 216.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At our regular meeting held in our new quarters, 285 Weybosset street, January 10, 1915, the following officers who were elected December 27, 1914, were installed: President, Thomas P. Mayor John J. Grace, of Charleston, said at a dinner:

"Charleston has undeniably the most aristocratic and old-world aspect of any city in America. An English visitor once told me that in Charleston, for the first time in his life, he saw a portrait by Sir Joshua Reynolds hanging in the drawing room for which it had been painted.

"Charleston has had wonderful viveurs and connoisseurs, too. Take, for instance, Squire X.

"Squire X was a wonderful connoisseur of Madeira, but at a dinner some young bloods—this was before the war—bought a quart of Madeira at a corner grocery for a dollar to fool the Squire with.

"This cheap dollar Madeira was set before Squire X with great solemnity, and his judgment was besought on it as on a wine of price. The good Squire sniffed its bouquet, he held it to the light: he tasted it; then, rolling up his eyes ecstatically, he said:

"'I recognize this vintage. This is the famous vintage of 1784. Nothing better exists.'

"There was a loud roar of laughter, and the young men told Squire X how they had fooled

"The corner grocer, eh? Well, just send for this man. Let us find out where he really got this wine."

"The grocer was sent for. The host said to him:

"'It will go no further and we'll hold you harmless if you'll tell us where this Madeira came from.'

"'Well,' replied the grocer, with a grin, 'to tell you the truth, sir, I bought it from your own butler.'—Enquirer.

Speaking about West Virginia reminds us of the conditions confronting the citizens of that State, which prompts its law-makers to seek ways and means to make up a deficit in income caused by loss of liquor license fees. According to a press dispatch of March 4, 1915, from Charleston, it was declared by State officials that $2,000,000 additional revenue must be raised for the next two years to meet the current obligations of running the State government. Too bad the law-makers can't make the drys dig up that amount; but, pshaw, who ever saw a "dry" dig up c

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

SAN JOSE, CAL., Mar. 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I beg to submit the following report for the past month.

Left Santa Rosa March 1 for San Francisco. Attended the regular meeting of the San Francisco Local Joint Executive Board on the evening of March 2. With the exception of Waitresses' Local 48, whose delegates were recently unseated as a result of internecine faction feuds, the full complement of delegates and business agents were present. The early part of the meeting was taken up with discussions pertaining to conditions within the Fair grounds. Business Agent Fink, of Local 30, complaining of difficulty in collecting wages for members; Business Agent Canny, of Local 44, complaining of difficulty in securing access to the kitchens of several of the larger concessions. The latter part of the meeting degenerated into a riot of frenzied vituperation, during which Delegate Perry, of Local 110, particularly distinguished himself. Judging from the sweeping finality of this gentleman's denunciations, he must have enjoyed an intimate personal acquaintance with the character and antecedents of the International's executive officers and organizing staff.

At the request of Business Agent Fennessy, of Local 110, I took up the matter of the employment of Asiatics in preference to white assistants in some of the large cash houses. This grievance has been up to the Local Joint Executive Board for several years. At regular intervals the assistance of the Central Labor Council has been invoked and the Asiatics discharged. The change being only temporary, and after a short period our little brown parasites gradually wormed themselves back on the job. Employers were very candid in discussing the question, stating the difference in wages was immaterial, but the petty annoyances caused in breaking in relief men in order to comply with the six-day week clause was the real bone of contention. Readily conceding the justice of one day's rest in seven, they politely dismissed the subject by remarking that as long as the cooks and waiters were willing to work with Asiatics, and, in some instances, openly expressing a preference in their favor, why should they be expected to take the initiative. The final disposition of this much mooted question lays entirely in the hands of Locals 30 and 44, and Local 110 is clearly entitled to their unqualified support. Not one of these large cash houses would dare to invite a tilt with organized labor, particularly upon an issue of the employment of Asiatic labor. The sentiment in the community is too strongly anti-Asiatic. San Francisco is unfortunate in the fact that its best leadership is too prone to submit to the exigencies of opportune petty politics, and continually tend to chatter and prate of an exaggerated culinary solidarity. When the opportunity to do presents itself, their carefully pyramided BIG NOISE very quickly dissolves into thin HOT AIR.

Left San Francisco for Sacramento March 6 to attend to some matters pertaining to the recently organized Liberal Council (anti-prohibition). Regretted to note that Local 561 had withdrawn its delegates and refused to support the council. Another instance of the baneful influence engendered by the advocates of suicidal insanity, otherwise called International Segregation. Stimulating craft antagonism is a mighty poor occupation for men who profess or aim to attain responsible leadership. Its vicious influence will take years to overcome.

Returned to San Francisco March 8 and investigated conditions in catering establishments within the Fair grounds. The four largest are operated on the "open shop" plan, with the saving grace of no discrimination against union men. The White Lunch Company's large establishment on the Zone is of course unfair. The balance may be considered organized. One concessioner complained bitterly of the get-rich-quick tendencies exhibited by his waiters during the opening rush, and endeavored to convince me the local should be held responsible.

Complying with orders from headquarters, left San Francisco for San Jose on March 17 to take up the work of reorganizing the affairs of Local 180. A careful canvas of the city shows 45 establishments employing 241 culinary workers, classified as follows: Cooks, 42; waiters, 68; waitresses, 49; miscellaneous, 82. Of this number only 84 cooks, waiters and waitresses are organized. The miscellaneous helpers have heretofore been disbarred from membership. Conditions are very bad, due to business depression and the carelessness and mismanagement of the executive business agent, whose method of upholding the integrity of the union house cards consisted in renting them at so much per month, regardless of whether union help was employed or not. Some financial irregularities have also been uncovered. Under present conditions the rehabilitation of the organization will necessitate a great deal of slow uphill work.

My expense account is as follows:

Mar. 1—Santa Rosa to San Francisco.....	$ 1 25
6—San Franciscd to Sacramento.....	2 50
8—Sacramento to San Francisco.....	2 50
17—San Francisco to San Jose.....	1 30

Total $ 7 55

Yours fraternally,

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Mar. 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March.

Since my last report conditions have not changed very materially, although Local 402 has gained to some extent. Business is at a standstill, and the prospects of getting better are, to my way of thinking, very remote. But, nevertheless, working men and women continue to flock into the city through the extensive and misleading advertisements of the exposition. To those who are contemplating coming here with expectations of securing easy employment, I would advise them to stay away, or at least to have fare both ways, as there are plenty and more than necessary out of employment in all crafts.

My attention was called to Waitresses' Local 98. I went to Los Angeles on March 6, and after investigation, found the affairs of said local in a very deplorable condition, and run in a very loose manner. It was impossible to have a meeting, as the local has only enough members to continue as such and maintain a charter. Also attended a meeting of Cooks' Local 27, and if continued to run under the present system, it will not be long before they will be in the same shape they were about a year ago. At the request of Brother Palmer, secretary of Waiters' Local 17, assisted him in his monthly report and advised him on other matters pertaining to the local's affairs.

Returned to San Diego on the 13th, and, with the "hustling" and "always doing" organizer of the bakers, Bro. Jake Zanford, visited the local unions in the interest of his and our crafts, with the result that our locals are receiving the moral support of the whole membership. Have also attended all the meetings of both of our locals and the Central Council. At the last meeting of the council, held on the 23d, the genial secretary, Brother Markwith, after returning from the State Building Trades Convention, was taken by surprise when the president of the council presented him with a beautiful chain and locket in appreciation of his untiring efforts in behalf of organized labor. Partly through his efforts the labor movement today is demanding the label and house cards more than ever before, and a healthy agitation is going on, which no doubt will bring good results in the near future. Through the continued agitation which has developed within the last couple of months, even the "Jitney buses" have today under consideration affiliation with the Central Labor Council.

About ten days ago a petition, signed mostly by women, was presented to the city council, asking the city fathers to pass an ordinance which would prohibit the employment of women where liquor was served, whether in a restaurant, cafe or hotel. I immediately started a campaign against such a dastardly and nefarious proposition, which, if adopted, would have thrown out of employment many of our members. I am glad to state that, with the assistance of organized labor, and particularly Bro. I. H. Markwith, secretary of the Labor Council, we nipped the bud in its infancy, and yesterday afternoon, in the "mayor's conference," it was recommended back to the city council with its non-concurrence. No doubt, at the next meeting of the city council, it will be defeated unanimously.

The pickets in front of the unfair houses continue their every-day routine of notifying the public that those restaurants are unfair to organized labor. At the next meeting of the Labor Council we will have one more on the unfair list. We have been threatened from different sources that they are going to annihilate the pickets, and all that goes with it. The Restaurant Keepers' Association, and especially its secretary, a man who carries a union card in his inside pocket, but who employs only Chinese in his kitchen, are trying their hardest to have the proprietors who conduct union restaurants to run an "open house," but Local 402 stands firm and will not give up the fight until success crowns their efforts.

The following is my expense account for the month of March:

March 6 to 18, Los Angeles to San Diego and return.....	$6 25
Telegram	60
Car-fare	1 50
Postage	1 25
 Total	$9 60

SEATTLE, WASH., March 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March, including February 28.

On the latter date, at the request of President Ernest Marsh, of the State Federation of Labor, accompanied him to the cities of Hoquiam and Aberdeen. Special meetings of both of our crafts had been arranged for in both places. At Hoquiam, on the 28th, 2:30 p. m., the attendance was fairly good although the culinary workers were not represented as well as they should have been. Those that attended were amply repaid for their trouble, as President Marsh was in splendid form and covered many interesting subjects thoroughly. President McDonald of the Aberdeen Central Labor Council, and Bro. Tim Murphy, also spoke, as well as the writer. An invitation was extended to those present to attend the meeting to be held in Aberdeen at 8:30 p. m. The Aberdeen boys apparently were not as much interested as the Hoquiam members, the showing being inexcusable, in fact, not a single, solitary culinary worker was in attendance. Better wake up, boys and girls, if you expect to maintain the conditions you worked so hard for.

March 1st, with President Dawson of Local 774, Business Agent Joe Thomas of Local 791, and President McDonald of the Central Labor Council, made the rounds of cafes, removing one cafe card, also one bar card for violation of the constitutional laws. Also shook up several of the delinquents who imagined there wasn't any further use in paying dues. At 8:30 p. m., attended meeting of Culinary Local 804 of Hoquiam. Found President Anna Truedue, and Secretary Janet G. Bailey on the job, the membership failing to turn out to any great extent. This is simply another case of leaving it to the officers, just because said officers have made good and have sufficient "ginger" to do something.

March 3d, to Seattle. With Business Agent

Digitized by Google

Harry Raynor of the bartenders, again took up several matters to a successful issue. It is a pleasure to work with a man like Brother Raynor because he possesses the qualities which go to make a competent official. If the members only give Harry a little assistance he will deliver the goods for them, which is very complimentary at this time when conditions of employment are so bad that a large percentage of the membership are unemployed, and taken in addition the fact that this state has voted to quit business in their line on January 1st, then you will understand what Raynor was against when he took the position.

To Port Angeles. This city, like others, has felt the effect of hard times. We have a good mixed local here, the bars and cafes are unionized, the difficulty being the non-attendance at meetings of the culinary workers. One or two agitated a separate local. On investigation I found that it would not be possible to maintain separate locals in view of the fact that there were only about 15 culinary workers in the city, and no one would undertake the responsibility of holding office.

The Women's Union Label League held a social in Eagles' hall on the 4th, and all culinary workers were specially invited to attend, but, sorry to say, I failed to see one there. After discussing the question with President Cox and Business Agent Brown, as well as Mrs. Boomer of the Label League (Mrs. Boomer is a very active worker for organization), it was decided to continue the work as a mixed local. The union houses were visited and the proprietors expressed their willingness to live up to the scale so Brother Brown will line up the delinquents or remove them from the job.

To Seattle, Secretary Taylor of the State Federation of Labor with me, Brother Taylor having succeeded in organizing the printers of Port Angeles. After conferring with Vice-President Hesketh, left for Everett, Wash. Local 454 is cursed with one of those factional fights which if persisted in will surely disrupt the local. At meeting on the 7th, it was voted to drop the matter for good. In other respects Local 454 is progressing fairly well.

On to Bellingham. Got in touch with Vice-President Tait of the State Federation of Labor relative to sentiment of culinary workers for organization. Arranged for a meeting on the 11th, and with Brother Ben Starry of the teamsters, made a round of the houses notifying the boys and girls. As the Central Labor Council met that night, I attended the council meeting first, then the culinary meeting. While only a few culinary workers attended, enough interest was shown to justify further efforts, so out on the line again with the result that a charter was sent for. To make the work harder, most of the boys are suspended members of locals which have reinstatement fees; however, with a little patience on the part of the others, they can be fixed up.

Back to Seattle by way of Anacortes. The local in the latter city is in splendid shape, considerable credit for same being due Secretary Asslyn. Also stopped a short time at Burlington and met the boys at the Washington Hotel. Brother Fred Fortier acts as agent for Secretary Asslyn there.

To Tacoma. Attended meeting of Bartenders' Local 707. Secretary McFarland is working a short shift which allows him to look after the boys between times. Finding work to be done, promised to return at later date.

To Bremerton. Due to a fight between restaurant keepers in that city the local was up in the air and sparring for wind. After a consultation with President McKibben, Secretary Thurens, and Brothers King of the local, assisted by President Stevens and Secretary Cook of the Central Labor Council, a plan of action was prepared and later on carried out. As it now stands the cafes are signed up and the local has the solid backing of the labor unions of Bremerton.

Had the pleasure of meeting Brothers Roy McKinnon and Benny Howard, two old timers, both globe trotters.

Attended the meeting of the Central Labor Council which was a splendid example of what can be done through hustling and perseverance. The Bremerton Council has it all over several larger cities in that respect.

Cooks' Union, Local 33, held its election last night with the following result: President, Harry Mitchell; secretary, Wm. Fraser; treasurer, J. Hollingsworth; business agent, Dave Jones; delegates to Frisco Convention, Hollingsworth and "Ole Bill" Levi; Brother Hesketh going by acclamation.

The following is my expense account:

GREAT FALLS, MONTANA, March 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is submitted as my report for the month of March:

From the date of my last report, February 25th to March 4th, I remained in the city of Helena, in the interests of legislation sought by our allied crafts in Montana.

The Fourteenth Legislative Assembly of Montana, which adjourned on March 4th, will long be remembered as the most reactionary body ever gathered together in the interests of the people in a sovereign state. The closing days of the session were decidedly remarkable for the amount of reactionary legislation enacted and indifference to legislation of a constructive character.

Our bill—to create an eight-hour work-day for the women of Montana, was killed in committee through the activity of the president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and Women's Federated Clubs of the State. Petitions were presented from the representatives of the above-named bodies praying for the defeat of the measure, and representations were made to the effect that "The women workers of Montana did not want an eight-hour day, as it would be the means of throwing many of them out of employment." Mrs. Anderson, president of the W. C. T. U., who was especially active in opposition to the bill, did not, as she claimed, express the sentiment of the women workers of Montana, in expressing her opposition. She did not represent the Women's Protective Union, the Laundry Workers' Union, the Retail Clerks' Union, nor did she represent the waitresses; but we do know that she did represent the employers of the state when making her representations to the committee that killed the women's eight-hour bill. The members of that committee will, in the near future, have an opportunity to explain why they denied to the women workers of this state a work-day similar to that enjoyed by the men.

Our bill to prohibit the co-employment of women of the white race with, for or by Chinese or Japanese, was introduced by Senator MacKenzie, of Havre, Montana. The bill passed the senate, but no sooner was it turned over to its proper committee in the house than the wheels of opposition began to turn, and they did not stop until they reached the "big house" in Washington, D. C., from whence returned an administration mandate signed by "Grape Juice" Bryan, to the effect "That legislation of that character was very objectionable to the 'royal' dignitaries from the Orient," also, that the Secretary of State of the United States, was very much opposed to the passage of the bill.

Senator MacKenzie, a doctor, cited the following reasons why the bill should pass:

"As a physician," he said, "I have been called upon to attend many young girls who have become addicted to the use of drugs. Questioning disclosed the fact that the 'habit' had been contracted in so-called Chinese restaurants, operating in this state." He also stated that he believed "The moral features of the bill should receive the support of each and every person interested in safeguarding young womanhood."

Here was a real moral issue that should have received the undivided support of the "moralists" lobby. It didn't, however. Mrs. Anderson, president of the W. C. T. U., represented to the Committee on Affairs of Towns and Cities, when she spoke in favor of the prohibition amendment that "For thirty years I have waited for this opportunity to raise my voice in favor of a measure that would safeguard the young boy and young girl from the temptation and the curse surrounding the liquor traffic, etc." She had also the opportunity to raise her voice in protest against the conditions surrounding the Chinese restaurants in the city of Helena and Butte, and could have assisted in wiping out a curse far more insidious than that of the liquor traffic has ever been, but, had she done so, she would have been advocating a measure of the trade union movement, and that is entirely against the principles of the organization she represented and it was demonstrated through her activity in the defeat of the women's eight-hour bill. Both our bills, thanks to the Democatic (?) party were killed and the "maudlin moralists" of Montana have little to boast of in our defeat and their victory.

The bartenders of the state have suffered much through the legislative enactments of the fourteenth general assembly. An 8 o'clock a. m. opening and 12 o'clock p. m. closing law and partial closing on Sunday, becomes effective April 1st. These regulations will throw out of employment over one hundred of our members in the city of Butte alone, and in every city in the state some of our members will be affected.

I left Helena on the 6th and returned to Great Falls. The situation has not changed since my last report. We are holding our own, but with no chance of a settlement in sight.

On the 10th, I went to Billings. On the 12th, addressed the Trades Assembly and informed them that I was going to organize the cooks and waiters and desired their assistance to stop the patronage of workingmen being given to the Chinese and Japanese restaurants.

On the 14th, attended a meeting of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of Billings. At this meeting the question of Japanese porters was discussed. At this writing I am informed that all saloons employing Chinese or Japanese porters will dispense with them by April 1st and employ white men. In the evening, held a meeting of cooks and waiters and sent for a charter.

I attended a meeting of the bartenders of Billings on the 21st. We had quite a turnout and much business of importance was transacted. The business of the union is handled with neatness and dispatch and the careful attention given all communications speaks well for the educational feature of the local.

On March 22d, I went to Roundup, Montana. In the evening held a joint meeting of bartenders and saloonmen, also met several cooks and waiters. I hope to be able to report an organization of culinary workers from Roundup in the month of April.

March 24th, the charter for the cooks, waiters and waitresses having arrived, a special meeting was held, officers elected and installed and 25 members initiated. I am sure the culinary local in Billings will prove a valuable addition to the trade union movement of that city.

March 25th, left Billings for Great Falls. We have arranged for a mass meeting of cooks, waiters, waitresses, bartenders, and brewery workers for Sunday, March 28th. We expect that it will be the largest meeting of its kind ever held in the city of Great Falls. Will report on it in next month's issue.

Following is my expense account for the month:

March—

6—Helena to Great Falls.....	$ 3 45
10—Great Falls to Billings.....	8 10

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is a review of the work performed by me since my last report.

Up until March 20th I continued my efforts in Detroit, trying to get the culinary workers to see the light, but with no success. I feel confident that the most skeptical must agree that our International Union has given that city more than its share of attention. I had in mind the drawing of a comparison as to the working conditions in the city of Detroit, Mich. and the city of Cleveland, Ohio, for the benefit of our rank and file. The two cities being so near the same size and so close together, I felt that a review of that kind might be responsible for a reasonable effort upon the part of the culinary workers of Detroit to pull themselves together sometime in the near future. I will withhold this information until later, as Brother Brady came to that city about the time that I left and no doubt he will make another effort for a time, and in that case the truth might not have the desired effect.

March 20th, I arrived in Columbus, Ohio. On the 21st I attended the meeting of Bartenders' Local 423. I find that under the administration of Brother Jerry Nevill, secretary and business agent, the local has taken on a new lease of life and the prospects look good for its future. We took the question of the advisability of trying to get the culinary workers of Columbus together at this time and decided to make the effort. We had invitations printed calling the meeting for Wednesday, March 24th, afternoon and evening, at the bartenders' club rooms. The meeting was well attended, there being 28 present. We decided that it would be advisable to call another meeting for Monday, March 29, and try and secure a charter list.

March 22d I attended a meeting of the Central Labor Union. The few remarks made by me were well received and the support of that body pledged for our undertaking. The efforts that are being put forth by our bartenders of this city in behalf of the formation of the sister local should bring good results, and I take this opportunity to thank them for same.

I met one of our old-time hustling members, "Mike Finn," who served as delegate at several of our conventions. Brother Finn is now proprietor of a cafe at the corner of Broad and Front streets, and no doubt his many friends will wish him the success that he is entitled to.

The following is my expense account for the past month:

Mar. 20—Transportation, Detroit to Columbus	$4 60

DETROIT, MICH., Mar. 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the last month's work is as follows:

I attended a meeting of Cooks' Local 872 on February 27, and we initiated eleven new candidates; also received several new applications for membership. It was a lively meeting, and every one present seemed deeply interested in the proceedings. It was decided at this meeting to hold the election of officers at the next meeting, to be held on Thursday evening, March 4.

On Wednesday afternoon, March 3, I attended a meeting of Local 64. We initiated four new candidates and had a very interesting meeting.

On the evening of March 3, Brother Robson, of Local 64, and Brother Foley, of Local 59, and I went before the Executive Board of the Federated Trades of Milwaukee and put up a fight for our rights for work at a dance given by a union of that city. The referred to union made a plea to the effect that they had so many out of work and that their treasury was so low that they were going to tend bar and wait on the tables themselves. After listening to this plea, Brother Robson went after them good and strong, and the way that Bobby laid the law down to them did them a world of good. We finally settled by allowing them to work three of their men to four of our own, i. e., two waiters and two bartenders.

I attended the meeting of Local 872 on Thursday evening, March 4, when we initiated seven new candidates and elected officers for the ensuing year. After the newly-elected officers were installed each one made a little speech, and the able effort of the new president, J. P. Bliss, clearly demonstrated to the members of Local 872 that they had made a splendid choice. All of the officers seemed to take to their work with great gusto, and I feel very confident that Local 872 will be a grand success.

On March 5 I attended a meeting of Local 59. We initiated three new candidates and reinstated two more. The new by-laws were read for the second time, and will be up for final reading on March 12.

The week beginning March 8 found Brother Robson and myself still in search for new timber. We found it pretty hard sledding.

On the evening of March 10, accompanied by Brothers Robson and Bliss, I attended a meeting of the Label Trades Section of the Federated Trades. I am pleased to state that this organization is doing some very good work in this city.

I attended the meeting of Local 59 on March 12, when they initiated three more candidates and the new by-laws were up for the final reading before being sent to our General President for his approval.

On March 15 Brothers Martel, Robson and myself went to Chicago to attend the mass-meeting of chefs and cooks, held under the auspices of Local 865 of that city. There was a good crowd in attendance, among them being some of the prominent chefs of the "Windy City." Bro. Fred Eberling called the meeting to order at 3 o'clock, and after a few well-chosen remarks, introduced me, and I did my best to enlighten those present on the benefits to be received through organization. After my little offering Brother Eberling introduced Brother Martel, and it was a rare treat for those present to listen to the splendid offering of Brother Martel, for he talked shop to them for over an hour in a manner that made a most decided and lasting impression on all those in attendance, and I feel that when Brother Martel starts his campaign in Chicago that our slogan, "Watch Us Grow," will be lived up to, for he is a splendid worker.

On March 17, in company with Brother Martel and Brothers Bliss and Edwards of Local 872, I paid my last visit to the Federated Trades of Milwaukee. After the meeting we all went over to Turner Hall to attend the dance given by Local 64, and from what I have been able to learn since leaving that city it was a grand success, both socially and financially.

I arrived in Detroit on March 18, and found things about the same as when I left here, as far as the culinary workers were concerned. I found Local 562 holding its own in good shape, and more interest displayed than ever before. Billy O'Rourke, their hustling business agent, tells me that he has not started yet, but to watch Local 562 grow during the coming summer. Bill is on the job all the time, and has done some splendid work during the past six months. The members of Local 562 are making elaborate preparations to entertain their friends on their big excursion by boat to Toledo on next Memorial Day, May 30. The committee on arrangements is working hard to make this excursion the event of the season. Among the many things to be provided for the entertainment of the crowd on this day will be a continuous cabaret entertainment from the time the boat leaves Detroit until it returns. I hope the members of Local 216 of Toledo will assist our boys in every way they can to make this affair a grand success.

I went to Jackson on March 23 and assisted Brothers Golden and Esser in adjusting a little difference in Local 671; also visited a meeting of the Jackson Trades Council that evening and was called upon to address that honorable body.

On March 16 a meeting was held in Lansing, called by the Cigarmakers, Bartenders and Brewery Workers of the State, when they organized what will be known as the Michigan Labor Anti-Prohibition League. The officers elected were as follows: President, Frank Finnegan, of Grand Rapids; vice-president, Wm. O'Rourke, of Detroit; recording secretary, David Jones, of Detroit; treasurer, John Gannon, of Detroit. A per capita tax of ten cents per member will be paid by all the organizations affiliated, and work will be started at once. I am confident that this new organization will do some good work during the ensuing year.

My expense account for the past month is as follows:

Mar. 15—Railroad fare, Milwaukee to Chicago and return.....	$3 40
18—Milwaukee to Detroit.....	8 75
23—Detroit to Jackson and return....	2 10
Local car-fare for month.....	2 75
Stationery and postage.....	2 10
 Total	$19 10

Yours fraternally,

JOSH BRADY,
International Organizer.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March.

February 27 I attended a meeting of Local 872 Bros. Josh Brady, Robson, Rock, J. Foley and Shortell, of Locals 59 and 64, assisting the temporary officers. Eleven candidates were initiated. Bro. J. Bliss, chef of the Milwaukee Athletic Club, made an appropriate address, which showed that he is possessed of the right kind of material to lead a union to success. Brothers Brady and Foley also addressed the meeting. A committee was appointed to send out circulars to the proprietors to inform them that Local 872 is in a position to furnish them with help. On March 4 Local 872 held another meeting, at which five candidates were elected. At this meeting permanent officers were elected for the year 1915 as follows: President, J. R. Bliss, chef Milwaukee Athletic Club; vice-president, Chas. Peterson, chef of the Charlotte Hotel; recording secretary, Wm. Rudat; financial secretary and treasurer, Vic Marot; chaplain, W. Meyer; inspector, E. Gast, chef of the Wisconsin Hotel; inside guard, W. George. With a set of officers like that Local 872 need not worry.

On the 5th attended a meeting of Local 59.

On the 10th Local 872 held another meeting, with thirty-five members present. At this meeting arrangements were made to get bond for the financial secretary-treasurer. Brothers Bliss and Edwards were elected as delegates to the Federated Trades Council, and Bro. E. Gast as delegate to the label league.

On the 14th I journeyed to Chicago to attend a meeting of Local 865. Nominations were opened for delegates to the International Convention, Brothers Staggenburg, president, and Fred Ebeling being nominated. I then addressed the boys and talked of our crafts in general and their future in the Windy City. While in Chicago I visited the International Koch Verband and the Cosmopolitan Cooks' Society, where invitations were extended to me to address them in the future.

I returned on the 12th to the Beer City.

On the 15th Bros. Josh Brady, R. Robson and I went to Chicago to address a mass-meeting for the cooks in the K. of P. Hall. This meeting was well attended. Brother Ebeling opened the meeting, and was followed by Bro. Josh Brady, after which I was introduced. I did not put on any kid gloves, but talked on personal experience and organization in a way which left no loophole. The cooks present appreciated my talk. I will shortly be back in the Windy City to stay and see whether the cooks there are possessed of any intelligence or not. I will go there to organize them. If I fail, nobody can blame me, for I will put the best that is in me to our cause, and so far have never failed. Before returning we paid a visit to Sister Elizabeth Maloney.

At the meeting of Local 872 on the 18th, we had the pleasure to have with us Bro. Al Courtney, president of Local 600, Duluth. After he was given the honors he addressed the boys in a most accomplished manner, explaining to the members how the boys in Duluth and Superior are sticking together.

March 19 attended a meeting of Local 59. This local is going to the front nicely, taking in new members at each meeting. Bro. J. Foley is on the job all the time. On the 20th President J. Foley called a special meeting on account of an "Anti-Tipping bill" having been introduced in the legislature. This bill having passed the Senate by a vote of 28 for to 4 against. If this bill should become a law, it would strike the waiters a death blow. It says that anyone giving or accepting any gratuity or tip will be guilty of a "misdemeanor," and provides for a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $25, or imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed thirty days. This act shall take effect upon passage and publication. Some law that would be! You can not give your own money away. What will come next? I was asked by Local 59 to represent them in Madison, and did so. The hearing will take place on the 30th, and I will do my best to show our legislators that this law would put the waiters out of business, as the bosses would not pay a living wage. While in Madison I met Bro. J. Phelan, president of Local 468, and a number of the brothers of this local. On the 26th I attended a meeting of Local 59 at which three candidates were initiated. Before closing I wish to state that the "Blatz Hotel" is now thoroughly organized, the cooks, bartenders and waiters all belonging to our International. The barber shop is a union shop, too. If any of our friends visit Milwaukee, we cordially ask them to stop here. Local 64 is progressing also. On St. Patrick's Day the boys of that local held their dance, which was a grand success, both socially and financially.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

Mar. 11—To Chicago and return.....	$3 40
15—To Chicago and return.....	3 40
10—Telegram to Chicago.....	57
Postage for month.....	1 57
Car-fare for month.....	2 10

Fraternally submitted,

A. MARTEL,

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Mar. 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March.

Pending the meeting that was advertised for Sunday, February 28, Bartenders' Union 610, Hazleton, Pa., I visited Freeland, Pa., on the 25th, 26th and 27th in the hopes of adding new blood to the local union.

February 28 held a meeting of Local 610 at Union Hall, at which there were not enough chairs in their meeting room to accommodate those who attended. As the members of this local assembled they were referred to me. More stamps and money was handled by Secretary Dan Slattery at this meeting than any ten previous meetings combined. The books of Local 610 were adjusted, and a better method of handling same was given to all officers. After a brief address to those present, Bro. Thomas Kennedy, president of District No. 7, United Mine Workers of America, had a few remarks to make, also to the welfare of our Hazleton boys, and told them that they at all times could look to him and the members of his district for their moral support, but not to forget that it is necessary to attend meetings regularly and support their officers. Local 610 is now working on a sound basis, and in a short time will present a working agreement to the Liquor Dealers' Association of Luzerne County.

March 1 went to Lansford, Pa., under instructions from the general office to use every effort to bring Bartenders' Local 864 under the banner of our International Union once more. After giving "Panther Creek Valley" considerable attention both by personally visiting and circularizing every bartender in the valley, held a meeting on Sunday, March 7. The snow storm that struck this section was the cause of a poorly attended meeting, but it was large enough to get down to business. Much time was taken up with regard to their absconding secretary-treasurer, Leo Devlin, and what method to pursue to bring him to an accounting. That being thoroughly explained to the satisfaction of all present. The drastic bills now before the legislature have set the boys to thinking, and every one came across as clean as a whistle. They elected the following officers for one year: Herbert Bittle, president; J. V. Kennedy, vice-president; Neil P. Boyle, secretary-treasurer (to be bonded as per Section 64); James D. Breslin, recording secretary; Andrew Lohenitz, chaplain; Harry Wuchter, inspector; Andrew Prambo, guard; James McArdle, Harry Wuchter, Charles McArdle, trustees. The meeting held on March 14 brought forth added membership to Local 864. I received considerable support from the Burgess of Lansford, Mr. Gallagher, also from Brother Hartneady, who is sheriff of Carbon County and one of the big officials of the United Mine Workers of America in the Panther Valley District, and, through the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER, want to thank them for the support they rendered me. At this meeting I installed the officers and initiated a number of new members.

March 15, with Brother Breslin, visited the Citizens National Bank of Lansford, Pa., and had the balance of Leo Devlin's account transferred to that of Bartenders' Local 864. All checks must bear the signature of their president, treasurer and recording secretary before payments will be honored by the bank. Committee from Lansford Local 864 will be in touch with Bartenders' Local 373 of Shamokin, Pa., for the purpose of driving Leo Devlin out of the Kearney Hotel, and also to bring him to jail for the embezzling of their funds.

March 15 to Perth Amboy, N. J., with instructions from the general office concerning both of our locals. Adjusted matters satisfactorily to both. While in Perth Amboy I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Arthur Quinn, who is a general organizer for the Brotherhood of Carpenters and the assemblyman of Middlesex County. He informed me that if our locals exerted a little more life on their part there was no reason why they should not possess a 100 per cent organization. The officers of Locals 575 and 601 were deeply grieved at the action of the Perth Amboy Central Labor Union for going on record as favoring local option. But the very fact, Brother Franzblau, that those bum politicians of the "RED TYPE" endorsed same, it had very little effect on the assemblymen at Trenton, N. J., March 22, 1915, when the Gaunt bill on local option came up for final passage, it being defeated 44 to 13. It would be more suitable for the Central Labor Union of Perth Amboy to render some assistance to the cooks, waiters and bartenders of their city than to tear down by the endorsing of such drastic resolutions as they made themselves part and parcel of. If I am not greatly mistaken, it was through the efforts of Organizer Fred B. Hobby that a Central Labor Union was instituted in Perth Amboy, and it is very poor satisfaction at this date to know that there are "trail hitters" representing that body.

My advice to our locals in Perth Amboy is to attend every meeting of the Central Labor Union in the future and make these so-called temperance advocates therein sit up and take notice, and when you are to deliver the "THE WALK-OFF" on any question that may arise, be there with the goods.

March 20 left for Floral Park, N. Y., returning to Jersey City on March 22. Organizer Wm. F. Kavanaugh has no doubt explained in detail the matter that confronts Bartenders' Local 488 at this time, but the writer will mention that he had the right dope when he insisted upon the bonding of all officers of Local 488. Had he lacked same, Henry F. Hilleman, president of Local 488, would have had easy sailing in connection with the forgeries that he has committed and which he will have to answer for in the near future before the bar of justice in the State of New Jersey.

March 24 attended a meeting of the Hudson County Labor Alliance. It was a pleasure to witness the close relationship of the musicians, bartenders, waiters and cooks of this vicinity, especially the ever willingness of Brothers Galvin and Sturke, who represent the interests of the Musicians' Union, Local No. 526.

The following is my expense account for the month of March:

ALEXANDRIA, LA., Mar. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March, extending from February 25 to this date.

My February report left me in Monroe, La., where I had arrived only three days previous. As I stated, I had not yet made myself acquainted with the surroundings and conditions of that city, having merely met and formed the acquaintance of the officers of Local 760. However, I soon found some important matters that were in need of attention, and we arranged for a special meeting for Sunday afternoon, February 28, at 2:30. The regular meeting hall being occupied for that date, the boys secured the Moose Hall for the occasion and proceeded to notify all members to be present, as we had matters of importance to come before this meeting. Sunday, 2:30 p. m., of the above date, found nearly every member of Local 760 present and eager to get a look at an International organizer and see what he looked like. The meeting was called to order and presided over by myself, and everything was straightened out perfectly satisfactory as far as that evening and meeting was concerned and could go. I wish here to call the attention of all who may read this report, and especially to officers of our locals who fail to understand our International laws in regard to members carrying withdrawal cards, in regard to the depositing of the same. I have more trouble along this line than almost anything else, especially with new locals, and a great many old ones. If secretaries would but turn over and read the instructions on the back of a withdrawal card, it would save worlds of trouble. Our International laws, Section 84, plainly says that the holder of a withdrawal card desiring to become an active member, shall deposit said card with the local that issued it and a traveling card be obtained under the rules governing same. I find, in many instances, members joining new locals with withdrawal cards in their pockets. I also find suspended members of other locals joining another local by initiation, the officials of such locals accepting such members, many in both cases being ignorant of the law, not realizing that such membership in their locals is illegal. Again, where suspended members from a local suspended from the International join another local by initiation, they don't seem to realize that a members suspended from a local must reinstate with the local suspending them, and that in case their former local is not in existence, they must reinstate with the International and become a member at large and obtain a traveling card under the rules governing the same before they are legal members. I found several ex-members of just the kind spoken of above in Local 760, and when I called their attention to the laws and facts in their cases, they almost wanted to kill me. I believe some of them thought I was a bigger grafter than any one. However, we got everything straightened out all right, except one man, and he is working in a house the local does not control. I have never met with a more enthusiastic membership than I met in Monroe. They have a good set of officers and a secretary that never lays down on his job; he hustles for his local at all times.

On March 9 to Alexandria, where I found a live little city, but short on labor unions, there being only about three locals in the city and no central body. I was in the city only a short time until I realized that we could get a bartenders local in Alexandria if we would only get busy and make our people realize the good of our organization in many ways. I went to several saloon men and had talks with them in regard to our work. What we are doing to stave off prohibition, and how we affiliate with all branches of labor, and what a power we are in elections when lined up with the laboring class as a labor organization. Some of the proprietors became interested and expressed a willingness to see their bartenders organize themselves into a local in Alexandria. So it was get busy for me, and at this writing Alexandria has an up-to-date bartenders' local, No. 764, doing business just like oldtimers. We held our first meeting Sunday evening March 21, in the painters' hall, where we elected the following officers to the various offices for the remainder of the year: President, S. J. Brooks; vice-president, J. G. Alexander; recording and financial secretary, James Riley, 203 Ninth street; treasurer, C. A. Bordelon; chaplain, John Callaghan; inspector, J. R. Stone; guard, Alfred Garnier; trustees, Jackie Loeb, L. F. Ingouf and G. E. Bordelon. There being no central body in Alexandria we of course did not elect delegates to that body. In my opinion we are going to have a live local in this city before very long. Up to now labor organizations have been very scarce in Alexandria. Just think, a city of 18,000, and less than 100 members of organized labor in it. I found a great many people here who had some very funny ideas about a labor union, and believe me, it would not be healthy for an organizer to come to this country and make a crooked step or start something funny if he was not ready to make an angel out of himself, for he would surely join the winged tribe.

Louisiana, so far, has not had very much trouble with prohibitionists and sky pilots, especially in the southern part of the State. But mark my word, Louisiana will be the next victim of the holier-than-thou bunch. I see it from every point of view. Ex-Governor Patterson was in this city only a few days ago, and the fixing squadron is now in New Orleans. All the western and northern part of the State is dry now, and they have settled down on the southern part now just like a swarm of buzzards around a carcass. Unless our people in Louisiana organize and get ready for this prohibition fight, the State will go dry inside of two years. The city of New Orleans, the largest city in the South, with almost half a million population, today has no organization from our organization standpoint, and I am told that they have not even got a liquor dealers' organization of any kind. New Orleans, without doubt, holds the key to the situation, and if they refuse to organize and get ready and be prepared for the great battle, the State is gone, world without end.

The hypocritical prohibitionists realize that Texas is lost to them for at least four years, and think they realize a victory in placing Arkansas dry. Realizing that Louisiana is the only picking they have in the South, they are going to light on it just like a duck on a June-bug. They are no respector of persons, and will resort to the lowest tactics to carry their infernal point. If I had a voice of thunder I would now shout to the people of Louisiana from every house top to beware of what is coming to them and prepare themselves to meet the greatest enemy they have ever known—one that will take the bread from the mouths of helpless women and children and make tramps and beggars out of our boys and girls. Tell me what a prohibitionist has ever done for the working class. I will say positively nothing but steal their very existence from them and make tramps of them. They care nothing for the will and feeling of decent people. Their motto is "Rule or Ruin." In my opinion the so-called preachers of this day and time are sending more people to hell than all the saloons in the world ever did or ever will. They are causing more real trouble and suffering among the people than any calamity that has ever befallen the world. Our people realize what these hypocrites are doing all over the country, and yet they will sit still and refuse to protect themselves from this common enemy. I find saloon men who would discharge their bartenders or hotel help if they thought they would join a labor union. They would rather fight us from a labor standpoint and lose their business rather than see their help join a union. Just a little longer and it will be too late. Then they will wonder why.

BOSTON, MASS., Mar. 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month.

March 1 to New Bedford. Charter and outfit having arrived for new culinary Local 296, temporary officers were elected and other important business attended to in the interest of the new local.

To Manville in the interests of forming a bartenders' union. After interviewing the men working at the craft, secured several names to the charter list and forwarded same to the general office.

During the month attended weekly meetings of Waitresses' Local 112. Initiated new members at each meeting. The new local is progressing nicely, and from the manner in which things are going, it will be only a short time when we will have every waitress in the city of Boston on the membership roll. Attended a meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union, at which time delegates from Local 112 were seated. The girls received quite a reception from the delegates assembled.

To Springfield to be in attendance at a special meeting of Local 416. While in the city held a conference with the Organizing Committee of the Springfield Central Labor Union, went over local conditions, and arranged to call on some of the proprietors where waitresses were employed. We were unable to meet them, and arranged a conference at a later date.

To New Bedford, where I attended a meeting of new Local 296, which was largely attended. Several new members were initiated. The meeting was addressed by M. T. Joyce, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, who assisted the new local materially. The new local is starting out in the right direction, and hope to have a 100 per cent local in the near future.

To Worcester in the interests of the culinary workers of that city. I regret to say that conditions are not what we would like to see. It is impossible to get the members to attend meetings or get them interested to their organization. However, we look forward to securing the desired results.

During the month I have taken up the proposition of organizing the wholesale wine clerks in the city of Boston, and anticipate being successful in my efforts in the near future in establishing a local here.

The following is my expense account for the month:

SIOUX CITY, IA., Mar. 23, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Since my last report the governor has signed the Repeal bill of the Mulct law, just as predicted he would, and while everything was done that was possible, such as getting the central bodies of the several cities, also the several local unions, representing all classes, to sign a petition requesting the governor to veto this bill, it apparently had no effect. The committee that waited upon him got a hearing, but it was just a matter of form, for he had made up his mind to sign the bill and pay no attention to the Republican platform. The "drys" surely had his number. The proposition was put up to him, would it not be fair to have the law amended, so that the people who had money invested would have a chance to protect themselves? That is, have more time granted before the bill went into effect. He was informed that a majority of the places had leases that ran for two years and over, and they would stand to lose considerable money if the bill went into effect the first of the year. He was asked if he could see his way clear to recommend an extension of time; would he favor a bill to reimburse for actual losses sustained by the repeal of the bill? But nothing doing with the governor. I understand the pen that was used to sign this bill was given to the Ananias Club of Iowa as a reminder to them to always live up to the cardinal principles of the club. Now note the difference. There was a bill presented to reimburse farmers for the loss of cattle killed that were suffering from the hoof and mouth disease (whatever that is). You would think by the vote that every mother's son of the legislature were farmers and owned some of the live stock. There was no use for a roll call on that bill. They say you could hear them yell "yea" in Brother McCurdy's house, in the spotless town of Des Moines. At least that is what he wrote us. Now, that would lead one to believe that all of the so-called legislators who voted for this bill were candidates at the next election for governor. Now, if it would not look like presumption on my part, I would suggest that instead of the donkey or the elephant (and not forgetting our friends the Bull Moosers—long on the bull), that they would take the aforesaid pen and have a cut made and the word "Ananias" printed on the ballot for their emblem. Of course this would not be necessary for every voter knows their principles. Oh, but wait a minute. I forgot; they haven't any. Well, that'll be about all for them, boys.

On my arrival in Sioux City I found Local 357 in good shape; in fact, there being only three bartenders working in the city who are not members of the local. The boys intend to keep up their dues and remain in good standing in the International. Of course they feel as if they did not get a square deal, but they say, "Never mind, we will have a chance later on," and I believe in this they show the right spirit, for I believe that the next election in Iowa will show that the people intend to rise in their might and once and for all show the so-called reformers that it is better to act on the square. And then Iowa once more will be placed where she belongs. For as sure as living, the people, not only the so-called "wets," but the temperance people, believe that Iowa has got a black eye through the underhand methods of the powers that be.

I have been working on the culinary workers, and while, at this writing, things are not very rosy, I am in hopes that I will be able to land a local here. They have had one or two experiences in the past, and they seem to think there is no use trying again. I had a meeting on last Monday, and every waiter, cook and waitress that I could get to was notified of the meeting, but I am sorry to report there was not a sufficient number there to send for a charter, even if they had all signed for same. But I am not going to give it up. I have called another meeting for Monday, March 29, and I am in hopes that I will have better success; at least this meeting will tell the tale.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

Feb. 22—Waterloo to Oldwine.....	$ 0 98

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 28, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month will be brief, but I trust interesting, for notwithstanding the closing of Congress, many unfinished matters of importance to our allied crafts needed attention, and an effort to accomplish results ensued.

It may interest the readers of these reports to review some of the happenings in the District of Columbia, especially with reference to the culinary workers. Beginning with the dawn of New Year's Day in 1903, the undersigned, with the co-operation of the officers and members of former Local 75, determined that we should have one good culinary union in Washington city. Nothing which could have been put into effect but what was tried, and after several heart-wearing trials we succeeded in getting enough culinary workers to form a local union. Application was forwarded to the general office, and Local 586 came into existence. The personnel of the charter members was such as to gratify the most exacting, and Local 75 forthwith extended an invitation to the new union to occupy a part of its headquarters, without cost, until such time as they were in a position to make an effort to imitate the older local and secure quarters of their own. The charter bore date of March 27, 1903, and the list of charter members, 28 in all, included some of the finest culinary workers it has ever been my pleasure to meet. The following month of April showed an increase of 25 new members, and the local seemed destined to thrive and prosper. Subsequent months showed fair progress, and by the first of September, 1903, they had passed the 'one hundred mark.'

Meanwhile, changes which occurred in two of the principal hotels, as well as inducements offered to quite a few of the members to go elsewhere, began to weed out the hustlers of the union, and desperate efforts were put forth to keep the union going forward. In truth, they were needed, for it became evident that unless active men took hold, or could be induced to remain in office, the days of Local 586 were numbered.

In December an incident, of which the least said is soonest mended, occurred, and pouff, up went the baby local, bottle, nipple and all. After allowing them a few months to cool off and forget their experience, a meeting was called, at which one of our International organizers and myself succeeded in inducing them to re-establish their local. They agreed, and the outlook seemed encouraging, especially as we had succeeded in organizing the cooks, having secured charter No. 767 February 6, 1904, and this union, by the way, was at the mercy of anyone who imparted information to their employers, who had made no secret of their determination to discharge any and all cooks who dared become members. They succeeded in keeping intact until September, 1905, when they went the way of the waiters' local, which had not made good its promise, for instead of adjusting its accounts with headquarters, they resolved themselves into a card club, which had a somewhat precarious existence before being given attention by the powers who put them out of existence.

The International Genevas next came to Washington, and their experience was even sadder than ours. Although they made much noise and registered many promises, they couldn't make their branch stick.

The Central Labor Union of the District, through its organizing committee, has devoted quite as much time and patience in an effort to re-establish a culinary union as they have to other trades and callings, but they were forced to admit defeat.

Next came the I. H. W. U., and they gave Washington a taste of strike and turmoil, leaving behind a record such as will take years to overcome. Personally I have not lost sight of the fact that Washington is not the best city on the continent for cooks and waiters. In fact, the rapid and revolutionary changes in the catering industry has come close to putting the bartenders on the ropes. With all of this and much more which could be injected of a rather discouraging nature, an effort was made during the last few months to interest the culinary workers and try to get them into the idea of forming one or two local unions. Without much which can be called encouraging as a result, the effort is being made. During the month of March, assisted by Organizer Wisner, of the Garment Workers, several meetings were called in the hope of securing the waitresses to see the need of a union. But the great trouble is fear. They are getting miserable wages and working long hours. Still they fear losing their positions, and say that to even attend called meetings which have organization for their purpose means dismissal. Trade conditions have been miserable, not only with our bartenders, but with every part of the catering industry. Immense numbers are unemployed, and in a city like Washington, which depends largely on transients for patronage, the catering industry is the first to feel the effects of bad times. There is no law to prevent us from keeping eternally at the task, and that is what shall be done when opportunity offers.

According to instructions, I proceeded to Harrisburg on the 22d, and soon after my arrival thoroughly informed myself on the legislative situation at the capitol covering the local option measure introduced by Representative Geo. W. Williams, of Tioga County, known as House Bill No. 283, in which the preamble states it is "An Act to further regulate the granting of license for the sale of vinous, spirituous, malt or brewed liquors, or any admixture thereof, by permitting the electors in any county of this commonwealth to determine by an election whether the granting of license for such sale therein shall be prohibited." While there are several other bills along similar lines introduced, this is the one which our enemies have centered their efforts on, and also which Governor Brumbaugh is using all the power and prestige of his position to carry through to a successful termination. He has already created considerable discord in the ranks of his party, and there is considerable evidence of an open fight among his followers. The Law and Order Committee, which has the bill in charge, upon his request, has agreed to have a public hearing on the measure Tuesday, April 6, in the House of Representatives, with that body in session. Movements are afoot to have large delegations from the State generally present on the occasion, as well as many speakers to present arguments before the members of the House. The interests representing our side will also be in evidence, and there is no doubt that the occasion will be marked with interesting and exciting arguments. We expect to be on the firing line also, and hope that we may be of some benefit in helping to defeat this obnoxious measure.

I returned to Washington, D. C., on the 27th and attended the meeting of the bartenders here on Sunday the 29th. During the month the bar boys have been active in trying to procure an agreement with the liquor dealers, of which there are two organizations, covering a minimum wage and maximum hours. As the situation is somewhat mixed and complicated, I felt it my duty to be on hand and render whatever assistance I could in their endeavors in accomplishing the ends they desired. Owing to the fact that one of the organizations of the liquor dealers had not as yet notified the union, officially, of their action in the case, the matter was further postponed until the next meeting, April 11. I will leave here again for Harrisburg this evening. I might say in conclusion, that from the best sources of information obtainable in Harrisburg, that the Local Option bill will fail of passage, and the knowing ones say that the count at present shows 68 for the bill and 134 against. Hoping and wishing that when the final show down comes that if there is any change in the above figures it will show a larger majority against the Local Option bill.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

Mar. 22—Washington, D. C., to Harrisburg $3 60
27—Harrisburg to Washington, D. C. 3 60

Total $7 20

EASING THE "OVER-WORKED MIND OF JERE L."

Our readers will recall an item in the MIXER AND SERVER which was reproduced from the September, 1914, number of The Culinary Craft, which read: "*The total cost of this publication (The Culinary Craft) is less than $90 per month.*" Commenting on that bit of information we sought to show that, with such an amount at their disposal, it was practically impossible for the members of the local which is presumably paying the printer's bill for The Culinary Craft, to secure their presumed publication for perusal. It seems that our comment did not agree with the Sacred Septette, for they rush the following interesting bit of information to the rescue from the February, 1915, number of The Culinary Craft:

*"Well, to ease Jere L.'s overworked mind, we give him the information that it only costs $45 to print a thousand copies of The Culinary Craft, and that, therefore, it is almost three thousand copies that we get for $90, and not one thousand, as he puts it, and that there are enough copies for our purpose."*

Our readers might just as well begin to amend their arithmetics, for no longer does the old example stand as being correct. The old blackboard at the little red school house must take a back seat, and instead of reading $2 \times 45 = 90$, they will discover that, according to the pencilings of the Sacred Seven it should read "Almost $3 \times 45 = 90$."

While that is somewhat of a departure, it is in keeping with other statements made in that rather wobbly managed and wonderfully edited publication. The fact remains that, with "almost three thousand copies" of their publication "are enough for their purpose" ought to be quite satisfying to them, though it is somewhat doubtful that the membership of their local union enjoy (?) the rare privilege of perusing the fast work exhibited by the Sacred Septette. One thing is quite evident. If their membership are no more successful in getting The Culinary Craft than they are the MIXER AND SERVER, they will lose but little time reading the stories of secession expectation from the tired pens of the Sacred Septette.

THE FORUM

EXECUTIVE TYRANNY???

One would suppose that the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, were about as dense as a concrete wall of several feet thickness, or that the men and women to whom they appeal were so afflicted, by their persistent recital of alleged facts relative to the selection of executives of our International Union.

If one absorbs the dope which they peddle so often, he must naturally arrive at the conclusion that the present and past executives of our International Union managed, by some hocus pocus known only to the insiders, to produce a somnolent condition among the men and women of the organization, and while they were enjoying their little nap the officers "pulled off" something on them without the knowledge of anyone concerned except the direct beneficiaries.

We have been told in lurid and rather turgid language that the officers of our International Union can not be ousted from office unless a general explosion occurs and a cleaning-up, such as has never transpired heretofore, takes place; in fact, that to secure such a "clean-up" a division of the organization is the essential and primary step to what they define as success. Probably it has not dawned on the readers of the wonderful offerings of the Sacred Septette in The Culinary Craft, that there is such a thing in actual existence as a Book of Membership and Constitution, and that that Book contains quite a few decidedly interesting Sections which were placed there by the will of the membership which composed our International Union. That is a real live fact, as can easily be verified by a casual perusal of said Book of Membership and Constitution. For the reader's ready reference the following sections are injected. They are the rules—the laws governing the ELECTION of the general officers of our International Union—read them over to refresh your memory. You helped to make them; they are there to be enforced:

GENERAL OFFICERS.

"Sec. 99. The General Officers shall be a President, Secretary-Treasurer, eight Vice-Presidents, one of whom shall be a woman, to represent the women workers of our crafts, irrespective of locality; these are hereby constituted the General Executive Board of the International Union. No two of the male Vice-Presidents shall be located in the same town or city. The terms of office to begin on the first day of August following the election. The President and Secretary-Treasurer shall act as Chairman and Secretary of the Executive Board.

"No member of the International Union shall be eligible for office on the General Executive Board who has not been a member for one year, and under no circumstances shall a member be eligible who has ever been expelled from the International Union.

"Sec. 100. The officers named in Section 99 hereof shall be elected at each biennial convention of this International Union. If there are three or more candidates for the same office, the one having the least number of votes shall be dropped at the conclusion of each ballot until some candidate shall have received a majority of the votes cast.

"Sec. 101. No member of this International is entitled to be elected as an officer of the 'International Union' unless actually employed at the business or working as an officer of the craft."

The officers of our International Union were elected under the provisions as reprinted above, and any attempt to convey the contrary is an insult to the intelligence of men and women, over 60,000 of them, who are in good standing in our International Union, and who are maintaining the organization in its present splendid condition.

In the MIXER AND SERVER for January, 1915, page 41, we reproduced part of an article from the "Voice of Secession." The Culinary Craft, and proved the Seven Sacred Scribes handlers of half truths and whole fabrications designed for no other purpose than to convey the impression that our International Union was a personal possession and managed for individual gratification and financial emoluments.

There has been depicted in the "Voice of Secession" a word picture of an overbearing, tyrannical executive who placed himself in official position years ago without the consent of anyone, from which all the powers within the organization emanate, and who has such a tenacious hold on the job that the only possible chance to dislodge him is to bring about a division of the organization. What an appeal for men who profess to possess intelligence to make. If any officer of our International Union really had the power, prestige and capacity for intrigue which the "Voice of Secession" asserts is possessed by one official at present holding official position, or if several or all of the general officers could exercise the powers which they are alleged to possess—if they had originated such an unbeatable process for re-election—such an unexampled and unqualified "lead pipe cinch," does any sane, reasonable-minded member of our International Union imagine for a single instant that they would tolerate within the organization the formation of any combination of wreckers who sought by every means imaginable to destroy the efficiency and future of the organization, to permit any of the constituent local unions to allow the use of their name and number to be used on a publication such as the "Voice of Secession." The Culinary Craft, has proven itself to be? Does any member who pretends to swallow the silly and ludicrous mental dribble from the Seven Sacred Scribes really believe that the Sacred Septette would be flaunting their Syndicalism, I. W. W.ism, Genevanism and New Unionism in the faces of our membership and still be able to truthfully declare they were members of our International Union? In the language of the street urchin: Forget it! The writer does not assume to speak for his colleagues on the General Executive Board, but he does not hesitate to inform the men and women of our International Union that had he been the possessor of the power which the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, aver he has exercised in the past, there would never be a second record of these men offering any proposal which sought to destroy our Internation Union, for the very moment that they subscribed their names to any writing which indicated such a purpose, that moment they kicked themselves out of the organization, NEVER TO RETURN.

Do they know that very pertinent fact? You can wager your last picayune that they know it, and know it only too well. They are just as confident that the declaration made in the previous paragraph is true and would come to pass, as they are that night follows day, and they know only too well that if the undersigned exercised all the Czar-like prerogatives of which they persistently accuse him, there would be as little chance for that bunch of secessionists to continue carrying legal membership in our International Union as there is chance of our International Union going over to the I. W. W. by unanimous consent of its more than Sixty Thousand members.

As evidence that all the claims of the Sacred Septette relative to executive tyranny are unfounded and untrue, the writer points to the fact that Local 30 is an affiliated local; that the Seven Sacred Scribes are members of that local union, and so far as we have knowledge at this writing, they are in good standing.

Executive tyranny, as defined by the Sacred Septette in the "Voice of Secession," simply means that they have been unable to dictate to the officers of our International Union. They have never had the privilege of writing their concept of "how to run the union" into the laws of our International Union. They do not control the destinies of our organization. Therefore, being minus the power to give orders and have them obeyed by the General Executive Board of our International Union, the said General Board members are guilty, as charged, of executive tyranny, and they must be gotten rid of now, and the way to accomplish that purpose is via the SECESSION ROUTE.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

SHELLING THE TRENCHES.

Several years ago the writer became interested in a campaign which was started in another labor organization and by members of that organization, the purpose of which was to discredit one of the executive officers of that labor union and thus make it easier to defeat him in a general vote which was to follow. As the scheme developed quickly and became country-wide, it was possible for an outsider to watch it and see how it worked. At the beginning the opposition established a publication which devoted most of its space to offering rather severe criticism of the administration, and especially trying to lay at the door of the one executive officer referred to innumerable accusations. Every Tom, Dick and Harry who had or thought he had a grievance against the referred to executive was invited and seemed to accept the invitation to write sneering and caustic articles for publication about said officer. Pages were filled with all manner and description of machine poetry and articles, and, without exception, every alleged ill or ailment which it was charged the organization was afflicted with, was laid on the shoulders of the man whom they were seeking to discredit and defeat. He was, to use the common expression prevailing among the opposition, a high-handed, ruthless aristocrat, with nothing in common with the men over whom he managed, by processes of which he was said to be a past master, to retain a position as an executive officer. Laws to him were what he made them. If it suited his purpose he carried them into effect; if he didn't want to enforce a law, it was not enforced. In fact, he was, as his critics said, the "ruling Czar" of that labor organization. The opposition discovered that their campaign of misrepresentation was not making converts rapidly enough. They collected sufficient money to pay the expense of sending several men on the road to meet with local unions and continue their efforts to discredit the officer, and finally evolved a scheme which, for downright cussedness, had no equal. This latter consisted of visiting the city where the general headquarters were located and paying considerable attention to the daily movements of the officer whom they desired to defeat. After a few weeks' espionage the schemers realized that their quarry was leading a pretty clean, decent sort of existence. They couldn't find anything wrong with his habits. He lived in a modest house, and visited occasionally people who were no better off in the possession of this world's goods than himself. Something had to be done, for the date of taking a general vote of the membership of their organization was fast approaching. At last the big idea came to the schemers' minds: they would wait until their victim was passing in front of one of the fine mansions which adorned one of the streets between his humble home and the general headquarters; they would have him accosted by a stranger at an exact spot in front of one of these splendid homes, and while thus engaged a photographer would press the bulb and the finished photograph would show the victim with the fine house in the background. They succeeded in carrying out their plan to such good effect that when the halftone cut was made, it showed the name of the victim on the doorplate—tooled in by the engraver—with such nicety that it showed up plainly. Not being satisfied they went further, and "framed up" another photograph with their victim sitting in a fine electric runabout, a machine which, judging from the half-tone-cut made of it, must have cost considerable money. Still another photograph was secured of the victim as he emerged from one of the banks, probably one of the most imposing banking structures anywhere in America. With this trio of photographs they began their final work, and it proved effective, as they expected. Armed with circulars showing the three pictures, they approached the members of affiliated unions and distributed them generously, meanwhile calling special attention to the printed matter under each cut. As the writer recalls the matter, under the picture of the magnificent house were the words: "Our Grand Sachem John Doe's Magnificent Home." Accompanying the electric automobile were the words: "Our Grand Sachem, John Doe, taking his daily constitutional in his $2,000 Electric Runabout—No Plebian Street Cars for John." Accompanying the picture where John Doe is seen coming out of the fine banking building were the words: "Our Grand Sachem, John Doe, and the splendid edifice where he keeps his wealth. Compare it with YOUR bank, IF YOU HAVE ONE."

Specially prepared reading matter in these circulars conveyed the impression that the Grand Sachem, John Doe, was living in the fine mansion illustrated; that he rode to and from his office daily in his own automobile—an electric, as the smell of gasoline was offensive to his aristocratic nose; that he made regular trips to the bank to deposit some of the excessive salary which the members were paying him, as well as to put away some of the gains accruing from other businesses in which John Doe was alleged to be interested. About that time the organization referred to had passed through a rather serious strike, and another of fair proportions was pending. Quite a number of its members had been forced out of employment, and naturally were easy pickings for the discontented combination. By the time the general vote was taken the opposition had covered, either by personal appearance of one of their number, or by printed matter, about every local union which was not an avowed friend of the officer, and they had conducted the campaign so well that the victim of their efforts had no knowledge of what was taking place until it was too late to overcome, and consequently he went down to a defeat produced by methods which were not only questionable, but which do not appeal to honorable workers, no matter what their trade or calling.

The foregoing recital is a rather vigorous reminder that our members are being worked upon by a similar aggregation, and with quite as questionable methods, all of which the undersigned will try to prove before closing this little article. Though he may not be able to point to the circulation of photographs "framed up" for the acceptance of our membership, there is little doubt but that the campaign of misrepresentation is being carried on with all of the earmarks of schemers who willingly employ any method, no matter how unmanly, to attain their ends, and while they encourage their listeners to believe that they are whole-heartedly working for the betterment of their fellow workers, their goal, their aim and desire would, if reached, obliterate what it has taken years of ceaseless labor to construct—our splendid International Union.

To go back a few months and requisition from the pages of the "Voice of Secession," The Culinary Craft, an item which, in substance, imparted the information that there was being perfected in many local unions "secret sevens," who would be found co-operating with the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, and who were expected to win converts to the view so emphatically advocated by that septette, and then to recite what is actually transpiring in many cities where we have live, thriving local unions.

That the Sacred Septette made no idle boast seems evident, for it appears that several of their "apostles of discontent" and purveyors of half-truths are, not only busy, but exceedingly so, and are causing more than one local to look askance at their general executive and wonder if, after all, they are not the victims of misplaced confidence, wondering if the tales told about their past and present General Executive Board members are true, and if so how the membership of the organization has been imposed upon so successfully.

The "secret sevens" have floated rumors which, in substance, accuse the present General Secretary and a former General Executive Board member and his colleagues of deliberately showing favoritism, of accepting funds from one class of members in our organization and bestowing favors on another. To the culinary crafts this story is related with trimmings of untruth which astound old-time members and make some of them who were indifferent about reading the records printed set up an indignant protest. The amount alleged to have been collected assumes a vague form, and statements made in The Culinary Craft are pointed to as "the whole truth and nothing but the truth." The culinary unions are shown to have been made the victims of such contemptible partiality that one wonders how executives guilty of such unfairness managed to succeed to office thereafter.

Statements reflecting on the honesty and integrity of officers are perpetrated, and accusations of frightful extravagances laid at their doors.

According to the "apostles of discontent," these "Secret Sevens," Local 30 withdrew from the International Union as a protest against high-handed actions of a questionable nature, and refused to return until coaxed back by one of the members of the General Executive Board.

The International Union representative at Washington, D. C., is alleged to have "expended thousands of dollars" of which no one, except the General Secretary-Treasurer, knows anything about. He and the General Secretary-Treasurer are "splitting up all kinds of dough," which they secure from quiescent and pliable members of the General Executive Board. That with some of that ill-gotten coin the General Secretary-Treasurer has purchased an interest in the printing concern which does the printing of the MIXER AND SERVER; that he is just "rolling in wealth," and has "more diamonds than any member of our International Union," which were purchased from the "pickings" taken from the funds of the organization.

That our International Union sanctioned and urged the members of our New York City local unions to take the places of the strikers when the ill-fated I. H. W. U. became involved with the hotel owners of that city, and in support of that contention they flash resolutions adopted by Local 30, San Francisco, Cal., protesting against and denouncing such unwarranted proceedings. They affirm with vehemence that the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER began "roasting the members of Local 30," and that that was the chief reason why that union decided to purchase and publish a paper of their own; that the general headquarters at Cincinnati refused to send the MIXER AND SERVER to said Local 30, and they had to have something to satisfy their members.

Reference to further "secret seven" stories could be made, but sufficient has been offered to indicate that the campaign inaugurated differs but little from the one which is briefly described in the opening of this article. All that remains for the smudgers to do to imitate is to "frame up" photographs and send out falsifying circulars. Probably they have done that; the returns are not all in, nor will they be until after the eleventh hour.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

The undersigned received letters of inquiry from our members shortly after returning from the American Federation of Labor Convention at Philadelphia, Pa., last November. The questions asked can easily be gleaned from the following portions of our replies.

"Shall take up queries in the order given.

"How much money was sent to San Francisco for the Earthquake victims?"

"The total amount collected from our local unions for the above purpose was $11,943.99, which amount included the $5,000.00 appropriated by the International union per action of the G. E. B. and two items amounting to $85.29. (See page 27 of the November, 1907, MIXER AND SERVER).

"Did the bartenders get the best of it?"

"In order to answer that question so that no injustice shall be done to anyone, the following facts are offered:

"The earthquake occurred on April 18, 1906, the result of which has been printed by the press of America; our crafts were affected with those of other trades and callings. One of the first needs of any community is food, and the preparation and serving of same naturally called into action some of our culinary workers, therefore the culinary workers were not ALL deprived of the privilege of working, whereas the bartenders were, for one of the first steps taken by the Administration of San Francisco was to suspend every licensed saloon; that is, to deprive saloons of the right to open or do business. From April 18th, 1906, to July 5th, 1906, there were no legal saloon licenses in operation in San Francisco. That fact meant that the membership of Bartenders' Union, Local 41, were not only out of employment, but the houses where they could secure work were either closed or wrecked by the quake, consequently they were legitimately entitled to whatever assistance could be given them. As a matter of common knowledge, it was noted that about the first line of business to begin operations after the quake were restaurants; in fact, besides those which used some of our members, the places in Oakland called for additional help, and while I do not know positively the number of extras used in that city, the records show that Local 31 of Oakland had a membership in March, 1906, before the quake, of 165, and in May had a membership of 256, an increase over March of 91, and their membership in December of that year had grown to 626 or an increase of 461 over March, 1906.

"The apportionment of funds to each local follows:

LOCAL 30

Received through W. E. Horne.....	$2,011.70
Tax appropriated by I. U.....	373.80
	<hr/> $2,385.50

LOCAL 44

	<hr/> 4,306.25

$1,339.05

"In other words, the culinary unions and members received the sum of $1,339.05 more than the bartenders; this, too, in spite of the conditions which prevailed and which I have briefly described.

"Local 30 of San Francisco never withdrew from the International Union according to their own claims; they refused to pay per capita tax direct to the general office, in fact, paid their tax in escrow to the central labor council of their city."

In connection with the foregoing passage from the communication referred to, it may be appropriate to offer the findings of President Gompers, which we printed in the January, 1911, number of the MIXER AND SERVER; the case is also covered in reports to the Boston, 1911, convention of our International Union.

ARBITRATOR'S DECISION.

In the Dispute Between Local Unions Nos. 30, 41, 44, and 48 of San Francisco, and Local Union No. 31 of Oakland, and the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America.

Headquarters, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C., Sept. 27, 1910.

A dispute arose between Local Unions Nos. 30, 41, 44 and 48 of San Francisco and Oakland Local Union No. 31 on the one hand, and the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America on the other, in regard to the following matter:

(Before proceeding to state the matter, for convenience I shall hereinafter refer to the several local unions as local unions, and to the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America, as the International Union.)

The local unions proposed an amendment to the constitution of the international union. The officers of the latter declared that they had no right to submit the proposition to a referendum vote of the membership. Strained relations followed and through the kindly mediation of Mr. Andrew J. Gallagher, secretary of the Labor Council of San Francisco, the international union and the local unions agreed to submit the subject matter to the undersigned to be decided by him, both parties in advance agreeing to abide by the decision.

The briefs cover nearly fifty pages of typewritten matter, a large number of pages of printed matter, including several hundred pages of volumes, of constitutions, printed proceedings, and printed official journals.

The local unions contend that Sections 173 and 174 of the constitution of the international union make it imperative upon the international union's officers to submit all amendments to a referendum vote. They read as follows:

"Section 173. All proposed amendments to the constitution must be submitted to the general convention in writing, separated from other matter, and must bear the endorsement of some local in good standing and then be adopted by a referendum vote."

"Section 174. Upon the application of ten locals in good standing, amendments to the international constitution shall be presented to the general membership for action."

The local unions quote Sections 175 and 176 of the constitution as having a direct bearing on the controversy. These sections read as follows:

"Section 175. All amendments to the constitution shall be referred to a general vote. A majority of the votes cast decides."

"Section 176. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with the constitution are hereby repealed or changed in accordance therewith, and the Secretary-Treasurer is hereby authorized to make such necessary changes."

The local unions proposed an amendment to the constitution to read as follows:

"Section 47 (paragraph 1). The charter issued to local unions is a contract entered into by and between the General Executive Board and the local unions, whereby the members of the local unions bind themselves and their successors to return to the General Executive Board all property directly purchased or leased from the general office, in case of the nullification of the charter for or by any cause whatever.

"(Paragraph 2.) After all indebtedness of a local union has been paid, in case of the nullification of the charter for any cause, the members of such local union shall have absolute control of all the property that such local may have possessed, except such property as is exempt in the foregoing paragraph."

The local unions' contention is that the officers of the international union had no discretion in the matter whatever, but were bound by the laws to submit the proposed amendment to the constitution to a referendum vote.

The international union contends that the proposed amendment was in violation of the rights of the membership of the international union, was destructive to the very life and existence of the international union, and the rights and interests of the members of local unions.

The arbitrator is called upon to decide whether under all circumstances Section 175 of the constitution of the international union makes it mandatory upon the General Executive Board and the general office to submit the above quoted amendment to the constitution.

In support of the local unions' contention, they cite in their brief that in the charter granted to Local Union No. 30, on January 21, 1901, the following language is part thereof:

"and should the Cooks and Waiters' Alliance No. 30 be dissolved or forfeit their charter, then all property, books, papers and moneys shall become the property of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America."

It is contended that the insertion of this language in the charter is arbitrary.

The answer thereto is that the constitution in no wise prescribes what the charter shall contain.

The beginning of any human effort has its initiation in the arbitrary act of either one or more persons. The institution of civilized government even in its crudest form, has its inception in an arbitrary act. Masses of people are not formed into government other than by the arbitrary act of one or more of their fellows, called together for the institution of orderly government. This is true in a municipality, in a state, as well as in the establishment of a nation, whether that nation be an autocracy, a monarchy, or a republic. This is true of a local union, a central body, a state federation, an international union, or the American Federation of Labor. In a meeting called for which there is no authority for its previous existence, either one or a few men determine who the first one shall be to call the gathering to order, and until the association takes some form by its rules, the presiding officer must of necessity act as his conscience and his judgment direct.

So with the international union in question. Its officers had authority to issue charters to such local unions which were formed by it or by others, and which sought an alliance with and protection from the international union, and these officers and international union, without any inhibition to the contrary, had the right to incorporate in the charter the language which would best safeguard the rights and interest of all the members of the international union; to strengthen it and to use every honorable means to safeguard it from dissolution.

The international union in its brief contends that Section 47 of the constitution of the international union reads as follows:

"Section 47. The charter issued to local unions is a contract entered into by and between the General Executive Board and the local unions, whereby the members of the local unions bind themselves and their successors to return to the General Executive Board all property, books, papers and money, in case of the nullification of the charter for or by any cause whatever."

And that the proposal to amend the constitution was not only a breach of the contract as provided under Section 47, but proposed a method by which local unions would be induced to withhold money and property which rightfully belonged to the membership of the international union.

That a petition by a local union for and the issuance by the international union of a charter, is a contract, is fully set forth in the blank application for charter which the petitioners of a local union for such charter must fill out and sign, is plainly evident.

The right of self-preservation is inherent in every individual, in every association, as it is in every government.

Section five (5) of the international constitution reads as follows:

"This international union can not be dissolved as long as three locals are in favor of its maintenance."

Suppose a proposition was offered to amend this section of the constitution so as to read:

"This international union shall be dissolved on the first day of January, 1911."

Would anyone contend that it would be mandatory upon the officers of the international union to submit such a proposed amendment to a referendum vote of the membership, and that in accordance with Section 175 a majority of the votes cast decides? Would not the officers of the international union be justified, indeed, would it not be imperative upon them to declare that amendment is in conflict with the organic law, the very existence of the international union? That they ought not, could not, and would not submit it to a referendum vote?

The international union is an entity. The local unions are formed and chartered as the best means of protecting and furthering the interests of the whole membership wherever they may be located. The amendments proposed by the local unions in this controversy were equally repugnant to the organic law of the international union, threatened its very existence, and it is the decision of the undersigned that the officers of the international union were justified in their declination to submit the same to a referendum vote.

It is the earnest wish of the arbitrator that the most harmonious relations may be established between the local unions and the international union, and by co-operation the complete organization of the craft may be accomplished, and the work of common humanity go on not only unchecked, but with greater intensity and success.

Fraternally yours,

SAM'L GOMPERS,
President American Federation of Labor.

Vice-President Hesketh participated in a conference with the interested unions. In co-operation with Andrew J. Gallagher, secretary of the Labor Council of San Francisco, he succeeded in getting the unions to agree to submit the case to a referee. The interested locals selected President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, and both sides agreed to abide by his decision, which decision precedes this comment. Local 30 remitted its back tax for the months of September, October, November and December, 1909, and January, February, March and April, 1910, on May 31, 1910. There is positively no warrant or foundation for the statement that the Labor Council of San Francisco refused to unseat the delegates from the protesting unions. No such request was ever made by the general office, consequently the rumor is pure fabrication.

The foregoing disposes of the claim made by the rumor peddlers that Local 30 withdrew from the International Union.

Continuing with the reply to the letters previously referred to, we said:

"The president of Local 30 at the time of the earthquake was, according to reports submitted to this office, Bro. M. P. Scott. On the March report for 1906 the name of A. C. Rose appears as president. Whether Rose was acting during any part of April 1906, I am unable to say, but our records show M. P. Scott as president of Local 30 for April, 1906, and the succeeding months of that year—1906.

"I have no knowledge that Local 30 ever became connected with the Industrial Workers of the World, but there are members of that local whose actions indicate that much of their inspiration is obtained from that combination of trouble makers.

"When the strike was on at New York City it was presumably conducted by the International Hotel Workers' Union, but it developed later that it was an I. W. W. affair, and practically inspired by that institution. There is not one scintilla of truth in the charge that members of our locals in New York City ever took the places of strikers, or ever furnished men for jobs where the so-called I. H. W. U. members were or had been employed. Not even the most rabid of the I. H. W. U. leaders ever accused us of that sort of thing, nor can any of their former members or present members make good on such a charge, for the most excellent of reasons that it 'never occurred.' We do know, however, that Local 30 adopted resolutions condemning our New York local unions and the International officers for allegedly furnishing strikebreakers in New York City. And we know further that said Local 30 has never had the manhood to withdraw its unjust accusation, notwithstanding its possession of facts showing them to have committed an injustice to our culinary workers of New York City.

"That there was no foundation for the claim to the effect that the culinary workers' unions contributed most of the money to the California earthquake sufferers, and that the bartenders received practically all of that money, can easily be disposed of by perusing the following compilation, which is taken from the official records. It indicates exactly from whence the funds were obtained, and does not, by any means, show the 'rumor mongers' as truth dispensers."

Before perusing the following tabulation, take down your November, 1907, copy of the Mixer and Server and verify the facts and figures as you go along.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE FUND.

Bartenders' Unions	$5,886.00
Waiters' Unions	$332.50
Cooks' Unions	48.00
Waitresses' Unions	128.20
Cooks' and Waiters' Unions.....	337.50 — 886.20
Bartenders', Cooks' and Waiters' Unions.....	115.50
Individual donations	21.00
Refunds and rebates	85.29
International Union	5,000.00
	$11,943.99

There is an item of $115.50 paid in by unions of bartenders, cooks and waiters, in order to properly divide that we will give each one a third; the bartenders, $38.50; the cooks, $38.50, and the waiters, $38.50, or in other words, one-third to the bartenders and two-thirds to the culinary workers, that will bring us down to bed rock and show the following results:

Bartenders' Unions contributions.....	$5,924.50
Culinary Workers' contributions.....	913.20
	$5,011.30

That tabulation shows that local unions composed of bartenders paid in $5,011.30 in excess of the combined culinary workers' unions. It positively does not show that the culinary workers paid in more money than the bartenders, nor does the first tabulation offer any foundation whatsoever for the claim which the rumor mongers have been so assiduously circulating relative to partiality having been shown in the distribution of the funds collected. Culinary workers' unions and members paid in $913.20, and there was distributed among them $5,645.30. Bartenders' unions paid in $5,924.50, and secured in the distribution $4,306.25. The appeal sent to our members was an Allied Crafts - International Union Appeal. The generous responses, which were evident, recognized but one thing, and one only—the Quake Sufferers were Members of Our International Union. Irrespective of Craft—and it remained for two persons, who parade as waiters, members of Local 30, San Francisco, Cal., to attempt to belittle the splendid accomplishment, to smear their contemptible, rancid mental sewage, to question, after close on to nine years, the fairness and zeal of the men and women who had anything to do with endeavoring to care for victims of a visitation the like of which we trust may never occur again. The unheard-of methods of these two in their effort to discredit the members of the General Executive Board who succeeded in accomplishing something worth while, is not, thank goodness, supported by the real men and women of our San Francisco locals. They may differ with the executives and the writer on matters of administration, but they are not by any manner or means indifferent to what was done in those fearful days. They are not, nor can they be, accused of that most despicable thing—ingratitude.

"International Organizer Bro. Jere F. McCarthy has been stationed at Washington, D. C., for years. His instructions are to watch legislation in both Houses of Congress. He reports every month, and while his data furnished to headquarters is seldom printed, his reports show what he is engaged in. In the reports printed you will find his expense accounts. Considering the importance of the work, he expends but little. He is paid exactly the same amount as the other representatives of our International Union. We have never appropriated or expended any large or small amount in Washington on account of legislation. Our financial records will verify that fact.

"I neither own directly or indirectly any shares of stock in any concern, either printing shop or otherwise. I am not interested in the firm which does our printing and the printing of the Mixer and Server. They do our printing satisfactorily; if they didn't we would try to get it done elsewhere.

"No member of the present or previous General Executive Boards has any interest in any concern, printing or otherwise, with which the general headquarters does business.

"The only members who visit the general offices regularly are the officers of our nearby local unions, who find it convenient to come in person to pay per capita tax. They seldom bother the writer, and remain but time enough to have receipt made up and secure stamps or supplies. There is no lounging place or room set apart for lounging at the general headquarters. Visiting members are treated with courtesy, but no effort whatsoever is ever made to induce them to prolong their visits. The General Secretary does not act as business agent for any of our Cincinnati locals, nor has he ever interfered with them in any manner, shape or form. Locals situated in and adjacent to the headquarters city receive no greater consideration than those hundreds of thousands of miles away from this city.

"As to the Secretary-Treasurer having more diamonds than any member of our International Union, permit me to enumerate how many he possesses and from whence they came. At the Tenth General Convention, held at Louisville, Ky., May 12-17, 1902, there were 107 delegates in attendance. They collected approximately One Hundred Dollars from that number of representatives, and with the amount they purchased the ring which the Secretary-Treasurer wears and is proud to do so. At the Eleventh General Convention, held at Philadelphia, Pa., May 11-16, 1903, there were 233 delegates in attendance, and they presented the Secretary-Treasurer with a small diamond shirt stud. At the Fourteenth General Convention, held at Toledo, O., October 14-19, 1907, with 238 delegates in attendance, the delegates collected money which was turned over to Bro. S. G. Fosdick, of Local 14, Denver, Colo., who was instructed by the delegates to order two pair of diamond cuff-buttons made in a union jewelry shop in his city, and when ready to send one pair to the General President and the other pair to the General Secretary-Treasurer. Both received them and made suitable acknowledgment. So you will observe that ALL of the gems possessed by the Secretary-Treasurer were purchased by delegates to our conventions, and were not purchased by "pickings" or funds of our International Union.

"If any member or members of Local 30 received any 'roasting,' as you call it, through the pages of the Mixer and Server before the establishment of The Culinary Craft, they must have picked up a 'cap which fitted them,' for, to the best of my recollection, not one word relative to any member or members of that local had been printed in the Mixer and Server which could have been regarded as criticising them. On the other hand since they became the owners of The Culinary Craft, beginning with their January, 1914, number they have exercised great effort to create dissention and to cause our members to devote time and attention to discussing division of our International Union. They call it Segregation, we spell it SECESSION, for the excellent reason that so-called segregation cannot be legally brought about in our International Union, and their "wise men" know that fact quite as well as we do. In their (January, 1914) initial number, they showed their hand and it contained substantially what they seek—to get rid of the men 'who occupy the salaried jobs at the top.' That is their real purpose, in fact that is their definition of Segregation, as can be easily gleaned from any one or all of the issues of The Culinary Craft, beginning with the January, 1914, and closing with their last issue, when they worked their "bile biler" to such an extent that it burst and spread over their editorial pages, leaving thereon a fine sample of segregation (?) brain drip which bemoaned the fact that the writer of this letter had been on the pay-roll for sixteen years and should be separated from the job."

The reference in the foregoing paragraph to "their last issue," had in mind the November, 1914, "The Culinary Craft."

Taking the monthly issues of The Culinary Craft and perusing them with reasonable care will unquestionably disclose what their real motive is; they are shouting segregation in order that they may obscure their real mission; they remind the writer of an incident which occurred at a political convention—the presiding officer called upon the sergeant-at-arms to preserve order, that worthy, a six-foot giant brandishing a heavy cane walked down the aisles crying in a loud tone of voice, "order, keep order," and immediately following such announcement would lean down toward the delegates and whisper, "raise hell," the whisper won—so it is with the aggregation behind The Culinary Craft—to the ordinary observer the cry is for segregation, but the whisper which counts is, "Get the men who occupy the salaried jobs on top—SECESSION follows our failure to do so—this is our one chance to "get" the man who said to us at Kansas City that we "Resembled rotten mackerel in the hot sunshine—they shone while they stunk and they stunk while they shined."

We shall never forget or forgive him for that bitter dose; we must, by hook or by crook, get rid of that fellow, and while we are at the job we may as well make the job a complete one by shelving all the rest. We must get the man whose caustic references to our connections with the I. W. W.ism, Genevaism, Syndicalism and Near Redism forced us to change the personnel of our Press Committee and drop from our publication the name of our Manager. We must get the man who wrote the brief for the International Union which caused President Gompers of the A. F. of L. to render his decision under date of September 27, 1910, which forced us to surrender after holding out for almost a year and causing us to lose prestige with sister local unions who placed implicit confidence in our legal battery. We must use lawful and other means to convey distrust of our general officers, to show them up as negligent of their duty and the mission of the organization; to prove these and other things we enlist in the war of extermination and upon our banner we shall inscribe the rallying cry—SEGREGATE.

There you have it, that is the real unquestioned definition of what the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, mean when they say, "Segregation in June, 1915." To accomplish their purpose they will not hesitate to tear our International to shreds, nor will they allow any effort to remain untried to bring about that end.

They are poor imitators of the motley crew referred to in the opening of this article, they have been unable to originate new methods of warfare and in that respect have made as dismal a showing as they have in promoting ideas or plans for the betterment of those men and women to whom they pretend to be special saviors and protectors. Their whispering-rumor mongering campaign will prove quite as abortive as their previous efforts, for the men and women of our International Union will hardly take hold of the handle to the grindstone for the benefit of those who would sharpen their axes to cut down such a promising oak as our International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

SEGREGATION.

By E. D. SKINNER.

Information covering one hundred and twenty-five pages of printed matter has reached me from the official records of the National Manufacturers' Protective Association. The title of this effusion is "How to Manage Union Labor Organizations," and I fail to recollect having ever tackled any more instructive reading for union men. It certainly was not intended for that purpose, but if it had been, it would be a gem for it is the real thing as an "eye-opener."

Many of the large variety of different methods that are employed to render ineffective union labor's efforts for the benefit of workingmen are not pertinent to the subject of this article, but one is particularly "straight to the point." This particular method accomplishes their purposes by the creation of rival "labor organizations" to combat such real labor unions as promise to become of effective value to workingmen. Instructions even go into details as to how the organizer of such rival movement must impress his victims with his boundless and even absurdly unreasonable affection for the "downtrodden toilers" and he is carefully instructed how to carry on an effective "knocking" campaign against the real labor leaders.

Now let us keep the above in mind while we take a look at this "segregation" proposition. We have an International that I do not think is perfect. Incidentally I do not think that it or anything else in this world ever will be. But our present International has been gaining ground with steadily increasing strides. It is certainly becoming a very serious problem for the interested members of the National Manufacturers' Protective Association to handle. If our International is properly "segregated," the bartenders may be able to maintain an International of their own but it certainly will not have more than half the strength of our present one. If the culinary workers can maintain a separate organization that will be anything more than a name somebody will have to "show me," for I have been in Missouri even if I did not come from there. Incidentally I might mention that we have two or three thousand members who work part of the time at one of the crafts and part of the time at the other and these would be kept constantly in hot water dodging back and forth from one "segregated" organization to the other.

But I am informed that "segregation" is a "blind" for the real purpose. Somebody is figuring on getting segregation strength organized that he can trade for votes for the office of International Secretary-Treasurer. If this is the real purpose, it looks very much like another name for the same thing to me. There may be more competent members of our organization than our present secretary-treasurer, but he is the one man who is responsible for our present progress and, if anybody wants to convince me of the advisability of putting them in his place, the way to do it is by proving superior ability rather than by the employment of the tricks of a politician.

But I am willing to take a chance on a small wager that, if we could get to the bottom of this segregation business, we would find a member in good standing in the "I. W. W.," so let us take a look at that organization. It was started with a great blare of trumpets and vociferous protestations of absurdly exaggerated affection for the "downtrodden toiler" and bitter denunciations of real labor leaders for their lack of such absurdities. It has never been known to make a really effective fight for the genuine benefit of workingmen but it has turned the "other place" upside down in its efforts to disrupt organizations that were actually accomplishing practical results. If the National Manufacturers' Protective Association isn't behind the "I. W. W.'s," then this latter bunch has a singularly blind way of carefully following their instructions on "How to Manage Union Labor Organizations."

Let us all get together and see if we cannot muster brains enough somewhere to avoid being switched onto a "blind siding" by our enemies.

IT IS WELL TO LOOK BEFORE WE LEAP.

Owing to the agitation which has been going on for some time past on the part of certain malcontents, who are anxious for some unknown reason, to see our organization—which has accomplished so much in the way of wages and conditions for its membership throughout the country—dismembered and its life for future good utterly destroyed, is by no means a new symptom to the old veterans of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A., but unlike the agitations that have preceded the present one there seems to be an undercurrent on the part of these present trouble brewers that is so at variance with the teachings of trade unionism that its very sordidness should so weaken their efforts as to cause even their intimate brothers in their own section to stand aside and cry "unclean," as they did in the old days when the word "segregation" was applied to the separation of the "goats" from the "sheep" because of the menace the first named were to the latter. And it might be well to say here that if a segregation could be invoked that would separate this undesirable element, we might believe that a miracle had been performed. In other words if the present move on the part of these malcontents was based on such a premise some credence might be given to their activity and we, who compose the organization and know that only through unity of action can we succeed in perpetuating our work and compelling the employer to grant us a just return for our labor, would gladly wish them Godspeed, but when we know that the "goats" are the ones that are now making all this noise and for the simple purpose of more strongly entrenching themselves as a menace to the "sheep" within their own section of our International, it is the duty of every member who considers himself a shepherd (and we are all shepherds when we are members in good standing) of our influential body to discredit the machinations of these "un-unionists"—for they are not non-unionists—in such a way that they will seek for pastures new to carry on their nefarious work of separation and ruination.

A study of the trades union movement since its inception tends to demonstrate to every fair-minded person that every backward step of the efficiency and influence of the organized forces can be traced to this same cause. The desire on the part of certain people to divide the workers, or in other words to "segregate," one of the best illustrations of modern times is the present statutes of the steel workers compared with the time when all the men, although enrolled under different locals, met together and decided all questions as a unit, when one class insisted on the segregation of the unskilled men in the mill. The toboggan was placed and they started down hill until this body has reached such a position in the economic field that today an effort is again being made to so ally the various grades of workers in an International that the influence of the whole can be used for the furtherance of every advance in wages and changing conditions.

This is just as much the truth with other workers as it is with the toilers in the steel industry and there are many instances of a like character that might be cited to show that segregation tends to ruination and only when segregation is invoked to eliminate undesirables is it successful; and even here the International by its constitution can govern such cases and the only pity now is that our constitution is not strong enough to segregate the individuals who have an ax to grind, without forcing into the issue good and conscientious trades unionists who accidentally are associated with them. When you consider that in places where we have sufficient members to form individual locals of the separate crafts affiliated with our International, they are given autonomy on wages and conditions, and are only allied for the conservation of the whole, we fail to see what good can come of segregating these workers from an International view-point, and this aside from the fact that it would be against the principles of the American Federation of Labor. More important than all this, is what would happen to the unions in localities where there are not sufficient members to form separate locals.

It is only by continuing to organize in localities of the above character that we can improve the conditions in the larger cities, for segregation of the crafts in our International would so weaken the workers in these places that their influence would be lost and the locals naturally go out of business and thus force a number of non-union men on the market who would naturally drift into the cities where we now have large locals and demoralize the conditions now existing there.

Another matter that should be kept in mind is the fact that in these larger cities where the various crafts are thoroughly organized we find practically all the crafts employed in the one institution.

Such being the case and the alliance broken through segregation, what would be the outcome if a grievance should arise between the employer and a single craft? Would the desire to assist be as strong as it is at the present time when the workers are allied in one International? We hardly think so, for everytime that trouble has occurred in the past under such conditions we have found that one craft had an agreement it could not break and its members continuing to work under their agreement would permit the employer to go before the public and say that his place was not unfair because of the fact that union men or women were employed there. Such is history and there is no reason to believe that this phase of the problem would disappear under separate craft unions.

The H. and R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A. has accomplished more in the way of the increase of membership and bettering the conditions of the workers than any other International during the same number of years, when we take into consideration the funds at its disposal coming through the per capita tax from the locals, and there is every reason to think that by placing the International on a stronger financial footing the results will be better than they are today. Here are two opposite conditions confronting us and when we state the object of every member of our International should be and no doubt is to better the membership as a whole, let us combine to defeat any movement that will tend to weaken us and favor any move that may strengthen us as workers. To do this it is the duty of every member in our International to emphatically protest against segregation which means the separation of our membership and therefore the curtailment of our International influence. In a like manner the membership should go on record favoring an increase of the per capita tax and thus place in the hands of our International officials the wherewith to further increase our membership and by so doing increase our influence for the good of employer and employee in trades unionism.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

In Its Relation To Trade Unionism.

Being a Report of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to the Rochester, N. Y., Convention, 1912, in Which the Subject is Fairly Presented.

Innovations, untried and superficially considered, at varying periods often attract the fancy of those whose conception of progress seems largely founded on illusive imagination or fruitless commotion.

Progress in the organized labor movement is the result of a natural development, and not the effect of new-found forms of organization. Cohesion in the movement is apparent in the same degree as education and experience brings understanding. Trade unionism in some form has an unbroken history of achievement, based entirely upon the proper concept of the human equation and a continuous regard for the rights of every member. This latter feature is ignored by the advocates of new forms of organization, mainly typified by the term "industrial unionism." To the minds of many of its advocates discipline equalled only by a military system is prescribed as a distinctive feature, forgetting that the workers, even organized, are voluntary units with persuasion the only method of securing obedience. In contradistinction to the present diffusion of power and consequent control in the local unions the principle of industrial unionism, as expounded by its ardent advocates, would eventually abolish the present democratic form of the trade unions and substitute in its place an arbitrary autocracy composed of a few individuals. Many of the present day trades and callings are closely allied, and with the constant changing character of industry they are being and will be brought still closer in identity and unity in the future.

The adoption of any program to change organization methods hastily is invariably met by hostility from those affected, and thus a fair degree of co-operation can not be secured. Where two trades or callings overlap in jurisdiction the members of both frequently cling tenaciously to the organization to which, mayhap, they have long been affiliated, actuated by an unexplainable reverence for it. While the clear judgment of those not affiliated to the organization under discussion may be that amalgamation would be beneficial, yet this end can only be accomplished as the result of persuasive methods, together with self-imposed discipline.

Trade autonomy, according to the ethics of the American Federation of Labor, means self-government. Craft autonomy does not prohibit the amalgamation of kindred or other trades or callings. It encourages it.

In fact, craft autonomy is a guarantee to every union that makes common cause through federation or otherwise with other unions that its rights of self-government are to be protected.

The position of the American Federation of Labor regarding trade union autonomy was concretely defined by the Scranton (Pa.) Convention of 1901. It was as follows:

* "SCRANTON, PA., Dec. 14, 1901.

"To the Officers and Delegates to the Twenty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor—Greeting:

"The undersigned, your special committee appointed to consider the question of the autonomy of the trade unions, beg leave to say that it is our judgment the future success, permanency, and safety of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the trade unions themselves, depends upon the recognition and application of the principle of autonomy, consistent with the varying phases and transitions in industry.

"We realize that it is impossible to define the exact line of demarcation where one trade or form of labor ends and another begins, and that no hard and fast rule can be devised by which all our trade unions can be governed or can govern themselves.

"We emphasize the impossibility of the establishment of hard and fast lines; but if history and experience in the labor movement count for aught we urge upon our fellow workmen that toleration and forbearance which are proverbial of our movement; for, without the recognition and application of these qualities any decision we may formulate will be futile. We, therefore, recommend as follows:

"1. As the magnificent growth of the American Federation of Labor is conceded by all students of economic thought to be the result of organization on trade lines, and believing it neither necessary nor expedient to make any radical departure from this fundamental principle, we declare that, as a general proposition, the interests of the workers will be best served by adhering as closely to that doctrine as the recent great changes in methods of production and employment from thickly populated centers where the overwhelming number follow one branch thereof, and owing to the fact that in some industries comparatively few workers are engaged over whom separate organizations claim jurisdiction, we believe that jurisdiction in such industries by the paramount organization would yield the best results to the workers therein, at least until the development of organization of each branch has reached a stage wherein these may be placed, without material injury to all parties in interest, in affiliation with their national trade unions. Nothing contained in this declaration is intended or shall be construed to mean a reversal of any decision rendered by former Executive Councils or previous conventions on questions of jurisdiction.

"2. We hold that the interests of the trade union movement will be promoted by closely allied and sub-divided crafts giving consideration to amalgamation, and to the organization of District and National Trade Councils to which should be referred questions in dispute, and which should be adjusted within allied crafts' lines.

"3. The American Federation of Labor being a voluntary association, can not direct and should not adopt methods antagonistic to or in conflict with established trade union laws, and in order to carry the above recommendation into effect, and in full recognition of its logical position, the American Federation of Labor pledges its officers to aid and assist in the adjustment of such craft encroachments as disputants may be willing to submit to its arbitrament.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, JAMES DUNCAN,
JOHN MITCHELL, JOHN MULHOLLAND,
C. N. HUGHES, Committee."

* The above declaration as here given is as corrected by the New Orleans Convention, page 148.

In its report to the Rochester Convention of 1912 the Executive Council, in discussing a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor, not only reaffirmed the Scranton autonomy declaration, but added the following declaration, and an epitome of jurisdictional changes that have occurred in various trades:

"In connection with this declaration it is necessary to call attention to a frequent misconception of the term 'autonomy' as it is used by the American Federation of Labor. Some have mistakenly interpreted it to mean that a trade union can not expand its jurisdiction, or amalgamate with another organization of the same or if a kindred trade in the same industry. The term 'autonomy,' as applied, has been used as an obstacle to such extension, growth, and amalgamation. No such construction or interpretation can be justly given the term. Broadly, and specifically speaking, the term 'autonomy' means self-government, as automaton and automatic, self-acting; autobiography, self-writing the history of one's own life; automobile, self-propelling; driving its general application from the word auto, self. We are prompted to this explanation by several instances in which the term 'industrial unionism' is applied, as against trade unionism, with its autonomous self-government, as well as by a circular which was recently issued by the Metal Trades Council of Toledo, Ohio, in which the affiliated organizations and the delegates to this convention are urged to favor an amendment to the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor, so that—

"National and International trade unions shall have the right to amalgamation; such amalgamation must be endorsed by a referendum vote of the organizations affected, and a two-thirds affirmative vote of the members voting upon such amendment in each organization, shall be necessary to make the amendment legal and binding."

"Such a proposition is based upon the misconception that the American Federation of Labor prevents, or has the power to prevent or place obstacles in the way of, amalgamation of national or international trade unions when they so desire to amalgamate, when as a matter of fact every effort has been made by the American Federation of Labor, the Executive Council, and our organizations to bring about amalgamation of national and international unions, and where that has been impossible for the time being, to endeavor to have them co-operate and federate for their mutual advantage.

"Attention is also called to the provisions of this suggested amendment to the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor, that if it were adopted it would require a two-thirds affirmative vote of the members voting to bring about amalgamation, when as a matter of fact, amalgamation of several organizations has been effected by conference and agreement ratified by a majority of the membership, or a majority of the convention, voting upon the question. Thus it will retard and not facilitate.

"Years ago we severed the affiliation of the American Branch of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, and declared that inasmuch as its members performed the work in several of the machinery trades, the members thereof should belong to the International Association of Machinists. The Allied Metal Mechanics' International Union became part of the International Association of Machinists, and the Machinists' Helpers' unions have become part thereof.

"The Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union amalgamated with and became a part of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the American Branch of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters has had its charter revoked because it refused to amalgamate with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

"In accordance with the instructions of the Atlanta Convention, efforts were made to have the International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers amalgamate with the United Association of Plumbers, Gasfitters, Steamfitters, and Steamfitters' Helpers. Because of the refusal of the former, we have endeavored to carry the instructions into effect that there should be but one organization recognized the pipe fitting industry, and that the United Association of Plumbers, Gasfitters, Steamfitters, and Steamfitters' Helpers. The United Association has within its membership those branches of the trades included in its title.

"The International Molders' Union of North America now encompasses molders of all trades, and some years ago the Coremakers' International Union became amalgamated with it.

"The Longshoremen have pilots and steam shovelmen in addition to their own workers, longshoremen.

"Blacksmiths have chain makers and helpers.

"The Lasters' International Union became amalgamated with the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Union.

"The Iron and Steel Workers are organizing the unskilled with the skilled of the trade.

"The miners have jurisdiction over all work in and around the mines.

"Granite Cutters have added polishers, rubbers, sawyers, and the tool sharpeners have been part thereof from the beginning.

"Quarry Workers have added derrickmen, boxing and strapping.

"Railroad Telegraphers have added station agents, signalmen, train despachers, telephoners, pneumatic interlockers and staffmen.

"The Journeymen Tailors' International Union, the United Garment Workers of North America, and the Ladies Garment Workers' International Union are endeavoring to bring about an amalgamation of the three organizations, or to bring about a closer co-operative effort.

"So on might we quote nearly all of the national and international unions in their constant effort to a more thorough and comprehensive organization of their own fellow workers in the trade, or in kindred trades.

"And yet it is also true that in some few organizations the amalgamation of various branches of one industry having been accomplished, they have voluntarily separated into a number of international unions of their respective branches. That is especially true of the International Typographical Union, which until some years ago had under its jurisdiction and part of the organization the compositors, proof-readers, pressmen, bookbinders, stereotypers, and electrotypers, mailers, news-writers, photo-engravers. By agreement the bookbinders, stereotypers and electrotypers, and photo-engravers, have formed separate organizations from the International Typographical Union, and generally co-operating in their local and national councils.

"The American trade union movement is one of constant growth, development and expansion. Since its inception, the American Federation of Labor has been the most practical and beneficial general organization of the wage-workers of the continent: has taken cognizance of the constant change and transition in industry and by every means within its power has sought not only to effect the organization of unorganized workers, but to bring about unity, solidarity, and fraternity among organized workers, and has stimulated by every means within its power the necessity for closer co-operation, federation and amalgamation of existing trade unions to the end that each may be helpful to all.

"The American Federation of Labor realizes that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link; that the grand army of organized labor can not advance much further than its most backward column; that the labor organizations are made up of human beings who are not cast in plastic molds; can not be placed in rigid forms, and therefore, it must concede that the authority vested in the affiliated unions and their members must be the largest consistent with the general progress and the welfare of the entire wage-working masses.

"The American Federation of Labor has organized central bodies in hundreds of cities, and State federations in nearly all the States in America: has instituted a large number of international unions and numberless local unions, and has developed the system of Industrial Departments which federate the organized workers of the different crafts, trades and callings and which co-operate for the common protection and advancement of the interest of all.

"The American Federation of Labor realizes that there is still much to do, but repudiates the insinuation which is implied by the term "Industrial Unionism" as it is employed by the so-called "Industrial Workers of the World" in antagonism to "Trade Unionism" for in that implication the false impression is conveyed that the trade unions are rigid, unyielding, or do not adjust themselves to meet new conditions and do not advance, develop or expand, whereas the whole history of trade union movement in the past thirty years demonstrates beyond successful contradiction, that there is not a day which passes, but which witnesses in the trade union movement in America the highest and loftiest spirit of sacrifice in order to co-operate with our fellow-workers for their interest and common uplift.

"In line with the historic, intelligent, and comprehensive attitude which the American Federation of Labor has pursued since its inception, we urge still greater effort and energy in the work of more thoroughly organizing the unorganized workers, pursued to its fullest extent; to urge upon the organized workers a more thorough co-operation, to advocate amalgamation or organization of kindred trades and callings, and a more thorough federation of all organized labor, to the end that economic, political, moral and social justice shall come to the toilers, the wealth producers of America."

During the Rochester Convention, the following resolution, designated in the proceedings as Resolution No. 13, was acted upon as indicated:

"Resolved, By the Thirty-second Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, that the Executive Council of this Federation be instructed to arrange conferences between the representatives of the various international unions where there is more than one international membership employed in any given industry, and that every effort by the Executive Council be extended to bring about a federation of such unions to the end that joint action may be assured in all disputes between organized labor and the employing classes."

The committee on adjustment, to which the resolution had been referred, reported as follows: "Your committee reports that the principle contained in this resolution is covered by Section 2 of the Autonomy Declaration of the Scranton Convention. We, therefore, recommend that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, with instructions to do whatever it properly can to establish co-operation among the organizations of kindred trades."

The report of the committee was adopted.

WHEN YOUR OX IS GORED.

After the Senate of New Jersey had passed the Gaunt Local Option bill by a vote of 11 to 9, March 1st, one of the Senators was enjoying a good cigar in one of the chambers of the State House when a newspaper man accosted him and asked him "if, in his judgment, the vote in which he had just participated with the majority, did not set a precedent for further prohibitory legislation of a similar character: for instance, you are now enjoying a good cigar, Senator, there are quite a number of good people in the State of New Jersey who believe that tobacco is quite as great an evil as the liquor traffic is alleged to be. If a bill were introduced for the suppression of the use of tobacco, making it equally unlawful to use the weed as the Gaunt and similar measures propose, would you vote Aye?"

The Senator promptly replied: "Tobacco is not an injurious product, there is nothing which I know of that gives more solace and satisfaction than a good cigar, it is as necessary to me as my three meals per diem; most assuredly would I oppose any such measure as you intimate, and my name would be found among those voting Nay. There is a wide difference, in my opinion, between the use of tobacco and the use of rum." "Don't you regard that as an inconsistent attitude, Senator? You desire your smoke, some other man in the State desires his toddy. Your wishes are in a sense identical, though what you desire is different from the other man, yet each of you believe you are justified in seeking to gratify your wish; you deprive the other man of his chance to secure what he wishes, is that an even balance?" The Senator refused to discuss the matter from the view-point offered, saying: "I am not injured by my cigar, while the toddy drinker is injured by his habit." The insistence of the newspaperman nettled the Senator, and he returned to the Senate chamber, making sure, however, that he had finished his smoke before so doing.

THE LIQUOR MEN'S CLAIMS

GUIDE TO MAP

■ STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION

□ NEVER VOTED ON STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION

□ TRIED STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION—NOT NOW IN FORCE

□ REJECTED STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION ON A REFERENDUM

NOTE—Six States tried and repudiated prohibition and then rejected it on second proposal (Ohio, Nebraska, Indiana, Michigan, Massachusetts and Connecticut).

NOTE—In four of the BLACK States (Oregon, Colorado, Washington, and Virginia) the prohibition law does not go into effect until 1916.

THEY DECLARE DRY STATES HAVE MOST POVERTY, INSANITY AND CRIME AND FEW CHURCH MEMBERS.

Prohibition states show more poverty, more insanity, more crime and less church membership than do "wet" states.

Such are the claims made by the liquor interests in a statement sent to the New York Times. "Prohibition," it is declared, "may prohibit drinking, but it does not prohibit any of the evils of civilization." Official figures, it is insisted, are against the position taken by the Prohibitionists that the banishment of liquor is accompanied by greater prosperity, more religion, fewer crimes, fewer suicides, fewer divorces, less poverty.

The liquor men further claim that analysis proves it is the rural population which is chiefly in favor of prohibition, and that the cities are against it. Statistics, it is declared, "would indicate that prohibition is an issue between the rural and urban population."

It is held by the liquor men that savings accounts give an accurate index of the general prosperity and thrift of a state. It is stated that the report of the Controller of the Currency for 1913 shows that the average saving of each depositor in the savings banks of the United States is $439.07, and from that report the following comparison is taken between certain "dry" and "wet" states:

PROHIBITION STATES.

	Average Savings
Kansas	$231.69
Maine	403 01
West Virginia	168 01
North Carolina	171 56
Georgia	239 54
Mississippi	289 97
Tennessee	262 27
North Dakota	207 15
Oklahoma	152 83
Virginia	272 77
Average for 10 "dry" states...	$238 98

LICENCE STATES.

	Average Savings
New Hampshire	$468 18
Rhode Island	544 93
New York	545 90
California	523 48
Connecticut	497 02
Michigan	443 36
Montana	522 97
Nevada	781 39
Ohio	356 78
Pennsylvania	423 17
Average for 10 "wet" states...	$510 70

As to pauperism the liquor men say that Census Bulletin 120, "Paupers and Almshouses, 1910," shows that "dry" Maine had 945 paupers and "wet" Rhode Island, the most densely populated state in the Union, had 768; "dry" Kansas, 735 and "wet" Minnesota, with 300,000 more population, 687.

Coming to insanity the liquor men state:

"Kansas had 2,912 insane patients in her institutions at the beginning of 1910, and admitted 905 during that year. Nebraska, her next-door "wet" neighbor, had $1,990 at the beginning of 1910, and admitted to her institutions 411 during the year (Census Bulletin 119). On the two counts prohibition Kansas had 1,000 more insane than license Nebraska."

As to criminality, the liquor interests claim that certain "wet" states show to much better advantage than certain "dry" ones. The number of prisoners and juvenile delinquents in specified states is given as follows for 1910:

PROHIBITION STATES.

Kansas	1,971
Georgia	5,078
Oklahoma	1,668

LICENSE STATES.

Nebraska	789
Ohio	5,979
Arkansas	1,361

The statement says that "Ohio, with double the population of Georgia, has but 900 more prisoners and juvenile delinquents than that prohibition state." The following comparison is also made:

	Kansas	Nebraska
"Dry"	"Wet"
Juvenile delinquents.....	434	133
Prisoners committed for grave homicide	94	39
For lesser homicide	98	44
For burglary	250	130
For larceny	495	127
For forgery	87	36
For rape	85	37

The statement of the liquor men continues:

"Of the 6,904 murderers confined in the United States for grave homicide, 2,094 were in the 14 states now known as prohibition states, and 1,846 of them were in the nine states which had prohibition before the year 1914. These nine states have less than one-sixth of the population of the United States, but in 1910 they had nearly one-third of the murderers who were confined in the penitentiaries of the country. "Dry" Georgia led the list with 715."

On the question of church membership the table which follows is given, the figures showing the percentage of the population listed as church members in the states named:

PROHIBITION STATES.

Per Cent.

Oklahoma	18.2
Kansas	28.4
Maine	29.8
West Virginia	28.0

LICENSE STATES.

Per Cent.

New York	43.7
Massachusetts	51.3
Rhode Island	54.0
Pennsylvania	43.0

The statement adds:

"Some of the other license states that out-rank the prohibition states in church membership by far are Illinois, 38.3 per cent; Ohio, 39.3 per cent; Wisconsin, 44.3 per cent; Louisiana, 50.6 per cent; California, 39.1 per cent."

The liquor men argue that the claims made by the Prohibitionists that 1914 was a banner year for the antialcohol cause because five states were added to the "dry" column, ignore the fact that the five states they won had much less than one-half the population of the three states they lost, and thus prohibition was beaten by a big majority when the eight states are grouped. The liquor statement says:

"The year 1914 is claimed as the banner year for state-wide prohibition because five states were added to the prohibition column. These states were Virginia, Arizona, Colorado, Oregon and Washington. The Prohibitionists also made campaigns in Ohio, California, and Texas, but lost those states by overwhelming majorities. Looking at the campaign of 1914 by states, the Prohibitionists claim a victory of two to one because they won five states and lost three. Look at the states by population and the prohibition victory is not so apparent."

The five states carried for prohibition have a combined population of 4,879,745. The combined population of the three states they lost is 11,041,212. Ohio and California are both urban states, in that the majority of the population in each is urban. Texas is still rural, but in the Texas primaries, prohibition lost. The five prohibition states are rural, with the exception of Washington, in which the urban and rural population is about equally divided.

The total "dry" majority in the state of Arizona, Colorado, Oregon, Virginia and Washington was 100,203. The total "wet" majority in the states of California, Ohio and Texas was 273,757. The majority of votes against prohibition in the three states that refused the proposition in 1914 was over twice as large as the majority of votes for the proposition in the five states that adopted prohibition.

Between 1850 and 1860, 14 states adopted prohibition, and between 1880 and 1890, six more states adopted prohibition, but 16 of these states afterward repealed the laws. The 14 states which now have prohibition are offset by 16 states which have tried prohibition and abandoned it as a state-wide policy. Here are the states that have had prohibition and repealed the prohibition laws: Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Maryland, Delaware, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Nebraska, Illinois, Iowa, South Dakota, and Alabama.

These states that have tried prohibition and returned to the license system have a combined population of 38,532,302. Add Texas and California, which rejected prohibition, and the combined population which has repudiated the idea is 45,058,304. The 14 states which now have prohibition laws have a combined population of 19,565,706. If we take states as a whole, as the Prohibitionists do in claiming territory and population living under prohibition law, whether they like it or not, twice as many people have tried and rejected the nostrum as those who are now trying it, and the growth of the idea is backward as well as forward. As the rural states have become urban, with great cities, great industries and great commerce, they have abandoned prohibition as not adapted to their needs.

in the way of law to be respected and obeyed by the people.

Further, the advocates of stimulants lay emphasis upon their claim that it is the rural population of the United States which, speaking generally, favors prohibition, while it is the urban population, also speaking generally, which opposes it. The statement says:

According to Table 28 of the United States Statistical Abstracts the five "wet" states of California, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Texas, that have refused to adopt prohibition, have an average percentage of urban population amounting to 48.9 per cent. The average urban population in the 14 "dry" states is but 28.5 per cent. The average per cent of urban population in those states that rejected prohibition proposals is almost twice the urban population in the present "dry" states.

On December 22, 1914, the Hobson amendment providing for national prohibition was defeated in the House of Representatives. The significance of the vote in the House is the division of the vote according to population. Of the 197 members who voted for the Hobson resolution 129 were from towns of less than 10,000 population, and 64 of these from villages not given in the Census report of places having 2,500 population and more. There were 26 more from cities of less than 25,000 population, and 19 from cities of between 25,000 and 50,000, 10 from cities of over 50,000 and less than 100,000, and 13 from cities of more than 100,000.

Nearly two-thirds of the vote in favor of the resolution was from towns of less than 10,000 population. By the last Census report two-thirds of this vote would be classed as urban, and less than one-third of it from towns of more than 10,000 population.

Of the 190 members who voted against the Hobson resolution, 109 are from cities of more than 25,000 population, and 68 of these from cities of more than 100,000 population, while there are only 25 from towns of less than 2,500. This vote would indicate that prohibition is an issue between the rural and urban population, as the Representatives from the rural districts very generally voted for prohibition and those from the cities voted against it.

The great industrial states are urban, and few of their Representatives voted for prohibition in the House. The Representatives of the rural states and some from the rural districts made up the prohibition vote in the main.—New York Times.

FOUR BATTLES THAT TRULY MADE HISTORY.

All Other Mighty Combats of Century Decided the Fortunes of Comparatively Small Sections of the Globe.

By W. A. Phelon, in Times-Star, March 9, 1915.

"Decisive" battles are not always the bloodiest and some of the most slaughterous, so far as results are concerned, can be counted as only wasted energy. According to many critics, the list of most important victories—those that really made history—since Waterloo (the last of Creasy's "Fifteen Decisive Battles") was as follows: Gettysburg, 1863; Sadowa, 1866; Sedan, 1870; Marne, 1914.

All other mighty combats of the century may be considered either as totally useless, or as deciding only the fortunes of some comparatively small section of the globe. Balaklava, Inkerman, the rest of the Crimean battles, decided nothing—were merely a temporary delay of the Russian advance. Solferino only influenced the fate of Italy. Plevna and other struggles of the Russo-Turkish war only squared up the scale for the Crimean war. Omdurman merely broke a savage reign in Africa. Mukden and the Sea of Japan's naval cataclysm concerned only Russian and Japanese affairs in Eastern Asia. Lule Burgas was a post-script to a decision reached more than 200 years before, when Sobieski stopped the Moslems at Vienna.

Gettysburg decided whether this country should be one of slavery or freedom, one of States rights or national unity. Sadowa made Sedan possible—had Prussia lost at Sadowa, there would have been no Sedan, no shifting of the European balance of power. The Marne, unless reversed by later happenings, stopped Prussia's greatest dream. One of the smallest battles of the century, so far as numbers and losses counted, settled the ownership of more square miles than all the great ones: The storming of Churubusco, in Mexico, by Gen. Scott's men in 1847. Defeat would have wrecked Scott's campaign; victory gave him Mexico, and the territory acquired by the United States thereby was something like one million square miles, if Texas is included!

WOULD SNUB GOMPERS.

It is not encouraging to find a great educational institution like the University of Pennsylvania refusing to grant to Samuel Gompers the right to use one of its halls in which to address the students. It is encouraging though to note that, learning of the policy of the university authorities' with reference to Mr. Gompers, five hundred students showed their resentment by assembling to hear what the president of the American Federation of Labor had to say.

Pin-headedness is about the only word that fittingly describes the attitude of the Pennsylvania college faculty. Samuel Gompers has been one of the greatest factors for good in the labor movement that the world has ever known. He has been conservative to the extent of nullifying the influence of the reckless element within the ranks of labor and he has been radical enough to steadily bring about a betterment of conditions affecting the working people of the nation. For a university to declare that such a man shall not have the ear of the young men who are being educated there is to declare for a narrow policy that cannot but discredit not only the governing body but the institution itself.

The Pennsylvania college authorities cannot snub nor humiliate Samuel Gompers by refusing him permission to address the students, but they can write their institution down as one not broad enough to attract the favorable attention of those who have boys and girls to educate.—Bakersfield Californian, March 6, 1915.

THE DIFFERENCE.

A dog shows his appreciation by the wag of his tail, the pig by a grunt, the cow by licking your hand, the horse by rubbing his nose against your coat; but some men are so selfish they never even so much as say "thank you."—Farm Journal.

CHAT OF THE CRAFTS

WILLIAM T. DODDS.

The Closing of a Busy, Well-Spent Life.

Readers of THE MIXER AND SERVER have no doubt perused from time to time splendidly written articles covering some phase of the organized labor movement of our common country, which bore the name of William T. Dodds; in fact, no later than the March number we had the privilege of printing one of his compositions—a sincere dissent expressive of a conviction, that organized labor was a force and not a passing fad, which had risen over night and passed its highest point before the setting of that day's sun. The author of that and other items bearing his name, and which we have printed in our magazine, was a member of International Typographical Union No. 3, of this city, from his early youth; and for many years prior to his death on March 15, 1915, occupied a loving place in the hearts of every person connected with the newspaper and printing industry of Cincinnati. For something like fourteen years he was connected with the Roessler Brothers' Printing Company, being not only the Dean of that establishment, but occupying that honorable position also among the printing fraternity in Hamilton County, all of whom were honored by his acquaintanceship. William T. Dodds was a lovable soul, an ideal man; in his passing to the great unknown we are prompted to say with Scott: "When musing on companions gone, we doubly feel ourselves alone." Brother Dodds—for he was a true trades unionist—will be missed by many, for every man and woman who had the privilege of his friendship or acquaintanceship respected him for qualities and kindness, which few men can boast of possessing. The trade union movement loses an intellectual giant in his passing; he left behind many mourning friends who are the better for his companionship.

We are greatly indebted to Brother Joe Lane, secretary of Local 721, as well as Brother Charles McKee, secretary of Local 815, of Salt Lake City, for their efforts to keep headquarters posted on the developments covering the Funk and Wootton bills. In quite a newsy communication Secretary Lane explains the difference between the two bills. The Funk bill, which was signed by the governor (introduced by Senator Funk), provides for the prohibition of shipping liquors from a wet point to a dry point in the State; whereas the Wootton bill is for State-wide prohibition by action of the legislature. Governor Spry vetoed the Wootton bill, and among the reasons offered was: that the bill abolishes the saloon, and makes the druggist the dispenser of wine and alcohol on the prescription of a physician, with the generous allowance of a quart under each prescription. Evidently Governor Spry gave the Wootton bill careful consideration. It would appear from the action taken that the subject matter of State-wide prohibition can not be considered until the meeting of the legislature in January, 1917. The members of both of our local unions in Salt Lake City are entitled to a great deal of credit for their ceaseless endeavors to protect the catering industry.

THE REGULAR FELLOW.

By Roy K. Moulton.

The Regular Feller is one who kin smile
When everything's goin' dead wrong;
Kin smile with a smile that's free from all guile;
And tinker up some sort of song.

The Regular Feller kin whistle a tune
When things seem to be breaking bad.
He tries to be happy with what he has got,
Forgetting what he might have had.

The Regular Feller don't talk all the while,
Like rattle-brained fellers all do.
But when he says something, just make up your mind
It's something worth listenin' to.

The Regular Feller don't tell what he's done.
Or big things he's going to do soon;
He just goes and does 'em and keeps his mouth shut—
His secrets he tells to the moon.

The Regular Feller has no time to stoop
And dig into other folks' ground.
For small village scandal he cares not a whoop,
He passes no gossip around.

The Regular Feller speaks well of his kind.
Or else he says nothing at all;
There's no room for rubbish or junk in his mind.
No room for the thoughts that are small.

The Regular Feller does not slap your back
And brag that he's always your friend;
But when you're in trouble and others all quit,
He'll stand by you right to the end.

DROPPING HIS H'S.

"I never thought the letter 'H' very important," said Albert Phillips, who plays "The Fool" in "A Fool There Was," at the Walnut recently, "until that letter dropped out of my typewriter while getting out some press matter for our engagement here. I tried to get along without it while waiting for the repair man. Then it showed itself to be irrepressible. It seemed to be in nearly every word I tried to write, and just for fun of the thing I looked into the matter a little and was surprised to find how near 'omnipresent' that latter is in our language, particularly in expressing ideas of every-day importance and sentiment.

"To begin with, without the 'h' we are at once bereft of home and heaven, not to mention hades. We are left without a head, a hand and a heart. There can be no health without it. While we are thus left without hope we are relieved of heat, and can never get hot. Its absence assured us of earth without ending. We would be all bald-headed, for without it hair can not begin. Similarly we are deprived of habits and of habitations. We would neither have heirs nor heiresses, hens, horses, nor hash.

"We could never take a hack at anybody without a hatchet or 'get the hook.' The world would be dreary without 'he ha's' or 'ho ho's,' but we might cheer up because hanging would be at an end. Our stars would make no more hits and there would be no more hatpins. Hamlet would be forgotten or have to change his name. We would neither have nor hold a half nor a whole. We'd have an 'h' of a time."—Times-Star.

We listened to an argument between two of our boys recently, they were discussing college football. One of them made the statement that no college had more than one thousand students. In order that our members may get an idea of the enrollment at the older colleges the following is presented. Under date of October 7, 1914, the newspapers of the country carried the following items:

Harvard's Registration.

Cambridge, Mass., October 7.—Final returns of registration at Harvard show a total of 4,407 students in all departments, a gain of 269 over last year.

Cornell has an enrollment of 6,311; University of California has 6,817; University of Minnesota, 6,953; University of Chicago, 6,802; Johns Hopkins University, 1,200; University of Pennsylvania, 5,323; Yale University, 3,262; Princeton University, 1,599. Yale University Library consists of 900,000 volumes, more than double that of any other institution of learning.

GREAT BATTLES WERE SHORT.

In most of the great battles which were fought long ago, the majority of them were over in a day. The following gives the duration of some famous engagements:

Waterloo	6 hours
Sedan (the big fighting).....	12½ hours
Gravelotte	9 hours
Mars-la-Tour	10 hours
Koeniggratz	8 hours
Alma	3½ hours
Leipzig	3 days
Gettysburg	3 days

YOU'VE GOT TO BE CAREFUL.

Don't talk about the war, I pray;
Some worthy man may be offended,
Withhold your comment anyway,
Until this woeful war is ended.

No, do not talk on politics,
E'en generalities that glitter;
The parties are in such a fix
That partisans are very bitter.

Oh, never, never speak of trade,
Not even as a slight digression;
Remember how a panic's made
By psychological depression.

Religion you must mention not;
Opinion do not speak or pen it,
Whate'er you say will strike the spot
That's tenderest—some fellow's tenet.

Be careful not to speak of love,
For many a man fatigued and harried
Will swear by all the stars above
That love talk led him to get married.

Talk of weather is taboo;
Talk of one's self is most improper,
What sort of topics, then will do?
Now, really, what is that to you?
Your wife will choose them—you can't stop her! —Exchange.

Real on-the-level, genuine success can not be attained by wishing or wanting, nor can you toot a whistle, ring a bell or do any one of the other things which command immediate delivery and secure it. Unceasing labor and perpetual attention to detail are two of the main things necessary to employ before one can even expect a "look in." There are men with slathers of money who are supposed to be successful, but it is noted that quite a few of them secured their pile by simply keeping in good health and out-living their progenitors.

That is not success, it is what some of us would call a species of blind luck, for it required no special ability to receive the bundle left by those who passed to the great beyond.

LUKE MCLUKE SAYS:

Some women always look like the street decorations a week after the parade is over.

It looks now as though the country was going to the bow-wows. The very latest made in skirts is as wide around the bottom as the old Mother Hubbard Grandma used to wear on wash day. The skirt still displays the dimples around the hips, but begins to flare out and keeps on flaring out. Well, we don't care a hang how soon they lower the steps on the street cars now.

When Mother finally persuades Father into agreeing to beat the rugs for her, Mother starts a phony battle with Father by telling him that the reason he doesn't want to beat the rugs is because he has a date with Helen or some other snip downtown. And Father gets so mad that he lets on that the rugs are Mother and he whales the living stuffing out of them.

Age is age. But just the same a four-year-old auto looks 40 years older than a four-year-old horse.

It must take a lot of coal to warm the house in which the ladies shown in the cuts in the underwear advertisements live. Last time I saw them the thermometer read around Zero, and yet the ladies were grouped in the Drawing Room gossiping about fashions and sitting on divans in front of open windows reading love stories. And yet the most comfortably dressed of the lot wore nothing but a pair of shoulder ribbons and an abbreviated lace curtain.

If a woman ever did succeed in making herself just like one of the pictures in a fashion magazine every horse in town would run away if she went out on the street.

AN AWFUL RECORD.

Half a million persons in New York city are addicted to the use of drugs, and the increasing habit is the greatest menace with which the police department has to cope, Inspector John Dillon of Brooklyn told an assemblage at Cooper Union last night. Ninety per cent of the criminals and of the crimes in the city, he said, were directly due to the use of heroin and cocaine.—From the New York Herald.

If these figures are anywhere near correct, it means that about one in nine of Greater New York are users of drugs. New York is not alone in this particular field, it is quite probable that every large city in this country has its army of "fiends." It would be decidedly interesting to many of our readers to learn how much anti-saloon hysteria had to do in creating this frightful condition. Investigators who made a study of several Dry States aver that the use of "Coke" and similar "dope" had shown a remarkable increase in sales, in fact that drinkers who had been deprived of their usual beverages fell easy victims to the "snow-blowing" habit, and were to all appearances hopeless wrecks.

Intoxicating beverages may reap an occasional victim, but no one who expected to be taken seriously would for a moment assert that it had such a record as the item above shows. One wonders why those anti-saloons never paid any attention to the narcotic question. Were they afraid they would reach a real abuse and truly benefit humanity by aiding in its proper correction and elimination? Reforming for the coin that is in it probably is the answer.

THE PORK CHOP PHILOSOPHER.

If some of the "wimmin folks" who boast of their shape and are so careful to keep it and their face in the best of trim, were to devote one-half of one per cent of their time in stowing away useful knowledge to use around home and help cut down the cost of living there would be fewer lawyers and judges devoting their time to divorce cases.

It ain't always safe to bet that the fellow who runs around with one "gallus" keeping his pants from going south, is shiftless and no account; but you can come closer to "cashing in" on that wager oftener than otherwise.

"Wimmin" sure are funny critters, they will blush to the roots of their hair if perchance they raise their skirts to tie a shoestring or fasten a button; but they will loll around on the sand at the bathing beach leaving the on-looker to get an eyeful and never turn a whimper.

The steward at the City Hotel says, that one reason why there are so many waiters out of work, is that quite a few of them learned waiting on themselves in the Serve Yourself eat shops, and quickly developed enough talent to break into regular dining-rooms. One of these days they will teach the patrons of those Serve Yourself places to wash their own dishes and the owners will profit greatly, but the dishwashers may try their hand at something else.—The Bung-starter.

BACK YONDER.

As early as 1552 under the provisions of the laws of that time, "the Justices of the Peace" were authorized to select from time to time, at their discretion, certain persons in each county or borough who were alone to exercise the trade of keeping a common ale-house.

"From this time forth, the occupation became an exceptional privilege, to which no person could assert a right. The Justices had full discretion as to persons whom they would license, a discretion which Parliament limited only by certain insignificant requirements. What was of importance was the fact that Parliament, from the outset, implied that the number of licenses was to be kept down to just enough for the supply of the legitimate wants of each neighborhood, thus creating a sort of monopoly. Moreover, there was no idea of selling this monopoly to the highest bidder, and the Justices were, in fact, required to issue their licenses without charge. The result was that the Justices had it in their power to create valuable property, and to give it to whom they choose."—History of Liquor Licensing in England.

ADMITTED FACT AND PROPHECY.

At the American Federation of Labor Convention last November in Philadelphia, one of the delegates who modestly refrained from attaching his name to his prose poem, circulated the following:

"Betrayed by some, deserted by many, and our advance retarded by the timid and the faltering, the working class will still keep up its march, until it reaches the summit of the modern world. We will transform every factory into an artshop and every workshop into a studio, where all will be joy-smiths and their task shall be to beat out laughter from the ringing anvil of life."

Speaking of the Quaker City recalls to mind the prediction made by a few skeptical individuals that, following the convention, Philadelphia would go back to its old-time sleep and not be heard from. Such a conclusion is wholly at variance with results. Our locals in Philadelphia have kept right on going, have added new members at every meeting, and from present indications they are putting on more steam. In fact, there are few big cities in the country which can show such splendid results in so brief a period of time. Locals 115 and 279 lead the procession, and the gingery way they are handling affairs speaks well for the future. Philadelphians are not an excitable aggregation; they take time to plan a campaign, then hustle to beat the band to make good.

POPULATION PECULIARITIES.

Buffalo, N. Y., with a population of (1910 census) 423,715, and San Francisco, Cal., with a population (1910 census) of 416,812, are cities of practically the same size numerically, it would seem to the ordinary observer that almost similar opportunities would be offered to the men and women of our crafts, that with approximately the same number of residents equally as many of our allied crafts could find employment at the catering industry. Here are some figures from the 1910 census:

Buffalo has 979 Bartenders, while San Francisco has 2,180, a difference of 1,201.

Buffalo has 461 Cooks, while San Francisco has 4,567, a difference of 4,106. Buffalo has 797 Female Cooks, while San Francisco has 1,201, a difference of 404.

Buffalo has 659 Waiters, while San Francisco has 3,154, a difference of 2,495. Buffalo has 627 Waitresses, while San Francisco has 977, a difference of 350. In other words San Francisco, with a population less than Buffalo, shows the following:

	San Francisco	Buffalo
Bartenders	2,180	979
Cooks	4,567	461
Cooks, female	1,201	797
Waiters	3,154	659
Waitresses	977	627
	12,079	3,523

According to that tabulation San Francisco has 8,556 more of our allied crafts than the city of Buffalo, N. Y.

PROHIBITION BY IMPERIAL DECREE.

That sweet morsel which the Anti-Saloon press of the country has been boasting and patting on the back is not all the "mustard," as the street urchin would say. In fact, the edict issued by the Czar of Russia, or whoever was responsible for the closing of the Vodka dispensaries, turns out to be quite as big a farce as prohibition legislation has shown itself to be in the State of Maine. The following press dispatch appeared in the Boston Post of Feb. 8, 1915, and is an illuminating bit of information:

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED RUSSIAN "BLIND PIGS" ARE DISCOVERED.

Petrograd, Feb. 6.—During the half year since the sale of vodka has been prohibited there have been discovered 1,800 secret distilleries.

Many of them have been engaged in refining shellac and converting the methylated spirits recovered therefrom into alcoholic beverages.

SEED CORN OF THE NATION.

Our members should devote every bit of energy they possess to prevent the exploitation of children and their employment in shops, factories or mines. The boys and girls of tender age should not be allowed to enter into employment. They should be given a chance to obtain the rudiments of a fair common school education. It is a disgrace to any country to have such a condition prevail as unquestionably exists in many industrial centers. Cut down child labor privileges. Give the youngsters a chance to learn to read and write. Save the seed corn of the nation.

GESTICULATION AND NOISE VS. INTELLIGENCE.

Billy Sunday's efforts to win approval from the students of Princeton proved a dark dismal failure. His hell-fire oratory and vaudeville stunt made no impression and he departed quite crest-fallen. All of which proves that when the preacher mountebanks bump against real intelligence they cut about as much figure as a rowboat in a naval blockade.

CANCER—A DISEASE OF MANY FORMS.

People commonly think of cancer as a single definite disease, as distinct and uniform in its nature and symptoms as appendicitis or typhoid fever. This is a misconception. It is nearer the truth to regard "cancer" as the name of a group of quite different diseases which have one feature in common. It has been said that the layman's conception of cancer is of something very indefinite, very portentous, quite hopeless, a disease which always affects some one else than himself, and about which he carries no immediate interest or responsibility. If this is a fair statement, the layman is wrong on practically every count, and his error and confusion is probably due, in no small part, to the failure to take account of the many forms of cancer. If this were done, perhaps the patient would not so frequently yield to despair and throw away the excellent chance of cure that exists when the disease is first discovered.

As a matter of fact "cancer," in the light of modern knowledge of human ailments, is almost as general and vague a term as "fever." The word covers a number of entirely distinct diseases, differing widely in their origin, symptoms, treatment and curability. The various kinds of tumors have little in common except that they are all forms of new and lawless growths of body cells.

This false notion of cancer as a single disease has probably hindered progress toward the understanding and control of the various diseases which are conveniently grouped under that term. All forms of cancer are aspects of new and lawless cell growth, and it is the inner nature or "cause" of such growth that we do not yet understand.

The essential point for the man in the street is that each different kind of cancer is a separate disease. If he is so unlucky as to be attacked by any one of them, it would be well before becoming discouraged to go and find out which form he has. If he is taken with a "fever" and it happens to be German measles, his outlook on life is quite different than if it chances to be virulent small-pox. So, also, a "rodent ulcer" on the face is quite different from cancer of the stomach. And lastly while one is a more serious disease than the other, there is always hope if it is recognized and treated at once. Why not give the surgeon the same chance with cancer as he has with appendicitis? Suppose all symptoms of that disease were neglected and hidden until the appendix had burst? Doubtless the surgeon would still save a certain percentage of cases, but would the record be anything like it is now? It is the intelligent co-operation of the patient and the family physician that has conquered appendicitis, and the same weapons are even more needed in the fight against cancer.—The Journal of the American Medical Association.

"SMILE, AND THE WORLD SMILES WITH YOU."

Keep that bit of present century wisdom in good working trim when you make up your mind to approach a non-member to endeavor to induce him to "sign up" an application and become a member of the big catering industry family. If you have a grouch when you attempt to convert a worker to unionism you are sure to lose. If you recall your past failures to win new members, probably you will discover that you approached the "prospect" with the opposite of a pleasant smile. Try again, but smile as though you knew how and mark the difference in results obtained.

NO NEED TO WORRY NOW.

A movement begun in New York City by William F. Corcoran and Rev. Charles Stelzle, proposes to prevent what they call a "come back" of financial panic and distress "when the saloon shall have been abolished." They are going to establish social centers and all that sort of thing, and find employment for the men and women who will be "fired out of a job" after prohibition has closed the places where our crafts secured employment. We are advised that "two specialists have been working for nearly a year making preliminary studies of how workingmen spend their spare time, and how many men will be thrown out of work if the liquor industry should be destroyed." How interesting! Two men have undertaken a task which two hundred could not accomplish in two years, and on the findings of these two "specialists" they aver that they have proof of the fallacy that the abolition of the saloon traffic would create a panic. Of course these "two specialists" will be able to show that throwing out of employment 100,000 bartenders, 100,000 porters and about 100,000 cooks and waiters, saying nothing of practically confiscating the investment of about 80,000 cafe and saloon proprietors, is but an incident and does not assume the significance of a panic or excessive unemployment. They will no doubt be able to "suggest" the character of employment which these victims may seek, and probably these two, with the aid of Rev. Charles Stelzle and Mr. Corcoran, will be able to solve the existing out-of-work problem which is here at this time, and which, according to quite as reliable authority as these "two specialists," declare consists of 45,000,000 unemployed people of America.

For downright buncombe it is difficult to match some of these skypilots when they get a clear track and only such trifles as a quarter of million workers to dispose of. Turn over, you are on your back. Why worry, Reverend Charley is on the job.

A RUN FOR THE MONEY.

A traveler bought a ticket and then, going out on the platform, said:

"How soon does the train start?"

"Why, there she goes now," said a porter.
"You've missed her."

The traveler kept on the line and set out in pursuit of the train with all his might. But in two or three minutes he came trudging back.

A laughing crowd had gathered and the porter said:

"Well, did you catch her?"

"No," said the traveler, "but by jingo, I made her puff!"—Kansas City Star.

HOW HE SAVED.

It has often been remarked that when one tries to save, say, a man by abstaining from tobacco or cigars and a woman from candy and ice cream, the amount unexpended goes into something else just as unnecessary. It is all like saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung. According to a Western paper, the Hon. William Allen White has given his personal experience with the water wagon in prohibition Kansas, and says: "We have saved about $20 a head from our liquor bill to spend for things worth while." Then he gives the following as to the manner the savings went in another direction:

Subscription to Commoner.....	$1 00
Phonograph record of "Old Black Joe"	25
Ditto of "We Shall Meet Beside the River"	25
Two celluloid collars at 18c.....	36
One pair of mail order yellow shoes.....	1 98
One thousand shares Mexican mine stock	1 00
Two cakes of scented toilet soap.....	15
One "Pigs in Clover" puzzle.....	10
One box of mail order cigars.....
One copy of "The Life and Times of James A. Garfield"	1 40
Chautauqua season ticket.....	2 00
For the heathen in Borneo	10
For the ditto in Formosa	05
For the ditto in Guatemala	05
Four bottles of cologne water.....	35
Peanuts and chewing gum.....	3 39
One Brazilian diamond scarf pin.....	40
One copy of "Night Life in Chicago"	10
One copy of "Confession of an Actress"	10
Postage on 62 applications for government documents	62
Postage on 38 answers to fake advertisements	76
One divining rod.....	2 00
Four pounds of stick candy.....	24
Subscription to Ed. Howe's Monthly.....	10
One genuine Gaurnerium violin (by mail)	2 10
One madstone	15
Total	$20 00

That is not altogether a bit of humor. If everyone kept a daily list of what he spends it will be seen that the money is not wasted on so-called luxuries, like tobacco, beer, candy, and ice cream, but on many another thing we could well do without and to which we never give a thought.—Bethlehem (Pa.) Globe.

In our absorption in matters directly connected with daily labor, compensation and sumptuary legislation, it might not be amiss if we paid some attention to the questions which indirectly bear on our future. Take one question of poll-tax and give it thought. If it operates in your section of the country you should endeavor to have it eliminated. It is an unjust taxation; it is a penalty on citizenship and truly cuts a considerable figure in our affairs. In several States we have been deprived of support owing to the burden which a poll-tax imposes on the voter. We urge our members to become citizens. If they do so in States where a poll-tax prevails, they obtain an unfriendly view of free America and citizenship which is no advantage to us.

WHO OWNS "THE CULINARY CRAFT?"

Some of our readers carry the impression that we decline to acknowledge, despite its printed statements to that effect, that Local 30 really owns "The Culinary Craft." To those we wish to say that we find the following item on page 14 of the April, 1914, number of "The Culinary Craft": "The publisher of this paper wishes to warn all his readers of the overcrowded condition of the labor markets in San Francisco and other cities in California."

What other conclusion can be reached by perusing the foregoing. "The publisher" signifies if it does anything, one person, and that is emphasized by the use of the words: "all his readers." We are not trying to force the property on Local 30, we are taking the printed statements as they are offered and reaching a conclusion, that conclusion warrants reasonable doubt as to who really owns "The Culinary Craft."

Just cup your hand to your hearing apparatus and a response will be forthcoming—maybe.

MAKING THE PLACE ATTRACTIVE.

Here is possibly the uttermost altitude of the artistic taste, allied with utilitarian requirements. In a small cafe, near the McAlpin, noted for its quiet elegance and the Chesterfieldian manners of its proprietor, a very handsome vase, behind the bar, always contains a cluster of flowers. They are arranged with that artistic carelessness which is doubly effective and they lend an air to the whole establishment. The other day a patron eyed the flowers closely and then said: "Say, that looks as if it might be the very same bunch of roses that you had here one day last week."

"Your discernment does you credit," said the proprietor. "As a matter of fact, it is the same bunch of roses. I use artificial flowers because the expense of replacing those flowers daily with genuine ones of equal beauty would be excessive. But I use a different bunch every day. I have six bunches and each is the very best product of the artificial flower maker. I could have just one bunch and wash it off every day. It would always look fresh and beautiful. But that would be too monotonous for the artistic sense. Therefore, you see roses one day, and carnations the next and carnations the day after and so forth. And each bunch does duty one day in the business week. People frequently admire the flowers. Some people, even though they may not realize it, become patrons of the place, no doubt, because the flowers behind the bar please their tastes. I do not trouble to tell them that the flowers are artificial."—Times-Star.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In deepest sorrow and with every loyal heart of Local 248 beating in unison, I pen you these few lines in regards to the death of Brother Robinson, for many years Secretary-Treasurer of our local. I only wish I was empowered with the forensic eloquence of a Henry Clay or the silver-tongue of a Breckinridge, that I might extol his merits. In him was inculcated that which is recognized by all as the ingredients which make the perfect man and gentleman, sober, upright, truthful and honest. A credit to the community and an honor to our craft. He was a good husband, a loving father and had not an enemy so far as known in Birmingham. It was my good fortune to know him intimately and I can attest his sterling worth.

In connection with his death and just previous to his death, I was one of three appointed to audit his books; at the conclusion of our investigation I complimented him for the painstaking and correct way in which he kept them. In reply he said: Boys, I try to keep them right up to the minute for I am likely to go off like a shot and I want no confusion in regards to them when I am gone. Three weeks later we laid him to rest in Elmwood, Birmingham's beautiful cemetery of the dead. His remains were followed to the grave by hundreds. The ceremonies were conducted by the Red Men, of which he was a member and by your humble servant on the part of Local 248. The sermon was as follows: My friends and brother members, what, if anything, can be said of this dead brother who lies here. What can be said that will lighten the sorrow of those who were near and dear to him, what can be said that will assuage the grief of those who called him friend and who stand here today to attest his sterling worth? That bartenders have as true and warm hearts as beat in bosoms of men of any calling is proven by the great number here assembled. In him we have lost one of our greatest weapons against Prohibition, for he was abstemious in habits as to drink. His was a kindly nature and many were the unheralded acts of charity performed by him. He was a true disciple of the Golden Rule, a religion good enough for you or I and so we are about to leave him here in this beautiful city of the dead consecrated to God to sleep the last long sleep. To sleep through the countless ages, that sleep which is final. No fear but what this grave, my friends, will be kept ever green, watered by the tears of his loyal wife and his children. May his memory be ever cherished, Oh thou great Creator, the Great and just God bless thou the spirit of he who lies here, bless thou the sorrowing friends and relatives and as we go forth from this sacred place we pray thee to protect us and our plans from evil hands. This we ask in thy name, Oh Great Creator, Amen.

Appended you will find a copy of the resolutions passed at our last regular meeting.

DeSOUCHET,
Parson.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., February 22, 1915.
Bartenders' Local 248, Birmingham, Ala.:

Your committee named to draft fitting resolutions on the death of departed Brother Robinson, beg to submit the following:

1st. Be it Resolved, That in the death of our dear friend and brother, this Local 248, of Birmingham, has sustained an irreparable loss, one that we who knew him intimately and best, realize in every sense of the word as only short of a catastrophe. Not only do we feel this loss, but it must be shared by the community at large, whose expressions of sympathy are manifold. On every hand are heard such expressions as, I hear Bobby died, a good fellow, a credit to any community, I'm sorry, so sorry, etc. But none so sorry as you and I who knew him best, knew him intimately and knew him at his full worth. Knowing him thus, be it

Resolved, That in this hour of bereavement we pay to this, our departed comrade and friend, this tribute of love and esteem, that in the death of him held most dear, in the death of him who was such a credit to our local, our craft and our manhood, we have lost one of our strongest weapons against fanatical Prohibition. Not only was he abstemious, but his was at all times an example of every thing that the word gentleman implies. Further, the kindly acts, the generosity to a friend in need and all the little and big things that go to endear one to his fellowman; these were his attributes, and these kindly acts only went to prove that part of his religion which he at all times preached, the religion of brotherly love, the best and most enduring religion of all the Golden Rule. Many are the kindly acts of this dead brother that have gone unrewarded on this earth. But the Great, the Good, the all-wise Creator, the just God, he whose judgment is final and who only judges aright, will give him credit that is denied him here; be it therefore

Resolved, That his name be inscribed in letters of gold on our Memorial Tablet among the names of those who have preceded him. The last but not the least and no name there enrolled more loved than his. Let our charter be clothed in somber black for a period of thirty days. May a prayer be offered for the repose of his soul by our chaplain and may each brother resolve to keep the memory of Dear Brother Bobby fresh and green in his heart; be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on our minutes, and one copy sent to the widow and family, one copy sent to the MIXER AND SERVER.

FORT DODGE, IOWA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a line from Fort Dodge, Iowa, to inform you Local 518 is still flourishing.

Brother Ben Gorton paid a visit to this neck of the woods with the vain hope that he might be able to organize the hotel and restaurant workers. But nothing doing—too many Greek chop houses for that.

Well, coming events cast their shadows before, like the Japs on the coast. Our people will curse them when it is too late. Well though Brother Gorton was sorely disappointed in one instance, he was well pleased in another. Local 518, B. I. L. of A., held a special meeting to confer with him on matters concerning the organization in general, and I believe he will bear me out when I say he was surprised to meet fifty-four out of a membership of fifty-nine at a special meeting, with but one day's notice.

We will have nine months more of legalized liquor sales in part of Iowa and then return to the disgraceful days of Pots and Pearce in Des Moines, the speak-easy and blind tigers that were and may be again a blot on one of the best States in the Union. The drys tell us they are in a better shape to enforce the law now than they were in 1884. It may be so, as some of those who were law-breakers at that time are now law-makers.

Recently there was a party of financiers from Kentucky looking over some of the deserted Gypsum mines in this locality with a view to lighting said mines. Might be gas or it might be moonlight.

ONE OF THE SAINTS.

LEADVILLE, COLO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We hope you will have space in the MIXER AND SERVER for a maiden letter from Local 129. Although being in existence for two years, we were reluctant to have to acknowledge our inability to compete in composition with those able writers, who certainly belong to the authors' class.

In regards to local conditions, it is not encouraging for bar boys; the employers are cutting expenses wherever possible, consequently quite a number of us are out of employment. The mining industry looks very promising for the future. There is no question that after January 1, 1916, a number of us will join the overalls and jumper brigade, and no doubt, if successful will be a great benefit to our muscles.

Our local, considering the times and discouraging future, is in fairly good condition. We have a club room with sleeping and bath accommodations, also a good range to cook the muligan for the brothers without simoleons, but who must be in good standing. Our secretary and treasurer, Otto Herrmann, is a lightweight, but our two hundred pounds can not scare him when it comes to dues—he's certainly there with the long mitt—no heart at all for members who won't come through when capable.

Brother Hicks contemplates going to the California fair via the auto route; no doubt he will attend the convention.

Brother Percy Atkinson has the wanderlust, having traveled from ocean to ocean; it would not surprise us to see him disappear from this neck of the woods any day.

I would like to mention all the brothers individually, but I fear to impose on your good nature, but without exaggeration, we are IT.

To illustrate how we stand with our bosses: On the 15th of November last, we had the misfortune to lose, by death, one of our officers and best member of our circle, Finley B. McGrew. During the funeral all the bars of the city were closed, and both proprietors and bartenders attended in a body. He was buried in the Elks' rest.

Before concluding I wish to say a word in praise of our brothers. About a year ago I was taken with a case of blood poisoning and had to have one of my limbs amputated; without the kindly assistance of the brothers I don't know what I would have done. They may look rough on the edges but their heart is bigger than Mount Massive. At present I could not very well take Brother Flore and his wife down a 600-foot ladder.

We extend an invitation to the brothers who may drop in here on their way to the world's fair, to call on us. We will be delighted to show them our gold and silver mines.

With best wishes to our brothers and sisters, I remain,

Fraternally yours,
J. O. LESSARD, President,
Local 129.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Thinking some of our sisters and brothers "way up yonder" might be getting homesick for dear, old Texas, after putting in a hard winter among the snowballs and icicles, I concluded to write a letter for the MIXER AND SERVER so they could read about us who are 'way down south in Dixieland, where the magnolias bloom.

I am much pleased to state that business is improving some, almost all the boys are working. The members have very poor conditions, in fact, at present we have not a house signed up for the girls; this will never be a good town for our sisters as the proprietors here are not in favor of working girls on account of the 54-hour law, which is strictly enforced here.

With our hustling business agent, Brother Glauburg, and worthy President David Lynch at the helm we have no fear of our future, and expect to increase our membership considerable this coming summer.

Yours fraternally,
CHAS. A. SIMPSON,
Local 659.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We who live in Buffalo in such close proximity to Niagara Falls that we can almost hear the roar of this giant cataract, and which is also one of the seven wonders of the world, one would naturally think that this town would be the real convention city of the country, keeping hundreds of our craft busy. But this is far from being so. I have always adhered to a slogan, "Boost Buffalo," but our Chamber of Commerce seems to have drifted far away from it, for, instead of being the busy convention city that it should be, with such a magnet as Niagara Falls within hailing distance, it seems as though we were isolated thousands of miles away from it.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

Two more brothers passed to the great beyond—Brother Coffey, in January, and Brother Winer, in March.

Eagle Duff, three-time wonder, and Dock Robson, speculator, East and West Side captains at the Ellicott Club under Commander Hank O'Neil, are steering the lunch crew straight. The twin salters can be seen almost any afternoon or evening going upstairs with a book under their arms.

It seems as though the reformers are having the upper hand at the present time, having drastic and queer laws put on the books of the different states. It seems as though they were trying pretty hard to have something done right here in New York State.

Here is a sample of a couple of bills introduced: One to label all bottled beer poison, and the other to forbid any edibles being sold in saloons.

Now that we are on the eve of our own convention, it is up to the crafts of our International to stand shoulder to shoulder and down such fanatical sentiment.

Yours fraternally,

W.M. SMITH,
Press Agent Local 196.

HARTFORD, CONN.

At the meeting held March 14th, Local 304 has not seen in many months such an interested attendance of waiters, cooks and countermen. The business was admirably disposed of by Bro. Dan McCarthy, who, neither favoring or fearing any, rendered his decisions with impartiality and satisfaction to all.

The Dance Committee reported financial success from our last dance. The beautiful booklet which was issued, will act as a reminder of the occasion to those who were fortunate in securing one. The page displaying General President Ed Flore was much admired, and gives an opportunity to our members to know our genial president.

The Legislative Committee reported the re-assignment of the "one day rest in seven" bill to another hearing by the Labor Committee. The loud protest made by Local 304, was like shrapnel dropped on them. The bill was set for hearing March 23.

The Organization and Label Committee reported progress all along the line; also our delegates to the C. L. U.

Six new members were obligated, also eight migratory birds captured and admitted to the coop. Yes, my dear, we are still doing business in Hartford in spite of the rich open-shop bogey.

With the advent of spring we look smilingly ahead, as we now have exclusive booking for the Young Lunch, Davenport Restaurants, Long's Hotel, Uneeda Lunch, Venetia Cafe, Harry Bonds, Aaron Club, and the lion share of thirty-four other union houses.

Fraternally,

ALBERT FORNI.
Secretary Local 304.

EDMONTON, ALTA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am instructed to ask you to publish the following in the MIXER AND SERVER:

Two of our brothers, Jack Fry, cook, and Wm. Ross, helper, were charged with entering the employ of Hurry's Cafe of this city after said cafe had been declared unfair to Local 55. A special committee was appointed and the members were notified and found guilty according to Sections 169 and 170 of the constitution. Jack Fry was fined $25, and Wm. Ross, $15.

Fraternally yours,

J. LAWSON, President.
ELMER E. OWEN, Secretary.

WACO, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Will write you a few lines to let you know that Local 744 is still on the map, with 100 per cent membership, although things are very quiet at present with a number of our boys out of employment, which conditions were brought about by early closing of saloons, which is 9:30 p. m., which resulted in about one-third of our membership being thrown out of work. In places where two bar boys did the work, you can now see the proprietor hitting the "ball." We hope to overcome this crisis; however, I advise every member of our craft to stay away from this part of the country if they are seeking employment.

At our last regular meeting, Bro. W. T. Foster was elected delegate to the Texas State Federation of Labor Convention, which takes place in Austin next month. Brother Foster was delegate to El Paso convention last year, and believe me, "Bill" is there with the goods when it comes to representing bartenders' local.

We are very sorry that circumstances will not allow us to send a delegate to the San Francisco convention, but hope we will be able to send one to the following convention.

Fraternally yours,

JOS. DUSHEK,
Secretary Local 744.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We held our regular meeting on March 7, with all members present. We have a very good local and believe times are getting a little better, although we still have seven members on the extra list. At our next meeting we expect to take in some new members.

It is with regret that I mention the death of our treasurer, Bro. Jas. F. Doyle, who passed away on Friday, March 5th and was buried on Monday, March 8th. The local paid their respects to the brother by turning out in a body. Brother Davin was appointed treasurer in his place.

Brother Ike Francis found a pocketbook the other day containing a sum of money, and he immediately hunted up the rightful owner and returned it. A week later he lost his own pocketbook containing $45; the finder was not as honest as Brother Francis and failed to return it; however, we hope the brother does not lose any more, as Ike is too good a fellow.

Our social rooms in the Goodwin building afford much pleasure; we have some good card players, and it is nip and tuck between Tony Deferri, Marshel Dougherty, and Martin Greglock, who is the champion cinch player. We are thinking of sending a challenge to our sister local, No. 78, Uniontown. How about it, Pom, are you there?

Brother Winekoop who has been laid up with the gripe, is back on duty again.

Our new officers are doing very fine, and we hope they will keep it up.

Yours fraternally,

TOM EVANS,
Press Secretary, Local 71.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Waiters' Local 12 several months ago announced that the membership was determined to have a 100 per cent organization in this city, and they are leaving no stone unturned in their effort to reach this goal. They have appointed a committee to visit every trade union in this city and urge them to demand the button from the waiter who serves them in either a hotel, restaurant or cafe. This committee is called the Good and Welfare Committee, and they are meeting with much success. Each union visited, so far, has accorded them every courtesy.

The Executive Board of the waiters is meeting with the Executive Board of Bartenders' Local 68, and in this way great strides are being made in increasing the membership.

Waiters' Local 663, of Covington, Ky., is taking care of the summer resorts, cafes and restaurants across the river. Thus it can be seen with what determination the boys are working. Each trade unionist is thanked heartily for whatever assistance rendered, and the waiters ask them to keep up the good work and demand the button from the waiter who serves them.

Sunday, March 7, a mass-meeting was held, which was well attended, all the waiters in Cincinnati being invited. W. H. Day, chairman, in a few well chosen words, outlined the purpose of the meeting, and called upon others present for remarks. Quite a number of applications for membership were signed after the meeting.

Local 72 is making a stiff fight for a strong membership, our motto being "Courtesy, Harmony, Etiquette and Discretion."

Business Agent J. D. Atkinson resigned from office February 5, and was succeeded by Leonard Griffiths. President Levi Cook tendered his resignation on March 5. Ex-President Edward Lohrey was appointed by Vice-President Coolman to succeed Brother Cook, and was unanimously elected president.

March 19 R. B. Stickley, general organizer for the Cigarmakers' International Union of America, addressed us at a meeting, giving a very interesting talk on the conditions of trade unionists. He said, "Don't knock; boost always." That is what we are doing, boosting. Each member is working faithfully and diligently to hustle in new applicants, with grand success. We have initiated ten new members in the last three meetings. All our officers and brothers are working diligently to make Local 72 a strong local.

Mr. John Dugan, of Typographical Union No. 3, has written Local 72 a letter thanking us for the services our waiters rendered at a smoker held on March 17. •

Bro. J. Brown, of Local 216, Toledo, O., addressed our meeting on March 5, and explained conditions existing in Toledo, presenting his traveling card. Bro. J. Whately, of Local 196, Buffalo, N. Y., also attended the meeting.

Our business agent, Leonard Griffiths, is doing good work, and we will have several parks signed up for the summer. We are not using militant tactics, discretion and harmony being our motto.

Fraternally yours,

W. H. DAY,
Press Secretary Local 72.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

The Old Brass Rail.

By ARTHUR S. LOEB, Local 106.

Many's the jest, sir, and many's the song,
And many's the good old tale,
And none cares to judge which is right or wrong
When your foot's on the old brass rail.

Good luck and good health,
With a glass full of wealth—
"Here's to you" from brother to brother;
Just one, oh just one,
A wee little one,
But we always have time for another.

Drink to your sweethearts, drink to your wives;
Drink to each other, drink for your lives;
Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief,
Drink for joy or drink for grief—
Champagne, whisky, beer and ale,
Any old thing on the old brass rail.

Just a little drink with a fellow that you meet,
A friend with an open hand,
At any old time, on any old street,
In dear old Yankee land.
For a friend of that style
Is a fellow worth while.
I'll gamble he would go your bail, "sir,"
And never will shrink,
From just one more drink
With his foot on the old brass rail, "sir."

Submitted by CHARLES FORTMANN.

LYNN, MASS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The enclosed agreement between Local 86 and the liquor dealers of Lynn has been agreed upon by both parties, and we have practically gained all we asked for, with the exception of hours, having compromised on fifty-seven, knowing that it was utterly impossible to work fifty-seven hours in five days with the hour of opening at 6:30 a. m. and the hour of closing 10:00 p. m. Article 7 as it stands now is better than formerly. The old agreement gave the employer power to discharge an employe without notice, but as it now stands all employes are entitled to one week's notice, in writing, of their discharge. We are to get one day off in six, and white coats and aprons are to be furnished. Union goods are to be handled by the bartenders, and be delivered by union men. The agreement follows:

AGREEMENT.

"THIS AGREEMENT made and entered into this Tenth day of March, A. D. 1915, by and between Local 86 Bartenders' Union, a voluntary association located in Lynn, in the County of Essex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, party of the first part, and the Lynn License Association

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Inc.), a corporation duly established by law and having its usual place of business in said Lynn, party of the second part.

"WITNESSETH. 1. The party of the second part shall employ only union men and members in good standing of said Local 86 at all places of business conducted by members of the party of the second part.

2. That the card of the Bartenders' Union, International League, shall be displayed conspicuously on the premises of each member of the party of the second part, and all bartenders employed by the party of the second part shall wear the regular blue button of the craft during working hours.

"3. That the minimum rate of compensation for each member working under the jurisdiction of said Local 86 shall be at the rate of twenty-one ($21) dollars per week, and the wages of all bartenders receiving a greater compensation at the time of the signing of these presents shall not be reduced while in the employ of that member of the party of the second part.

"4. The maximum number of hours for a working week for each member of said Local 86 shall not exceed fifty-seven hours per week, and such working hours shall so be arranged as to be in conformity with Article 5 hereof.

"5. Each member of said Local 86 shall have a day off in each week, provided, however, that in case of a week in which there is a legal holiday no day off shall be granted in addition to the day off permitted by the legal holiday; and in case of a member of Local 86 employed at a hotel known as an innholders' license so much additional time off shall be granted by said employer as to make the total of the working hours only fifty-seven in each week.

"6. In case an employee is required to wear a white coat or apron, or any other apparel distinctive of his employment, such apparel shall be furnished by the employer without charge to the employee.

"7. Each member of said Local 86 shall be entitled to one week's notice, in writing, of his discharge.

"8. Each employee shall give one week's notice, in writing, to his employer of his intention of abandoning his employment. In case of the failure of an employee so to do, such employee shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars by Local 86, and the amount of such fine shall be paid and turned over to his employer by the business agent of said Local 86, and said business agent shall take a receipt therefor from such employer to be filed with the records of said Local 86. In case the employer shall not accept said fine, such fine shall be turned over to the treasurer of Local 86.

"9. Members of Local 86 who receive steady employment shall not be allowed to work overtime; but members not steadily employed at said craft, providing said members are not working at any other craft or trade, shall receive five dollars per day for Saturdays, Sundays, holidays, and for days preceding a holiday. For each day's work not included in the foregoing, such employee shall receive the sum of three dollars and fifty cents per day.

"10. Each member of said Local 86 employed hereunder shall handle no merchandise except which bears the union label of the craft by which such merchandise is manufactured. Delivery by teams or trucks shall be made by union men.

"11. This agreement shall continue in full force and effect so long as licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquor are granted in the city of Lynn, except as provided in paragraph 12 hereof.

"12. This contract may be changed only by mutual agreement upon two weeks' notice of either party so wishing to make a change to the other party.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF the said Lynn License Association (Inc.) has caused these presents to be executed and its corporate seal to be hereto affixed by the president and secretary of its association, and the said Local 86 Bartenders' Union has caused these presents to be executed by its president and secretary, hereunto duly authorized the day and year first above written."

LOCAL 86 BARTENDERS' UNION.

(Signed) T. J. BRANNON, President;
JOHN J. GRIFFIN.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN J. GRIFFIN,
Secretary Local 86.

KENOSHA, WIS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 523 is still in line after a hard winter. Lots of its members were out of work, but things are picking up again.

On February 18, 19, 22 and 23 the Trades and Labor Council held a series of open meetings, which were addressed by speakers and organizers from the different internationals. Bro. James Henderson, of the I. A. of M., started the ball to rolling on the 18th with a good talk, proving himself a good speaker. He was followed by Brother Wood, of the Carpenters, and an organizer for the Plumbers. Our International was represented on February 22 by Bro. Josh Brady. After a few remarks by James Henderson, Brother Brady took the floor and gave a most interesting address on labor conditions as he found them in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin. He sure is long winded when he gets to talking. Brothers Robson, Sorweid and Martel came down from Milwaukee.

At our meeting on March 22 we will take up the question of sending a delegate to San Francisco.

Yours fraternally,

L. S. KIMBALL.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On Friday afternoon and evening, March 26, we will hold our sixteenth anniversary and smoker. Open house will be held for members and friends, and a good time is expected. The committee in charge of the smoker is as follows: Edw. Ehrman, chairman; J. Ball, W. Watkins and E. Lutz.

Our delegates to go the International Convention in June are Edw. Ehrman and P. J. McGowan.

Where some of our brothers are located: Al Bentzan and George Smith at Empire Hotel; W. G. Lullman, W. H. Kramer, George Kraft, Ed. Wilson, F. O'Connell and Ed. O'Hara at White Elephant; F. McGreevey at Golden Rule; Harry Byganay at Lundy's buffet; F. McCormick and F. Boldt at Neider's buffet; H. Dixon at Brownsey's Hotel; H. Mooney, J. Sullivan and J. Schafer at Lavin's buffet; L. Dentinger and L. Spang at Smaus' buffet; Jas. Taffa at Keifer's buffet; Ed. Vanderbush at Zeibold's buffet; H. Andrews at Seneca Hotel; Chas A. Marshall at Maisch's buffet.

Bro. Jake Horner is on the sick list.

Yours fraternally,

FRANK BROWN,
Press Agt. and Pres. Local 175.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Glory Hallelujah! The almost impossible has happened. Philadelphia, the city that has for decades been known all over the United States as the sleepy city, has at last been revived. Philadelphians were made to see the error of their ways; they have "hit the trail," and Philadelphia will henceforth be the cleanest and most prosperous spot on the map. Such is the belief and prediction of "Billy Sunday" and his followers, who have been "operating" in Philadelphia for quite some time.

We do not know whether "Billy Sunday" and his revival meetings will have any such effect as he predicted. There are some people who are rather inclined to believe the contrary. But we do know positively that the conditions of the hotel and restaurant employees have been worse this winter than ever before, and have not improved one iota so far. The industrial depression which has swept all over the country has also had a great effect on business in general in Philadelphia. The hotel and restaurant men, like other "good business men," were very prompt in meeting this emergency by cutting down the number of employees and increasing the working hours of those whom they employed. There are three inseparable consequences of any such action which always work tremendous hardships on the workers. They are as follows: 1. Intolerable long hours and speeding up for those that are fortunate enough to get work. 2. A great army of unemployed and the suffering thereof. 3. Low wages. This theory did not fail in this case, and never will fail in other cases anywhere. Since labor is a commodity and, like other commodities, subject to supply and demand, therefore, it necessarily followed that this unemployed army, forming an oversupply of labor on the market, had a strong tendency to decrease the wages, and in some instances the wages have been decreased very considerably. So intense have become these evil conditions in Philadelphia this winter that many unorganized culinary workers are asking, with consternation: What is going to become of us?

All local dual organizations (including Billy Sunday) never attempted to approach these problems, aye, not even raised the question. It was Local 279 that had the courage to tackle these problems, and also knows how to solve them. It was Local 279 that got busy and arranged mass-meetings and showed our fellow craftsmen how to remedy these evil conditions and how to make their lot a more bearable one. The unorganized culinary workers and members of dual organizations were told that these problems could only be solved by "ONE LEGITIMATE, POWERFUL AND COMPACT ORGANIZATION." New members were made, and from a propaganda and educational point of view these meetings were very successful. Whether we shall be able to solve these problems in the future will depend to a great extent on every individual member of Local 279. If every member will resolve to bring in at least one new member every month we certainly will have a good sized army of organized culinary workers to start the march of real progress next fall.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES HOCK,
Press Secretary Local 279.

EL PASO, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—This is my report to date on Locals 628 and 848, El Paso, Tex.

My first estimate of the situation in Bartenders' Local 628 was summed up in the words, "You need a doctor rather than an organizer," and this still remains my opinion. This local has had considerable sickness and several deaths among its members during the past winter, but thanks to the efficient management of its finances by the present officers, it has pulled through in good shape. This is particularly creditable to the members of the local, for they have suffered heavy losses during the past year by the defalcations of their former officers. Will the day ever come when our locals will all be sufficiently impressed with the necessity of strictly enforcing our International law that all officers who have the handling of the finances must be at once put under an acceptable bond? However, the fact that their losses did not cause Local 628 to falter in any way, but simply taught them the valuable lesson that they must be more careful in the selection of their financial officers, shows that these boys have the grit and the real stuff that always succeeds. One great help to their treasury was a ball that they pulled off last month. One hundred and seven couples were in the grand march, and the boys cleared nearly one hundred dollars. The best part of the affair was the fact that it was so well conducted that the public has been calling for another.

To begin with Local 628 claimed an 80 per cent control of their craft, and there are some places here on the border that they do not care to attempt to control, so their problems in this respect were not very serious. But four new places have been opened up, of which two have already been signed, and I think the other two soon will be. One "open house" also promises to follow suit. One house with which they were having trouble had an unfortunate experience. The scab bartender, over whom the trouble arose, found a healthy sized chunk of the firm's money in the cash register one night and promptly disappeared. Business was not very good anyway, and this proved the last straw, so the doors were not opened in the morning. Arrangements are now complete for the re-opening of the place, and the new proprietor is a "dyed in the wool" union man.

The problems of Cooks' and Waiters' Local 848 are much more serious. The "floaters" come and go so fast here that it would take a private detective force to keep track of them. However, cards are in all the principal houses, with the exception of one, and they have kept things pretty straight, considering. During the past month they have been carrying on a vigorous campaign to gain complete control of the situation, which has resulted in bringing in sixteen new members, with another meeting to be heard from. This local is figuring on putting a new wage scale into effect this spring that will establish a standard and incidentally protect their established houses from the unfair competition of mushroom upstarts that attempt to take advantage of the large number of "floaters" by cutting prices on the basis of underpaying their help.

In the matter of the one most serious problem that the cooks and waiters started out in the first place to tackle, they have been making good progress. One of their largest American restaurants now occupies the site of an old Chinese dump. An American took possession of a second Chinese place a few days ago. A third Chinaman quietly gave up his ghost some time ago, and a fourth is now in the courts for not paying his bills. A steadily increasing sentiment against patronizing the Chinese has been created among the general public, and the boys are getting better support from the members of the other unions. Local 848 certainly has the Chinaman "on the run" in El Paso, and only one thing is needed to settle them in short order. If some capable restaurant man would procure a desirable location here and would run a really first-class place that would appeal to the better trade, he would not only make a "ten strike" for himself, but he would make the early fulfillment of my prediction that "the day is coming when El Paso will be an American restaurant city, as it should be," a certainty. There are local peculiarities in the situation that an outsider must learn to take into consideration, but the opening is here for the man who has the brains and experience to take advantage of.

The finances of this local are in good shape. There has not been as much sickness as in Local 628, and only one death, that of Bro. E. D. Mills. A benefit performance was given by one of the local theaters which netted about $60, and that helped.

With best wishes, Yours fraternally,
E. D. SKINNER, L. S. O.

BALTIMORE, MD.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At a meeting recently held by Local 532 a resolution was adopted for the appointment of a committee to be known as the Mixing Committee. Their duty will consist of examining all candidates who wish to become affiliated with Local 532 as to their ability to become first-class bartenders.

During the last month our Executive Committee has been on a very profitable expedition. So far it has organized some of the leading bars of Baltimore.

A large delegation from Washington, D. C., came over for our annual oyster roast, which was held on February 21, and their appreciation was accepted by our vice-president, Thomas Nolan ("Beau Brummel").

During the past month Brothers, Stern, Cheno-weth, Flanagan, Baseman and Bennett have certainly been working very hard to complete a home for Local 532, which is almost a certainty of success.

Business is fair in Baltimore. If any brother wishes to come here he will have to "look out for the Mixing Committee," which consists of Charles Bennett, chairman; Bernard Stern and Morris W. Baseman, assistants.

"Watch Us Grow."

Fraternally yours,
BERNARD STERN.
Press Agent Local 532.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been some time since the membership of our International has heard from Local 171, so kindly find space for this lengthy communication.

BARTENDERS GUESTS OF MOERLBACH BREWERY.

At the fifth annual banquet and beefsteak supper given by the Moerlbach Brewery in Moerlbach Rathskeller, members of Local Union 171 and their friends had a grand time. We, the members of Local 171, can safely say that no finer spread could be put before a king than the Moerlbach Brewery officers put before us, and to say it was greatly enjoyed is not doing justice to our esteemed friends, Mr. H. Koudolf, Mr. H. O. Denbach, Mr. C. Gerke and the able attorney, Mr. J. J. McInerney, who is also our friend. There was singing and music in abundance, and it would have been a credit to the liquor and beer interests could some of the fanatical prohibition and anti-saloon league grafters have seen the large assemblage of bar boys gathered there in the Rathskeller of the Moerlbach Brewery. The first speaker was introduced by our able and capable business agent and financial secretary, Emanuel Koveleski.

After calling for order the boys of Local 171 gathered in a group, and Hon. J. J. McInerney was introduced amid great applause. He spoke on the conditions that we were up against at Albany and how the bartenders of today can help the cause by asking their friends, whom they come in contact with, to appeal to their Senators and Representatives to vote against the anti-saloon league and prohibition party, who are trying to put us out of employment.

Mr. McInerney spoke to our boys on the principle of man to man and showed where, if a poor fellow, hungry and down and out, how a bartender would feed him and give him a place to sleep. Would the antis or the prohibitionists do this? No. Go to the United Charities and they will call a policeman and have the man put in jail. Then they would say drink made him a jail-bird, when such is not the case. He also put some of the fellows wise to the fact that our Business Agent Koveleski was not on a pleasure trip every time he went to Albany as they think. Just think of a business agent of the Bartenders, Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Association making a smart man, a preacher of the gospel, admit he was a fool. Bro. Koveleski asked the minister a question at Albany, and Mr. Minister could not answer. Mr. I am god evaded the question, but Koveleski told him to answer the question, and stuck right to the point. And pointing his finger at Rev. So and So, who knows all college education and fancy bull, could not answer, so you can see, brothers, from this alone that Local 171 is always working.

Our next speaker to be introduced by Bro. Koveleski was our loyal friend and staunch admirer, Mr. Henry Koudolf, president of the Moerlbach Brewery. Mr. Koudolf opened his brief talk telling the members of Local 171 how they had all advanced to a position in the world where they can and do prove themselves gentlemen beyond a doubt. He also cited to us our position of trust and the temptation always at hand every day in the year, and how very few of us were dishonest. Our enemies only have fifty-two days in the year that they preach, and as they have trustees to handle all money and count same and keep track of it, Mr. Rev. this or that has very little, if any, temptation before him.

Mr. Koudolf spoke of a get-together movement that is the best we have heard, and that is, to help make the saloon business as clean as any other—a place where we can bring our wife, sweetheart or mother. This was received with applause.

It is a well-known fact that the bartender of today does not want to be serving drinks to any one but good living people and not those of ill repute. There is a great deal of difference in the bartender of today and the one of forty years ago, just the same as any other business.

Mr. Koudolf thanked the boys of Local 171 for the way they turned out and showed their appreciation of Moerlbach hospitality, and assured the members of Local 171 that anything they could do for us would be done at any time or place. And, furthermore, any time we want to use the Rathskeller there was plenty of water to wash the glasses. This concluded Mr. Koudolf's speech.

Bro. President Ed Dintinger called for three cheers for Moerlbach and officers, which was given heartily and appreciated, after which we drank more Moerlbach Banquet Brew Light.

We were pleased to have as our invited guests from Buffalo, N. Y., Edward Swaney of Beck's Brewery, a fine fellow, and one of the boys who came along in company with Eddie Maharg, a rip-roaring prince, a hell of a good fellow of 16 East Eagle street, and who still carries a card in Local 175. Last, but not least, was Bro. Chas. Gurrard, vice-president of Local 175, and you can find him with the same old smile at Smith & Maharg's Cafe, the place where all good fellows meet in Buffalo.

At our last meeting the following officers were nominated for the ensuing term without opposition. Our financial secretary and business agent is elected for two years. Following are the nominees: President, Edw. A. Dintinger; vice-president, John J. Ritz; treasurer, Joseph F. Curtis; recording secretary, Frank Sargent; inspector, Michael J. Murtha; financial secretary and business agent, Emanuel Koveleski; guard, Frank Weiman; three trustees, Fred Fickweiler, Fred Schmidt, Frank Coddington; chaplain, John Hennessy.

Local 171 voted against segregation and we will be represented at the convention.

With kindest greetings to yourself and all the members of our International, I am,

Fraternally yours.

JOHN L. HENNESSY,
Chaplain.

HAZLETON, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A few lines to let you know that we had a splendid meeting on Sunday, February 28; our regular meeting room was packed to the doors. An agreement and wage scale was approved. Organizer Joyce was present at the meeting and made things very interesting, and we thank Brother Joyce very much for his splendid work, but were sorry he could not stay with us for at least another week, as the work laid out for him was impossible to finish in his short stay. An experienced man like Organizer Joyce could put some ginger into our local union, as we have a very hard bunch to handle; they don't care about attending meetings or paying dues, and it is necessary to keep after them all the time. Organizer Joyce made them come clean. We have a few members who did not attend our last meeting and who are back in their dues, but I expect to have them lined up by next meeting. If our members will do as Brother Joyce instructed, much good will result. I wish to thank Organizer Joyce for the good work he accomplished for Local 610.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN E. MILLER,
President Local 610.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The only way I can let sister locals and the International know that Local 815 is still progressing is by communicating with the editor of the Mixer and Server.

Since the cooks and waiters of Salt Lake City have started their campaign for better conditions, it seems as though it has awakened a majority of the working class that have been working under a slumber to follow the methods that Local 815 took in regard to maintaining their rights. Even to the newsboys, they have struck, and the consequences are that they are now organized and are at present affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which means a great help to all organized labor. We are glad to state that, through the Label League, of which the cooks and waiters are practically the foundation, we are making the retail and wholesale merchants of Salt Lake City realize that there is "strength in organized labor," for when we are purchasing goods of any kind we demand the union label.

I am sorry to relate that one of our old comrades, Carl Van Sweden, has followed the path of scabbing, and I ask all secretaries to make a note of his name, as he can not work for the same unfair house all his life, and will some day be looking for a new field to play.

The unfair houses of Morgan's cafe, Grill cafe, Paris cafe and the Castles are beginning to realize that the summer is coming, and that cooks and waiters will not be so plentiful as they were during the winter and less liable to fall by the wayside, as some of them did this winter. Of course there is a certain class of them that will do that winter or summer. By taking bread out of a comrade's mouth they imagine that they have made a point in life, but that is on account of the lack of manhood which none of them possess.

No doubt the locals throughout the country will be glad to hear that Governor Spry has vetoed the prohibition and several other bills which sure would have hurt the craft had they been signed. The following piece of poetry was composed by some of the wet cooks and waiters:

It's a long way to the country,
It's the place for them to go;
It's a long time before Wooten
And his bill to get a show.
Goodbye prohibition,
God bless Governor Spry;
It's a long, long time before the Farmers make Utah dry.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

It's a long way to the country,
 It's a long way to go;
 It's a long way to the country,
 When the hills are white with snow.
 We'll get no prohibition,
 And I'll tell you why,
 For the bill is still with the Governor,
 And his name is Bill Spry.

The Governor having vetoed the bill, you can imagine the overflow of cooks, waiters and bartenders that will come to Salt Lake City from those unfortunate States that had the curse of prohibition laid on top of them through the stump speeches made by some of those good prohibition workers, and for which they fell without taking the matter into consideration, much to their sorrow when it went into effect.

Things are starting to pick up for Local 815, but by this I do not mean to say that times are good, for we still have quite a number of men on the extra list. As soon as the resorts open up we expect to have them all at work, for we have succeeded in signing up the Lagoon, one of the most popular resorts in this section, and a few others. We also expect to sign up Salt Air before they open up for the season, as the management talks very favorable toward us. We are expecting to have a prosperous season.

DON'T GIVE A RAP FOR YOUR ENEMIES.

You can't make a real success without making enemies.

You can't hold a real position without strong opposition.

You won't seem right to any if you don't seem wrong to many.

A useful life can't be entirely peaceful and care-free.

You must do your duty as you see it.

Every earnest man in every generation has paid the price of individuality. You can't dodge.

The greater you are, the greater the penalty of your progress.

The farther you go, the wider your range.

The more you increase your points of contact with which you must reckon, therefore you multiply your battles against misconception, slander, envy and malice.

You can't evade or avoid your allotted destiny.

You can only hold your share of trouble by holding back.

In every sphere men gibe and sneer; even the peace of the ditch-digger is threatened by the unemployed laborer who covets his job.

So long as you aspire others will conspire.

You'll have hostility to face in every place and at every pace.

Go straight to your goal.

So long as your conscience isn't ashamed to acknowledge you as a friend, don't give a rap for your enemies.

Hoping and trusting that all locals will prosper in the future, I beg to remain

Yours fraternally,

PATRICK T. OWENS,
 Rec. and Press Sec. Local 815.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We are in receipt of a letter from Bro. Flore, General President of the International Union, stating that he will be with us in the early part of April. Rest assured that the General President will receive a royal reception from Local 106, as it has been some time since the General President has paid Cleveland a visit. It is anticipated that the visit of Bro. Flore will be to decide the appeal of Bro. Carter, relative to the manner that Local 106 pursued in electing delegates to the International Convention. Bro. Carter's opinion is that the election was illegal. His appeal was taken immediately after the meeting of Local 106, held on Friday, February 12th, 1915; since that date there has been no decision rendered by the General President, so it is surmised that the General President's visit here will be to interview the members and make personal observations regarding the attitude of the members in regards to this matter.

Local 106 is forging ahead in the labor movement so far that a circular was sent to each member impressing upon them the necessity of selling cigars that bear the union label, for by so doing this they not only assist the Cigarmakers' Union, but they also contribute toward building up the labor movement of which our organization is a part.

Every applicant that is initiated into Local 106 is given thorough instructions relative to unionism; they are instructed to purchase only such goods as bear the union label, and also to see that the clerk who waits upon them carries a union card. In so doing they help the labor movement to such an extent that the dividends will fall upon their organization.

All locals that have not as yet elected delegates to the coming convention must exercise care in electing delegates, as it behooves every local to send their most qualified members, for the reason that we have a big fight on hand, and to overcome the opposition we must have capable representatives at this our greatest convention; we must have more solidarity in our ranks if we intend to keep up our International.

From March 1st to the 18th there has been considerable extra work at the Hotel Statler, also the Saturday extras have given the unemployed members a chance to recuperate. It is only a few weeks hence when many of our members will pack up for the summer resorts and that the road houses will take a few more, thus relieving us of the situation in hand at the present time.

I note that there are some very good resolutions to be brought up before the International convention, and also some that would require some deep studying on the part of the delegates to the convention before they should be passed upon. It behooves every delegate to the convention to be well versed on International law, so as to govern themselves when voting upon a resolution or a question. This convention should go down in history as the greatest convention, and that the laws established by this convention should be such that there will be no necessity to change them in the future.

I also note the letter in the "Forum" from Bro. Bookjans, Local 106. Bro. Bookjans in his letter is trying to instruct the press secretaries in their work; he does not believe in extolling the officers of the different locals. In this I disagree with Bro. Bookjans. I believe in giving credit where credit is due. If an officer of a local merits praise I believe that the same should be published in our official Journal, so that the membership at large should know of it. We want members in our organization to forge to the front and show the allied crafts what they are doing. If they do something that requires praise, I believe that that praise should not be denied them, but that the press secretary should note the same in his official letter to the MIXER AND SERVER.

Fraternally yours,

E. J. CARTER,
Press Secretary Local 106.

UTICA, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to let you know that Local 120 is still alive. We had the pleasure on March 9 of having with us for a few hours our General President, Brother Flore, and as some of the local unions here have had one or more of their international officers visit them, you may be sure that Local 120 was glad that our Trades Assembly met on the night Brother Flore was here. Every one here, as a rule, looks to the West for the turn back to good times, and when Brother Flore stated that on his trip in from the West he saw a general resumption of business, you may be sure our daily papers gave same wide publicity. Words such as he spoke, coming from an international president, had a good effect on all the delegates. The only kick Local 120 has is that we are not visited like the other local unions. It puts life into all the members.

Our chaplain, Brother Archer, was instructed some time ago by the Trades Assembly to get rubber heels on his shoes. As he has not complied with the request, we believe he is still looking for a pair wide enough. His address is care Wald Bros., if any brother knows of rubber heels that are well made.

Bro. Pete Morrow is still looking up rubber boots.

The next town to this was getting along with but two union bartenders, but President Liddy and B. A. Roberts took a trip down there one afternoon and came back with the whole bunch (nineteen) corralled.

Bro. Jack Doyle is serving the roast duck and fixens after meetings now, and is giving satisfaction to all.

This town has gone mad over wrestling, and as B. A. Matt Roberts is one of the old time wrestlers, he is a favorite with the crowd as the third man on the mat. "Matt on the mat is O. K.," they all say.

While we have no intention of trying to show others how they should run their locals, we believe that it is our duty to give a suggestion. A large majority of the members of Local 120 are interested in the entire labor movement in this city, and always look for the union label on their bread; hand out nothing but the cigar and tobacco with the blue label; see that all drivers bringing goods to their places have the monthly button of the teamsters, and whenever a building trades man comes to do a job they ask him for his card; they see that the meat comes from a union market, and of course get shaved by a union barber. By doing this and watching for the other fellow's label, card or button, we get them to look for our button.

Hoping all locals are having as good luck as we are, though we have some members idle, I remain

Fraternally yours,
JACK CONWAY,
Press Agent Local 120.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Our bill calling for an amendment to the present one day off law, so as to include hotel and restaurant workers has been reported unfavorably by committee. So we will have to wait another year and hope by that time that all culinary locals in Massachusetts will line up for the bill. If the workers would have lined up one-half as much for the bill as the hotel men lined up against it, a different story could be recorded. However, the support from Locals 80 and 6 was very earnest, and with more time to work on the bill we hope for better results. The State Branch A. F. of L. legislative committee supported our bill, as well as the legislative committee of the Central Labor Union and various heads of other organizations, both labor, fraternal and religious, for which Local 273 expresses thanks.

Yours fraternally,

CHAS. E. SANDS,
Secretary Local 273.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 150 of Syracuse is now stronger than ever, and we are pleased to see the attendance of our meeting larger than ever, and we are still holding them weekly (every Friday afternoon).

Bro. Fred Anderson, our newly elected vice-president, gave us many points on unionism, being well versed on same, also acting on committees throughout this country.

The grill room of the Getman Hotel has met with great success under the personal direction of our two members, Mr. John Pfohl and Mr. Chas. Emmett.

Our business agent has made good collections for this month, some members paying from four to six months in advance. He has also signed up a lease on the rooms we have at a great saving to Local 150.

Mr. Thomas Casey sends his regards to every member of our International Union.

We are looking for the return of our former steward, Mr. James Nulty, who has been at Hot Springs, Ark., for the past month, but who now intends to attend the Exhibition and visit the boys along Denver, Chicago, etc., before his return.

Just a minute—Bro. Barney Quinn, the former business agent of Rochester, N. Y., is calling the boys together for refreshments—.

Back again. It gives me cramps to stand with one foot higher than the other, but we never say no to a fellow like Quinn (Old Barney Quinn).

We wish to invite the union members to drop off at Syracuse and assure them of our most hearty welcome.

Yours fraternally,

JOE BAKER,
Recording Secretary Local 150.

NEWARK, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A few lines to let the members know conditions in and around Newark, N. J.

We are no exception to the rule of no business. We have over eighty members on the extra list, and as business is bad the boys are not doing much. We would advise traveling members to stay away from Newark, but if they do come they should be sure and have citizenship papers, as we are enforcing Section 15.

We have just been relieved of the incubus, local option. The Grant bill, which passed the Senate by a majority of one, was defeated in the Assembly by a vote of 44 to 13, after an all night session, at which a large attendance showed their feelings when the vote was announced.

We desire to call the attention of all crafts interested in the liquor traffic of the necessity to keep on the job, as the Anti-Saloon Leaguers never quit. The only way to combat their slanderous statements to drive us out of business is to form a permanent organization and issue literature to let the public know the true facts, citing statistical figures on crime and immorality and their causes, and stating the figures of crime in wet and dry States. So far the public has had only the side of the Anti-Saloon League; now let us get on the job and give the people our side.

We have elected A. J. Gozzolino delegate the International Convention at San Francisco. No doubt delegates to previous conventions are well acquainted with him. Although he no longer represents us as business agent, he is still active in the labor movement.

In Joseph Kanzian we have a good, hustling business agent, and a man who does not sit on a stool. The members feel assured that all will be treated with impartiality.

We are contemplating the building of a labor temple, and would like to have the co-operation of other local unions of our International. To get them to take stock in this proposition, we will go into detail in a later issue.

Our annual ball took place on March 8, and I take this opportunity to thank all visiting brothers for making it a financial and social success.

With greetings to all officers and members of our International, I remain

Fraternally yours,
M. LAND, Secretary Local 109.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As I predicted in my last letter to the MIXER AND SERVER, all the dry bills introduced in the Missouri legislature were passed by the Representatives in the House, and some of them got as far as the Senate Committee, but every one of them died a natural death in the Senate, none of them coming so far as to a vote.

The Senate was supposedly half and half on the liquor question, that is, half of the members of the Senate were elected from "dry" territories, but the most of these Senators themselves were in favor of legitimate saloons, and in favor of letting the cities regulate the licensed saloons themselves, without interference and dictations of the dry advocates in the rural districts where there are no saloons to regulate, they already being legislated out of business, and consequently the Senate kept it from coming to a vote.

On motion of Senator Carter, the dry leader in the Senate, to advance the Dry Shipment bill ahead of 169 bills on the engrossment calendar, the vote stood 16 for and 16 against, which defeated the move to advance the bill.

On motion to refer to the Committee on Rules, the vote stood 22 for and 10 against. This committee was composed of four wets and one dry, and the bill was never voted out of the committee. The same applied practically to all of the other dry measures, and the result was that no dry legislation was enacted at this session of the legislature.

Some of the bills introduced, if passed by the House, would have worked a hardship on our members and have eliminated a good many places where our members are employed. The most dangerous bills from our standpoint of view were the bills to close every dram shop at 11 o'clock at night and have them remain closed until 6 o'clock the next morning, and the bill to remove all screens, curtains, partitions and stained glass windows, to allow only one entrance, and to do away with all games of chance, pool and billiard tables, musical instruments, etc.

Another bill to prohibit any dram shop within five blocks of a church, religious meeting place, school or educational institution in any incorporated city in the State, and within five miles in unincorporated cities and towns, would practically have driven every saloon in the State of Missouri out of existence, and naturally have put our members out of employment entirely.

One bill provided that no license be granted within 200 feet of any building used exclusively for dwelling purposes without the written consent of the owner or owners.

Another bill provided for local option in precincts of cities having a population of 2,000 or more, and prohibiting the issuing of a license to keep a dram shop within the boundaries of such local option districts where the majority of the voters have remonstrated against a dram shop for the term of four years from the date of filing such remonstrance, and thereafter until a petition of the majority of the qualified voters in such district shall have been signed and filed with the Excise Commissioner or other licensing authority.

A good many of the saloon owners in this city are uneasy on account of the action taken by the new Board of Police Commissioners. Heretofore the licenses could be transferred from one man to another, and from one place to another, but this rule has been declared null and void, and there has only been 361 licenses granted so far by the board, with 250 more to act upon, and the way things look at the present time, probably half of that number will be refused, as the commissioners are laying down such hard rules and regulations that it will be very hard to comply with them in many instances. One proposition is to do away with corner saloons; another is the eliminating of front entrances; another prohibits any display of liquor in show windows; another provides for "first-class" cigar stores in front of every saloon, and still another proposed idea is to do away with all lunch or meals served in connection with saloons and the discontinuing of card and dice games, as well as music, mechanical or otherwise.

We are in hopes that these propositions will not all be carried through, as they are sure to be detrimental to our membership.

With best wishes to the membership of our International, trusting to report next month that it may not all be true, I am

Fraternally yours,
JAMES H. ANDERSON, Local 420.

TRENTON, N. J.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Report local option bill killed by a vote of 43 to 14. Assembly adjourned at 12:45 a. m. March 22.

Wm. KAVANAGH, Local 575.

VANCOUVER, B. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—From the reports submitted weekly to the general office by Local Special Organizer Graham, of this local, you are no doubt acquainted with the fact that he has recently been successful in convincing the management of two of the leading hotels in New Westminster, the Central and Strand, that the possession of a culinary house card would be a profitable adjunct to the cafe end of their business. Although New Westminster, which is only forty-five minutes' trolley ride from Vancouver, is, per capita of its working-class population, one of the best organized cities on the Pacific Coast, the several previous attempts to unionize the culinary workers have been notable for nothing except their failure to produce results. And the reason for this must be attributed to the misguided enthusiasm of those who were responsible for the bringing into being of at least two of the culinary locals which were organized in New Westminster and which succumbed while still in their infancy. That there could hardly be any other result will be evident when I mention that one of the two locals to which I have reference was composed of about 98 per cent girls, not one of whom had had any previous connection with a union of any kind: few, if any, had the least conception of even the elementary principles of trades unionism, and certainly none of whom had the remotest idea of how the business of a local union should be conducted. When you have added to this the fact that very few of the girls manifested anything more than the mildest enthusiasm for the cause, it will be apparent that this was hardly the best timber whereof to construct a successful local union. Under those circumstances we of Local 28 deemed it wise, and in the best interests of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance, to add to our own activities the organizing of the culinary workers of New Westminster, a course of action which should have been adopted on previous occasions and which should prove profitable and beneficial to both parties on this occasion until conditions and the time arrives when we can be reasonably sure that the granting of a separate charter in that city would bear fruit in the shape of a permanent local.

One of the most satisfactory, sensible and progressive decisions ever arrived at by the members of organized labor in this Province is contained in the subjoined resolution submitted recently to the parliamentary committee of the Vancouver Trades and Labor Council and adopted unanimously by that body:

"That this committee recommends to the Trades and Labor Council that a committee of three be appointed to circulate the unions and ask them to place in nomination members of their organizations to become candidates for submission to a referendum election of the unions to be held at a date to be fixed later, six to be the maximum number that any one union can nominate."

It is intended that when these candidates are nominated, the council shall call a series of mass-meetings, which will be addressed by them, so that the membership can decide which, in their opinion, are the most suitable men to be candidates at the forthcoming Parliamentary election. The result of this plan will be, that at the final referendum, all but six will be eliminated, and they will be the official ticket of the Trades and Labor Council. I should mention that the city of Vancouver returns six members to Parliament, so that we will have a nominee in each riding of the city. The necessity for absolutely independent action was particularly emphasized, and it was agreed that all other political parties should be strenuously opposed in following out this policy. The central labor bodies of the cities of New Westminster, Victoria and Prince Rupert have also fallen in line and will, in conjunction with Vancouver, make a strong effort to elect to the seats of the mighty, men of their own class and from their own station in life. In the Province of British Columbia we have reached a point in the economic and industrial struggle where we feel that it becomes simply bovine stupidity to continue electing as our Parliamentary Representatives capitalists, employers of labor and gentlemen of leisure. We have continued to vote that way for a good many years now, and have next to nothing in the way of working-class legislation to show for it. We have, as it were, cast our electoral bread upon the political waters, and it has returned to us after many days in the shape of broken promises, indifference and disappointment, until, if "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick," we are indeed sick unto death.

Continual pleading with the government for much needed working-class legislation such as a satisfactory workmen's compensation act, a mothers' pension scheme, etc., to say nothing of many urgently necessary reforms for the amelioration and the protection of the workers in our own and allied crafts having failed to produce results, we feel that, notwithstanding the power for good which industrial organization has proved to be, our one sure hope of economic and industrial salvation lies in political effort. The measure of our success in this, as in all other working-class propaganda, will be the measure of the support accorded the prospective candidates by the workers on voting day.

The news of the closing down of the old Couver cafe, 40 Hastings street, West, a victim of the general business depression prevailing at this time, will be read with regret by many former members of Local 28. The passing of the "Couver" marks the end of the long and harmonious relations which existed between the proprietor and this local ever since the cafe opened, and removes from our list of union houses one of the all too few strongholds of Local 28.

In the matter of our agitation for white labor in hotels, a deputation, consisting of Sister Blanche Cosgrove, Business Agent A. Graham, Recording Secretary T. G. Grombie, Bro. W. G. Johnston, Bro. Ed. Cosgrove, the writer, and Miss Helen Gutteridge, treasurer of the Trades and Labor Council, representing the Women's Employment League, waited upon the Board of License Commissioners at their meeting a few days ago and submitted the information asked for at the previous meeting regarding the number of idle culinary workers in the city. After considerable discussion the matter was laid over for another month, this time to enable the hotel proprietors to present their case as against white labor, which, as long as a whole Chinese crew can be had for the wages of a white chef, they most certainly will do, and do strenuously. Just why the hotel men persist in this suicidal policy, well knowing that their Asiatic culinary workers have no vote and, therefore, can not be of any assistance to them should prohibition ever strike this city and Province, as it most assuredly will do, and that in the not far distant future, is something which is too utterly incomprehensible for my limited intelligence to grasp.

Thanking you in anticipation, Mr. Editor, and with best wishes to yourself and the general membership, I am

Fraternally yours,
JOHN CUMMING.
Vice-President Local 28.

AUBURN, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The attached clipping taken from the Auburn Citizen, March 20, 1915, expresses the view of at least one justice of the peace in New York State.

This town of Genoa is a small burg situated about twenty miles south of Auburn on a branch of the Lehigh Valley R. R., and I know from experience that during its period of prohibition you couldn't buy a "fossil" sandwich; however, since license has been in force, you can get any kind wanted, and what's more, the town is on the map.

No Use for Jail with License in Genoa.

"When the temperance people are talking about prohibition doing away with jails in a community, they want to remember that sometimes the shoe is on the other foot," says Justice of the Peace R. B. Sharpwell of Genoa, who was in this city yesterday.

"Genoa has a jail," continued the justice, "which was erected some 25 years ago. For a few years, during which time Genoa was dry the majority of the time, the jail was used frequently, but during the past 15 years, during which time license has predominated in the town, the jail has been and is at present used for a hen-house. It makes a good one, too."

Fraternally yours,
J. G. BERGIN, Secretary Local 230.

ENSLEY, ALA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It is with deepest sorrow that we report another missing from the ranks, a true and tried trooper of the old B. I. L. of A. In the death of Bro. W. F. Robinson, Local 248 has lost a man that naught but good can be said of. Brother Robinson died Sunday, February 7th, after a lingering illness and was buried with all the honors we could bestow, on Wednesday, February 10th, in Elmwood Cemetery. The funeral was attended in large numbers by members of Local 248. A glowing tribute was paid the memory of the deceased by Brother DeSouchet of Local 248. He spoke of the departed brother's life, his beautiful virtues and his loyalty to his order and his untiring efforts in advancing the interest of the cause. He said no better man ever wore the little blue button, and no man ever wore it with more honor.

Brother Robinson was secretary and treasurer of Local 248 for over twelve years, and through his good work Local 248 has been greatly improved each year of his office. At all times he had the thought of his work in mind and was ever ready to do all that could be asked to aid or build up our cause. Brother Robinson was 63 years of age and leaves a sorrowing wife and six children to mourn his loss. Local 248 feels the loss and extends a hand of sympathy to that noble wife and children.

Fraternally yours,
CHARLES KUHN.

HARRISBURGERS UNGENEROUS.

Dr. Henry W. Stough is not greatly impressed with the generosity of Harrisburg, Pa., citizens. He only picked up $25,000 during a seven weeks' revival in that city. He told an Altoona, Pa. audience that the Harrisburgers were "stuck up," and thought they were "some pumpkins." Between the Stough aggregation and the Billy Sunday three-ring cyclone, the folks of the old Keystone State are in for a fine financial trimming. The State Anti-Saloon League will have some task to follow these two and get the stray unattached coin, but they usually succeed, no matter how difficult it may seem.

MASSACHUSETTS SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE MAY ISSUE $1,000 POLICIES.

On March second Governor Walsh signed a bill permitting the Savings Insurance Banks in Massachusetts to issue life insurance policies for one thousand dollars.

These banks have hitherto been limited by law to policies not exceeding $500. As there are four banks engaged in the life insurance business the largest mount of insurance which any individual could secure has been $2,000, or $500 in each bank. Now, this amount has been doubled, and a total insurance of $4,000 may be applied for by any resident of Massachusetts.

A one thousand dollar policy is a popular form of insurance, and it is possible now for persons to take out this amount of insurance by making a single application to any one of the savings insurance banks. This is a distinct advantage, saving time and trouble for the applicant, and lessening the amount of work at the banks.

The four banks with insurance departments are Whitman Savings Bank, Whitman; People's Savings Bank, Brockton; Berkshire County Savings Bank, Pittsfield; City Savings Bank of Pittsfield, and these banks are issuing various forms of life insurance, such as straight life, twenty payment life and twenty year endowment policies.

SPEND YOUR MONEY WITH VOTERS.

"Chuck the Chink" and patronize sure-enough American labor, should be the shibboleth of every boy and girl in our organization who are forced to send their soiled garments to laundries. It has always been a deep mystery to us why any American should want to patronize oriental labor, for the fact of the matter is that, to the best of our knowledge the laundries where such labor is employed charge exactly as much for the inferior service rendered as the places which employ skilled American labor. And what has been offered in the foregoing is just as emphatic in the matter of patronizing dumps where oriental labor is employed to "cook up" junk which they label "Chop Soy" and other supposed-to-be oriental titles. "Chuck the whole bunch" and patronize your own kind of folks.

WHAT IS SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE, ETC.

Reform has struck deep in a western town, according to a contemporary. A stranger came into the burg and found that a church was being moved bodily from the site where it had long rested. Naturally he asked the first passer-by, "What are they moving the church for?"

"Well, stranger, I'm mayor of these here diggins, and I'm fer law enforcement. We've got an ordinance that says no saloon shall be nearer than 300 feet to a church. I give 'em three days to move the church." Bakersfield Californian.

Come Clean—Show Us

Our International Union began laying its foundation on the greatest possible asset of any individual—CHARACTER.

Its next step was to seek as members those workers whose experience in the catering industry warranted the conclusion that they were classy workingmen and possessed real SKILL.

Then followed the logical and sensible step, to combine character and skill with CITIZENSHIP, thus making a trinity which may be matched in the ordinary sense of the word, but never beat.

From a very small beginning, and with those three most necessary essentials ever in mind, our International Union has builded better and greater than its founders ever imagined could be produced.

Today our International Union spreads its protecting and fraternal wings from one end of the North American continent to the other; it has brought to the wandering catering industry craftsmen and craftswomen solace and succor when they needed it most, meanwhile giving to the home guards the strength and encouragement which they lacked under unorganized conditions.

We have boasted of the personnel and ability of our membership, we have advised the employers that by giving preference to our men and women they were in reality advancing their own interests; and we meant every word of that declaration. For years and years we have set before the employers the claim that membership in our International Union was substantially the highest recommendation which they could ask or secure from catering industry employes; that we accepted applicants for investigation, and that no person could become a member of any of our affiliated locals and claim legal membership who had not passed an examination for the three essentials mentioned above. We laid claim and insist on it all of the time, that the trinity CHARACTER, SKILL AND CITIZENSHIP meant the best of the workers engaged at the catering industry, and those possessing those three necessary essentials are what constitute our general membership today.

We make no pretense at denial that occasionally the unskilled "rough neck" managed to secure entrance to our local unions when the door was left temporarily unguarded, and we make no denial of the fact that such undesirables have caused us and those who employ our membership untold worry and annoyance; but we are firm believers in the old proverb: "Plant the crab tree where you will, it will never bear pippins." Therefore these unskilled "rough necks" quickly discover that they are in company which exacts greater returns than their concept of craftsmen ever comprehended; they are forced to do one thing or the other:

Improve in two of the essentials noted, be entitled and obtain the third, or make their presence felt by their absence.

There is no room inside of our International Union for the "stand still, shiftless incompetents;" our general motto is: "Improve in all things by study and practise."

In establishing rules and regulations for our guidance, we have never sought to create obstacles over which the capable worker of other lands could not climb; nor yet created stringent impediment for those engaged in the catering industry of America. Our liberality is unquestioned, but we are jealous of our calling, and to use an expression fully understood and appreciated—Applicants must SHOW US. Those who seek membership need have no fears of rejection if they can COME CLEAN as workers, possess character and are willing to become citizens of the country under whose flag they seek remuneration for services rendered as catering industry employes.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in Hotels, Clubs, Cafes, Buffets, or Bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employes generally.

In the last eight or ten months readers of current newspapers, magazines and publications devoted to offering news articles and comment on topics of every-day occurrence have, probably, read and absorbed more information about governmental functions and the manner and means which governments employ to protect their possessions, subjects and citizens than in a similar number of years heretofore. In perusing articles relative to the war one is confronted with description of the extraordinary efforts which governments pursue to prevent invasion and confiscation. Every imaginable means are employed to keep intact the units, and, on the other hand, equal and quite as strenuous effort is being made by the "enemy" to gain a foothold and to hold the territory so invaded. It will be noted that no exceptions are taken when a call to arms is made; there may be sections under a government far removed from the seat of conflict, yet they are required to furnish their quota of fighting men and money in order to protect the whole; no section, so far as we are acquainted with, has taken the position that the trouble was not of their making, therefore they would refuse to participate. Fact is, that if any province, department, or whatever the section equivalent to states or provinces in America may be called in the countries at war, were to "kick over the traces" and refuse to get into the scrap, such act would be called treason, and would, probably, be followed by measures sufficiently drastic to convert the rebellious ones to the understanding that they had "bitten off more than they could chew."

Supposing, for sake of illustration, that the United States were to be drawn into this world war, and one of the States of the Union were to attempt to secede or to refuse to act in concert with the wishes of the Government; that would, we imagine, come under the charge of treason, as outlined in Section 3 of Article III of the U. S. Constitution, and forthwith the President would take such steps as to place the rebellious State under martial law, displacing all State, county and municipal officials, and exercising police powers which would compel submission; in substance, placing the State under arrest and keeping it in such position as long as was deemed necessary. Step across the boundary line into British North America, and suppose that one of the provinces of Canada were to assume that it had the right to refuse payment of taxes or decline to comply with the laws as adopted and which govern all provinces; it would be in rebellion against the government, and practically similar steps would be taken as outlined for States.

Each political unit or section under any government, willingly or otherwise, complies with the laws adopted for their guidance. It would be suicidal for any State, province or political unit to assume independence unless it was prepared to secure such by whatever means might become necessary. New York State is the most powerful, or we will assume that it is, of all of the States of the Union. If its citizens or a portion of them governing the affairs of that State were to declare that on and after January 1, 1916, they would cease allegiance to the United States of America and would establish themselves as an independent country and with their own government, that action or declaration would be accepted as intention to secede.

New York would find itself in a state of rebellion; it would become necessary for that State to establish an army and navy in order to prevent invasion of the authorities of the United States, who would endeavor to, as indicated in a previous paragraph, take possession of the governmental positions, and oust and arrest, if need be, such officers as refused to vacate. The only thing which would prevent such steps being taken would be opposition on the part of whatever forces New York State could muster, and the moment they put up any resistance or fired a shot that moment they declared war on existing government and would have to suffer the consequences.

There is no such thing under the United States Government as surrendering a State charter and resigning from the Union; once a member of that Union, always a member.

If any number of citizens from any number of States were to meet in conclave and agree that they proposed to construct inside the boundaries of the United States another government, need we advise our readers what would happen? Suppose that a similar effort were made in Canada, how quickly the forces of established government would act can best be appreciated by recalling the history of one effort along that line.

The governments of Canada and the United States have full jurisdiction—to use a trade-union expression—over their respective countries. They make no pretense at permitting questioning their authority, nor would they tolerate for an instant any invasion of what they call their rights. Can the reader imagine what would happen to any body of the citizens of either country who would attend the Congress or Parliament with petitions seeking for a division of its citizens—all persons of agricultural pursuits and training—asking that they be permitted to establish a government of and for themselves, to segregate from the other classes of citizens and be empowered to conduct their affairs independently?

Such a request would be looked upon as the craziest of crazy ideas, and, to use a street expression, they would be told where to head in or get off. Yet, we are, as an International Union, confronted with an aggregation who have been agitating a division quite as injurious and far-reaching in its purpose to the future welfare of the catering industry as attempted secession on the part of province or State. Our International Union assumed, and with the legal consent of the recognized power of the American labor movement, full jurisdiction over the catering industry employees of the North American continent; the certificates of affiliation issued to our International Union by the American Federation of Labor guarantees to us the support of that organization in our field of endeavor; it precludes the distant possibility of that organization sanctioning any curtailment of our activities; it sanctions by its laws the methods we have employed to enlist the unorganized of our allied crafts; and last, but by no means least, the unquestioned and seemingly unalterable policy of the grantor of our charter as an International Union is constructive consolidation—the absolute and positive opposite of segregation and the enemy of secession.

There is, therefore, about as much chance to bring about legal segregation of our allied crafts at the coming or any subsequent convention held under the auspices of our International Union as there is for one of the States of the Union or a province of Canada seceding and successfully establishing a government of their own.

That imposing and impressing fact should not, however, be taken as an intimation that the presence of your delegate to the coming convention is unnecessary. Your organization may withstand inside warfare, it may succeed in maintaining its present status, but the very thwarting of the plans of secessionists will prompt them to attempt engrafting impossible legislation wherewith to further handicap your progress and to harass and annoy those whom your delegates may elect to executive positions. Hence, the absolute need, aye, the imperative necessity to have your ablest representatives right on the job to prevent loading down your book of laws with provisions intended to weaken and ultimately destroy.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Labor organizations from their very inception have, probably, carried more than their share of the troubles of their membership than any other form of organized effort. The average fraternal and benevolent organization may have what they, undoubtedly, regard as more than sufficient annoyances and troubles to satisfy even those who thrive on troubles, but they quickly amend their views after giving labor organizations a more than casual scrutiny or investigation. The history of fraternalism offers an occasional example of acute differences, but, in the main, few of the old and well-established fraternal organizations have been able to avoid all semblance to the cancer which appears to be labor organizations' terrible handicap—political revolutionists seeking to engraft their governmental cure-all on the constitution and laws of labor unions; and should they fail in the accomplishment, to utilize every manœuvre and employ every vicious and unmanly scheme to obliterate the organization, or to so emasculate it that it would, probably, be better had it been destroyed.

Members of our International Union are, probably, in a better position than the members of any organized workers connected with the American Federation of Labor, to hear and read of occurrences in the labor movement of America. A little reflection will bring that very important fact home with increased force, for the majority of our allied crafts seldom pass a day, much less an hour, during employment without being willing or unwilling listeners to conversation which directly or indirectly concerns the question of wages, hours, trade conditions, employment or government. Aside from that, meeting our co-workers in the catering industry at our local union headquarters, meeting other workers interested in the labor movement at the general trade-union meeting halls, rest and clubrooms, thus adding to our opportunities of securing information and engaging in friendly discussion on topics which concern trade conditions in our own as well as in other lines of endeavor. Therefore, it is with considerable security that the writer avers that few incidents transpire in the labor movement of America but what the majority of our members are fairly well acquainted with and will appreciate to its fullest value the declaration that there is not in all America today any legal, bona fide labor organization which can lay claim to having reaped any measure, great or small, of success on account of its acceptance and putting into practice the program of the "political revolutionists." Nor will we be able to discover, after diligent search and inquiry, any great number of these "political propagandists" unselfishly working with trade-union men and women to overcome the innumerable obstacles which lie in the path of progress. They, seemingly, prefer to construct additional obstacles, to harass and annoy the men and women who are endeavoring to win a fair measure of achievement, to make forward progress, even if that headway may seem unnecessarily slow. The careful observer has, no doubt, observed the "factional differences" which prevail among the "political propagandists"; he has, probably, wondered at the degree of viciousness which they express toward "groups" differing with them; and still further wonders at the canny degree of unanimity which they display when trying to destroy those who are not of their "political trend and belief."

These "political revolutionists," no matter under what banner or brand they may be known, have one thing in common and that they put into practice with a vengeance rather surprising to the superficial observer.

The records of their efforts have been presented from time to time by the big men of the American labor movement; their propaganda has been examined with the careful skill of real investigators, and the unqualified decree rendered that they were not only invading a movement for selfish purposes, but that the movement would ultimately suffer disaster unless the "political revolutionists" were deprived of membership or their claws clipped by such legislation that would forever prevent them from abusing the privileges of membership.

Very few of the "carmine brigade" were born and raised on American soil; they come to this continent with ideas absorbed under governments wholly different from those which prevail here; they assume highly intolerant attitudes, and nothing is good which has been produced without them or their fellow rainbow chasers. They quickly realize that they are impotent to transplant their "propaganda" in lodges of fraternal organizations, and they turn to the one movement which offers them opportunities to keep in practice their dissenting tongues. Few of the International Unions of the present day but what have had or are now having their troubles with the "carmine brigade," and no organization which has felt their influence but what has suffered for its experience. In recent years these "political revolutionists" succeeded in stifling the growth of at least three International Unions; they managed by their persistent peddling of half-truths to create discord among the members; they succeeded in shaking the confidence of the rank and file of the organizations referred to in the integrity and sincerity of their chosen executives, and finally created division which was equivalent to extermination.

In looking back and reviewing these cases one is compelled to admit that there was a remarkable similarity in method and maneuvering on the part of the "carmine brigades" which prompts the conclusion that all of the campaigns were inspired for one purpose and by one set of interested individuals. For several months we have been trying to direct the attention of our membership to the growing influence of these "political propagandists"; there is little need of hiding the fact that they have grown arrogant with power supplied them by the thoughtless men and women of our organization; unions have swallowed their "first pill" in the shape of "segregation resolutions," and in doing so, probably, imagined they were tired of the seeming conflict within the ranks and between the crafts which constitute our International Union. These "carmine expounders," following out the examples set by their "comrades" in other Internationals, generously sprinkle their "bait" with sugar, which covers a multitude of unseen things and reasons; they early saw the efforts of selfishly-imbued men to grab everything in sight, and they calculated that by creating the impression that putting these selfish fellows on the back they were concerned in nothing but the advantage of the grabbers; they easily won over the thoughtless who swallowed the bait and that other aggregation whose cupidity was stronger than their feeling of brotherhood, who, no doubt, saw in a segregated trade union immense opportunities for seeking leadership and obtaining prestige which through their woeful lack of gumption had been denied them heretofore. All the "tricks of the carmines" were put in operation, not even excepting the circulation of contemptible falsehood which had neither top, sides or bottom to stand on, yet circulated in the hope that those who were accused would be forced to devote valuable time in running down and exposing the rumors as the creation of enemies of our organization. Not being satisfied with carrying on a campaign such as had been used to the injury of other International Unions, they have gone to the very limit of their zeal to round up sufficient strength by sending to other unions members of the "carmine brigade," and urging them to use all means legitimate, and otherwise, to secure credentials as delegates to our coming convention; that they may be measurably successful is a foregone conclusion, for their appeal has been tinted with promises for the future.

These "political propagandists" have shown remarkable unity; they are not many in numbers, but have wisely drawn from the Anti-Saloon League one of its biggest assets—to work under cover and claim everything.

Constitutional obstacles have been removed by their plausible system which obliterated fundamental law with a few scratches of the pen; and, according to their spokesmen, there is "a world to gain and nothing to lose but the chains" which bind our allied crafts to the present form of International Union. They are strangely silent about the future, excepting to offer promises which they know full well are impossible of accomplishment without funds—and plenty of such. They look with greedy eyes on the splendid financial monument of our International Union, which guarantees to each and every member equal rights as stockholders; they remain dumb on the interrogations propounded relative to the distribution of the general funds accumulated for specific purposes, for they are cognizant of the fact that if the membership only knew what they had in mind it would speedily disclaim approval of their plans.

They make no mention of money; they wish to lull their followers into a sereness and slumber from which they must not wake; for if an inquiry were to be made of them a response would be imperative, for silence on such an important matter would speak louder than words, and any response which they could offer would not solve the difficult problem and would emphasize the shallowness of their plans.

The "political revolutionists"—the "carmine brigade"—have their feet clamped down hard on the soft pedal when finances are mentioned. They are not anxious to be asked, "What will become of the immense funds of our International Union?" They want you and all who read or listen to their propaganda to "forget the money," to overlook the more than 60,000 obligations which the Hotel and Restaurant Employers' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America have legally made and which can be fully enforced. They want you to forget that you helped to create that magnificent fund at headquarters; that it required years to establish a record for meeting obligations as they were presented; that our International Union paid out of its funds in excess of THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS to the bereaved mothers, wives or families of deceased members. All of this you and your associate members MAY forget. BUT WILL YOU?

They are desirous that you shall register approval of division. They care not what may transpire afterwards, for the oft-repeated experience of the desolate home, the bereaved widow and orphaned children finds no sympathetic consideration at their hands. What care they for the future?

They are unconcerned about the outcome; all that they seek is a wreck; and they will never feel satisfied until that condition has been brought about. You and your associate members have worked ceaselessly to overcome many immense obstacles in the last fifteen years; you have succeeded in proving to the men and women of the labor movement that you are entitled to their serious consideration; your persistency has been rewarded by their bestowal of sincere esteem; you are a recognized factor in the labor movement of America; you and your organization stand on equal terms with all other trade unions; a position which your predecessors did not enjoy, for they had not maintained organization long enough to convert their opponents in the labor movement. The "political revolutionists" know all of these facts, yet they seek to induce you to swallow their "propaganda," and by so doing wilfully discard all which you have labored to secure.

The "carmine brigade" have followed closely the plans and program which has been used in other International Unions to weaken and emasculate; their campaign, based on dissent, has been vigorously conducted; there are no achievements which you have to your credit which they regard as wholesome; it matters little to them who may be selected to execute the laws and administer the affairs of our International Union—they will be found teaching and practicing disloyalty. The officer with courage to oppose them is forthwith a marked man; they will endeavor to discredit and defeat him; and in their efforts to bring that about they will imitate the Prince of Evil by taking their "tool" to the mount and promise him world power, if he will agree to do their bidding.

As intimated in the opening of this article, our members are so placed that they enjoy privileges which few workers of other trades or callings even dream of; they have time to read, discuss and determine what course is best for their common good. They have had several examples of "political revolutionists" to study from; they can not avoid the knowledge that every organization which has been afflicted with the "carmine brigade" suffered injuries from which none of them have recovered. These so-called segregationists have tried to hide their real purpose—to the bartender they appeal to presumed prejudice, and they use a similar sugar-coated destroyer with the culinary worker. They have conveyed the impression that there exists unceasing conflict between the allied crafts of our International Union, feeling secure in the knowledge that sufficient thoughtless members will accept their findings as gospel truth. If there be conflict anywhere, it must be in their own town; and if there, it has been created by the "carmine brigade"; and for no other purpose than to destroy an organization which their fellow "political revolutionists" in the American Federation of Labor have been unable to direct or control.

Our International Union has made a splendid record; this despite these "political revolutionists" and their methods. It has succeeded beyond the hopes of its founders; it has outdistanced and organized more of our allied crafts than any organization in the history of the world; it has accomplished wonders in its brief existence; but it admits its impotency in being able to "inject" manhood into those who would tear down a structure at the bidding of any "political revolutionists" or to flatter the puny minds of those who have unsatisfied longings for leadership.

This is the "open season" for thinking; in a few months it will be too late to register disapproval. Don't wait until your hands are tied and your funds dissipated. It is your time to act if you wish to protect the contract between your union and our International Union. Need more be said?

THE DOER OF THINGS.

He who has no enemies is the man who is no good to himself or anyone else. He agrees with everybody else. He agrees with everybody and everything. If you ask his opinion on a subject he finds out your view on it and then agrees with you. He talks but never says anything; consequently, none have a chance to take exception to what he says. He is a do-nothing and a say-nothing. His idea of life is just simply to eat, breathe and sleep, until his anatomical machinery wears out, and then die. The man who has enemies is the man who does things; who makes things happen; who brings to pass; a big cog in the wheel of progress. He has plans and strives to put them into execution. If he meets with opposition and obstacles, so much the better; the greater the obstacles the greater become his efforts and determination to succeed. He thinks things and has the nerve and manhood to express his thoughts, not stopping to inquire whom it does or does not suit.—British Columbia Federationist.

WHAT THE CHURCH MAY LEARN FROM THE SALOON.

By Frank Charles Laubach in The Survey.

Unquestionably the saloon has succeeded. In New York City alone over one million dollars a day are spent for drink. That is enough money to buy for twenty million people a 5-cent beer, with a free lunch thrown in. It would purchase 25 census worth of liquor for every man and woman in the city. Between one and two million men spend a part of every day in saloons. Thirteen thousand bars are supported by this vast army.

Is thirst alone what all those men are seeking to satisfy?

If it were, there would not be a saloon in the city. Every grocer would sell liquor. Men would order their drinks by telephone, and drink them at home.

The saloon exists because liquor is not all men want. Three-fourths of the saloon's patrons are impelled by one of the finest cravings of the soul, the craving for human fellowship.

This demand can not and ought not to be repressed. It is the most wholesome thing in the world. The saloon, or something which will afford a comradeship as free and democratic, is becoming more indispensable every day. Because this is true, all efforts to destroy the saloon by denunciation have failed, and will continue to fail.

It is enlightening to compare the saloon and a "substitute." The majority of church houses have steps leading up to the door—the saloon avoids a door-step. The "substitute" is seldom conspicuous, and often has a little sign, no modestly unobtrusive that one may pass it twice, and then ask a policeman where it is. If he knows, you are fortunate. The saloon dazzles with lights and glistens with advertisements of liquor. The policeman knows where it is. The door of the "substitute" is locked, and you wait in the cold until someone with three other jobs lets you in, looks you over to determine whether you have come to beg or donate, and asks your business. The saloon has a push-door; touch it, you are inside, and nobody asks your business. Ring the bell at the door of most churches on Monday morning, and you will wait until Wednesday night for an answer. The saloon is open every hour the law will allow, to say the least.

A rich man may take his car to his private club or entertainment at home. The poor man has hardly room in his flat for his family, and he can not afford to be a member of any private club. He goes to the public club—the saloon. Here he finds other men who understand him, because they are in the same position, just as glad as he to get away from the over-crowded home and a nerve-racked wife, and just as glad to forget their troubles over a social glass. In a church he would feel out of place with his threadbare and greasy clothes. Here he is dressed like the other men. He treats his friends, talks with a glibness that surprises even himself, hears the news, and goes home feeling warm and oblivious to the hard facts of reality.

Eleven saloons out of twelve furnish tables and chairs, located either in a rear room or in attractive alcoves. These are much used for card games. They are more used for chats over the glasses. About these tables and over the bars the ruling political opinions of our large cities are being created and disseminated. The politics of large municipalities are as good as their sources, no better, no worse.

Daily there pours into every large city a stream of horsemen, cattlemen, lumbermen, farm hands, millmen, sailors, laborers of every variety who have a few hours off and are looking for diversion. It is too cold to walk the streets; they do not appreciate art; they are unacquainted with the city; they are not well dressed. Where shall they go?

The brightest light and the most convenient place they see is always a saloon. There the stranger need only buy a drink or a cigar, and he may talk for an hour about the wonders of the city, its crime, its shows, its wealth, its secrets. Thousands of visitors go to the saloon, are driven to it, because they know of no other place which will welcome them.

Every saloon has a toilet. The traveling man finds the ubiquitous saloon indispensable for washing, having his shoes blacked, consulting a directory or time table, asking some necessary question about the community, getting a $20-bill changed—who has not found that the saloon-keeper is the only man willing to take large bills? You may preach the abolition of the saloon to your heart's content, but when in certain parts of the city, miles from home, you may find the saloon the only friend you have.

What would that vast army of draymen, delivery men, cab drivers, chauffeurs and messengers do if they could not go to the saloon and thaw out their numbed fingers, or inquire an address, the best road to travel, or the nearest repair shop?

In a word, the saloon is the poor man's club. To him it seems the purest democracy in America. It is his society. To destroy it would leave him without social standing, the most precious thing in life, even to a tramp.

The poor man does not need to be told of the evils of alcoholism. They are before his eyes every day. But to close the saloon, the sine-qua-non of his social life, seems a more intolerable evil. The poor man holds the majority vote. Never can liquor be abolished until we give ample guarantee that the integrity of the most precious thing in the laborer's life will be preserved.

The moment other means are provided for satisfying the universal instincts for social life and recreation, so that the millions of men who now rely upon the saloon may satisfy their social impulses without buying liquor, that moment the backbone of the saloon's power will be broken, and not until then.

OH YOU CALIFORNIA.

From the Coast Seamen's Journal of April 14, 1915, we clip the following interesting item:

Statistics gathered by the California State Recreational Committee show there are more saloons in California than all other amusement places combined, including dances, billiard and pool halls, mountain resorts and skating rinks. There are some 4,500 licensed saloons. San Francisco has 1,899 saloons, more by two to one than theaters, parks, cafes, cabarets, bowling alleys and thirty-four other forms of amusement. Los Angeles is credited with 218 saloons and 298 poolrooms and 143 motion picture houses. Alameda County supports 535 saloons, 103 dance halls, 101 soft drink dance halls, 114 billiard and pool halls.

All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

For the Consideration of the Eighteenth General Convention, To Be Held At San Francisco, Cal., U. S. A., the Week of June 14, 1915.

This is the third and final presentation of the following proposals as provided for by our laws:

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 15, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 593 submits the following amendments for the consideration of the next general convention.

Fraternally submitted,

THOS. P. Woods,
Secretary Local 593.

To strike out Section 18 and insert a new Section to read as follows:

Section 18. A member suspended for non-payment of dues may be re-admitted to any local of his craft upon the payment of the reinstatement fee of the local under whose jurisdiction he may be working.

Provided that all fines or assessments have been paid to the local by which he was suspended.

The local that suspends him to be notified at the time when application was made for re-admission.

Amend Section 22, Paragraph "A" by striking out the words "suspended or" after the word "member," and the words "suspended or" after the word "was."

Amended paragraph to read as follows:

Section 22, Paragraph "A." Any member expelled from any local is ineligible to membership in any other local of this International, except by consent of the local by which he was expelled.

Amend Section 23 by striking out the words "suspended or" after the word "admitting."

Amended section to read as follows:

Section 23. The names of all suspended or expelled members must be reported to the General Secretary; locals admitting expelled members must, on being notified thereof, suspend such members until full investigation has been made or stand suspended by the International Union.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., January 20, 1915.
Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, International Secretary-Treasurer, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In submitting a proposition to strike out Section 18 of the International Constitution, and also to change Sections 22 and 23, I have in mind the necessity of having all three sections read alike, so as to conform to each other.

I would like also to give my views of these necessary changes in order that the general membership may thoroughly understand what the intent of these proposals really are.

For example, if a member of Local 593, for instance, working in Minneapolis was suspended for non-payment of dues, left that city and went to Chicago and found work or saw the chance of getting a job, went to Local 35, paid the reinstatement fee of Local 35, he would have the same privileges as if the reinstatement fee were sent to Local 593.

The rule would work both ways but the home local would have the advantage, as under the present by-laws a member works the balance of the month before the home local derives any benefit, and in some cases these benefits have been won only after a long, hard fight.

It should be an understood thing that under the present by-laws any local has the privilege to have their reinstatement fee conform to these new proposals, or, if necessary, have a special fee for members coming into the local under this head, provided that it is in accord with Section 62 of the International by-laws.

I have found, after thirteen years' experiment, that secretaries as a rule find it easier and more convenient to collect a reinstatement fee for the home local than to collect and send it to another local; also that the majority of suspended members take the same point of view, particularly in regard to men employed in first-class hotels in cities where they are not thoroughly organized. The change in these sections would be equally beneficial to all, as I think it would add an incentive to locals to get out and rustle up all old members, thereby deriving the benefit instead of sending it to another local. As it is necessary to write for a reinstatement price on all suspended members from other locals, time is lost, but all these objections would be overcome if these proposals meet with the approval of the next general convention . Here I pause to ask why a local should have a larger reinstatement fee for persons outside their jurisdiction? Probably because it is thought to be much easier for another secretary to collect it.

Trusting that the new propositions will meet the approval of the members, I beg to remain,

Fraternally yours,

THOS. P. Woods,
Secretary Local 593.

CLEVELAND, O., February 5, 1915.

Be it resolved by this convention of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of A., that we add to our International Constitution a new section, to be known as Section 14, and to read as follows:

"Members of this International having been in continuous good standing for at least twenty-five years shall thereafter be exempt from further payment of dues and assessments without losing any right or privilege of active membership, even though they should adopt a vocation not covered by the charter of this International."

Respectfully submitted by Local 106.

President.

Secretary.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 11, 1915.

Jere L. Sullivan, Gen'l Secretary:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Please find enclosed resolutions adopted by this local at our last regular meeting held on February 10, 1915, said resolutions to be published in the MIXER AND SERVER, according to the International Constitution.

Fraternaly yours,

Resolution No.....

Local 110 of San Francisco, Cal., believing Section 88 of the International constitution to be discriminating in its character and a menace to the good and welfare of a local that may have a few members less than a sister local where a controversy between said locals is to be acted upon by the local joint executive board to which both locals are affiliated. Therefore, Local 110 offers a resolution (to be considered by the 1915 convention of the I. U.), to amend Section 88 of the International constitution, to read as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each delegate. No delegate can cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances.

"There shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint board."

DENVER, COLO., February 23, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, General Secretary:

Enclosed find amendment to Section 64 of the International by-laws and constitution. This is one amendment that I think should be adopted for the protection of local unions, as the general office will know if a local has its officers bonded. I think it will stop the absconding of officers handling funds. If there is anything that will make this amendment stronger, kindly let me know and I will submit it to the convention.

Hoping this is satisfactory, with best wishes, I remain,

Fraternally yours,
F. WESSEL,
Secretary Local 8.

The following amendment to Section 64 is offered for the consideration of the convention to be held June 14th at San Francisco:

"Section 64 amended to read as follows: "It shall be mandatory on the part of all affiliated locals to bond their treasurers and other officers who handle funds. Bonds to be procured by the local through the International Secretary-Treasurer. A penalty of ten ($10) dollars shall be imposed on local unions failing to apply to the International Secretary-Treasurer for bonds before installing officers handling funds."

Submitted by
F. WESSEL,
Secretary Local 8.

OAKLAND, CAL., February 6, 1915.

There is hereby added to the constitution a new section to be numbered Section 178 and to read as follows:

"Section 178. The rights and powers not delegated to the International Union by this constitution, nor prohibited by it to the locals or the members of the International Union are reserved to the locals and to the members respectively."

Section 144 of the constitution is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 144. A copy of the official Journal shall be sent to each member of the International Union, and the secretary of each local shall be required to send the names and addresses of all the members of his local to the general secretary-treasurer every six months so that every member shall receive a copy of the Journal whenever issued, but this provision shall not be construed to authorize the secretary-treasurer to refuse or neglect to forward a copy of the Journal to every member at the expiration of said period of six months upon the failure of the secretary of the local to furnish the names and addresses herein required; provided, however, that the secretary-treasurer shall have authority at any time to cease forwarding a copy of the Journal to a member after receiving notice from the Postal Department that mail can not for any reason be delivered to such address. A bound volume of the MIXER AND SERVER shall be sent to each local annually; it shall be mandatory for locals to purchase same."

Resolved to amend Section 83 of the constitution relating to proprietors, to read as follows:

"Section 83. Whenever a member of the International Union becomes a proprietor, he may retain membership in a local, provided that he does not attach himself to any organization known as a proprietors' organization. The payment of dues to locals by proprietors shall be left to the discretion of the locals. Any member of a local whose name is attached to any license where the sale of liquor transpires is a proprietor. Proprietors working at the trade shall be entitled to all the rights of the local union of which they are members, except that they shall not be eligible to election either as delegates to the conventions or to any office within the gift of a local union. national of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of America in this United States or its possessions, who have not already obtained their first citizen papers, upon being initiated into a local in this United States or its possessions, shall pay one ($1.00) dollar in excess of local's initiation fee, said one ($1.00) dollar to be retained by said local where member was initiated; if said one ($1.00) dollar is not sufficient for cost of securing first citizen papers for said newly initiated member, then said member will be assessed twenty-five (25) cents per month in excess of all dues and assessments that may be levied on or by said local where member was initiated in this United States or its possessions till the amount has been acquired for the cost of procuring first citizen papers. Such money collected will be permissible to transfer from one local to another when shown to be for said purpose. Upon initiation into a local no member will be compelled to renounce his allegiance to his flag or country, yet his pronounced refusal to obtain his first citizen papers deprives him of being eligible to hold any office in this International or its affiliated locals within the United States or its possessions; he shall also forfeit such money at the expiration of one year except he can show that he has not made his livelihood in the United States or its possessions since the time of his initiation into a local in the United States or any of its possessions. No member's money to be forfeited by monthly suspension from any local in the United States or its possessions for the period of one year. Six months' grace will be granted to members initiated into a local in the United States or its possessions upon proof that they have not made their livelihood in the United States or its possessions, and no further extension of time will be allowed and said member's money is considered forfeited. The secretary of a local in his monthly report shall acquaint the general office of newly initiated members whose money is deposited in a local for the procuring of first citizen papers. All such money forfeited to be forwarded to the General Executive Board of this International and to be apportioned as follows: Ten per cent of forfeited money to defray the general expenses of this International; five per cent to be deposited in the death benefit fund of this International; eighty-five per cent to be set aside as a fund to be known as a Culinary Union's Home Fund, for the purpose of buying land and thereon build a home for aged and infirm members of culinary crafts who have been in good standing in this International of the H. & R. E. I. A. and B. I. L. of America for eighteen consecutive years. Said land, when being purchased, to be voted on by a referendum of the locals of this International." CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROPOSED BY LOCAL NO. 30.

A resolution to amend the constitution by amending Section 76 thereof, relating to manner of crediting dues of traveling members.

Resolved, That Section 76 of the Constitution be amended to read as follows:

"Section 76. When a traveling member deposits his card before the seventh day of any month, the dues of such member for said month shall belong to the local accepting the card, and such dues if already paid and other dues if paid in advance, shall be remitted to said local upon demand therefor being made under seal to the local which is in possession of such dues."

LOS ANGELES, CAL., February 12, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Inclosed find two proposed changes to our International Constitution in the form of resolutions to be presented at the Eighteenth General Convention: To the Eighteenth General Convention, Greeting:

Whereas, Section 24 of the International Constitution has never been enforced, and,

Whereas, it has been the means of causing quite a few of the locals to have a very hard time in enforcing same. Therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Eighteenth General Convention in session at San Francisco, Cal., June 14 to 19, 1915, that Section 24 of the International Constitution be stricken from said constitution.

Proposed by W. M. Spear, Local 27.

To the Eighteenth General Convention, Greeting:

Whereas Section 88 of our International Constitution, which reads as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each member that per capita tax is paid on; said vote to be cast in equal proportion by its delegates. No delegate can cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances. There shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint executive board."

Whereas, the above section has caused so much wrangle and dispute in the various cities among our crafts; therefore be it

Resolved, that said Section 88 be changed to read as follows:

"Locals shall be allowed one vote for each delegate present; no delegate shall cast the vote of a co-delegate under any circumstances; there shall be three delegates elected to represent their local in said local joint executive board."

Proposed by W. M. Spear, Local 27.

Credentials for the Eighteenth General Convention of our International Union, to be held in the city of San Francisco, beginning Monday morning, June 14, 1915, were sent out from this office, February 16, 1915. All locals should have received them within a reasonable time after that date. If the secretary failed to bring the credentials to the attention of your local union, that is not the fault of general headquarters. If, on the other hand, the secretary failed to receive credentials, by immediately notifying headquarters, duplicate set of credentials will be forwarded. If your local union desires to send more than one delegate to the convention, a requisition for additional credentials should be made and sent to headquarters.

Secretaries are urged to exercise care in making out the credentials, especially in writing the names and addresses of the delegates, which should appear on the back of the original and duplicate credentials. Duplicates must be returned to headquarters and should be in general headquarters before May 24, 1915, in order to appear upon the convention roster of the International Union. This point is emphasized and unions are urged to forward duplicate credentials without necessary delay.

The Eighteenth General Convention of our International Union convenes in the city of San Francisco, Monday morning, June 14, 1915. The official record of the convention is an important memorandum of organization activities. Members who do not receive the MIXER AND SERVER and are entitled to secure same, should take advantage of this notice and request the secretary of their local union to forward their names and addresses to headquarters; in fact it is suggested that secretaries who have furnished us with incomplete mail lists of their members, take advantage of the opportunity and file with headquarters a complete mail list. This warning is given in ample time, so that all members may have their names and addresses on file at headquarters and thus be the recipients of the Eighteenth General Convention of our International Union records.

Secretaries are urged to give the foregoing prompt consideration and favorable attention. The mailing department is required to handle in excess of sixty thousand names and addresses each month and therefore addresses received after May 31, 1915, will hardly secure the July, 1915, or the convention number of the MIXER AND SERVER. For that reason, immediate action in forwarding names and addresses to headquarters is imperative.

INFORMATION WANTED.

I want to locate my brother, Peter R. Reimer, age 31, last heard from about six years ago, at which time he was working at Churchill's, New York City; occupation, waiter and bartender. Previous to that time had also worked in Atlantic City and at Moody's Cafe, Van Buren street, Chicago. This information is wanted so as to enable the relatives to settle an estate. His share is worth in the neighborhood of $4,000.

Anybody having any information as to his whereabouts, kindly communicate with me as soon as possible.

Fraternally yours,

THEO. J. REIMER,
Robbinsdale, Minn.

MONTREAL, CANADA.

Jere L. Sullivan, Esq., Gen. Fin. Sec., Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At our meeting of April 1, I was requested to communicate with headquarters, asking you to publish in the next MIXER AND SERVER, the official notice of the expulsion of former Brother Joseph Bosley. Admitting that this Local 315 will take all responsibility in case of any prosecution from the party mentioned as we have enough evidence to warrant his expulsion from this International.

With Greetings,

Yours fraternally,

FRANK PEEL,
Bus. Agt. and Fin. Sec., Local 315.

G. CHARLES MARTIN, President.
 C. OLIVER, First Vice-President.
 F. GRAY, Second Vice-President.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 23, 1915.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, General Secretary-Treasurer, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Kindly publish in the next issue of the MIXER AND SERVER, the information given below:

At the regular meeting of Bartenders' Union Local 420, held March 7, 1915, George W. McKee was expelled from membership for violating Sections 86, 90 and 105 local by-laws.

At the same meeting, Ed. Hand was found guilty for scabbing, by going to work in a place where two of our members were out for better conditions and fined $25.00, and expelled from membership.

Mr. Hand was formerly a member of Local 51, St. Louis, Mo., and while a member of that local was fined $100.00 for scabbing, which fine has never been paid, according to report from that local, and he evidently joined some other local under false representation, as he came here with a traveling card issued by Local 547, Dallas, Texas.

This man needs watching, as he is always flashing a membership book; although he has not paid any dues for the last two years, and by looking at the book you may find this to be true.

He is a man about 46 years old, real white hair, scar across his face, medium height and stocky built, generally has a smile on his face, and pretends to be a gambler.

Fraternally yours,

BARTENDERS' UNION, LOCAL 420,

W. F. DALY, Secretary.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

REPORT OF THE INTERNATIONAL AUDITING BOARD.

THE HOTEL AND RESTAURANT EMPLOYEES' INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE AND BARTENDERS' INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

CINCINNATI, April 24, 1915.

To the Officers and Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America:

FELLOW MEMBERS—In accordance with Section 119 of the International Laws of our Order, we have, with a Certified Public Accountant, representing the Bonding Company, made an examination of the Receipts and Disbursements of the Secretary-Treasurer for the six months ended February 27, 1915.

The detailed statement submitted herewith includes all receipts from locals, and disbursements are represented by receipts and vouchers on file, showing organization expenses, general expenses and death claims, which have been properly approved and voucherized.

All expenditures have been carefully examined by us, and the statement as submitted, in our opinion, correctly shows the receipts and disbursements for six months ended February 27, 1915.

We wish to commend the General Office upon the excellent condition in which the books and records are kept.

Respectfully submitted,

E. L. HILES,
Local 420, Kansas City, Mo.
W. W. HINTON,
Local 300, Toronto, Can.
D. C. POTTER,
Local 286, Peoria, Ill.

STATE OF OHIO, HAMILTON COUNTY, SS.

Be it remembered that on the 24th day of April, Nineteen Hundred and Fifteen (1915) before me, a Notary Public, in and for said County and State, appeared the persons who signed the foregoing document, and severally made oath that their names are E. L. Hiles, W. W. Hinton and D. C. Potter, and that the statements of said document are true, as they verily believe.

Sworn to and subscribed before me on said date.

GEO. W. WELCH,
Notary Public, Hamilton County, Ohio.

CINCINNATI, April 23, 1915.

To the Officers and Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America:

GENTLEMEN—Complying with Section 119 of your constitution, examination has been made of the books, records and accounts of your Secretary-Treasurer, in conjunction with your Auditing Committee, for six months ended February 27, 1915, and we submit herewith statements of Receipts and Disbursements, Cash Balance and Reconciliation of Bank Accounts, all of which have been duly verified.

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April:

I desire to call the attention of the officers and members of our local unions having business with this office, that I will leave here for the purpose of attending the convention in San Francisco, about the 10th day of May and will not return until after the close of the convention, or about July 1st. Mail addressed to me between May 10th and May 25th, if addressed in care of the Bartenders' Union, Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal., will be given immediate attention upon my arrival in that city; after May 25th and up until June 14th, if addressed in care of Sutter Hotel, San Francisco, Cal., it will receive prompt attention.

Our convention is but a few weeks off and yet there are a number of local unions that have not taken up the question of being represented at that convention; some of our local unions fail to appreciate the need of their being represented, they put it up to the other fellow to shoulder the burden and if what the other fellow does meets with their approval, he is a fine fellow, but when he does things that meets with their disapproval, then the feathers are made to fly and we continually hear, "O, well; if I was there they never would have passed that law, etc., etc." Yet the law was enacted and it is the fault of those who fail to be represented, if the law should happen to work to the disadvantage of their local union. The Eighteenth General Convention is a law making convention and the laws adopted by the delegates assembled, become the laws of the International Union sixty days after the adjournment of the convention and that is the reason we urge upon our local unions to have representation at the convention.

The convention arrangement committee in San Francisco, is making preparations to take care of a large delegation. The Sutter Hotel, Sutter and Kearney streets, has been selected as the convention headquarters and every effort will be made by the convention committee to see that the comforts of the delegates and their guests will be properly looked after.

The committee on entertainment is planning a series of entertainments that will not interfere with the business of the convention and which will be both interesting and enjoyable.

If your local union has not taken up the question of being represented, get busy and see that they do so at once and have them to arrange to have at least one delegate on the floor of the convention when it meets in San Francisco. What! your finances are low and you cannot send a delegate? Well put your thinking cap on and work out some plan whereby the local can raise a sufficient sum to be represented; there are a number of ways how that can be done; after you have provided the means, then select from your membership, members who are active and who will be a credit to your local, as your choice to represent you at the Eighteenth General Convention, which opens in the City of San Francisco, Cal., on the 14th day of June, 1915.

On March 28, I installed the following officers in Local 171: President, Edward A. Dentinger; vice-president, John Ritz; recording secretary Frank Sargeant; financial secretary, Emanuel Koveleski; treasurer, Jos. F. Curtis; inspector Michael Murtha; trustee, Fred Fickweiler; inside guard, Frank Weinman, and chaplain, John J. Hennessy.

The following visiting members assisted in the installation: President P. M. Gardner; Trustee J. Harkaway; Secretary E. Costelo; Business Agent Charles Yates and Inspector J. O'Neil, of Local 76; Secretary Foster Dudley of Local 150, and Secretary P. J. McGowan and Edward Ehrman of Local 175. After the installation ceremonies were over, the committee in charge removed the screens and the vision of a real feed fashe:l before our eyes—one of the finest buffet lunches that it has ever been my pleasure to partake of. Following the luncheon a moving picture entertainment was given and at the close of the program those present voted it a grand success. Hats off to the committee who so ably arranged the affair.

On March 26, I attended the Sixteenth Anniversary of Local 175; the committee on arrangements, headed by Brother Edward Ehrman, provided plenty of good eats and drinks and along with that several high-class entertainers were on the bill. There was something doing every minute and it was a sure-enough B-I-G success.

On the 14th, I held a hearing on an appeal in the city of Cleveland and had the pleasure of meeting a number of old friends and enjoyed their hospitality.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Decision No. 589.

March 29, 1915.

MR. CHARLES A. SIMPSON, Secretary, Local 659,
Box 1365, Dallas, Texas:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 26th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Three of our members have entered a co-partnership with three other men for the purpose of operating and conducting a restaurant, the three members contending that they are proprietors, have requested withdrawal cards; are they entitled to the same?

"The agreement under which they have entered into partnership, makes Mr. Angel Karvantas one of the said co-partners, the sole authority in the conduct of the business, in fact he performs all of the functions of a proprietor, the balance of the co-partners simply enjoying a share in the profits and having absolutely no other authority or rights, the said Mr. Angel Karvantas holding power of attorney over each of them."

This International Union does not recognize members of a profit sharing co-partnership of this character as employers; the only member of the above named co-partnership that can be construed as a legitimate employer, is the one who holds the power of attorney over the other co-partners—Mr. Angel Karvantas—all the rest are recognized as employees, the fact that may enter into an agreement to share in the profits of the restaurant, does not make them employers, nor are they entitled to any of the rights or privileges accorded an employer by our International laws.

In order that this restaurant conducted by this co-partnership may be considered as a union restaurant and entitled to the use of our house label, every employee therein coming under the jurisdiction of our International Union, whether he is a member of the co-partnership or otherwise, with the exception of Mr. Angel Karvantas, will have to be members in good standing with our International Union. The three members that you refer to, who have made requests for withdrawal cards, are not entitled to the same. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 590.

March 30, 1915.

MR. EDWARD FENNESSY, Bus. Agt., Local 110,
338 Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 25th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"At our last regular meeting a resolution was passed, that no salaried officer of the local can be a candidate for delegate to the International convention to be held in San Francisco; there is nothing in the local by-laws covering this question; can the local union deny that privilege to a salaried officer by motion adopted at a regular meeting?"

Decision No. 284 covers the right of a local to have in their by-laws a qualification clause, which requires a specific length of membership of a member before he is eligible to be elected to office or as a delegate to the International Union conventions and if the said by-laws have been approved by the General President, that provision can be enforced legally; but a local cannot, by the ordinary passing of a resolution, deny to any member in good standing and qualified under the laws of the International Union his right to serve as a delegate, or to aspire for the said honor from the local of which he is a member. If the local has a clause in their by-laws which stated that no salaried officer could aspire for election as delegate to the International Union convention and the same had the approval of the General President, then it could be legally enforced and then any member accepting a salaried office, would understand that his acceptance would disqualify him from seeking election as a delegate to the International convention; but the passing of a resolution to that effect, does not make it part of the by-laws.

My decision therefore is, that a local cannot by resolution deny to a member his right to aspire to or for election to any office within the gift of the local union, or as delegate to our International conventions, whether the said member happens to be a salaried officer or otherwise is immaterial. That if a local desires to make those qualifications, it must be as an amendment to their local by-laws and must receive the approval of the General President before they can become operative. Therefore the action of Local 110 in passing a resolution denying to all salaried officers a right to run for election as delegate to the International Union convention to be held in San Francisco in June, was illegal and cannot be enforced, and until such time as the by-laws of Local 110 are legally amended to cover this qualification, salaried officers are entitled to aspire for election as delegates to our International convention, in the same manner as any other member desiring the said honor. With greetings,

Yours fraternally;

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 591.

April 5, 1915.

MISS LAURA MOLLEDA, Secretary, Local 48, 151
Mason Street, San Francisco, Cal.:

DEAR MISS AND SISTER—I have your communication of the 31st ult., wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Our delegates to the International Union convention were elected December 30, 1914; one of the delegates elected has failed to attend the meetings of the local and at the meeting of March 17, 1915, all her offices as delegates were declared vacant for non-attendance; in accordance with Section 15 of the local by-laws. After having been elected at a general election, can she be recalled for non-attendance at meetings? Also can a delegate to the International convention be elected at a regular meeting to fill the office?"

Section 15 of the local by-laws referred to above, says: "Any officer or delegate, excepted salaried officers, failing to discharge the duties of the office for a continuous period of three weeks, shall forfeit same."

"Failing to discharge the duties," the duties of a delegate to the International Union convention do not begin until he or she is seated as a delegate after the convening of the convention, hence she has no duties to perform prior to that time and cannot be removed for not performing certain duties, when those duties in reality are not to be performed until the convening of the convention in June. However, if the credentials of the said delegate have not been delivered to the International Union, the matter would still rest with the local and if the delegate was removed and another delegate substituted by the local, then the delegate so removed, would have a right to protest the seating of the delegate elected in her stead, at the convention.

In reference to the election of delegates, section 17 of your by-laws govern that and in accordance with that section a delegate may be nominated at any meeting and at the second meeting following the meeting at which the nomination took place, the election could be held. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 592.

MR. JERE L. SULLIVAN, General Secretary-Treasurer, Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 9th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"We are in receipt of a communication from the Secretary of Local 28, Vancouver, B. C., wherein he asks the following question:

"Can a member who is now in San Francisco, Cal., transfer back to our local and represent us?"

"As we understand that question it resolves itself into the following:

"John Doe, formerly a member of Local 28, transfers to Local 30, seemingly he has been advised that his old Local 28 may be unable to pay the expense of a delegate to the coming convention; he therefore proposes to send his traveling card from Local 30, to Local 28; meanwhile remaining at San Francisco and presumably being employed at the trade in that city. Can John Doe under those circumstances be legally elected as a delegate from Local 28, and legally represent said Local 28, on the floor of our coming General Convention? Kindly advise this office whether John Doe, under the circumstances briefly set forth, is entitled to remain at San Francisco, send traveling card to Vancouver, be elected as a delegate and obtain recognition as such from the coming convention?"

My decision on the foregoing is, that John Doe would not be a legal delegate from Local 28. Section 131 reads as follows: No proxies shall be allowed in the convention. That method as outlined is a crude attempt to evade Section 131. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 593.

April 12, 1915.

MISS LAURA MOLLEDA, Secretary, Local 48, 151 Mason Street, San Francisco, Cal.:

DEAR MISS AND SISTER—I have before me the appeals of Local 48; one appealing from the action of the L. J. E. B., for sustaining the appeal of Sister Ora Mathewson, and the other for unseating the delegates to the said Board, on account of the failure of Local 48 to carry out the directions given by the Board, to-wit: To hold a new election for the office of President of Local 48.

I have given the appeals careful study and consideration and I find the statements and testimony submitted, so conflicting and at variance with each other, that it is impossible for me to distinguish which is right and which is wrong; however, there is one fact that sets out very clearly and that is: Did the L. J. E. B. have power to consider this appeal and did they do right in unseating the delegates of the local pending the carrying out of their decision, or on their refusal to carry it out?

Section 85 gives to the L. J. E. B. power to adjust all differences between locals and members; under that section the Board was acting within its rights in considering the appeal of Sister Mathewson and further directing that their conclusions be carried into effect, and if no appeal was taken, that their decision be enforced and upon the failure of the local to carry out the direction as given by the said Board, the Board would be justified in unseating the local union and its delegates from the said Board. However where an appeal is taken—excepting in the case of expulsion—and the Board so notified, Section 87 acts as a stay against the enforcement of the said decision until the higher authorities have had an opportunity to review the appeal. Therefore if Local 48 notified the L. J. E. B. that they were appealing from their decision, the Board erred in unseating their delegates; they should have held that action in abeyance until the appeal had been reviewed by a higher authority of the International Union.

On the appeal which has reference to the action of the L. J. E. B. in directing that a new election for the office of President of Local 48 be held; I am—in view of the fact that the statements are at such variance with each other—inclined to favor the solution reached by the L. J. E. B. The L. J. E. B. holding that there appears upon the records of Local 48, no reference to Sister Mathewson declining the nomination for President, other than a line having been drawn through her name, and while I have no desire to question the testimony of the Sisters who testified that she—Sister Mathewson—had made the remark that she did not want any office, yet I am loath to consider that as sufficient reason to warrant a reversal of the action of the L. J. E. B. and in the interest of harmony, I am inclined to believe that immediate steps should be taken to hold a new election for the office of President and let the rank and file of the organization decide for themselves, this important question, that is now disturbing the peace and tranquility of the local union and retarding its progress and with that thought in mind, I am denying the appeal which has reference to the holding of a new election and directing the L. J. E. B. to seat the delegates from Local 48 pending a final adjustment of this matter; if Local 48 concludes to accept this decision without any further appeal, then immediate steps must be taken to hold a new election for the office of President, otherwise the directions given to the L. J. E. B. do not become operative. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 594.

April 13, 1915.

MR. CHARLES YATES, Secretary, Local 76, 17 Clinton Blk., Syracuse, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 12th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"A member of Local 76 was working in a certain establishment, the proprietor died and he married the widow and now demands a withdrawal card; and license not being in his name, I refused to give him a withdrawal card; he has now joined the Saloon Keepers' Association in this city, which association is antagonistic to our local and he has refused to withdraw his membership from the said association. Is he eligible to a withdrawal card and can he retain membership in the said association?"

The fact that this member married the proprietress of a saloon, does not make him the proprietor and unless his name is placed upon the license, or he can show proofs that the said business has been signed over to him, he cannot be recognized as a proprietor, nor is he entitled to a withdrawal card, so long as he performs any of the functions of a bartender.

If he has joined an organization that is antagonistic to the local union, the local has a right to discipline him if he refuses to withdraw that membership. With greetings:

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

MR. THOMAS S. FARRELL, President, Local 106, 310 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the appeal of Brother E. J. Carter. After giving the matter my personal attention, the said appeal is denied. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

MR. ROBERT R. FOUTTER, President, Local 100, 959 County Street, New Bedford, Mass.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 13th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Our by-laws call for the election of officers for the term of one year, the said election being held the last meeting in April, our financial secretary and business agent will be elected in accordance with the above. Does he hold his office for one year, or can the local at a later meeting vote to abolish the said office by a two-third vote, or by amending the by-laws?"

Officers elected by a local union to serve for the term of one year, are entitled to continue in the said office until their term expires and their successors have been duly elected and installed and the local union cannot, either by a two-third vote, or by amending their by-laws effect the tenure of the said office during the term for which the said officer was elected. This decision does not prohibit a local union from removing an officer for cause, during his term of office. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 597.

MR. HARRY WEINSTOCK, Secretary, Local 279, 1108 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the appeal of Local 279 from the decision of the Local Joint Executive Board in penalizing them the sum of $5.00 for a violation of trade union principles.

There being no authority in law, giving to the Local Joint Executive Board the right to penalize a local union other than the constitutional fines provided for by the constitution; therefore, without considering the merits of this appeal and without prejudice to the defendant, they reserving the right to present their charges in accordance with the International constitution—the appeal is sustained and the amount of the fine deposited returned to the appellant. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 598.

April 23, 1915.

MR. ROSS JOHNSON, Secretary, Local 386, Third and Bird Streets, Hannibal, Mo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 21st, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"There are two claims filed for the death benefit of the late Brother George W. Hafner. One by his wife and the other by his daughter. The late brother had not been living with his wife for nearly twenty years. She took no interest in him during his sickness or after his death. His daughter looked after him during the last twelve months of his illness and saw to it that he received a proper burial and that the undertaker was paid. Our by-laws say that the widow of the deceased should receive his benefits. Who is entitled to the death benefit of the late brother?"

The above question calls for the application of the common law. If the widow of the late brother took no interest in him during his sickness or at the time of his death, then she is not entitled to be taken into consideration in the payment of the death claim, irregardless as to what your local laws may read. The object and purpose of creating the death benefit, was to see that our members received a decent burial after they had passed to the great beyond, and as the late brother's daughter saw to his comforts during his illness and provided for his proper burial, she is the proper and legal heir to his death benefit and the local union should pay the same over to her. With greetings,

Yours fraternally,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

FAKE SOCIAL CLUBS.

If there is one thing more than another which our local unions unfortunately become interested in, it is the operation of so-called Social Clubs which presumably were established for the sole benefit of the members of a local union, but which through the wise manipulation of some one with "an axe to grind" develops gradually into a semi-public rendezvous for any and all persons who may have the price to spend at the bar or buffet. Social clubs established for the exclusive use of the members of a local union should be kept absolutely exclusive for the members of that local, for the moment that the rules governing such clubs are stretched so as to include some one else—a good fellow or two "who are all right," just that moment is laid a foundation for future trouble which will inevitably work harm if not disaster to the union under whose auspices that club is presumably conducted.

There is such a thing as showing "courtesies" to the members of our International Union, then there is another form of "courtesies," which includes every member of every trade union in that town or city; the former if guarded with some measure of care seldom develops into an abuse, but the latter seldom succeeds in passing many months before the club sinks out of sight and the establishment becomes a real competitor with those concerns which employ our members. The Social Club which seeks "outside patronage" and which remains open during hours when legitimate establishments must close, is a real menace to our organization, and no local union can afford to conduct such a club. We seek to secure contracts from our employers in order that we may enjoy the benefits of organization, we should not be guilty of any action which even remotely injures the catering industry or which may invite antagonisms of our employers. Fake Social Clubs do all that and more.

WHILE THE BOSS SMILES.

Dual unionism under any name is a vicious contrivance originated and fostered by employers, who when the last word has been said are the only ones who profit by the scheme. They manage somehow to sow the seed of discord and succeed in enlisting the services of workers by methods remarkable for their simplicity. Dual unionism has an awful record in America. It will be added to unless men and women who support unions take measures to prevent further abuse of rights so dearly won.

COMMON SENSE.

Longfellow could take a worthless piece of paper and write a poem on it and make it worth $65,000—that's genius. There are some men who could write a few words on a piece of paper and make it worth $8,000,000—that's capital. The United States can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and make it worth $20—that's money. A mechanic can take material worth $5 and make it into watch springs worth $1,000—that's skill. There's a man in Chicago who can take a fifty-cent piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth $1,000—that's art. A Greek can take an article worth 75 cents and sell it for $1—that's business. A woman could purchase a hat for 75 cents, but prefers one worth $27—that's foolishness. A ditch digger handles several tons of earth for $1.50 a day—that's labor. The author of this can write a check for $9,000,000, but it wouldn't be worth a dime—that's rough. There are people who will tell you that other papers are as good as this—that's nerve. Take $2.50 and get a year's subscription to The Yolo Independent—that's common sense. —Yolo (Cal.) Independent.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

OMAHA, NEB., April 24, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Find enclosed my report for the month of April.

The boys in Sioux City are all carrying paid-up cards, for they seem to think that there is a fighting chance left for them in the State of Iowa.

I am sorry to report that I was unable to get the Culinary Workers together, notwithstanding the able assistance I had from the central body, but I am in hopes that in the near future they will wake up to the fact that unless they wish to continue working for low wages and long hours, they must organize. They have only themselves to blame for these conditions.

To Omaha, where I found the conditions to be not of the best, so far as Local 264 is concerned. In fact, they have failed to send in a report to the office for five months, and other conditions were just as bad. I believe the time is now ripe to organize Omaha, and for several reasons. In the first place, the central body is making an active campaign, trying to get the unorganized to become members of their respective unions, and we will necessarily reap some of the benefits, if our boys will only wake up and do their share to help this campaign along. The fault of Local 264 has been, "Oh, what is the use of trying any more? We have tried and tried, and we don't get anywhere, so what is the use?" They are all too willing to lay down on the job." Of course, we recognize that Omaha has been shot to pieces quite a number of times, but the fault has been their own, and there is no one to blame but themselves. The lessons they have had in the past, they did not profit by.

They were going along the same lines, no business whatever, just let her slide. She will take care of herself. That don't care spirit seems to have taken hold of them in a manner that is very discouraging to the few active workers in 264, but I really believe that they are waking up. A change of some of the officers has worked wonders, and they intend to keep on changing until they have officers who are honest and capable.

Brother Dean, the hustling Agent is on the job, and I know he will make good, if the members give him the support he is entitled to. On looking over the application blanks, I found that Brother Dean has secured over 90 per cent of the applications, and he is always in touch with organized labor. This is somewhat of a change in 264.

The retail liquor dealers are not as active in the support of Local 264, as we have every reason to believe they should. In fact, they seem to think they can do very nicely without the support of organized labor, but let me say one thing, and that is, that the trades unions of Nebraska expect a square deal from the retail liquor dealers, and they want no more of those promises, which they do not intend to keep. In the future, their actions will speak louder than words. It now comes down to that show me stuff, and that is the only way they can talk to organized labor. The retailers are going to hold a mass meeting on the 27th, and we intend to go before them, and inform them just what we expect.

Brother Sexton, International organizer of the cigar makers, will go with the committee from the central body, headed by President Brother Reynolds and a committee from Local 264, and we are in hopes we will be able to show them that only through the action of organized labor can they expect to win in a wet and dry fight, and some day they will find this out, when the vote is counted. This is no threat, just cold facts, and the quicker the retail liquor dealers organization realize this, the longer they will hold a license. We are in hopes that at the meeting on the 27th, there will be a more cordial feeling and more of that get-to-gether spirit.

My expense account for the month of April follows:

Sioux City, April 5, Sioux City to Omaha, $3.71; telegram to office, 79 cents; transfer of baggage, 75 cents; ten round trips to South Omaha, $1.00; five round trips to Council Bluffs, $1.00; postage for month, 53 cents; committee expense for arranging meeting, $2.00; printing, distributing and hall rent for Culinary Workers in Sioux City, $3.50. Total, $13.28.

Yours fraternally,

BEN GORTON,
International Organizer.

DETROIT, MICH., April 28, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the last month's work is as follows:

On March 30, I attended the meeting of Local 562 and we initiated five new candidates, and had a very interesting meeting. When I first came to Detroit about a year ago, Brothers O'Rourke and Ryan were about the only delegates that ever showed up at the meetings of the Detroit Federation of Labor, but since January 1, 1915, Local 562 always has from five to eight delegates in attendance at all meetings, and Brother O'Rourke is chairman of the organization committee of that honorable body and Local 562 is now looked upon as one of the most progressive local unions affiliated with the Detroit Federation of Labor.

The boat excursion which will be sponsored by Local 562 on May 30, 1915, to Toledo, Ohio, promises to be a grand success and the members of Local 216 will do all in their power to take care of the excursionists while in Toledo, and this excursion will be one of the biggest events of the season.

THE MIXER AND SERVER .

I have done everything in my power while I have been in Detroit to get our culinary workers to start an organization, but it seems that the most of them are afraid to join, for fear that they will lose their jobs; others would join if I could assure them that inside of twenty-four hours they would have their wages advanced; others think that in order to get things started we should have a nicely furnished club room for them to meet in and talk matters over; in other words these fellows want us to build a house, furnish it nicely and they will rent a room from us. It looks to me as though Detroit was the dumping ground for the riff-raff of the culinary workers of this country, and while I have met some real good members of our locals in other cities, they usually stay only long enough to get car fare out of town. You can plainly see, my dear readers, that Detroit is a hard proposition in our line, but it is no worse than Philadelphia used to be before they come out of their trance. Therefore I believe that with persistent effort on our part in this city we will eventually get this bunch of fellows to try and do something for themselves. We have not tried to hold any meetings as yet, but will try and get them together again within the next week or two, as the spirit displayed thus far would not warrant any such proceeding and I hope that the major portion of those who present themselves, will not be stool pigeons from the Geneva Association and from the head-waiters and managers' pets.

On Saturday, April 17, I took a run over to Kalamazoo to see what the members of Local 368 intended to do with their local, as Kalamazoo county voted dry on April 5, and I found out that they intend to return their charter and outfit to the general office, and most of them will go fishing. A good many members of Local 368 will have a chance to satisfy their Waltonian desire, and no meetings will be in the way to prevent them from going fishing. Last September I worked in Kalamazoo and tried to arouse a little enthusiasm in Local 368, and we called two special meetings for this purpose, and while making the rounds, notifying the boys to be sure and be present, I was coolly informed by several of these fellows, that they had not missed a Sunday fishing in two years and that if it were any other day than Sunday that they could attend the meetings, but they could not afford to lose a day's fishing to attend a meeting of their union. I told them at that time that unless they done something to protect their interests against the merciless onslaught being waged against us in Michigan, that they would probably have a chance to go fishing every day in the week. These fellows will no doubt hear these words ringing in their ears now and can put in all the time they desire at their favorite pastime, but this won't bake their beans.

I went to Grand Rapids the evening of April 17, and attended the meeting of Local 395 on the morning of the 18th, and I am pleased to state that there was a fairly good attendance, and it was a very enthusiastic meeting.

It is a great pleasure to attend the meetings of such a progressive, as well as aggressive, organization, for there is something doing every minute and every one present has something to say. Local 395 will move into their new home about May 18, having closed a deal for the purchase of the Moose club rooms, which will make very cozy quarters in a most desirable locality.

Under the order of new business at this meeting, Brother Finnegan made a most earnest appeal for the local to rescind its previous action taken last September, when this local went on record for segregation. After Brother Finnegan had brought this matter up they called on me for my version of this subject and after listening to my offering, Local 395 cast a unanimous vote in favor of rescinding previous action taken. I find that two prominent members of this local have made their entrance into the political field, namely, Brother Geo. Reed, who represented Local 395 at the seventeenth general convention, who was elected as clerk of police court in the spring of 1914, by an overwhelming majority, and Brother A. Matson is also serving his first term as deputy sheriff of Kent county. More power to you, boys, and let the good work go on.

With such men to guide their destinies as Brothers Johnson, Underwood, Christopher and Fitzgibbons, assisted by that old war horse, Brother Finnegan, Local 395 is bound to maintain the present position it occupies in the labor movement in Grand Rapids.

We done all we could to arouse the few former members of Local 415 of that city but it seems a hopeless task and at this time at least it would be unwise to launch this organization again, for the simple reason that the spirit displayed would mean nothing more than a soap-bubble affair and we will let the matter rest for awhile.

On April 22, I took a run over to Muskegon and attended the meeting of Local 411. I was accompanied on this trip by Brother Finnegan and Brother John Scannell of the Boot and Shoe Workers. The meeting was well attended and Brothers Scannell, Finnegan and yours truly were called upon for brief addresses.

Local 411 lost one of its old wheel horses at this meeting, Brother Wm. Welch having resigned after seven years of faithful service. Billy will open a place of his own on May 18 and has the best wishes of all the members of Local 411 for success in his new venture.

I returned to Detroit on April 27 and attended the meeting of Local 562 and we initiated seven new candidates.

My expenses for past month are as follows:

April 17—Detroit to Kalamazoo.....	$2 87
April 17—Kalamazoo to Grand Rapids....	97
April 22—Round-trip Grand Rapids to Muskegon	1 50
April 27—Grand Rapids to Detroit.....	3 04
Local car fare for month.....	4 80
Stationery and postage for month.....	1 70
Total	$14 88

Fraternally yours,

JOSH BRADY,
International Organizer.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, April 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April, extending from March 25 to this date:

My last report left me in Alexandria, La., where I had just lined up a new local in that city, and I explained to you the situation in Louisiana as I found it in my last report and what, in my opinion, would be the final outcome if our people in that State did not organize and prepare to fight our common enemy, the Prohibitionists, who are flocking to the State of Louisiana like a gang of ducks after a June bug.

After winding up my work in Alexandria, I left that city on March 30 for New Orleans, hoping to line up at least two locals in that city, but I was not there many days until I realized that I was up against the toughest proposition of my life. I was told by men who are working as bartenders and cooks and waiters, that I would never get an organization in New Orleans, and by men who are working from twelve to fifteen hours a day and seven days a week, too.

I decided to try a different scheme from what I usually do when I go to a city. I learned that Colonel John P. Sullivan of New Orleans, was President of the Brewery Men's Association, and also president of one of the largest breweries in New Orleans, and attorney for that association, so I called on Colonel Sullivan at his office, 642 Commercial Place, and put the proposition of organizing the bartenders and culinary workers before him, in the meantime showing him the necessity of organization, showing how our International laws require our local organization to affiliate with every branch of labor and what benefits we would derive from such an organization in these Prohibition elections. I asked Col. Sullivan if he could arrange a meeting for the hotel men, restaurant men, and saloon men of New Orleans, and let me go before them and explain the benefits of organization to them, and he said yes, I am sure I can get them together and will do so. He sent out invitations to every hotel and restaurant man of all the leading hotels and restaurants in the city, and to a large number of saloon men, and what do you think happened? When the day and hour came for the meeting we had three men besides Col. Sullivan, so we called the meeting off and tried for a second meeting which resulted just as bad, so Col. Sullivan said we will get them here, so he called his stenographer and dictated a letter in the shape of a personal appeal and handed it to me to get a number of them printed and have them sent out, which was done. So the third meeting time came and found a full house of the saloon men and men from every first-class hotel and restaurant in New Orleans. I went before them and put our side of the question before them from every point of view possible in my humble way. I talked to them at least an hour and would have talked longer, but Col. Sullivan called my attention to the fact that he had a case in court to see after and that he thought I had made every thing plain enough for any one to understand and that he had only about an hour to get through with that meeting and get to the court. After I was done I took my seat expecting to hear what these men, or at least a few of these men had to say, but no, to my surprise I was asked to retire, which I done after asking them to notify me at once what was done. I went out and waited at least thirty minutes, when Col. Sullivan came down and informed me that the meeting had broken up and they would let me know in a few days what they would do towards allowing me to organize their men. This was Thursday evening, so I asked Col. Sullivan about what time I could get a reply and he said, come back Monday at eleven o'clock. So after getting amongst as many bartenders and waiters as possible during my wait for the sentence, I called back to Col. Sullivan's office Monday morning at eleven o'clock. Now here is just what Col. Sullivan handed me when I came into his office: Mr. Reynolds, I am instructed to inform you by the gentlemen who were at our meeting last Thursday that they mostly all belong to a corporation and do not want anything to do with labor unions. Now this is the exact message handed to me by Col. Sullivan. I thanked him for favors and left his office unwhipped and more determined; but after a visit to some of the best places I soon realized my efforts were useless unless I took men from dumps and dives. I knew it would do us a lot more harm to organize with these near bartenders than to not organize at all. I had about four of the first-class bartenders with me and men who were all right if we could have gotten a sufficient number to organize. I visited many waiters on duty and found they were afraid to even talk to me publicly. I had some of them come to my room by appointment and they told me it would mean their job if they were found talking union. Just think of it, lose their six dollars a week job even if I called their name in any way in connection with unionism.

Realizing my efforts in New Orleans would be all in vain it was out of that city for me. So on the 22nd I journeyed to Houston, Texas, where we had some very important matters to see after. I arrived in Houston on the 23rd, and was met at the train by Brother Gay, of Local 750, as I had notified our secretary here ahead that I was coming to Houston. After getting brushed up a little and taking care of the inner man, I proceeded to visit all the boys I could get to and urged them to get as many out for the meeting as possible on the 25th, this being the regular meeting day. On Sunday morning at 10:30 found a full house and the writer was asked to preside, which he did, feeling proud of the honor, and still prouder of being back once more with the Houston boys. Several matters of importance were discussed, everything going off nicely, and I am glad to say Houston will be represented at our next general convention in Frisco. Brother Hugo H. Zwerneemann, who is president of the local, having been elected to that honor.

Brother A. C. McClelland, who had represented Local 750 at the Texas State Federation of Labor convention in Austin, having just returned from the convention city, made a partial report, he not having had time to make up his full report, but had to report the fact that the city of Houston won the next State convention. Wonder where the delegates to the State Federation of Labor convention in Texas in 1916 will eat, it will be quite a ways to go to meals at Galveston and I am sure the delegates will want union waiters to serve them meals prepared by union cooks and Galveston is the nearest place to Houston where we have union cooks and waiters, so I presume the convention will be held in Houston and the delegates will room and board in Galveston, where they can be served with waiters who wear the little union button. Houston had an up-to-date cooks and waiters' union up to about 14 months ago and let it die and since refuse to reinstate, reorganize, or do anything that might benefit them, but its their fault that they are working long days and weeks, not ours.

Getting back to the meeting, after we had about finished up everything and were getting ready to adjourn, Brothers Hugo Zwerneemann and W. P. Davis, secretary of the local, arose and informed me that I was to be the guest of the local on an excursion through Houston's ship channel to the Gulf of Mexico on board a sea-going vessel and we would start at 1:30 p. m., giving each just time to get dinner and get to the ship which was waiting just below the city hall to take us on our voyage. I realized the fact that I have never been used to very much of that stuff they call water, but I have always said I would try anything once and I would just go if I lost and go I did and I am still living to tell the story. At 1:30 sharp we were off on the Sea Queen headed for the Gulf of Mexico, with about the liveliest bunch it has been my pleasure to get out with, but to our sorrow we learned that John Patton the minister for the occasion had forgotten his preaching book, so we had to get along with off-hand preaching and a few familiar hymns as "How Dry I am," on the way back that night.

If you ever want to learn to be a river or ocean pilot, just come to Houston and take lessons under Hugo, but be sure to bring at least a quarter's worth of tobacco, for Brother Gay.

Since I commenced this letter I have tried to remember the names of the members who were on this trip, but I can't do it. I knew them all when we started out, but when we returned they all looked alike (in the dark) so I know there was at least one man with me. Now to make a long interesting story short one that would fill several sheets of paper, I will just say, I have never enjoyed an afternoon better in all my life than this outing with Local 750; may each of you live long and prosper and your local continue to be the best ever.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

Mar. 30—Alexandria, La., to New Orleans	$5 85
" 30—Sleeper	2 00
" 30—Baggage hauled and checked....	50
" 31—Bus hire and baggage hauled....	1 25

LYNN, MASS., April 24, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

March 28, attended a meeting of Local 112; meetings are well attended; initiated fourteen new members, elected permanent officers and installed same, and assisted the local in other important matters. Attended a special called meeting of the wholesale wine clerks. I was rather disappointed with the small attendance, as quite a number had promised to be in attendance, but it is the old story, afraid of losing their jobs. I haven't given up hopes of winning out and will canvass the city once more.

Attended a meeting of the L. J. E. Board, at which time I took up matters of importance pertaining to the culinary workers which was referred to the delegates to the Boston C. L. U.

As per instructions, left for Manville, R. I. Charter and outfit of Local 735 having arrived, elected permanent officers and installed same. Assisted the new officers with their books, etc.

To Springfield, to attend meeting of Local 416. Called on some of the managers employing waitresses, but was unable to come to any agreement, they requesting further time.

To Boston, to continue work in that city; attended meeting of Local 112.

As per instructions from general office, proceeded to Lowell to assist in the Labor Forward Movement, starting in that city. The first gun was fired on the opening Monday night at Association Hall, one of the largest in the city, which was preceded by a big demonstration of three thousand men in parade. The principal speakers of the evening were John Tobin, general president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union; John Golding, general president of United Textile Workers' Union, and others, with a large number of International organizers present representing the different crafts. Considerable work is being put in on this proposition holding meetings at noon at the factory and shop gates, as well as in the different meeting halls at night. Much good results are expected from this work.

To Lynn, at the request of the general organizing council of that city, to attend their meeting, at which time I was requested to assist in organizing the wholesale wine clerks. I was unable to take the matter up at that time on account of previous arrangements, but agreed to return to Lynn at the earliest opportunity. Returned to Lowell to continue work in that city.

To New Britain, at the request of Local 166, to be in attendance at their meeting on April 18. On my arrival I was taken in charge by Brothers O'Brien and Fodt, and hustled off in a buzz wagon, which afforded me an opportunity to see their progressive city.

Returned to headquarters of Local 166, met the officers and members, as well as a large number of visiting brothers. This being the occasion of the 14th anniversary of Local 166, were ushered into the banquet hall and sat down to one of the best banquets that I ever had the pleasure or privilege of attending. The occasion was fittingly celebrated, all present enjoying the festivities. The menu was the best ever, and judging from the remarks of his Honor Mayor G. A. Quigley, Local 166 is held in the highest esteem by the city officials and the general public, for the interest displayed by its members in the up-build of the city of New Britain. The committee of arrangements, Brothers M. T. Kerwin, J. E. O'Brien, L. W. Fodt, W. Kraemer, H. Farr, Tom Boyle, S. Miskill, deserves credit for the able and efficient manner in which the banquet was carried out.

To Springfield, attended a meeting of Local 416.

Left for Fitchburg to attend a special called meeting of the culinary workers of that city, but regret to say that the men working at that craft are not interested in the proposition, as only two showed up at the meeting. After talking the matter over with President Hart of Local 97, and sizing up the local situation, I agreed to let the matter rest for a while.

To Lynn, as previously arranged, to take up the wholesale wine clerks' proposition, working in conjunction with the organizing committee of the C. L. U., and hope to be successful in our efforts.

The following is my expense account for the month:

April 1—Boston to Manville.....	$1 10
April 3—To Springfield	3 35

PHOENIX, ARIZ., April 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April:

I went to Colorado Springs on the 1st and returned to Pueblo, Colo., on the 3rd. Did not stay in the Springs, as it would work a hardship on a number of our members that are from other locals. I got enough applicants for a charter, sent for same, came back to await its coming and help straighten out some trouble in Pueblo in the meantime. I succeeded in getting things in good shape in Pueblo and returned to the Springs on the 13th and installed the local there, stayed with them a week and helped them get their books in shape. We succeeded, with assistance of the central body and other labor organizations, in getting one of the houses that caters to the organized laboring class signed up. I think that they have good prospects for a good, live organization, as they have a set of officers that are of the right kind of stuff, and the membership at large seems to be of exceptional energetic and stick-to-itiveness men and women, and have organized in the face of the strongest opposition: The Restaurant Keepers' Association. But as they have broke through their ranks and seem to be very conservative, I believe they will make a success.

I left the Springs on the 23rd for Phoenix, Arizona, as per instructions.

The following is my expenses for the month:

Apr. 1 to 3—To Colorado Springs and return	$2 70
" 13—To Colorado Springs.....	1 35
Hall rent in the Springs.....	6 00
Local car fare and telephone.....	90

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April extending from March 22, to this date:

On March 25, following instruction from our General President Brother Flore, to proceed to East St. Louis, to adjust some difficulties that had arisen there. I arrived there on the night of the 25th of March and after inquiry discovered nothing could be done until April 1, regular meeting day.

I attended their regular meeting Thursday morning, April 1, and found Local 332 in very good shape, both numerically and financially, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The supposed trouble was threshed out after meeting and settled in a satisfactory manner.

At Lincoln, Ills., the home of Local 139, I met Brother James, who is president of the Central Body and he promised to try and line up the culinary workers of that city.

I will be in Springfield, Ills., April 27, when all laboring bodies of Illinois will have a convention relative to all labor bills now pending before the legislature.

The elections in Illinois the past month did not close up as many saloons as the large editions of the A. S. L. newspapers would have the public believe. From present indications there will not be any change to amount to anything in the laws of Illinois at the present session of the legislature.

The situation in Peoria, Ill., relative to a culinary workers' organization, will be gone over thoroughly next month as the parks open then and it will be the best opportunity for organizing them, as it practically means everyone connected with that craft in Peoria will be working.

Business is very quiet in Terre Haute, at present closed on Sunday. No games, etc., such as pool or cards permitted in saloons on week days.

The following is my expense account for the month of April:

March 25—Decatur to St. Louis, Mo.....	$ 0 00

JERSEY CITY N. J., April 24, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report, from March 22 to April 23:

March 22, to Trenton, N. J., to liquor dealers, wholesalers and retailers' meeting at Hotel Sterling, to discuss with them what part labor was to play in their future work, as well as to learn as to how much support we would receive from them, along the lines of organization, etc. Several of our locals throughout the State were present, as the local option bill came up for final passage in the lower house that same evening—as this bill had passed the senate.

This bill was killed by a vote of 43 to 14, and is dead for another year.

March 23, visited several members of Trenton bartenders, with Brother Rowoldt, business agent of Local 4, Hoboken, who was here to work among the members of the assembly to help kill the above mentioned bill. We picked up an application for membership, as well as assisting the officials of the State Federation of Labor, to line up the Hudson delegation in the Assembly for Bill No. 606, to save the present labor department, and its chief, Col. Lewis T. Bryant, who has made good in this department. We were glad to see the bill passed, both in the lower and upper house.

March 23, same evening, arrived in time to attend the meeting of Local 488 in Jersey City.

March 24, attended meeting of bartenders, waiters and musicians, at Teidiman's Hall, and with Organizer Joyce, instructed this board to take up some matters of interest to our locals affiliated, especially that which concerns Locals 4 and 10, of Hoboken. Wake up, boys, the musicians will continue to play in such houses where non-union waiters and bartenders are engaged, if you allow them to do so. Don't expect them to be the first to withdraw their men, they are very much alive when there is going to be a non-union band play in any of your houses, and you do likewise.

March 25, addressed the Central Labor Body of Hudson County, in the interest of our crafts, we have six locals seated in this body, and generally well represented at all the meetings.

March 26, to meeting of Waiters' Local 575, Jersey City. The special order of business for that day was nominations for a new business agent, to replace the writer. Brothers Burns, Muldoon, Stacy and Green were nominated.

Let the best man win, and then jump in and support the winner. Same evening to Essex Trades Council, Newark, N. J.

March 27, visited several places in Jersey City in the interest of Locals 488 and 575.

March 28 to Bayonne, to attend a joint meeting of Building Trades and Central Labor Body, called for the purpose of looking up the records of each candidate for commissioner at coming primaries, as to where they stand on the question of organized labor. To speak plainly, to defeat our enemies and support our friends. I started some agitation for a bartenders' local here, as there are 160 saloons here and about eleven of them are members of Local 488 of Jersey City.

March 30, with Bro. Joyce, installed the new president of Local 488 of Jersey City, Bro. Jas. Reilly, as well as arranging for a trip around the city with Business Agent Murphy to look up delinquents as well as get new members.

March 31 to Jersey City Club, a very aristocratic place, in the interest of the waiters of this city, as non-union men are engaged from New York City. I had an interview with a Mr. Rotterbout, the steward, and he put me back another day until he first had a talk with the members of house committee.

April 1 meeting of Local 575 and election of a business agent to fill the job the writer held down for twelve years since the local's inception. Bro. Jas. Muldoon, the old war-horse, and a charter member, crossed the wire a winner; it was a close contest and a most harmonious one.

April 2, with Brothers Muldoon and Stacy, to see Mayor Mark M. Fagan, on the Jersey City Club proposition, and assured of his support. To close this matter as to what was accomplished, I was assured of our boys, at the opening of the banquet season, getting this work.

April 3 to Bayonne to feel out the bar-boys for a local, and while I got encouragement I thought it best to wait until after their election of city commissioners.

April 5 to local joint board meeting in New York City, and after this meeting I took up with Bro. Kleinman, business agent of Local 1, a matter that concerned Local 575 of Jersey City and Local 1.

April 6 attended meeting of Local 488, of Jersey City, and arranged for a committee from this local to go with me to meeting of liquor dealers next day.

April 7 addressed liquor dealers' meeting at Franklin Hall, and with the bar-boys' committee we were assured of their support.

April 8, in company with Organizer Joyce, attended meeting of Bartenders' Local 4 of Hoboken, N. J. Then in a bus to North Hudson with Brothers Thiery and Rowoldt, business agent and secretary, to Crowley's and Vaseline's places, put in two bar labels, received pay for three reinstatements and signed up a lunchman for the cooks' local. Same evening to central labor body, and report above fair and such other places unfair to our organizations.

April 9, with Secretary K. Forbes of C. L. U., to Mueller's Cafe, Fourteenth and Washington streets, Hoboken, to try and settle a dispute between a Mr. Nelson Buck and this local.

April 10 to Hoboken and interviewed Mr. Mueller on strike at his place, and was cordially received. I might report that this local had, for the first time in its history, a place picketed.

April 12 settled strike at Mueller's Cafe, and collected back reinstatement fees for Local 4.

April 13 addressed mass meeting of waiters, cooks, waitresses, lunchmen and bartenders at headquarters of Local 488, 180 Newark avenue, Jersey City. The following spoke: B. Rowoldt and J. Thiery of Local 4, Hoboken; T. Masterson, Stenographers' Union; J. Jennings, Cloak Workers; W. Connelly, R. R. Telegraphers, and J. Trisnan, organizer Liquor Dealers' Association. All spoke along trades union lines and assured us of their support. Several applications were received and referred to their respective locals.

April 14 to St. Bridget's Lyceum in the interest of waiters of Jersey City. Referred same to joint board of this city to handle.

April 15 in the city of Hoboken, assisting the locals there, and picked up two applications for membership.

April 16 attended meeting of Waiters' Local 575 of Jersey City, and in evening to Essex Trades Council at Newark, N. J. Had the pleasure of opposing a resolution introduced for the purpose of seating delegates, from the Ministers' Association, in the Essex Trades Council. This is the work of the Anti-Saloon League. This resolution was not endorsed, but laid over for some future time to be acted upon. I would advise Locals 109, 131 and 294 to have their delegates to this council to be on the lookout for those gentlemen, who would suddenly come to find out that they are anxious to help labor, especially after they tried so hard to take away the employment of thousands of workers of this State, in seeking the passage of the Gaunt Local Option Bill.

April 19 working in the interest of Local 575 of Jersey City.

April 21 attended a conference of liquor dealers and bartenders at Passaic, N. J.

April 22 to New York City as per instructions from general office. Same was covered in my report and forwarded to the home office.

April 23, in company with Brothers Cahill, Gibbons and Business Agent Murphy, of Local 488, of Jersey City, rounded up some of the delinquents, as well as looking after non-union men behind the bars, who received applications, and we hope will soon be with us.

The following is my expense account for the month, which also includes from the 22nd to the 31st day of March:

Mar. 22—Jersey City to Trenton and return	$2 60
" 26—Jersey City to Newark and return	30

Yours fraternally,

W M T. KAVANAGH,

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report from March 22 to April 27:

March 22 assisted the officers of Local 420 in straightening out some matters pertaining to their local.

March 23 called at the headquarters of Waitresses' Local 503, in the Curtice Building, conferring with the officers of that local regarding the picketing of the "Why Not Eat Restaurant," which place has been on the unfair list since the beginning of this year; and the members of Local 503 have, by action taken of the Local Joint Executive Board, been picketing the place for more than three months, under the leadership of their business representative, Mrs. Sarah Green, and you can not help but give credit to the girls, who so patiently and loyally have stood by the union, walking back and forth in front of that establishment in all kinds of weather. It didn't matter whether it rained or snowed; it mattered not whether it was sunshine or a blizzard, the girls were always found on the picket line, announcing the unfairness of the place and urging the passers-by to refrain from patronizing this place, which "denies the workers the right to bargain collectively for a living wage."

The Why Not Eat Lunch Company sought, through injunction proceedings, to have the picketing prohibited, but the court ruled that as long as the picketing was conducted in a peaceful manner, without threats, abusive language or violence to person, they had a perfect right through this, their only means, to let their friends know that the place was unfriendly to them.

With Business Representative Voorhees, of Bartenders' Local 420, signed an agreement with the management of the Hotel Cordova bar.

March 24 attended a hearing of applications for licenses before the Board of Police Commissioners. This is a newly appointed board, and it was understood that a good many license holders would be refused renewals of license and several new rules and regulations governing the dram shops to be enacted, but the board, at this meeting, only heard the applications and objections thereto, and deferred action until next meeting.

March 25, 26 and 27 worked in conjunction with the representatives of the affiliated locals on organization work, and assisted in the fight on the Why Not Eat.

March 28 attended the meeting of the Industrial Council.

March 29, with Business Representative Voorhees, signed up the Hotel Cotter Bar, which place has for quite a period of time been in bad repute with Local 420.

March 30 attended meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board, where several matters of importance were brought up for consideration and acted upon.

Also attended another hearing of licenses before the Board of Police Commissioners. At this meeting several resolutions were adopted by the board, such as abolishing transfer of license from one person to another, or from one place to another, abolishing dice and card games, prohibiting chairs and tables in bar rooms, excepting when meals and lunch are being served; doing away with all musical instruments in bar rooms and more stringent regulations regarding the serving of drinks in cabarets. Several licenses were held up for further investigation, but the outlook is not as bad as was anticipated.

April 1 found me in Lexington, and I am proud to say that the bar-boys in this little city of 6,000 are doing exceedingly well. Local 613, an organization still in its infancy, of less than two years duration, has a membership of twenty-three in good standing, employed in the thirteen saloons there, and not a member out of employment.

I recall the day, some eighteen months ago, when I had the honor of instituting Local 613. There were thirteen members in attendance, and here is one instance here the "hoodoo figures" didn't cut any figure, as Local 613, although small numerically, has it over on a good many sister locals.

After visiting the members and conferring with the officers of the local regarding a proposed City Ordinance, pertaining to the Minor Law, beneficiary to the members of our craft if enacted, I returned back to Kansas City April 3.

April 4 attended the meeting of Local 420.

April 5 attended the meeting of Cooks' Local 266 and installed their officers for the ensuing term. Local 266 had a well attended meeting, and several visiting members of sister locals were present.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

After the regular meeting a social session was held, short talks were made, lunch and light refreshments served, and everybody present enjoyed themselves, but the "Fire Eater" took the cake.

April 6, by request of the Executive Board of Local 420, assisted the chairman of the Board of Trustees in checking up some accounts and reports.

April 7 called at the waiters and cooks' headquarters and conferred with their representatives relative to work outlined by their respective locals.

Attended the meeting of the L. J. E. B. where, upon the report received that the following restaurants had signed agreements during the past week, were granted the use of the house card: Eat Now Restaurant, 402 East Fifteenth; Harry Miller's places at 115 East Twelfth and 1008 Walnut; The Jitney Lunch, 1133 Grand avenue, and the restaurant at 2103 Washington street.

That same night attended the meeting of the Union Label League, and an effort is now being made by that league to create a more forceful demand for the union label.

April 8, 9 and 10 worked in conjunction with the representatives of the affiliated locals.

April 11 attended the meeting of the Industrial Council.

Upon suggestion from the general office, informing me that an effort had been made in St. Joseph to again re-organize the culinary workers there, I left for that city on April 12. Upon my arrival there I found that Brother G. T. Miles, of Local 422, and Brother Doolittle, of Local 19, had been on the job; had secured some applications, but had received no payment on same, and had been unable to get a sufficient number of them to attend the meetings which had been called for the purpose of re-organizing the defunct local. I also found that Brother Doolittle had left for Kansas City that same day and that he had the applications in his possession.

After conferring with Brother Miles I started out amongst the men of the culinary craft to ascertain how strong they were in favor of organization, and I found that practically all were in favor of it. But it was the same old story: "If so and so goes in I will go too." But no one wanted to take the lead. As I didn't have the applications already made out, and as the officers of Local 422 had a proposition for me to look after pertaining to their excessive initiation fee, I decided to let the matter rest until I could get in touch with Brother Doolittle, advising the boys to talk organization amongst themselves until my return the following week. This they agreed to do.

While in the city of St. Joseph I took up the matter referred to above with the officers of Local 422 and went over the grounds, visiting the members to find out the conditions as they prevailed. On the request of the officers I promised to attend their meeting the following Sunday, when they would bring up the proposition of special dispensation for sixty days, or longer if necessary.

After my return to Kansas City, April 16, I held a conference with representatives Franklin and Glover, of Locals 266 and 19, and got in touch with Brother Doolittle, who, on the following day, turned over to me the applications received in St. Joseph. Brother Doolittle explained to me his experience with the culinary workers in that city, but finally admitted that he had made a mistake in not collecting the required fees upon the receipt of applications.

April 17—The biggest part of the day was taken up by work in connection with the fight on the Why Not Eat.

April 18 returned to St. Joseph, and in the afternoon attended the meeting of Bartenders' Local 422. In my address I explained to the members present that in order for them to make any progress they must take a more active part, attend the meetings more regularly, inaugurate a vigorous campaign amongst those outside the fold, reduce their initiation fee to a reasonable amount, so as to get them inside of the organization, and have their delegates attend the meetings of the Central Labor Council and the State Federation of Labor. That in order to expect the support of organized labor, they themselves must take an active part in the labor movement. I found that the delegates to the council had not attended any of their meetings for months, and upon my suggestion, the local voted to instruct the delegates to attend the council meetings regularly, or their offices be declared vacant and a new delegation selected which will attend.

The proposition to grant a special dispensation for sixty days, reducing the initiation from $25 to $15, was laid over until the next meeting, in order to give the membership an opportunity to vote on it.

I discovered later that this amendment to their by-laws, raising the initiation fee, had not been approved by the general president, and I also learned, after a careful canvassing of the men employed as bartenders in the city, that they did not have the necessary seventy per cent organized that would entitle them to a higher fee than provided for in the International constitution. But as I was not fully acquainted with those facts at the time of the meeting, I decided to let the matter rest until next meeting, which I will attend.

Upon my suggestion the president appointed a committee composed of Brothers Bouhr, Whaley and Miller to go with me before the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, which met that night in Eagle Hall. The committee and myself were cordially received, and our mission was made known to them. In my address to the retailers I thoroughly explained in detail what our International, our locals and the State Federation of Labor and its affiliated locals had done for the men in the liquor business; how they had fought their battles; how they had kept a legislative committee during the entire session of the State legislature; how our local organizations had committees there to work in conjunction with the legislative committee in order to prevent inimical and pernicious legislation from enactment; how committees had campaigned the State for the purpose of defeating the County Unit Bill and other vicious legislation proposed by the dry forces; how organized labor expected something in return for all the good they had achieved in this as well as other States for the benefit of the legitimate saloon, and that all organized labor and our organization asked in return was that the retail liquor dealers recognize organized labor to its fullest extent. That they induce those members of the association, who do not employ our members, to do so, and to recognize the bartenders' as an organization worthy of recognition. That the liquor dealers and the bartenders should get more closely affiliated, and that they should also recognize organized labor in general, as they were their most staunch friends. But, on the other hand, should they show their indifference, or refuse to recognize the organized workers, their friendship might cease, and the majority vote might be cast in a different direction in the future.

I also suggested that they appoint a committee to work in conjunction with a committee of the bartenders, so that we would be able to combat with the common enemy in the future, the same as we have in the past in the State of Missouri.

My remarks were well received, and President Dobler assured us that they would take the matter up for consideration and no doubt assist us in getting the non-union bartenders in line.

April 19 made my rounds to the various restaurants and met with a good many promises from the cooks and waiters that they would attend the meetings, which I had arranged to be held in the Bartenders' Hall, the afternoon and night of April 22. I had letters printed inviting them all to come.

April 20 called at the office of the Central Labor Council, and had a lengthy conference with Editor Jones, of the St. Joseph Union, and Brother Bucklin, the representative of the council. I learned that the labor movement in St. Joseph was not very progressive, but more so on the declining plane. They both assured me to give their undivided support to our allied crafts in the city.

That night I addressed the meeting of the Ice and Coal Wagon Drivers' Union. This organization had, through former officers, let itself get into deplorable condition. No per capita paid for several months and other irregularities, and, upon their request, I assisted them that night in unraveling the tangles and got them all straightened out.

April 21 attended the burial of Brother Harry Eastman, formerly a member of Local 422 and a resident of St. Joseph, but later a member of Local 420. By request of Local 420, called on the registrar, Dr. Hardington, regarding death of late Brother Richard Beale, who died in State Asylum for Insane. A rumor was circulated that his death was caused from injuries received while at the Grandview Sanitarium. With Dr. Hardington went to the asylum, and the records there showed that he was considerably bruised and beaten when received at the asylum, but that the death was not caused from the effects of said injury.

The same night I made an address before the meeting of the Leather Workers' Union. This is one of the live organizations in that city and the meeting was well attended. I outlined my plan of organizing the culinary workers, as well as unionizing the non-union saloons in the city, and asked for their support. They assured me that they would render all assistance in their power.

April 22—This was the day set for the organizing of the culinary workers, but notwithstanding the faithful promises made by a number of them to be there, a sufficient number didn't materialize, and I thought that I would give it another trial the following morning.

One of the boys present offered his service to accompany myself and President Woods of the State Federation, who had just arrived in the city, to make another round amongst the boys. Brother Woods and myself met at the appointed time and place, but the other party didn't show up, although we waited patiently for three hours. I came to the conclusion that they didn't want organization very badly and called on Brother Nickerson, former secretary of Local 510, and now carrying his card in Local 19, and advised him that it was useless for me to waste any more time and energy on this proposition, and that at any time in the near future they would get a sufficient number, with a sufficient amount of unionism and finances to pay the charter fee, that I would respond to their call.

It being the opening day of the baseball season, and I knowing the failing of the St. Joe boys, they being more deeply interested in baseball than trade unionism, decided to leave the "City Worth While" for awhile and go where I knew there was plenty to do, and where the work would be more appreciated. Who ever gave St. Joseph the name mentioned above, surely was no trade unionist, as I have learned that it is not a very appropriate name when it comes to trade unionism.

March 24 called at the waitresses' headquarters, and later at the place where the picketing was still going on. A rumor was afloat that the owners of the Why Not Eat Lunch Co. had offered to partially employ union men, but would not sign any agreement. There will be no half way agreement with that house, as I think we have them whipped now. It will either be locked doors, or a signed agreement satisfactory to all concerned, as it is a known fact that the Hotel Men's Association have withdrawn their financial support. The patronage has diminished to such an extent that the only ones now patronizing the place are such as get their meal tickets at half price or for nothing, and that can not last very long. The members of Local 503 will not stop picketing the place as long as sole leather can be had, because they are of the sticking to the union quality. Because Local 503 had to place a good many of their members on the suspension list his month is not the sign that they are really going backward, but on account of the representative being so busy with this fight that she had no time to devote in going around to collect dues from those members who have not gumption to come to the meetings to pay, the kind you'll find in all locals.

March 25 attended the meeting of the Industrial Council. Several matters of importance were up before the council at this time.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., April 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month.

Continuing my work in connection with Culinary Local No. 180, with the assistance of Sister Loretta Wheeler, covered every establishment in the city. Was surprised at the complete indifference of the workers towards organization, the majority of whom seemed quite content to continue under the deplorable conditions that prevail. This condition of affairs is an old one, Local No. 180, chartered over ten years ago, has made no progress in gaining better conditions during this long period. The catering business is practically at a standstill owing to the weekend exodus of population to the Exposition at San Francisco. The Saturday and Sunday trade, under normal conditions the two best days of the week, has been completely wiped out. Three of the largest restaurants, the "Overland," "Good Eats" and "The Antlers," were recently compelled to close. To initiate active boycotts without a dollar to prosecute same in the face of present business stagnation would only result in failure. Local No. 180 is barely able to meet its current expenses at this time.

Under instructions from headquarters, left San Jose for Sacramento April 13th. Attended a meeting of the L. J. E. B. on the morning of the 15th. Meeting called for the purpose of beginning a vigorous boycott against the "Welcome Saloon" operated by Messrs. Steussy & Kadel. This is one of the most prominent corners in town and it was determined to picket the place from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. I wish to say here that I like the personnel and efficiency of the Sacramento L. J. E. B. The delegates and business agents were all there and the work was done with decision and snap—no petty jealousies, but perfect harmony in handling the affairs of both crafts. No better demonstration of the value of united effort has come to my notice in a long time. The influence of the L. J. E. B. is paramount in labor circles here, as instanced by the election of its Secretary, Brother W. C. Eddy, to the position of Business Agent of the Central Labor Council and Brother Stephen P. Drake to the Executive Board. Needless for me to say that advocates of segregation are hard to find in this community.

The cause of the trouble in Sacramento is an organized effort on the part of the bonehead element amongst the saloon men to repudiate their agreement with Local No. 603, entered into over a year ago. It was not a question of wages or hours but a decision to endeavor to eliminate the obnoxious one-day-off in seven. To some extent certain members of Local No. 603 are directly responsible for encouraging their employers in their contention, these misguided individuals preferring two weeks' holiday per annum under full pay to the regulation one day's rest per week. The real truth of the matter is the fear that the relief man may prove more efficient and jeopardize their steady job.

The boycott program was followed and on Sunday night, at 10 p. m., after three days' picketing, Messrs. Steussy & Kadel surrendered unconditionally.

The following day Mr. A. Buergi, proprietor of "Gambrinus Hall," was placed on the carpet, and after a lot of whining agreed to abide by the terms of the agreement. The next case was that of J. P. O'Brien, proprietor of the "Loftus," where a brother, Jack Smith, who claimed an interest in the business, had not been taking his day off. Brother Smith promised faithfully to live up to his obligation in the future. Then came the case of "The Tavern," owned by Scheld & Co. The two men employed having worked in the place for 18 years, resented being compelled to form new habits. Much to their surprise the firm decided to enforce that section of the agreement.

The organization of the Sacramento Liberal Council has aided very materially in strengthening the power of the L. J. E. B. by bringing it directly in touch with influences that the saloon man must respect. Other communities throughout the State would do well to organize along the same lines with the ultimate view of establishing a powerful State organization. Considerable correspondence has been sent out with that end in view, and I sincerely hope our locals will co-operate in perfecting the organization. Information can be had for the asking from Secretary Jack Reid of Local No. 603.

One of the best exemplifications of the inability of the average saloon man in Sacramento to see where his best interests lay is in the unjustifiable employment of Asiatics and others who have no vote. Organized labor believes in helping those who have courage enough to help themselves. How can they consistently appeal to the organized workers for assistance at the polls, when they persist in employing men who have no vote? Among the first-class places delinquent in this respect the following may be mentioned: Ed Dunning's, Japanese; Carl Seaman's, Japanese; Wolverton & Hayden, Japanese; Hoffman's "The Ancil," Japanese; Charlie Weiger's, Chinese; George Newbert's, Chinese; Hornbeck's, Japanese; "The Times," Japanese; Christie's, Japanese. Of course they peddle the old excuse that no white man will do the work, but as only about 25 per cent of the saloons are guilty in this respect it is reasonable to presume these men are not sincere. In some cases it is currently reported that the Asiatics represent the financial end of the business in violation of the law.

Attended regular meeting of Local No. 603 on the afternoon of the 21st, also regular meeting of Culinary Local, No. 561, on the same evening. The attendance at the culinary workers' meeting leaves much to be desired. The same old indifference of the rank and file seems to prevail here also. Considerable discussion arose over two members who were assessed a fine for gross violation of trade union rules. It was decided to enforce payment of same immediately or demand their discharge. The following day the employer complied with our demand, rather than face the inevitable boycott. Brother Jack O'Brien, late Business Agent of Local No. 30, of San Francisco, is now a very active member of No. 561.

The following is a summary of the local situation with reference to the saloons: Number of licenses, 192; number of Bar Labels placed, 102; number not unionized, 42. The balance may be classed as undesirables, among which are three places operated by Chinese, three operated by women, and the balance questionable Greek joints and places where Hindoos, Asiatics and Negroes congregate. It is the intention of the

L. J. E. B. to prosecute a vigorous campaign and clean up the non-union shops before Convention.

My expense account is as follows:

TACOMA, WASH., April 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April, 1915.

Per instructions, assisted with accounts of Cooks' Union, Local No. 33, of Seattle, up to the 6th. On that date left for Bellingham to aid the newly organized Culinary Local getting established. On call for the first meeting after arrival, failed to get sufficient members out for an election of officers, so arranged for another meeting, which proved satisfactory, officers being elected, meeting dates set, and wage scale committee, etc., attended to. Also attended a meeting of the Central Labor Council, stating the position of the new local and requested the members to take an interest in the work being done. International Organizer Charles Hall, of the Typographical Union, being present, gave me an opportunity to talk over conditions in other parts of the country. From Charlie's report, the Typos are having about as hard a roe to hoe as we are.

April 9th, left for Anacortes to attend to some business for the Bellingham local. Found the Bartenders ready to assist the Culinary workers; in fact, Secretary Aslyn is going to act as local agent for them.

To Seattle, attending meeting of Local 651 on the 11th, the expectation being an extra large attendance, but sorry to say the boys of No. 651 are exhibiting about as much interest in the affairs of that local as a cigar store "dummy" would in the brand of cigars the customers smoke.

To Tacoma, attending the meeting of Local No. 61. Sure was a surprised man when I entered the hall to find close to one hundred boys and girls in attendance. However, the reason became known when Secretary Gus Hammer started a roll-call and stated that they were collecting fines for non-attendance. Nothing like discipline when needed.

Back to Seattle for a short stay, then on to the Grays Harbor country, arriving in time to meet with Culinary Local No. 791, of Aberdeen, the officers being about the only members present. After conferring with President Miss Lucy Moore and Secretary Joe Zan, it was decided to try a special written notice to induce the members to attend meetings. The 22nd was set aside for that purpose.

April 15th, to Montesano and Elma. President Perry McGill is still holding forth at "The Brook" in Montesano, Secretary Alex Hill doing the "trot" at the old stand. "Billy" McLain "drove in" just in time to take one before we had to leave for home (Aberdeen).

April 18th, 12:30 p. m., attended meeting of Local No. 771, of Hoquiam, and on same date at 3:30 p. m. attended meeting of Local No. 774 of Aberdeen, both locals finding themselves unable, on account of shortage of finances, to send a delegate to Frisco. Some of the active members are using a lot of "candlepower" sitting up nights trying to figure out some way to raise money for that purpose.

April 19th, to meeting of Culinary Local No. 804, of Hoquiam. The apathy shown by the members of this local presages a large, juicy cut in wages and lengthening of hours of labor in the very near future, by the restaurant keepers of Hoquiam, unless the boys and girls wake up and take a little interest in their local. The next night, attended a meeting of the Hoquiam Central Labor Council, calling their attention to the possibility of losing the Culinary workers if not given some attention. There is on foot at this time a movement to start a Labor Forward Movement for the cities of Hoquiam and Aberdeen, something both cities need badly.

April 21st, to Electrical Workers in Aberdeen, and April 22nd, 3:30 p. m., the Shingle Weavers and Timber Workers. Found both organizations up against a hard fight. The latter organization is, sorry to say, hanging in the balance and liable to be put out of existence at any time.

At 9 p. m. attended the meeting of Cooks and Waiters, No. 791. While the special notices did not bring out anywhere near the proper attendance, it served to stir up a little feeling with those that did attend, and from now on Local No. 791 is going to use the same kind of "persuasion" that the Tacoma local is using. Some of these Aberdeen Culinary Workers had better brush up their memory or the "axe" is liable to fall on them.

To Seattle for a conference with Vice-President Hesketh, then to Tacoma.

The following is my expense account for the month:

April 6—To Bellingham	$3 00
9—To Anacortes	1 10
10—To Seattle	3 00
12—To Tacoma and return.....	1 00

CHICAGO, ILL., April 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April.

On March 29, went to Madison to argue the Anti-Tipping Bill before the State Affairs Committee on behalf of Waiters' Local No. 59. All was done that was possible to show the Legislators what such a bill means, but they feel different, and by September this law will go in effect, but to what extent we do not know, for it is expected to prove a dead letter issue. On April 1st, attended a meeting of Cooks' Local No. 872 in Milwaukee. A Finance Committee was elected, also Delegates to the L. J. B. and a standing "Boosting Committee." April 2nd, meeting of Waiters' Local No. 59, at which four candidates were initiated. At a meeting of this local on the 7th, it was voted to hold a dance on May 12th, to defray expenses for a Delegate to the International Convention in June. On April 10th, Brother A. Siblsky got married, and I tell you that Local 59 has a different Business Agent since that date; it worked fine both ways. Mrs. Siblsky is a very comely young lady and let's all hope that she will take good care of him, and he of her. Get that, eh? April 14th, meeting of Cooks' Local, No. 872, and April 16th, of Local No. 59, at which I thanked the boys for their loyal support extended to me while in the Beer City. A vote of thanks was extended to me by this local for what I have done for them in Milwaukee. I must say that our International is now well represented in that city, and ably, by Locals 64, 59 and 872, all having a good set of officers working in harmony. On the 17th I left Milwaukee for Chicago, where I am now permanently located, and I shall try my best to organize the cooks of this big city, a job that is no easy one, and maybe I will succeed, and if I don't, I will have the satisfaction of knowing that I have done my best. Time will tell. I met Brothers Ebeling and Staggenburg, of Local No. 865. On April 19th I attended a L. J. B. meeting at which Sister Elizabeth Maloney presided. This Board is going to elect its officers at the next meeting. On the 22nd there was a mass meeting for the Cooks. It was well attended. Brother Rodriguez and Alderman addressed the meeting and delivered good addresses. Then I took the floor and talked shop, which brought some good results. The work of organizing Chicago is necessarily slow, and I therefore ask indulgence and patience, as I have, first of all, to get acquainted. I am now leaving for Milwaukee to attend the first big smoker of the new Cooks' Union, Local 872, which ought to be a hummer.

The following is my expense account for the month:

April 17—Milwaukee to Chicago	$ 2 20

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April.

The meeting of the white cooks and waiters of Columbus met as scheduled and decided to apply for a charter; same was granted April 1st. On April 9th, at an afternoon and evening meeting, they decided to nominate officers at three meetings to be held April 16th, afternoon, evening and midnight, the election to take place April 23rd, at meetings held afternoon, evening and midnight. In this way we were able to give all members an opportunity to assist in selecting their first set of officers.

There seems to be no friction; everybody seems to be satisfied with the choice made, although several contests were close. I will not give the names of the newly-elected officers, as I understand the same will be submitted by the Secretary of the newly formed Local No. 505. I will further state, however, that Local 505 is made up of men holding the very best positions in the city and in every respect clean-cut and capable craftsmen.

Some time was taken up trying to assist in straightening out an unpleasant tangle in the ranks of Local No. 423. While the only thing I could do in the premises was to lend what advice possible, I done the best I could along that line and I feel that if my advice is carried out that it will have a tendency to cement the membership of that organization closer together. I know considerable about the efforts of the bartenders of this city in the past and I can frankly say that the Bartenders' Local here is in better shape than ever before in the history of Columbus, and it would be a bad business policy indeed for us to allow anything to creep in that would tend to retard our progress. There has been mistakes made in the past which cannot only be attributed to the officers, who no doubt were doing the very best they knew how to continue to progress, but I am thoroughly convinced, however, that if we must criticize, this criticism should be equally divided among all members of Local No. 423, as they were, to my mind, all to blame and should not shirk the responsibility. "By the failures of the past learn then a lesson."

The last week in February there was held in this city a Labor Forward movement campaign, and upon the 28th of that month a gigantic mass-meeting was held. While I was unable to be present, I can see the effect. Never in my several visits to the city of Columbus have I seen the organized workers displaying as much enthusiasm as at the present time. I have been called upon to address at an average of seven meetings a week in conjunction with my other duties. At each one of these meetings I find several international representatives present. The organization committee of the Central body are tireless in their efforts.

During the past month not only the Waiters and Cooks' Unions have been formed, but an organization of Teamsters, Laborers and a Label League as well, and the prospects look fairly good for several other local unions, including the Laundry Workers. In fact, the Labor Forward movement in Columbus is not diminishing its influence.

Just a word as to the proposed labor legislation. On April 12th, I attended a meeting of the delegates of organized labor from throughout the State which was held in this city to protest before the Utilities Committee of the House against the reporting out favorably of the Archer bill. Just how this bill got into the hands of said committee has not been explained up to the present writing. This obnoxious bill proposes to empower the Governor to appoint a commission of three persons who will have absolute power to decide as to the salary to be paid and the hours to be worked when a dispute arises in any industry, between the employer and the employee. It would not require an overly bright mind to see that the above mentioned bill was drafted for no other purpose than to serve as a cemetery for all bills presented to our Representatives for remedial legislation in the future. The voters of the State of Ohio will learn later which of their Representatives or Senators vote for this bill in order to shirk the responsibility that they accepted when they asked for the support of their constituents before election.

Our eight-hour bill, known as Senate Bill 284, providing for no more than forty-eight hours per week for women workers in certain employment, may pass as amended; it has been reported favorably out of the Senate Committee. I am positive, however, that women working in hotels and possibly restaurants will not be among those benefited. House Bill 635, known as the Whitacre Bill, providing for one day rest in seven for all workers is to be amended before it is to be reported from the Utilities Committee. It is understood that Governor Willis has proposed an amendment which will be adopted, providing that nothing in the bill shall be permitted to effect industries which by their nature must be operated seven days a week.

The Andrews Bill will probably be passed this week, as it has been made a special order of business in the House for this afternoon (Tuesday afternoon, April 27th). The House is dry, but the Senate is said to be wet by a small margin. One of the features of this bill provides that a tax of $1,000 be paid by what is termed a traveling saloon. This refers to the direct selling by the brewers, and delivering of the beer by wagons to the consumer.

Our labor group of legislators is so small that it is impossible to secure a passage of beneficial laws. They will do well, indeed, if they can keep the present legislators from undoing some of the good work that has been accomplished in the past. The present legislature seems to be the largest joke that has ever been foisted upon the citizens in the State of Ohio. The impression in this city seems to be that the quicker they adjourn and go back home and discontinue their destructive tactics the easier will be the minds of their constituents.

Sunday, April 25th, I attended a meeting of a committee of delegates from throughout the State which assembled here. There were about 125 representatives present from various local unions directly interested in opposing State-wide Prohibition and protecting the liquor interests at all times. This organization is known as the Ohio Home Rule Labor Association. This body expects to be more thoroughly organized than they have been in the past and be able to do more effective work in the future when the emergency should arise. The delegates of our International Union in the State of Ohio have called a conference in the city of Toledo for Sunday, May 18th. The object of this meeting is for the purpose of devising ways and means to carry out their part of the proposition.

The following is my expense account for the month:

NEW HAVEN, CONN., April 27, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April.

Attended meeting of Bartenders' Union No. 488, of Jersey City, N. J., on March 30th. This meeting brought out a fair attendance, with some real and live workers of this local union, and noticing this took advantage of same by soliciting their co-operation to bring No. 488 back to its old position in their city, such as they occupied during the first two years of the organization of bartenders in Jersey City. A committee has been appointed by their newly-elected President, Brother Reilly, to hold open meetings of their union at their headquarters, 180 Newark Avenue, until they are satisfied that they have corralled every bartender in their jurisdiction. To make this possible and render their officers every support imaginable this local has reduced its initiation fee of $5.00. With every member now placing their shoulders to the wheel No. 488 is bound to attain success. In addition to the foregoing they will have the support of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association for their aggressiveness while at Trenton, N. J., fighting the Gaunt Local Option Bill.

April 8th, attended meeting of Bartenders' Union No. 4, of Hoboken, N. J., for the purpose of injecting some fighting spirit, which apparently they lacked in the past few months. This local union having a fight on with one John Mueller, of Fourteenth and Washington Street, for retaining a suspended member in his employ by the name of "Buck" Nelson, caused a strike on the premises. Members of this local were given to know in very sharp words by Organizer Jennings, of the Cloth and Cap Makers' Union, Business Agent Miller of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, Organizer Kavanaugh and the undersigned that if they were out to win their strike against Mueller's hotel every member present would be compelled to report at headquarters the following morning for picket duty. This fight lasted three days, and was won easily. I am of the opinion that the talk they received done some material good, and has placed this local in a position to handle any similar grievance henceforth. Pickets on the line with Business Agent Rowohlt and the writer acted in such an orderly way, confining themselves within the law at all times, prevented the police from making any arrests. During the three days' fight, one of which being the Sabbath, the place in question failed to open its side door. Mueller taking into consideration that he was up against a fight and losing money and trade by his stubbornness, settled with Bartenders' Union No. 4.

April 9th, attended meeting Waiters' Alliance,

THE MIXER AND SERVER

No. 10, which was very poorly attended. This local Union, like their two sister organizations, No. 4 and No. 693, has received a setback owing to the European war, ocean steamers being moored to the wharfs, with the crews of cooks and waiters ever ready to take advantage of scabbing on our culinary workers in Hoboken, and with no relief in sight to prevent same; but this should be an incentive to hold weekly meetings, and large ones at that. With the twenty members that did attend this meeting much business was transacted. It is the hope of the writer that Waiters' Alliance No. 10 will tear down the "Chinese Wall" that they have erected around their organization and get busy by holding open meetings of their craft so as to obtain a stronger and better-conducted alliance in the future. The material is possessed by No. 10, and by placing the same to its proper use this local is bound to win success.

April 14th arrived at Mt. Vernon, N. Y. While business is at a standstill in this vicinity, Secretary George Assum, of No. 383, whom I met at the Wagner House, believes it is a good time to urge the bartenders of Weber's Cafe and the Century Bowling Alleys to affiliate, and in them failing to comply, to solicit the co-operation of the Central Labor Union to that end.

On my way to Port Chester I stopped off at New Rochelle, met Secretary Leinhardt, of No. 495, and learning from him that everything was running smoothly and that his local was contemplating an agreement with the Liquor Dealers' Association, promised to return the following day to interview Mr. Sievers, President of that association. Returning to New Rochelle was unable to meet this gentleman, and I hope in the near future better opportunities afford itself to place any proposition that Local 495 may have on hand.

April 16th took up a matter that was confronting Bartenders' Union No. 812 with Secretary Young and Business Agent Manning, and with the advice rendered, no doubt they will so act. In visiting the various places in Port Chester the union bar sign and monthly blue button was very visible. From general appearance Local 812 is composed of the best class of "mixers" in the Empire State. The following day paid a visit to Bro. A. F. O'Neill, Secretary Local 455, of Stamford, Conn., in his place of business at Greenwich, and promised to attend Local 455 meeting next month if the opportunity afforded itself. April 19th to South Norwalk, and met Secretary Herman Malmo. This is one "burg" where you can not toil unless you possess the proper credentials of our International Union. Learning from our Secretary that Local 269 was in excellent shape, proceeded to Bridgeport, where I readily saw some attention must be given. Took up various matters with Brothers Miller and Lavery, both officers of Local 256, and waited about quite a lengthy time to meet Brother Joseph Carney, Secretary-Business Agent, without success. Arrived in New Haven in the interests of the culinary workers, and before leaving this vicinity will urge them to organize. New Haven in the past has had two organizations of waiters affiliated with our International Union, and could not hold together. "Let's hope that there will be some charms possessed by the third." Have visited the Taft Hotel, Garde Hotel, Oneco Hotel, Metzgers' Cafe, Heublein, Vogelers' Cafe, Fitzsimmons' Cafe and the Aschenbroedel. The latter place, adjoining the Grand Opera House, was completely gutted out by a fire on Sunday, April 25th. All herein mentioned are considered the best where white help are employed. There is an organization here that has circularized this section known as the Cooks and Pastry Cooks' Culinary Association of New Haven, Conn., of which a percentage of their members despise the affiliation with any union.

April 25th attended meeting of Bridgeport Bartenders' Union 256. Will have to return there later on. Complete report of same has been filed with the General office. Will hold mass meeting of culinary workers in New Haven during the next few days.

The following are my expenses for the month of April:

P. S.—Henry Streifler, of Buffalo, N. Y., Organizer American Federation of Labor, attended meeting of Bridgeport Bartenders' Union 256, and his address to the members who were fortunate to attend meeting of Sunday, April 25th, 1915, was met with considerable applause. Something the absentees missed by non-attendance.

LEWISTOWN, MONT., April 26, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April:

March 28 the bartenders, cooks and waiters and brewery workers of Great Falls held a joint mass meeting to discuss the recent action of the Montana Legislature. Over three hundred members were in attendance at the business session, and at its conclusion the friends of the members of the organizations mentioned were invited to participate with them in a social session, the like of which has never before been seen in that city. Entertainment of the highest degree was furnished by the different theater managers, and, in addition, addresses were made by Bro. M. M. Donoghue, President of the Montana State Federation of Labor; Organizer W. H. Horne, of the Bricklayers' International Union, and the President and Secretary of the Cascade County Trades and Labor Assembly and Building Trades Council of Great Falls. The session lasted until the wee hours in the morning, and the friends gained on the occasion for our organizations will be a valuable asset to us in our fight in 1916.

April 1 attended a special meeting of Local 101, Cooks, Waiters and Waitresses, called for the purpose of discussing local conditions and selecting a delegate to represent the union at the coming convention of the International at San Francisco. Bro. Laurence Nelson, the hustling Business Representative of the local, was selected. The selection of Bro. Nelson was unanimous.

April 8 attended a meeting of Bartenders' Union, Local 609. The meeting, as usual, was very well attended and much business of importance to the members transacted. The gravest question confronting Local 609 at this time is, how best to take care of its idle members. Ordinarily, the bartenders of Great Falls have had steady employment, but the unsettled conditions of labor has caused a falling off in business, and, consequently, a shortage of employment. The entire building trades of the city have been out on strike since last October, and at this writing the end of the trouble is no nearer in sight than it was on the date of its inception. The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association has determined to make Great Falls an open-shop town, and all the resources of that body are centered in that direction; consequently I would advise all traveling members to give the "Falls" a wide berth until such time as a settlement of the trouble is announced. There are more bartenders, cooks, waiters and waitresses in this city than the locals can reasonably take care of, and new additions will only add to the seriousness of the situation.

April 12 I went to Billings in the interest of the new culinary local. They are making splendid headway and receiving the united support of the trade-union movement of that city. Contracts of agreement have been entered into between the local union and the leading restaurants of Billings, and the determination of the combined forces predict a steady and speedy decline of the "Chink" and "Jap." The bartenders of that city have arranged a new wage scale, to become effective May 1. It provides for an eight-hour day and a minimum wage of $120.00 per month. The proprietors have accepted the new agreement gracefully, and we look for no trouble in its enforcement.

On April 17 Bro. Charles C. Lockwood, for seven years Secretary of the local union, passed to the "Great Beyond." He went into a state of coma on the night of the 15th and never regained consciousness. The passing of Bro. Lockwood was a shock to his many friends, and creates an aching void that time alone can heal. "Charlie," as he was known to his many, many friends, was one of the pioneer of Eastern Montana. He was born in Benton County, Texas, forty-four years ago. Born in a cattle country where it was just as natural for a boy to take to a horse as it would be for one to expect his breakfast, he naturally found employment in youth as a range rider, and on one of the rides, over twenty-five years ago, he decided to cast his lot with the cattle men of Wyoming, and five years later crossed over the border into Montana, settling in a "cow camp," which later was named after him, and is now known as Lockwood, Montana. He loved the Eastern part of Montana for its wilderness; and no inducement, and there were many, could ever divorce him from the section and its people, whom he loved. An accident on the range, ten years ago, compelled "Charlie" to seek employment in the city of Billings, and the same lovable disposition that had marked his early friendships when he was known as Cowboy Charlie, earned for him the respect of all with whom he came in contact. As Secretary of Local 859 he done more to bring about a better understanding between employer and employe than any other known agency. His word was law among his brother members, and no dispute ever arose that failed to find him big enough to settle to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned. When the cooks and waiters of Billings organized, he himself contributed the amount of their charter and outfit, and in respect to that memory the cooks and waiters turned out in a body to attend his funeral. All bartenders in the city, and many saloon men, who had closed their places of business, paid their last respect to one who had been the friend of all. The ritual of the International Union, with its beautiful passages, was never more exemplified in a brotherly manner than on the day he was laid to rest. Personally, I had known Charlie Lockwood but a short time, but long enough to learn that he was the type of man you felt proud to call friend. To his mother and sister in Texas, to his brother in Provost, Alberta, we extend our sincere condolence; he was your son and brother—and our friend. He was laid to rest in a country he loved. May his remains rest in peace.

On the night of the 20th I left Billings for Butte and Anaconda. On the night of the 21st the bartenders of Butte gave a smoker to their friends in the trade-union movement of that city. It was the largest ever held in Butte, over five hundred being present. The hall was beautifully decorated and the talent and refreshments of the highest standard. The social was arranged for the purpose of starting the campaign against State-wide prohibition, which we vote on in 1916. Addresses were made by the following gentlemen, Robert E. Gibson, Business Representative of the Teamsters' Union, presiding: John K. O'Rourke, former Sheriff of Butte; P. J. Gilligan, State Humane Officer; Charles Henderson, present Sheriff; Joe Corby, ex-Mayor; Rev. D. H. Wittenerberg, rabbi, Temple B'Nai Israel; John Bigelow, editor Free Lance; John Harrington, County Treasurer; M. M. Donoghue, President Montana State Federation of Labor, and myself. The musical program consisted of the following: The Harmony Quartette, of which Paul Rooney, son of Bro. John Rooney, was the leader; solos by Mr. Cornelius, John F. McCoy, Si McCloud, Leo Rohan, Mr. Abrahams, Robert Harris and (Joe Welch) Ben Barnett. The foregoing gives a very good idea of the esteem in which the bartenders of Butte are held by the city and county officials. It was a night long to be remembered, and I hope that some of the indifferent bartenders in that city will recognize the necessity of appreciating the different friendships and get out and hustle; and, above all, pay your dues promptly, attend your meetings more regularly, and support your officers in their endeavors for your betterment.

April 22 I went to Three Forks to attend a joint meeting of bartenders, cooks and waiters and saloon men. We had a fine meeting, and one of an educational and instructive character. Many matters were discussed and arrangements made to protect our various interests.

April 23 I went to Helena, and held conferences with the officers of the bartenders, cooks and waiters. State matters and conditions were the subjects. Arrangements were made for carrying on an educational campaign throughout the State.

April 24 I went to Great Falls. On the 25th I attended the largest meeting of bartenders ever held in that city. A Delegate to the National Convention was elected, and Bro. Dan Shield (the fighting Swede) was elected to represent the bartenders of Great Falls at San Francisco.

We are to hold a State Conference of Bartenders, Cooks, Waiters, Waitresses, Cigar Makers and Brewery Workers in Great Falls on May 15 and 16. We expect that gathering to formulate plans whereby all crafts mentioned above will become 100 per cent organized in Montana before the year 1915 passes into history. April 26 I left for Lewistown.

PITTSBURG, PA., April 24, 1915.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHERS—My report for the month follows:

After a day in Washington, D. C., I again returned to Harrisburg, arriving in that city March 29th.

While I knew before I left Harrisburg that the date scheduled for the hearing of the local option bill was set for April 6th, and though our orders from Secretary Sullivan were specific and direct. "To go on the job and remain until further orders," still we had several open dates—as the Legislature adjourned Thursday evening, March 25th, to the following Monday evening—and taking advantage of the Legislature recess, returned to Washington for a day, as there was something of importance going on in Local 428 of that city, all of which was touched upon in my last report.

Soon after my arrival again in Harrisburg, I inquired of our people—the Blue Button Boys, including the President, Treasurer and Past President—Brothers Weitzel, Hagey and Jacobs, if there were any members in town from Pittsburgh, Philadelphia or elsewhere. I was disappointed when I was informed that none so far had shown up. I learned later through another source that Brother McDevitt, of Local 115, Philadelphia, has been there previous to my first arrival. I am sorry I had not the pleasure of meeting him, for several reasons. As I had on my first visit familiarized myself with the situation and had also prepared an argument. The next thing to do was to obtain permission to be listed with the speakers at the "hearing," so I immediately sent a communication to the Chairmen of the Law and Order Committee (Representative George W. Williams), requesting that privilege. That communication still remains unanswered. I also requested Bro. M. A. Hagey, Treasurer of Harrisburg Local 569, to introduce me to his Representative in the House. Met August Wildman, representing Harrisburg. Bro. Hagey complied with the request by making a night visit to Mr. Wildman's home.

After the formalities of an introduction to Wildman, he promised to aid us in every way possible, and if the "hearing" was to be an open one, I should have an opportunity to speak, if he could arrange it so. I also called at the headquarters of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, meeting Bro. Maurer and Secretary Quinn of that organization. President J. H. Maurer is also a member of the Legislature. He was interested in the Local Option bill, and as a member of the House was going to talk against it, he said, when the same came up for discussion. He also promised me to do what he could in the matter of the "hearing." I was also in touch with the President of the National Liquor Dealers' Association, Mr. Neil Bonner, of Philadelphia, who, with J. Mulvihill, were the moving spirits at Harrisburg to defeat the measure. It was not until the evening before the 6th (the date set for the "hearing") that a program was agreed upon. President Bonner, of the Liquor Dealers, informed me that four speakers on each side were to be allotted fifteen minutes each, and that our end would be taken care of by President R. J. McGrath, of the Iron City Central Trades Council of Pittsburgh. This put me out of commission. And I felt that it was better so—to have a native citizen, as well as one not in any way connected with the business to do the honors; and, furthermore, he was there with a committee to voice the protest of the Pittsburgh Central Body against the passage of the bill.

The next day I was present at the "hearing." Congressman Barchfield, of Pittsburgh, led off. (This same Barchfield is accredited with making the best speech against the Hobson Constitutional Prohibition Amendment by the knowing ones down in Washington.) Of course, the opposing factors alternated with their speakers. The "wets" were further represented by Rev. J. G. Von Boss, R. J. McGrath and J. O. Brien, of Scranton; the "drys" by Father J. J. Curran, of Wilkes-Barre; J. A. McSparran, Master of the Pennsylvania Granger; Wm. McCoach, City Treasurer of Philadelphia, and Chas. A. Swift, of Beaver County, a former member of the Legislature.

It is needless at this time to go into the features of the debate, otherwise than to say that the arguments were all on our side and the hysteria and mock sentimentality with the others. I was pleased to learn later that President McGrath's appearance on the scene was the result of a resolution introduced by the delegates of Local 188 in the Central Body of Pittsburgh, for calling a committee of three to go to Harrisburg and oppose the Local Option bill. I have been further informed that the resolution carried unanimously. All praise to Local 188 for their action. It shows they were wide awake to the proper move. I might say here, that after exhausting every means possible to influence members of the lower House of the Legislature at Harrisburg, Governor Brumbaugh's pet scheme and personal platform plank—Local Option—was disastrously beaten, April 21, by 50 votes, the vote standing 78 in favor to 128 against; a worse beating than a similar measure received two years ago.

I left Harrisburg April 7, and arrived in Pittsburgh the same date. I soon was in touch with the officials of Local 209, and through them and others I learned of the deplorable condition of the organization—that it was on the rocks financially, individual and co-operative antagonisms, books, eskew, unsystematic methods, charges and counter charges—and, in fact, all the trouble that makes an Organizer's lot as pleasant as a June bug's song. Well, we like hard things, and regardless of the conditions that exist, we feel equal to the "necessities," and intend to bring order out of chaos, if we even have to use the petroleum output of the Rockefellers to pour upon that stuff they put beneath bridges.

I have sent out over two hundred letters for a meeting this coming Sunday to the members in arrears, as well as in good standing. Let us hope that good will come from it, and that Local 209 will turn over a brighter as well as a newer leaf in the affairs of their organization.

My expenses follows:

March 29—Washington to Harrisburg.....	$3 60
April 7—Harrisburg to Pittsburgh.....	6 10
Typewriting	2 00
Stationery	55
Postage for 206 letters.....	4 12
April 25—Hall rent in Labor Temple....	4 00

Total $20 37
With best wishes, I remain

JERSEY CITY, N. J.

HENRY F. HILLEMAN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Am sending you the cut of Henry F. Hilleman, former president of Local 488, who has forged the name of officers of his local union. Local 488 has a warrant for his arrest.

He is one of the officers of Local 488 that I had to force for a bond last December. Local stands to lose nothing but the bank and surety company will prosecute. Fraternally yours,

(W.M. B. JOYCE.)

THE FORUM

SPILLING THE BEANS.

One of the leading lights of the Secession aggregation, and whose letters or articles are seemingly received with much acclaim by the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, spreads out over the editorial page of the "Voice of Secession" for the month of April, 1915, giving an exhibition of unbridled vituperation such as we have predicted would occur before the final inning. Probably the only redeeming feature is the fact that its author shows possession of a little more nerve than the Sacred Septette, for he does sign his name, or at least his name is appended to the article. There is one passage which we wish to reproduce. It will be found nestling down very close to the bottom of the substitute editorial, and it reads: "WE ARE NOT AFRAID OF HONEST MEN, BUT WE DREAD THE LABOR FAKIR."

Honesty is not a commodity, yet it has been used by fakirs, and in this instance we shall proceed to show that the writer of that article on the editorial page of the "Voice of Secession," so-called Culinary Craft, of San Francisco, Cal., has about as much brass as would make up fittings for a private yacht, when he prates of "Honest Men and Labor Fakirs."

According to the authority which we use, the word Fakir means: "An Oriental religious ascetic or begging monk." There is a slang definition of the word Fakir—it means to fake, to swindle, to manipulate fraudulently.

It is with the latter definition of the word which we shall deal.

To manipulate fraudulently, to attempt to make things appear different than they really are, to secure something by maneuvering and plotting which, in a sense, is theft. For example: If there were need of securing more votes at the coming convention, there should be planned a scheme to obtain credentials for persons not legal members of the unions which issued those credentials, thus giving to the possessors of such credentials similar rights and privileges on the floor of our coming convention as those delegates who are bona fide members of the unions whose credentials they carry; that would be faking or stealing representation, and the person or persons guilty of such plan or scheme could hardly claim to have acted in good faith or that their actions were honest and commendable to men and women who act fairly and above board all of the time. To make that point a little more clear and take from it any indirection we will assume as an example that the Seven Sacred Scribes of Seventh Street, San Francisco, Cal., after carrying on their campaign to destroy our International Union, discovered that despite all of their calculations those local unions which swallowed their dope about what a fine thing it would be to split up our International Union, found that they didn't have enough real mazuma in their strong box to defray the expenses of sending delegates to San Francisco for the Eighteenth General Convention, which begins Monday morning, June 14, 1915, then and there the Sacred Seven and those in the scheme with them would write to the locals urging them to accept the traveling card of "some of the loyal secessionists," hold an election and elect one of the "loyal secessionists" as the delegate of that local to the coming convention. By such a process, stealing representation, the secessionists would increase their "batting strength" considerably and make on the level, genuine delegates from their own local unions look like a lot of bush leaguers. After reading the foregoing attempted explanation it seems to the writer that he has not made the case quite as clear as he is desirous of making it, therefore he will make another stab at it, if you don't mind and have the time and patience to peruse what is offered.

Several weeks ago we received a communication from one of our local unions in western Canada. We were informed that they had elected Brother (John Doe) as their delegate to the coming convention; they further recited the fact that said Brother (John Doe) had taken out a traveling card after having been elected as delegate, and had deposited said traveling card in one of our California locals. Brother (John Doe) as well as the members of the Canadian union referred to, evidently began to realize that their delegate-elect might have trouble proving up before the Credentials Committee and they forthwith wrote our General President, laying the case before him for a decision. Our General President, with the facts before him, rendered Decision No. 585, under date of March 15, 1915, which decision will be found on page 17 of the April (1915) MIXER AND SERVER. Evidently that decision did not meet with the unstinted approval of Brother (John Doe), but of that later.

As intimated, Brother (John Doe) deposits his traveling card with one of our California locals, and shortly afterwards headquarters was asked to put Brother (John Doe) to work as a local special organizer. That was agreed to, and Brother (John Doe) began work as such local special organizer March 1st, 1915, and concluded his services on March 27th, 1915. Brother (John Doe), in a letter to headquarters, written April 3rd, mailed on April 4th, at 1:30 p. m., advised us that "I am leaving here in a week or ten days, bound north," yet on April 8th, 1915, so we are advised by the Secretary of the local which had elected Brother (John Doe) last fall as their delegate, Brother (John Doe's) traveling card was received and he was recorded in the following manner: "Admitted by Traveling Card from Local 62, April 8th, 1915."

If you are sufficiently interested in this little recital, take down your railway map and you will find the Canadian Local 55 situated at the very border line of the Province of Alberta, in the city of Edmonton, and the home of Local 62 is way down approximately half way between San Francisco and Los Angeles, California, the distance at a rough guess quite equal to the distance between Chicago and San Francisco, which, even at reduced rates, will cost you $62.50 for the round trip, saying nothing about sleeper and eats along the route. Now, get this and get it right. What do you think of Brother (John Doe's) trip from Fresno, California, to Edmonton, Alberta, Canada—will that One Vote be worth that much to the Secessionists? Think it over. And when doing so, recall the dates in the above recital.

Just a moment, here is another one which had not developed to the Traveling Card deposit stage. Local 28, of Vancouver, wrote us a communication asking a question which we promptly resubmitted to our General President, and if you take the trouble to find Decision No. 592 you will discover that there is "quite something doing" from San Francisco out, if we are to judge from the query, "Can a member who is now in San Francisco, California, transfer back to our Local and represent us?" But read the decision of our General President on another page of this issue.

What really gets our "nanny" is that the secessionists gave our Canadian culinary locals such a slam in the face by deliberately ignoring them, and yet these Canadian locals are seemingly willing to take the slam and not only look pleasant, but actually connive with their "slammers" to help 'em out. And now, my patient readers, we will offer for your perusal one of those "Honest Men Communications" which was sent to one of our local union secretaries. Don't hurry in reading it; take your time and absorb every word, and you will no doubt be astonished that men who go to such lengths to secure votes have the audacity to prate of honorableness and honesty, aye, even have the brassy gall to write about "Labor Fakirs" with a nonchalance which stamps them as past masters in the handling of platitudes which we seriously doubt they know the definition of. But here is the evidence, the original of which is in our possession and signed by "Comrades" Rose and Kirkpatrick, and their assurances with reference to "Comrade" Ryan, the author of that substitute editorial from which we took the passage about "Honest Men and Labor Fakirs."

Omitting date and name of addressee, number of the local and city where said local is situated, as well as a portion of the communication of no relevance to the case in hand, the following communication speaks loudly for attention:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., ____.

"DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We note what you say in regard to sending a delegate to this city. You say you will not be able to send anyone. If it is a question of finances, we have something to offer for your consideration; it is this: We have many friends of segregation in Chicago. Some of them are coming to the fair and will be here when the convention meets. We would suggest that your local receive one of these men on a traveling card, hold an election and elect him as the delegate to the convention and issue to him the regular credentials, and he will represent your local without any cost to Local_____. In this manner you would be assisting in the segregation movement and incidentally helping the Culinary organizations. Now we would like to hear from you on this matter. We wrote to you on two different occasions and received no reply to our communications. Hope this one will receive a reply, as the matter is urgent and you have no time to lose.

"If you decide to take the course outlined in this communication, you can proceed to communicate with T. J. Ryan, No. 167 North La Salle Street, Chicago. You can use the names of the signers of this letter; it will help matters along. Ryan is a member of Waiters' Local, No. 35, of Chicago, and is to be depended on at all times. He is in constant communication with this committee. If you would rather talk the matter over with him yourself, you can communicate with him at the address given. Your communication to him will be entirely confidential. You have the assurance of this committee on that matter; as stated, if you desire to talk the matter over with him you can ask him to come to _____, inform him it was suggested by this committee, and we are sure he will be on the ground promptly.

"Hoping you will think well of the above suggestions and that you will see your way clear to comply. We are yours for the cause of segregation,

"14 Seventh Street."

"(Signed) J. D. KIRKPATRICK,
"(Signed) A. C. Rose."

Having perused the foregoing with the care suggested, you will realize that what we have been offering in the pages of the MIXER AND SERVER for many months relative to the maneuvering and plotting of the Sacred Septette was neither the fulminations of a fossilized brain nor the mouthings of a fellow "afraid of the cars." We generally know what we are writing about, and have the first time to come where evidence shows contrary to what we have stated.

Once more the thought occurs, who is financing the campaign, and WHY?

"Comrade" Ryan, according to pretty good authority, is a regular visitor to the I. W. W. headquarters in Chicago and is never quite so happy as when he manages to induce members of Local 35 to accompany him when he calls on Big Bill Haywood for inspiration. "Comrade" Ryan also boasts of making "open air" speeches at I. W. W. meetings in Chicago and elsewhere.

And "Comrade" Ryan, as the foregoing passages from the communication reveals, "is to be depended on at all times". "Comrade" Ryan evidently must be supplied with ample funds, or else how could he accept an invitation to leave Chicago for another city "to talk the matter over"? Where is the money coming from with which to carry on that campaign?

In connection with the expenditure of money being used by the Secessionists, the writer is reminded of a letter received only a few days ago, from which we quote the following passage: "As you are perhaps aware Brother J. B. Carpenter, a member of the Waiters' Union, came here from St. Louis several months ago and started an active agitation for segregation. There happened to be a vacancy in the President's office in Local 19 on account of the illness of Brother John Ringling, and somehow Carpenter was elected to fill the vacancy. He only worked a "lunch job" and had plenty of time to plant his poisonous seed among the waiters as well as among the cooks, many of whom were out of work and naturally dissatisfied. He distributed several bundles of the Culinary Craft, and we are positive that he received money from some one in San Francisco. I know that he received $5.00 in three different letters from there."

"Comrade" Carpenter is another contributor to the pages of the "Voice of Secession," and finding that he could not win out as a delegate from Local No. 19 to the coming convention, returned to St. Louis, no doubt intending to see that the delegates from Local 20 received instructions to vote in favor of the plans and program of the Sacred Septette.

It would be fulsome flattery to "Comrade" Carpenter to print his record, particularly that portion where he was deprived of posing as a "martyr to the cause" in "Mose" Cleveland's town.

Our conventions have been pretty free from so-called "packing," and those who would attempt to secure an advantage through that method of representation are, to say the least, rather "small potatoes and few to the hill," in fact they come smaller than a recent definition of the smallest thing in the world, which was said to be "A Nit on the Nut of a Gnat."

As intimated in several previous articles covering the activity of the Seven Sacred Scribes and the Secessionists generally, they evidently overplayed themselves. They imagined that they were too smooth and sharp, too wise and clever to be caught with the bean pot, but the evidence has accumulated and in the foregoing they positively "spilled the beans" and they lay spread before the astonished gaze of those who care to read this little recital. Another month is left them. They will probably make a "whipping finish" and pull up before the judge's stand seeking approval of their STOLEN REPRESENTATION. Will the Eighteenth General Convention turn over to them the STAKE or will that gathering DISQUALIFY THEM AND RULE THEM OFF THE TRACK FOREVERMORE? The answer to that query is awaited with anxiety by those men and women who made our present International Union the NINTH largest organization affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. They want to know whether we shall maintain our International Union as a sure enough trades union, or whether it shall be handed over to the "Comrades" and henceforth be glutted with I. W. W.-ism and all that such term implies.

If your local union wishes to protect its future, it is none too late to get on the job with Trades Union Delegates. The time to act is NOW.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

UNATTRACTIVE ALTERNATIVE—A REAL BIT OF LIFE.

"If I don't leave you pretty soon, you will make either a thief or a tramp out of me, therefore I am going." That was the message left behind by one of our members, and after his wife had a chance to mull it over in her spare moments, she concluded to solicit help from headquarters in locating her missing spouse. We finally located the brother and urged him to return to his home or send for his wife. Several days later he wrote us a letter which contained a synopsis of the incidents which lead up to the separation. Further letters were received, but the separation continued. That correspondence, after resting at headquarters for several years, was returned to the parties in interest, but not before we had received a request, signed by the united pair and made a promise to write for publication in the MIXER AND SERVER this article, for, as the wife suggested, a recital might prevent some other poor deluded woman from "breaking up a happy home" by methods which seemed to her warranted and justified.

Several years ago one of our "boys" became a member of a thriving little local. He displayed such consistent attention to the affairs of the union that he was made the unanimous choice for financial secretary, and forthwith assumed office. In the course of time he conceived the idea of visiting members who were negligent about paying dues. This work naturally took him into a number of establishments and used up some of his spare time. Needless to say that his spare time was deducted from the hours which he formerly spent at home. Despite advising his wife that he was engaged in doing necessary work for the union, she became suspicious and unfortunately concluded that his visits to other places of an evening was for the purpose of meeting other women and spending time and money for their entertainment. She observed that he carried considerably more money than formerly, and determined to investigate the "trouser safe." The sight of so much coin, of which she knew nothing of when it came, put the thought into her head to "pick off a few dollars." Her husband made no comment when finding himself short, concluding that he had made a mistake in making change somewhere along the line while collecting union dues. In a few days he made another tour of the houses where negligent members were employed, returning home with quite a sum of money. The following morning, after arriving at the place where he was employed, he counted up, and again found his pile several dollars short. He went over the route mentally which he had covered the previous evening on foot, recalled every transaction, compared same with the memorandum which he had kept, and failed to disclose where he had made an error or lost the money. On his return home that evening he made a search of his sleeping quarters, and while so engaged his wife wanted to know what he was looking for. He informed her of the facts. Told her that he had visited a number of the members of the union, collected dues from them, and that when he counted up that morning he found that he was five dollars short. He also informed his wife that he had a similar experience once before. Nothing was found on the floor, nor did his wife attempt to return the missing money, so he concluded as before, that he must have lost it somewhere, or perhaps had made a mistake. Matters resumed their normal course until another four weeks had passed, and as usual he made his rounds collecting dues and returned home with close on to a hundred dollars. Being fatigued after his day's work and added evening task, he retired and was soon sleeping. His wife retired as usual, but not to sleep, and at an opportune moment reached for his trousers and extracted a bill, the denomination of which she was ignorant. As usual, when he had a chance to count up and prepare to bank the money, he found he was short ten dollars. Ten dollars to some men may not loom up very big, but to this brother, whose salary was none too large, the loss of ten dollars from the collections made in behalf of his local union put a genuine crimp in his load of cheerfulness. He knew that his books would show how much he had collected. He also knew that he had used up a certain number of due stamps. But try as he might, he could see no way to reconcile matters. When he returned home that evening he made another search, but to no avail, and finally informed his wife of his loss. She not only declined to surrender the money which she had taken, but even went so far as to accuse her husband of having spent the amount on other women and for their pleasure. Needless to say that he was pretty well loaded with troubles after that little talk fest, and about as miserable a man as existed anywhere. For the next few months he was a very much worried boy. The date of the annual ball of his local was approaching. He knew that there were certain bills which had to be met in advance of that affair, and he was weak enough to imagine that if he could cut into a little poker game which he knew was running in town he might be able to leave the game with enough winnings to make up his losses, small though they were.

He fell for the poker game, and unfortunately for him, told the truth when returning home at a late hour, neither any worse or better off financially for his evening's effort. Before the date of the ball he made a clean breast of affairs to one of his personal friends and obtained enough money to make up his shortage to the union. He tried to get his wife to promise to accompany him to the ball. She declined and probably had forgotten the date and the event when the affair came off. He returned a bit later than usual, he having taken the receipts up to the time of closing, and had them stowed away in his clothes. No sooner did he hit the bed than he was sleeping, and the chance of investigating the contents of his clothes excellent. Several hundred dollars loomed up to the astonished eyes of his wife. Where he obtained all that money she neither knew or cared. It was there, and as she later on confessed, her husband had no doubt been playing poker and had won a good sized bundle. In her judgment the less money she left him the more limited would be the amount he would have to spend with and on other women.
